Whymper, in his "Scrambles Among the Alps," tells how that most majestic of all the Alps, the Matterhorn, cast a spell upon him. Hitherto it had defied all attempts to climb it. No foot of man had as yet come near its summit. The peasants who lived at its base were certain that it never would be conquered. All the guides but ons advised Whymper to abandon all idea of climbing it as certain to issue only in disaster. But such warnings only whetted the desire and braced the will of this born climber. The impregnable mountain fascinated him. It called to him by night and day, and the call, the challenge, the allurement of its unconquered heights were irresistible. And so he spent five whole summers in what seemed a vain and fruitless quest. He studied the mountain in all its moods and aspects. He climbed innumerable lesser peaks for the purpose of looking at it from every possible angle, in the hope of discovering a practicable way to the summit. And at last, after many failures that would have utterly disheartened a less resolute man, by a route that everybody but himself regarded as quite impossible, Whymper conquered the Matterhorn, and in the moment of his victory felt repaid for all the toil he had endured and the risks he had run.

God's Greater Glory.

That is the very spirit that breathes through the pages of the New Testament. It is the story of the great, we might almost say the impossible, things men dared and accomplished in response to the call, the challenge, the allurement of the heights they saw in Jesus Christ. "We beheld his glory, the glory of the only begotten of the Father, full of grace and truth," and that vision fascinated those who first beheld it and would not let them go, but called to them by night and by day to go forth and attain the shining heights of character and achievement they beheld in him. We will not understand the New Testament arlght unless we regard it as the record of a quest and achievement like unto, but far grander than, that of Whymper scaling the Matterhorn. Forward they went, those who first beheld his glory, adventurous mountaineers of the Spirit, enduring all hardship; unflinchingly facing death in their eagerness to comprehend the length and breadth, the depth and height, and know the love of Christ which passeth knowledge, that they might be filled with all the fullness of God.

Matterhorn of the Moral Life.

Ever before them in sublime majesty there stood the shining peak of Christ's new law of love—love not of those that loved him, but love of their enemies, surely the Matterhorn of the moral life. Its ultimate summit, no doubt, defied their utmost efforts, for only he himself has scaled the heights of divine forgiveness. Often they stumbled and fell. But when they fell it was to rise again, when they were baffled it was to fight better, for, through all their glorious struggle to "come in the knowledge of the Son of God unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ," he himself was with them and the peace of God garrisoned their hearts and minds.

And so it has been ever since. I do not think you can read the life of any really great Christian man or woman without finding that Jesus exerted on them just the same sort of fascination as the unconquered Matterhorn exerted on Whymper. In quality, however, richer and more inspiring by far. It is this allurement of the heights of grace and truth and love that are in Jesus that has written, and is still writing, the romantic story of Christian missions. "Anywhere so long as it be forward"—that is the spell Christ puts on those who have beheld his glory. They must follow where he leads into every as yet unconquered land, and can know no rest till at the name of Jesus every knee shall bow and every tongue confess that he is Lord to the glory of God the Father. Those who have not felt the fascination of Jesus have surely never really seen him at all, for "we needs must love the highest when we see it." Really to see him is to surrender to him and to press on up those heights, sunlit with the smile of God, to which he leads, till "with open face beholding as in a glass the glory of the Lord, we are changed into the same image from glory to glory even as by the Spirit of the Lord."—The Scots Observer.

MEETING OF THE HISTORICAL SOCIETY OF THE NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

The Historical Society of the North Mississippi Conference will meet in the Methodist church at Pontotoc, Tuesday evening, Oct. 30. Rev. W. M. Young, of Shannon, will deliver the sermon for this occasion. At this time all historical papers will be presented. We are anxious to have as many of these as possible.

R. G. LORD, Secretary.

A SLACKER.

Not a Rip Van Winkle who has just awakened from a long, long sleep, but a slacker about the Lord's business—that is the way a certain Methodist of Alabama designates himself since he has recently awakened to a realization of his obligation to pay in full his Centenary pledge.

"For years I have owed the Centenary balance $40 which I subscribed after the World War in 1918 or 1919, while I was a member of a certain church in Alabama on such-and-such a circuit," writes this now wide-awake Methodist brother to pastor of one of the largest churches in the State of Alabama. "Since I have moved away from the State, I am writing to ask you just where I should pay that money, which I have come to realize belongs to the Lord. I want to pay not only the balance in full, but interest on it as well, which I think is right, as I have been using the Lord's money all these years. The message is not from one who has just waked out of a long sleep, but merely from a man who, like many others, has been slack with the Lord and taken care of other matters first. From now on I expect to pay my vows unto the Lord first of all things."

A slacker about the Lord's business! That is what this man calls himself since he has come to realize that he was not being as honest with the Lord as he was with his fellow-men. And he declares that there are many others like him. Is this true? Are there indeed many who are slack toward the Lord as they would never dare to be toward their fellow-men? Are you one of these slackers about the Lord's business? Then turn back like this brother from Alabama and meet your Centenary obligations and all other obligations in full so that you, too, can write, "Paid in full," across the page.

AND IS KIND.

There are quite a number of new translations of that great chapter, the thirteenth of First Corinthians, and some of them do throw new light and meaning into it, but there is one phrase in the old rendering that we do not like to miss. It reads, changing the one central word to its real meaning, "Love suffereth long, and is kind." We would like that to stay, for it does hold up before us in such beautiful, clear light the wonderful, alluring, impossible ideal of Christian living. To be tried and not get impatient; to be injured or ill-treated by a friend or by some cruel circumstances in life and not get indignant or bitter or revengeful; to suffer and suffer long and yet be kind and strong and sympathetic and thoughtful for the other fellow—how fine and Christian and splendid and hard that is! And yet the great apostle, without any apology or modification, holds up before us that great achievement and tells us that we ought to do and that we ought to be if the love that is born of Christ has right of way in our life.—The Christian Guardian.

CASH PRIZES FOR HIGH SCHOOL STUDENTS.

The Commission on Interracial Co-operation is offering to high school students three cash prizes aggregating $100 for the best papers on "America's Tenth Man" submitted on or before March 1, 1929. The purpose of these prizes is to encourage the study of the Negro's part in American history, which, according to the Commission, is much more creditable than is generally supposed. It is believed that such a study will be helpful to the children of both races, promoting more tolerance and sympathy on the one side, and developing wholesome race pride on the other. The Commission earnestly asks the co-operation of high school principals and teachers. Full particulars, together with a sixteen-page pamphlet of suggestive source material, will be sent without charge to any one interested. Address R. B. Eleazer, Educational Director, 109 Palmer Building, Atlanta, Ga.

MINISTERIAL CHAPEL PLANNED AT CENTENARY COLLEGE.

Announcement has recently been made by the Centenary College Ministerial Association of the proposed building of a ministerial chapel on the grounds of the college. Plans have already been darwn and the contract is to be awarded some time in the near future.

The Ministerial Association is composed of young men studying for the ministry, and they have long needed a place that they might call their own, a place in which regular meetings may be held, and a place to which they may retire for quiet meditation and study. The building of such a chapel will mean much to our future ministers, and will fulfill a need in their young lives. The chapel will be outfitted with a conference room, sitting room, and a library; the library will contain many volumes of reference books on religious matters in addition to the best religious periodicals. It is the aim of the Association to throw the doors of the chapel open to any college student who desires to use it for the purpose for which it is constructed.

The financing of the chapel will be handled through the building committee, composed of S. J. Davies, Briscoe Carter, W. W. Drake, R. H. Wynn, N. E. Joyner, A. S. Lutz, A. A. Bernard, W. D. Kleinschmidt, W. L. Doss, Jr., R. H. Harper, B. H. Andrews, T. J. Holladay, E. V. Duplantis, B. C. Taylor, R. L. Armstrong, W. F. Roberts, C. D. Purcell, G. H. Corry, J. T. Harris, R. A. Cross, Jr., G. W. Pomeroy, J. W. Airey, M. W. Baggett, Bentley Sloane, David Tarver, E. C. Dufresne. Board of Directors consists of Alvin P. Smith, chairman, Dr. R. E. Goodrich, Dr. George S. Sexton, W. A. McKennon, A. D. Lemons, Jack Midyett, Ruble Moore, Roy Fort, who are ministerial graduates of Centenary College through 1927.

The building committee realizes that it will take the combined efforts of all ministers in the Louisiana Conference to put this project across without taxing the efforts of any one man, we trust every minister of the gospel will do his part in this work. They will be proud of the ministerial chapel when it is completed.

ALVIN P. SMITH, Chairman.

THE LORD'S PRAYER.

By Rev. J. Martin Alford.

Our Father—The Father of all who believe on thy name,
Who in humble repentance from sin refrain.
Thou dost give forgiveness, saving from death and shame,
And after this life, with thee forever reign.

Which Art in Heaven—Yet thy Spirit with us on earth
Evermore witnessing to our spiritual birth,
Filling our hearts with gladness, joyful mirth,
Thus confirming in us Redemption's worth.

Hallowed be Thy Name—The name high over all,
Proclaimed by the Prophets and declared by Paul.
To have power to save from the dreadful fall
Even to the uttermost, both great and small.

Thy Kingdom Come—Not to us only, but to all the World,
Let thy power be felt, heaven's flag unfurled,
Under whose banner we'll march; our souls unimperiled,
We welcome the glad news and to others herald.

Thy Will Be Done—And not ours, O Lord!
Let our hearts with thine be in perfect accord;
Help us daily to live according to thy Word,
The Holy Bible, which is the Spirit's sword.

On Earth as It Is in Heaven—Above
Where saints and angels adore and love
Father, Son, and Holy Spirit—Heavenly Dove;
And all with one accord their devotions prove.

Give Us This Day Our Daily Bread—
Heavenly manna poured out upon our head;
For our sinful hearts give purity instead;
For this cause the blood of Christ was shed.

And Forgive Us Our Trespasses—For thou hast the power
To cleanse and keep from sin every day and hour;
And if Satan, by temptation our soul would devour,
Help us not only to pray, but be on the "watch tower."

As We Forgive Those Who Trespass Against Us—And then
We shall be at peace with thee and with all men;
Happiness shall be our lot on earth, and when Life is over, eternity with thee we'll spend.

Lead Us Not Into Temptation—For we are weak;
Thy guiding counsel we daily will seek;
Of thy power to rescue we gladly will speak.
And we shall inherit the earth, for "blessed are the meek."

But Deliver Us from Evil—The evil of sin;
Then we shall be holy and pure within;
Over the world the victory we shall win.
For Thine is the Kingdom, the Power, and the Glory, Forever—Amen!

"COME UNTO ME."

By Stanley H. Mullen.

The world in which we live is a world of hearts. Often we forget this and think of it in cold and impersonal terms. Many of these hearts are crushed and bleeding, and long to meet, somewhere along the way, one like unto Jesus to whom they can pour out their souls and feel that he understands. And we feel quite sure that if Jesus were here in person he would be just as eager to meet them and most sympathetic toward them. But he is not here in the flesh as he was in the long ago. To whom, then, can broken hearts turn? Very often not to the nearest relatives and friends, for they don't understand. What friend is there who will understand and be slow to condemn?

Such is the problem with which many hearts are wrestling. Have we, as a church, anything to offer? What have we to say to the "Mary Magdalenes," the "women at the well," "the men and women taken in adultery?" What solution have we for those who, while living in a veritable hell on earth, are praying to be kept pure and Christlike in character? Have we any oil of healing to pour upon hearts that are bruised and sore?

Centuries ago, the great Healer of hearts looked into the faces of the multitudes and said: "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest." And they came from every direction and found rest in him. Before he left the world, he said to his disciples: "Ye are my witnesses." You are to go out and bind up the broken-hearted and relieve the captives. You are to pour the oil of healing upon the wounded and let the oppressed go free. You are to be incarnations of the living and loving Father. He will have no hands with which to soothe the aching brow unless you give him your hands. He will have no lips with which to speak loving and forgiving words to broken and sinful hearts unless you let him speak through your lips. He will have no countenance through which to shine unless you let his glory fill your face as I have let it fill mine. Because I have been with you, said Jesus, you are to go out and do these things and even greater things than I have been able to do. And those disciples, in the spirit of their Lord, went out across the world to minister unto the needs of all mankind.

Our world to-day is just as needy as was that ancient world. No one knows this better than does a pastor. As he moves in and out among his people, he meets those whose hearts are sore and bleeding. Some of them have sinned and feel terribly guilty before God, but they know not what to do. Some are discouraged and weary and have terrible misgivings about life. Some have houses in which to live, but those houses have never become homes. Some are sick in body or have lost those who have been nearest and dearest to them. Some have children who are giving them great concern. Into these various situations comes the pastor. But suppose he is not sympathetic? Suppose he is not awake to the moral and spiritual needs of his people? Suppose he is more interested in other things than he is in his people? Ah, that is the tragic situation in some cases. But to the pastor who is interested, sympathetic, and awake, there come opportunities of tremendous significance. He is the bearer of light and life to those hearts that faint and tire. Before him men and women uncover their hearts and know that he is looking into their needs with Christlike sympathy. Even those who stand condemned before the sanctions of society look up into his face to find it full of tenderness and pity. He knows their failures, but he loves them with a Christ-like love. And that is the thing that men and women are hungering for to-day, just some one to whom they can go and in whom they can find God seeking, sympathizing, suffering, and saving. Until the pastors of our churches represent God in this fashion, men will never come into contact with him in any vital way. The pastor must know God so well that to talk to him is to talk to God in him. He must live so close to God that the very character of his life will call out to the weary and broken-hearted. Come unto me.—The Advocate.

MOUNT SEQUOYAH.

Methodist people will be glad to know that the season just closing at the Western Methodist Assembly on Mount Sequoyah has been the best of all the history of that institution. The attendance record was broken by almost two thousand registrations and the financial returns were far in advance of any previous years. There is now no question but that Mount Sequoyah is rapidly becoming a great summer playground for all Methodism of the Southwest and will be even more so as our people of the patronizing Conferences learn of the superior advantages to be found at Mount Sequoyah.

This is Rev. Sam Yancey's first year as superintendent of the Western Methodist Assembly, and the fine record made is due largely to his leadership. He is evidently the right man for the place, and if given the proper co-operation throughout the area will give to our Methodism the very best for its summer recreation.

Many improvements have been made on Mount Sequoyah this year. The Epworth League building was practically completed; the woman's building was in use for the first time; many camp cottages were constructed; the cafeteria was doubled in size; and numerous minor improvements on the grounds were made. Outside the grounds many residences were constructed, two or three of which are the finest to be found in all this section of the Ozarks. These improvements seem to indicate an ever-increasing enlargement of the physical equipment of Mount Sequoyah, and thereby add to the comfort of those who may come to the Assembly year after year.

The people called Methodist in the patronizing Conferences of Mount Sequoyah should take a greater interest in this institution. It belongs to them and offers unexcelled advantages for an ideal vacation. Plans are already in the making for a bigger and better Assembly next summer. Our people generally can help make it so by cooperating a little more heartily and attending more regularly. Rev. Sam Yancey will be glad to give you information on anything you should know about the Assembly and make reservations for you for next summer.

IN HIS NAME.

"In the name of the Lord Jesus"—let me write the legend over whatever I do in word or in deed. "This is the famous stone that turneth all to gold."

Let me pray in the name of Jesus. Just as he would pray, if he were kneeling in my place; just with his desires, his compassions, his importunities; just as his representative.

Let me live my daily life in the name of Jesus. Seeking not to be original, but to reflect him, my peerless Pattern, my Master without blemish and without spot; walking in his footsteps; carrying about with me his zeal for God and his love for men; suggesting him to everybody whom I meet.

Let me suffer and be still in the name of Jesus. When the dark days come, the desert place, the sick room, the weakness and impotence, let me reproduce him who took the cup and said, "Not my will, but thine be done."

Let me enter heaven at last in the name of Jesus. It is my only title to the mansions in the skies.—Alex. Smellie.

THE FURNACE.

"Let thy gold be cast in the furnace,
Thy red gold, precious and bright,
Do not fear the hungry fire,
With its caverns of burning light:
And thy gold shall return more precious,
Free from every spot of stain;
For gold must be tried by fire,
As a heart must be tried by pain!

"In the cruel fire of sorrow
Cast thy heart, do not faint or wail;
Let thy hand be firm and steady,
Do not let thy spirit quail:
But wait till the trial is over,
And take thy heart again;
For as gold is tried by fire,
So a heart must be tried by pain!"

MY TASK.

To love some one more dearly every day,
To help a wandering child to find his way,
To ponder o'er a noble thought, and pray
And smile, when evening falls,
This is my task.

To follow truth as blind men long for light,
To do my best from dawn of day till night,
To keep my heart fit for his holy sight,
And answer when he calls,
This is my task.

"OUR FATHER."

The girls in Miss Miller's room were excited over the new girl who had come, but none of them had spoken to her. At recess they stood together under the big tree and talked about it.

"I know who her father is," said Bessie: "He's a Chinese laundryman. My father told me that a Chinaman had rented a place on Adams street and was going to move there."

"I hope Miss Miller doesn't expect us to be friends with her," remarked Helen with a determined shake of her head. "I wouldn't be friends with a Chinese for anything."

"No, you never can tell how clean they are," agreed Ruth, looking down at her own dainty dress. "We might get a disease or something. They look so queer."

"She does look queer in her plain, high-collared dress and her straight black hair," said another girl. "Her eyes are so solemn. I wonder if she ever laughs."

"They say the Chinese eat very queer things," said another.

And when each girl had told all she knew about the Chinese, they considered the whole matter settled and went back to their game.

The next day at recess, Miss Miller brought the little Chinese girl to where they were playing. "We shall call Lucile by her American name," she said, smiling. "I am sure you girls will be glad to have her play with you." She left Lucile and went back to the building. She did not seem to notice that the girls had not replied nor moved toward the stranger. They invited her to play, for they were too well-bred to be outwardly rude, and Lucile played until the end of the recess.

Once, during the pause in the fun, Lucile's solemn black eyes brightened as she said timidly: "In other city we have good game. Shall I show?" But the girls cried hastily, "Oh, let's play this again," and the games went on.

The next day the girls were glad to see that Lucile did not come down for recess. "I saw her ask the teacher if she could stay in and practice her reading," said Ruth.

"We really should be nice to her, I suppose," said Bessie. "My mother said she thought it was a good thing not to get too friendly, though. You never can tell what she would do. She might speak to us on the street, and wouldn't we feel queer?"

"Well, I'm glad she didn't come," said Helen. "I certainly don't want her in our games."

The days went on, and Lucile, with her plain dress and solemn dark eyes, grew more and more silent and stayed in almost every recess. Sometimes Miss Miller took a walk with her, and once she spoke to the girls about making friends, but she found them so determined that she knew it was no use.

One day at recess the principal came to Helen as she was playing with the girls. "Will you take this book to your room and put it on Miss Miller's desk?" she asked. "She wants it after recess and I cannot find her."

Helen hurried to the room, put the book on the desk, and started out. Suddenly she stopped. Lucile was standing at one side of the room, looking earnestly at the big picture that hung there. Helen knew without looking that it was the picture of an Indian sitting erect on his horse, with the face and his hands toward the sky as he prayed to the Great Spirit. She looked instead at Lucile's face. The girl had been crying, but now she was smiling as she looked at the picture. She was saying something softly to herself. Helen leaned forward to listen.

"Our Father, who are in Heaven," the Chinese girl was saying. "Our Father—yours and mine and—theirs, too."

Suddenly Helen was ashamed; more ashamed than she had ever been in her life. Of course, God was Lucile's Father and he must feel very badly about the way his other children had treated her. She ran over to Lucile and put one arm about her shoulder. "Your Father and mine, Lucile," she said softly. "Will you come down and play with us?"—The Kingdom of Love—(Doran).

MAKING THE MOST OF YOUR WORK.

By Faye N. Merriman.

"That's all very well," Kenneth snorted. "Talking about a fellow's making the most of his work. Sometimes there isn't any most, and there is work so unpleasant and uninteresting that no fellow can have his heart in it. Take mine, for instance."

"What is your work?" the newcomer asked curiously.

Kenneth flushed. "I clean out Mr. Carson's stable for him," he said. "He is about the only man in town that has horses yet. No, they are not thoroughbreds but old plugs that he works on the roads, so you don't need to say 'Get interested in the animals.' Anyway, they are all out on the road when I do the work. I haul away the fertilizer in a wheelbarrow. Now, what is interesting or inspiring about that?"

Horace Norton was silent for a moment. "I know a fellow that found himself in that very work," he said. "You see, he happened to have what you might call vision. He did not think of the evil odor, the unpleasant character of his work, but looked beyond."

"How could he do that?" Kenneth demanded, half contemptuously.

Horace smiled. "Where you see only hard, disagreeable work and the present, he saw the future—and gardens," he explained. "He had a small back yard, and he commenced experimenting there with the rather arid earth. He obtained permission to empty his wheelbarrows there as it happened at that time the refuse from the stable was not used or sold by the owner."

Kenneth looked startled and then thoughtful.

"He made a study of the different fertilizers," Horace went on. "He tried their effects upon the soil. He planted seeds in soils differently prepared, and studied the results. He mixed sand and clay and other different soils with the fertilizer, and kept up his seed-planting.

"He obtained books, and read up on the subject, first of preparing the soil, and then of planting the seeds. He read of strange plants he had never heard of, and at some considerable trouble secured them. Some he had to grow under a cold frame and some thrived in the open. Some died and could not be grown at all.

"His garden spread to the next yard, and people commenced to come and see it and comment. Once it was written up in the local papers. People came to buy slips and seeds and roots of his stock. Before he was fifteen he was consulted by men who wanted to make gardens themselves. And still he kept at his job cleaning out the stables, because he needed the fertilizer worse than he needed the money.

"Then a day came when a rich man asked him to make a garden around his new house. He gave him hundrdeds of dollars and complete responsibility. This boy, his name was Donald, hesitated at first. He was afraid. Then he looked at his own garden and knew there was beauty there, even if he had created it himself. He undertook the work of making this millionaire's garden, and this time the fertilizer was hauled to him in great loads. But the knowledge he had acquired himself helped him to mix it with other materials in just the right proportion for the soil. He dug and worked and planted, and one day the garden was done, the most beautiful spot in town. He gave up his stable job to plan other gardens."

"He's a gardener now," Kenneth asked.

"He calls himself that," Horace answered, with a whimsical smile. "But I will tell you his full name. It is Donald Quentin Parker. Perhaps you saw his name in the paper last night."

"The new superintendent of parks!" gasped out Kenneth. "Is that really a true story?"

"Yes," Horace laughed. "I know it is true, because Donald Q. Parker is my uncle, and I had the story from him. As you know, he is a noted landscape gardener and has planned every park in the city, and that is why they elected him or appointed him to the office."

"Whee!" Kenneth cried. "And here I have been pitying myself for having such a humble, disagreeable job. I've learned a lesson, I guess. I'm going to use my imagination and vision and see where my job will lead me. That's what!" Youth's World

AN ALMOST GROWN-UP YOUNG LADY.

One of the most interesting young people today is a Japanese girl. Her name is Setsu Matsudaira. She is nineteen years old and so is one of the almost grown-up young folks and she has so many of the fairy-like things just ahead of her.

For one thing she is going to me married, which is very grown-up, and they say it is a love match. They also say this will be the second love match in the Japanese royal family in twenty-five hundred years. The person whom Setsu is to marry is Chichibu, brother to the present emperor of Japan and his heir to the Japanese throne.

Setsu has been educated in Washington at the Friends School, to which Lindbergh and the Hoover boys also went.

Setsu's mother was interpreter for the Dowager Empress, who was Chichibu's mother, and the two children used to play together in wonderful old Japanese gardens. Then Setsu came to America wth her father, who is Japanese ambassador to America, and Chichibu also came to the western world to study and tor travel—his western world being England and Oxford. Both are fond of outdoor life and of sports.

When Setsu graduated from Friends School in Washington the girls in Friends School in Tokyo sent her a letter congratulating her and welcoming her back to Japan, which she has since reached. Setsu wrote back a delightful letter which has been published in the Japanese papers along with her portrait. For everything concerning Setsu is joyous news to the Japanese. Setsu is doing so many fairy-like things. She has been adopted by her noble uncle. She will live until her marriage in the fall in semi-royal state, and in the fall she will belong to royalty itself.

Some day she and Chichibu may be rulers of the Japanese empire. They will carry the lessons they have learned with them. Setsu learned lessons of peace and goodwill at her school in America. May she never forget them when questions and difficulties come up, as they will, and may she be happy and help to make her people happy!—Lucy Meacham Thurston, in North Carolina Christian Advocate.

A speaker in chapel recently was speaking of the ostrich to illustrate his point and said, "The ostrich sees very little and digests everything."

A freshman girl in the front row whispered audibly, "My, what an ideal husband an ostrich would make."—Sunburr.

MEETING OF THE LOUISIANA CONFERENCE BOARD OF EDCUCATION.

The Louisiana Conference Board of Education met in the First Methodist Church, New Orleans, on Tuesday of last week to consider the educational situation of the Conference with special reference to the Conference Educational bond issue.

The meeting was well attended. In addition to most of the members of the Board, Bishop Warren A. Candler was present. He delivered a helpful and inspiring address, the keynote of which was the necessity of maintaining our educational institutions and our ability to do it by united action. All the presiding elders of the Conference, practically all the chairmen of other Conference Boards, and a considerable number of other visitors were also present.

The educational situation was gone into thoroughly. There was full, frank, and brotherly discussion of the whole matter. Upon motion, a committee was appointed to make recommendation of suitable action to the approaching Annual Conference. This committee was composed of Mr. T. W. Holloman, Conference Lay Leader; Mr. T. L. James, Mr. J. H. Thatcher, Rev. M. S. Monk, Dr. N. E. Joyner, and the chairman of the Board. Three sessions of the Board were held during the day. The special committee recommended that the Educational assessment be increased by $19,000, making the total assessment $40,000. After full discussion, this report was adopted as the recommendation of the meeting to the Annual Conference. The reasons for this large increase in assessment were presented very clearly to the meeting, and they will be embodied in the report at Conference. The hope is expressed that the members of the Conference will realize the urgency of the need and that they will face the problem and its solution with open minds.

This special meeting of the Board of Education will, it is believed, help very materially in bringing about united effort throughout the Louisiana Conference, which is vital to the success of its educational program.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. E. M. Shaw, our pastor at Nettleton, Miss., in a letter to the business office, says that things are going well on his charge.

Mrs. S. E. Peairs, in writing to ask that her address be changed from Deerford to Slaughter, La., says that she has been a reader of the Advocate for many years. She is in her seventy-ninth year.

The New Orleans Protestant Ministers' Association resumed its fall activities with a luncheon and business meeting at the Monteleone Hotel on Monday of this week.

Rev. C. K. Smith, of Pineville, La., made a friendly call at the Advocate office while in the city last week attending the meeting of the Board of Education.

Incident to the annual moving season in New Orleans, the present editor and his family are now domiciled at 2120 Fern Street, instead of 1916 Short Street, as formerly.

"Everything is moving along nicely on the Pleasant Hill charge, and we are hoping to close a successful year's work for our Lord," writes Rev. W. M. Jones, pastor, of Nesbitt, Miss.

All the Methodist preachers of New Orleans are back from their summer vacations and have entered vigorously upon the work of their pastorates. They are a busy set of men.

Mr. E. T. Douglas, Gilliam, La., did the very fine thing the other day of renewing his subscription to the Advocate for a period of five years, sending $10 for that purpose. We thank him sincerely—and wish there were others like-minded.

At the recent session of the Ohio Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, Dr. Frank C. English was appointed Executive Secretary of the American Protestant Hospital Association. Dr. English is one of the outstanding hospital executives of America.

The six churches of Brookhaven, Miss., united in tendering a reception to the Whitworth College faculty and the teachers of the public schools in that city on Friday night of last week. The reception was held in the social hall of the Baptist church.

Dr. Robert E. Goodrich, pastor of the First Methodist Church, Shreveport, La., has completed a series of Sunday evening sermons on the topic, "Some Vacation Parables of Life." The subjects in the series were: "Roads," "Mountains, "Rivers," "Canyons," and "Folks."

The Sunday school of the First Methodist Church, Lake Charles, La., held its commencement exercises last Sunday, promotions being made in all departments. This is a great annual feature at Lake Charles. Mr. A. M. Mayo is one of our greatest Sunday school superintendents.

The Department of Commerce announces that, according to returns received, there were in the United States in 1926, 213 religious bodies with 231,983 organizations and 54,624,976 members as compared with 200 denominations reporting 226-718 organizations and 41,926,854 members in 1916.

Rev. and Mrs. John J. Rasmussen, of Delhi, La., were visiting relatives and friends in New Orleans last week. Brother Rasmussen reported that the meeting recently held at Delhi, in which the preaching was done by Rev. Burke Culpepper, was a great blessing to the church and to the community.

The New Orleans Standard Training School will be held at Rayne Memorial, Oct. 14-19. Five courses will be offered. A meeting of the district Sunday school workers will be held at Rayne Memorial at 8 o'clock p. m., next Friday, to elect district officers and to complete arrangements for the Training School. Rev. W. H. Giles, of St. Mark's, is chairman of the publicity committee.

During the absence of Dr. Henry Felgar Brooks, pastor at Clarksdale, Miss., Rev. J. E. Stephens will shepherd his flock at Clarksdale. As has been previously announced Dr. Brooks recently underwent an operation at the Methodist Hospital, Memphis, which is expected to remove the trouble with which he has suffered, and in a short time restore him to complete health. His brethren and friends will, we are sure, remember him in their prayers.

Mrs. E. L. Alford, widow of the late Rev. E. L. Alford, of the Mississippi Conference, paid the Advocate office an appreciated call recently. While she calls Tylertown, Miss., "home," she has spent the summer in New Orleans. She is interested in distributing a set of books, "The Master Library," which is what its name implies. We have rarely seen a collection of books calculated to mean more to a home, especially if there are children in it, than this set. We wish for Mrs. Alford great success in her work.

The Second Methodist Church, this city, has just issued a beautiful official directory, attractive as to appearance and interesting as to contents. It is adorned by a picture of the pastor, Rev. A. M. Serex, A.B., B.D., M.A., and of Miss Julia McGowan, winner of the "Know Missions" Oratorical contest, now a member of St. Mark's, but formerly connected with Second Church. A picture of the church is also shown. The directory was printed by the Chalmers' Printing House. It is a beautiful specimen of the printer's art.

The Methodist mission work near the Industrial Canal, this city, is making fine progress. Organized on July 1 with a membership of 14, it now has 26 members, and at least a dozen more are expected to be received by Conference. The Sunday school has an enrollment of 51. The work enterprised in the Lakeview section of the city is also showing gratifying progress. The Sunday school, organized on August 2, now has an enrollment of 50. There is a good prospect of the organization of a church before Conference. Rev. A. J. Martin is the efficient pastor of these new appointments.

Our church at Bastrop, La., where Rev. Ellis Smith is pastor, observed last Sunday as "Home-Coming Day." The morning sermon was preached by Rev. Elmer C. Gunn, presiding elder of the Monroe District, and the evening sermon by Rev. D. C. Barr, an honored superannuate member of the Louisiana Conference. The church at Bastrop has made fine progress this year under the leadership of Brother Smith. One hundred and thirty new members have been received during the year, and all departments of the work have shown growth. The official board recently unanimously requested the return of Brother Smith for another year. We have gathered these items from the Morehouse Enterprise.

Rev. R. L. Clayton, our pastor at Patterson, La., writes: "We have just closed at Patterson one of the most successful Cokesbury Training Schools that have ever been held in this section of the State. The class which was conducted by Rev. A. K. McLellan was the largest one-teacher Cokesbury School that Brother McLellan has conducted this year. Fifteen credits were issued, and the smallest attendance at any session was eighteen. As a result of the school, our work has been greatly benefitted. It is quite probable that Patterson will be represented at the Standard Training School in New Orleans. The Patterson charge is working for a 100 per cent report at Conference, the laymen of the church are behind our great church program, and it is hoped that we will be successful in this endeavor also."

Mr. Chas. H. McEuen, Director of Student Work, First Methodist Church, Baton Rouge, La., writes: "I shall be glad to hear from parents having sons or daughters attending L. S. U. We shall be glad to take personal interest in them and serve them in any way possible. Many of the students are among strangers and need a welcoming hand. They need an open door leading into a place of worship, where they may find friends worthy to be trusted, in whom they may put confidence during their busy life on the campus, and to whom they may look for guidance in the all-important matter of planning for the future. It is the church's duty and privilege to furnish the means for the social and spiritual welfare of the many who come to prepare to meet life's tasks. With your co-operation we shall endeavor to meet this challenge."

The Christian Herald has announced its first Protestant Church Building Competition. Prizes totaling $1,200 will be offered. The churches must have been completed not earlier than July 1, 1926, and have a seating capacity between 150 and 500. They may be built of any style and of any material. The contest closes December 1, 1928, and the awards will be made soon thereafter. The Jury of Award will consist of three nationally known architects. A complete announcement will be mailed to ministers and architects upon application to the Bureau of Church Planning, Christian Herald, 419 Fourth Avenue, New York City. Of especial interest to ministers and church members is a provision of the competition awarding one-half of each prize to the congregation and the other half to the architect. The first prize will be $1,000, of which the church will receive $500.

The Commercial Dispatch, of Columbus, Miss., contained an appropriate editorial recently in connection with the completion of fifty years in the Methodist ministry by Dr. W. M. McIntosh, pastor of the Central Methodist Church, Columbus. We quote from the editorial: "Dr. McIntosch's ministry has extended from one end of the broad Southland to the other. He numbers his friends by his acquaintances. Here in this community he is loved by all of the people in all of the denominations. This is a rare tribute to any man because it is not an exaggeration. His genial and friendly nature, his kindly and princely soul, his love for his fellowman has won for him an everlasting place in the hearts of everyone, and to-day these loyal and devoted and loving friends, his neighbors, his fellow citizens, and his co-workers, join in extending to him sincere congratulations and the wish that he may enjoy many, many more anniversaries. The entire Commercial Dispatch family, all of whom love and admire him, salute him to-day and wishes for him many more years of health, and happiness." The Advocate joins in extending to Dr. McIntosh congratulations and all good wishes on the happy occasion.

Rev. Adrien M. Serex and Mrs. Serex left on Monday of this week for Brussels, Belgium, where Brother Serex will complete his work for the degree of Doctor of Philosophy, the writing of his thesis being the principal task ahead of him. Brother Serex has been released from his work as pastor of the Second Methodist Church, this city, in order that he might thus complete his work abroad. He has accomplished a great work at Second Church, every department of the work showing marked advance during his pastorate. As a testimonial of appreciation, the congregation of Second Church gave him a magnificent watch at the close of the evening service last Sunday. Brother Serex was the guest-preacher at the First Methodist Church on Sunday morning, where he served as assistant pastor during the pastorate of Dr. R. H. Harper, and where he is held in the highest esteem. On Thursday of last week the Methodist preachers of the city gave him and Mrs. Serex a farewell luncheon at the Monteleone Hotel, and gave him a beautiful umbrella as a token of their love and esteem. Still in his early twenties, Brother Serex is one of the best prepared men in the church. He is writing his thesis in the field of Philosophy and Psychology. A brilliant future is predicted for him in the realm of scholarship. He expects to return to the United States by Sept. 15 of next year. He retains his membership in the Louisiana Conference.

A CORRECTION.

Rev. J. M. Alford has called my attention to the fact that I made a mistake in my recent write-up of the Mangham charge. I said that the charge paid everything in full last year for the first time in their history. Brother Alford called my attention to the statement and to the fact that during at least two former years, in the time of his four-year pastorate, the Mangham charge paid everything in full. I am sorry to have made this mistake, and gladly make the correction.

THE NEW CHURCH AT HAZLEHURST, MISS.

On Sunday morning, Sept. 23, at 11 o'clock, the town of Hazlehurst enjoyed a privilege that comes only occassionally to any community. Once in a half century is about as often as any congregation will do honor to itself in building such a beautiful house in which to worship God.

Protection Against Old Age

It may be somewhat oftener that a community has the great privilege to hear such preaching as Bishop Candler did, at both morning and evening services, but especially at the morning hour. The Bishop was fit physically, and at his best in the pulpit. His theme was the Divine Christ, the Son of God, the Truth, the origin of Truth, and the foundation of the Church of God. This divine Christ, this Truth, is the only remedy for the sins of this old sick-hearted world. This Truth is divine in its origin, divine in its processses, and divine in its fruits. The memories of this day will rest like a benediction on the hearts of the whole community.

Just a few more weeks than twelve months from the time the ground was broken, a beautiful brick bungalow, English style parsonage, and a church building of dark red brick with black mortar and beautiful stone trimmings have been built. In fact the design, modified Gothic, and the general outline of the building are as pleasing as any building in the Mississippi Conference. The pastor, Rev. C. W. Crisler, D.D., the official board, all the membership and the community have done themselves credit in the accomplishment of this enterprise.

One of the most pleasant features of this occasion was that the pastors and membership of the other churches entered into this service as heartily as if it had been their own. Dr. Caldwell, the man of God, the citizen, pastor, and preacher, was there with his delightful flock to make glad the occasion, to remind us that John Calvin is still in the world blessing the lives of men. Dr. Green, the scholar, preacher, and pastor, took his place in the choir to contribute to the occasion with praises to the Father, Son and Holy Ghost, and to make one think of John Bunyan and his experience in the jail at Bedford. Dr. Bush, the shepherd of the Episcopal flock, who ministers in things divine and leads his worthy flock in the ways eternal, pronounced the blessing at the close of the morning service, and the people retired to their homes with a holy hush resting upon them. Present at these services, both morning and evening, were several former pastors and other pastors who lived near: Rev. B. F. Jones, D.D., former pastor and presiding elder of the Brookhaven District, and now at Whitworth; Rev. J. M. Morse, of the Superannuate Board, who lives in Jackson; Rev. L. M. Sharp, of Georgetown; Rev. H. B. Perritt, of Wesson, superannuate, with the writer of this sketch, were at morning service; and Rev. L. E. Alford, of Crystal Springs, was at the evening service.

Such a personality as Bishop Candler always leaves a blessing in the home, in the church, and anywhere he goes, to sanctify and inspire the heart to seek higher things.

NEW BRICK CHURCH AT ISOLA, MISS.

We have completed the splendid new brick church at Isola, North Mississippi Conference, and have it fully equipped. Will move in Sunday, Sept. 30.

The Greenwood District Preachers' Association will hold their regular monthly meeting with us, Oct. 16. All former pastors, presiding elders, and members are cordially invited to be with us that day.

All goes well.

WHITTIER'S PRAYER.

I have but thee, my Father! let thy Spirit
Be with me then to comfort and uphold:
No gate of pearl, no branch of palm I merit,
Nor street of shining gold.

Suffice it if—my good and ill unreckoned,
And both forgiven through thy abounding grace—
I find myself by hands familiar beckoned
Unto my fitting place—

Some humble door among thy many mansions,
Some sheltering shade where sin and striving cease,
And flows forever through heaven's green expansions
The river of thy peace.

There, from the music round about me stealing,
I fain would learn the new and holy song,
And find at last, beneath thy trees of healing,
The life for which I long.

—John Greenleaf Whittier

Abiding in Christ is a matter of the heart. It must be cultivated in a spirit of love. Only as we take time from day to day in fellowship with Christ will the abiding in Christ become a blessed reality, and the inner man be renewed from day to day.—Andrew Murray.

Memorial resolutions are subject to the same rule as obituaries.

RESOLUTIONS.

Whereas, our Heavenly Father, in his wisdom, has taken from our midst and from the ranks of the Woman's Missionary Society our beloved sister and co-worker, MRS. A. D. MOORE, we, the members of the Winnsboro auxiliary, are deeply grieved and feel keenly the great loss we have sustained in her passing from among us.

Therefore, be it resolved: First, That while her place is vacant here, the memory of her gentle disposition and the influence of her beautiful Christian life will always he an inspiration to those who knew and loved her.

Second, That we extend our prayerful sympathy to her family, and pray that our Saviour may comfort their hearts. We commend them to Him who doeth all things well.

Third, That a copy of these resolutions he sent to the family, the Franklin Sun, the Christian Advocate, and that another he spread on the minutes of the Missionary Society.

Signed: Mrs. E. B. Moore, Mrs. W. S. Henry, Mrs. W. F. Prickett, Committee.

Winnsboro, La.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT.

Whereas, God, in his all-wise providence, has seen fit to remove from our Brotherhood one of our most useful, wide-awake, and faithful members, BROTHER H. A. HINTON; be it resolved:

1. That it is a sad, distinct, and irreparable loss to the Wesley Brotherhood of Bay Springs Methodist church.

2. That we as a Brotherhood shall always remember him as a hrother heloved, who was always ready and willing to do what our Brotherhood called upon him to do.

3. That we, as a body, extend to the bereaved family our sincere sympathy and prayers in this, their sad hour and lonely bereavement; and,

4. That a copy of these resolutions be given to the family, a copy spread upon the Brotherhood minutes, a copy sent to the Jasper County News, and a copy sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate for puhlication.

Signed: W. F. Thompson, president; J. B. Horn, secretary.

ANNIE LEE WATKINS, the first charm and hope of the parsonage home of Rev. and Mrs. S. B. Watkins, Florence, Miss., died on March 30, 1928. Annie Lee would have been fourteen years old in June. All that fond parents, skilled physicians, and attentive nurses could do was done, but of ho avail. Heaven called and she went home to be with God. The writer was with her and her heart-broken parents when the last hour came. Many such scenes had been witnessed before, hut none more beautiful and full of hope than was this one. This precious child went up to meet the Good Shepherd, chanting her Sunday school song, "Jesus loves me, this I know, for the Bible tells me so," and repeating, "The Lord Is My Shepherd;" and another lamb was gathered into the heavenly fold. God blessed the home, church, and community with an unusual life for nearly fourteen years. A leader in her classes at school and among her groups of friends, she was marked to be a useful builder in the kingdom of God, but the Creator who "made everything beautiful in its place" came and took her lovely life to adorn mansions above. The writer, assisted by Revs. Rolfe Hunt, Wayne Alliston, B. F. Lewis, W. A. Terry, J. C. Chambers, F. B. McCulloch, and C. E. Downer, conducted the services in her father's church at Florence, where she was a consistent member. Borne by the hands of girl frlends of the Hl Y, her body was laid away in the cemetery at Florence to await the glad Resurrection morn.

Ledge vs. Boulder Granite

The purpose of a monument is to perpetuate the memory of the dead. An all-important factor, therefore, is its permanence.

Beautiful Winnsboro Granite is a true granite unaffected by the processes that disintegrate rock because of its protection from the elements, due to being deep in the earth in vast ledge formation. It has retained all of the strength and durability accomplished by the union of its beautiful crystals while molten millions of years ago,

Winnsboro Granite

"The Silk of the Trade"

therefore, will last many, many years longer than monuments cut from other granite. Its flawless beauty, stalwart strength, and great durability make it the ideal memorial granite. It possesses wonderful contrasts in shades and shadows. Thus, inscriptions cut on Winnsboro Granite Memorials can be read with greatest ease.

Beware of Boulder Granite.

A boulder is a piece of granite which has become detached from the earth stones, ages ago, and has been left on the surface exposed to the elements. The smooth round edges of boulders show that the stone has begun to disintegrate. Such stone is inferior, having partially lost its vitality, becoming more brittle and tending to crumble though having a fair appearance. It naturally sells at a lower price, but if you get a monument of boulder stone, you have a stone which has already started to rot. It is well to remember, "The sweetness of low prices never equals the bitterness of poor quality."

Typical Granite Boulder.

Be sure that "Winnsboro Granite" is specified in your contract for monuments. Like other high quality materials, there are many inferior substitutes, which resemble this granite on causual examination, but do not possess its lasting qualities and permanent beauty.

Have your monument dealer furnish you with a personal guarantee from the quarries that the monument you purchase is cut in genuine Winnsboro Granite.

The certificate of the quarries is signed by B. H. Heyward. Treasurer and General Manager, whose signature insures genuine Winnsboro Granite. A facsimile of this signature is reproduced below.

IMMINENCE.

Like to the circuit of a bright day's glory,
Like to a shadow moving on the grass,
Like to the telling of an evening story,
God's purposes all shortly come to pass.

Like to the nearness of a dewdrop's brushing,
Like to the nearness of a breath of May,
Like to the nearness of a wind uprushing,
God's promised kigdom is not far away.

Like to the vastness of the stars' swift motion,
Like to the vastness of the course they swing,
Like to the vastness of a shoreless ocean,
God's love is here enfolding everything.

CHINA'S MISSIONARIES RETURNING.

On Jan. I, 1927, there were some 6,500 Protestant missionaries on the field in China. In February and March, 1927, came Communist outbreaks and the great missionary exodus. Recent reports indicate that now 4,000 missionaries are on the field again, of which number only one-third are in the port cities, proof that order is returning.—Christian Herald.

ZONE MEETING, MINDEN DISTRICT.

On Sept. 6, Cotton Valley was hostess to zone No. 1, of Minden District.

Our zone leader, Mrs. W. H. Martin, called the meeting to order with a request for silent prayer. This prayer was concluded by singing, "Savior, More Than Life to Me." The devotional was led by Mrs. Stephens, who based her remarks on the fourteenth chapter of John. Roll call showed the four auxiliaries of the zone represented as follows: Alden Bridge, nine; Cotton Valley, twenty-one; Plain Dealing, thirteen; and Spring Hill, four. There were seven visitors present.

Our presiding elder, Brother Dodson, brought us a very interesting message on the political situation. In part, he said that politics can help or hinder the cause of Christ. There is great danger in bringing politics into the church, but we should commit ourselves unto the Lord and strive to find out his will and do it.

Questions and plans for the Jubilee Week of Prayer were discussed. Our leader urged that we make a ten per cent increase in our pledge.

Mrs. Taylor gave a very interesting introduction to our new mission study book, "Women and the Kingdom," by Miss Mabel K. Howell.

The histories of all the auxiliaries in the zone were given, as follows: Plain Dealing Junior Auxiliary, Mrs. Collins; Plain Dealing Adult Auxiliary, Mrs. McKinney; Cotton Valley, Mrs. Morton; Alden Bridge, Mrs. Hoffpauir; Spring Hill, Mrs. Holcomb. We were glad to learn that we had pioneer work in this zone.

Our leader then asked Mrs. Giles to sing for us, for her songs always carry a message. Her selection was, "Lord, Is It I?"

An offering for rural work was taken by two Juniors from Plain Dealing, Joe Waggner and Raymond Purcell.

After a nice luncheon, served by the Cotton Valley ladies, the afternoon program was taken up.

Mrs. Gillen gave an earnest talk on Stewardship. This was followed by a round table discussion, each auxiliary telling of its problems and asking for help in solving them.

Mrs. Martin then asked all of the auxiliaries to pay four dollars on the Scarritt Loan Fund. It was unanimously voted that we do this. A vote of thanks was tendered to our hostesses. It was decided that the zone meeting for the fourth quarter would be held with the Plain Dealing auxiliary, date to be set later.

Brother Pfost pronounced the benediction.

LAUDERDALE COUNTY ZONE MEETING AT BONITA.

Mrs. B. W. Ware, of Daleville, zone president, presided at the meeting of the Lauderdale County zone, of the Meridian District, held at Bonita, Friday afternoon, Sept. 14.

A splendid attendance was recorded, and the following program was presented: Song, "I'll Live for Him;" devotionals, "Promotion of Christ's Kingdom," Mrs. J. H. Rush; prayer, Rev. T. B. Cottrell; talk, "How to Promote Personal Spiritual Growth," Miss Addie Greely; demonstration of Children's and Young People's Work, Mmes. Stanley Wilson and C. W. Cochran; "Week of Prayer and Jubilee Thank Offering," Mrs. A. F. Watkins; vocal solo, "I Gave My Life for Thee," Mrs. Lowry Rush, accompanied by Mrs. J. D. Tucker; "Echoes from Junaluka," Mrs. H. G. Hawkins; "Questions and Problems," Mrs. T. M. Cottrell; "Meridian Wesley House," Miss Mabel Anderson.

The Lauderdale County zone was proud to have present four of its ministers: Rev. A. J. Leggett, of Vimville; Rev. T. B. Cottrell, of Poplar Springs; Rev. B. W. Ware, of Daleville, and Rev. Waldo W. Moore, of Seventh Avenue, Meridian; four Conference officers: Mrs. A. F. Watkins, first vice president; Mrs. T. B. Cottrell, corresponding secretary; Mrs. C. W. Cochran, superintendent of Young People's work; and Mrs. Stanley Wilson, superintendent of children's work; and Miss Addie Grely, deaconess of Central church, Meridian, and Miss Mabel Anderson, workers at the Wesley House, Meridian. It was indeed a privilege to have these splendid workers present, and their messages gave much information and inspiration. Surely a still greater work will be accomplished for the Master!

Mrs. Cottrell announced that in our Conference three young women had offered themselves for Christian service, and that they will enter Scarritt Bible and Training School this fall. They are: Miss Mattie Lou Davis, of East End, Meridian; Miss Nonnie V. Davis, of Pascagoula, and Miss Bobbie Leggett, of Allensville.

Mrs. Watkins and Mrs. Cottrell urged that we make the Jubilee thank offering one worth while. Mrs. Watkins said it would be a beautiful thing if every woman would give a five-dollar gold piece.

Miss Anderson expressed the needs of the Wesley House. Many things are needed, but the greatest of all is that of getting the children ready for school. She asked for clothes and shoes, tablets and books, to meet the immediate need.

SUGGESTIONS.

Dr. Henry Van Dyke's poem, entitled "A Legend of Service," makes a very beautiful reading for a missionary program.

The hostess who seeks pleasant games for her missionary social will find some excellent suggestions in "I Know a New Game," by Kathleen Norris, in the September Ladies' Home Journal.

OLD FOLKS SAY DR. CALDWELL WAS RIGHT

The basis of treating sickness has not changed since Dr. Caldwell left Medical College in 1875, nor since he placed on the market the laxative prescription he had used in his practice.

He treated constipation, biliousness, headaches, mental depression, indigestion, sour stomach and other indispositions entirely by means of simple vegetable laxatives, herbs and roots. These are still the basis of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, a combination of senna and other mild herbs, with pepsin.

The simpler the remedy for constipation, the safer for the child and for you. And as you can get results in a mild and safe way by using Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, why take chances with strong drugs?

A bottle will last several months, and all can use it. It is pleasant to the taste, gentle in action, and free from narcotics. Elderly people find it ideal. All drug stores have the generous bottles, or write "Syrup Pepsin," Dept. BB, Monticello, Illinois, for free trial bottle.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

Our Standard Training School at McComb City was a fine school. We had as fine a spirit among those attending the school as it was at all possible for us to have. For this we were devoutly thankful. We had six churches represented in the credits—Brookhaven, Osyka, Norfield, Pearl River Avenue, Centenary. I do not now recall if there were any credits delivered to members of LaBranch Street Church. This is the first time in three years that the credits have reached over fifty. We had fifty-four credits, for which we are greatly thankful. We hope that this will prove to be the turning point in the history of training at McComb.

It was our privilege to attend the opening of Whitworth College. It was our first trip back to an opening in twenty-nine years. That seems like a long time—and it is. I don't think I have ever looked at a finer group of young women. Everything about the opening services was to be commended. I think the authorities are to be congratulated.

It was announced that every pastor in the Conference who was sending his girl to school this year except one was sending her to Whitworth. This was fine great news to me. The enrollment is larger than it has been. There is much of promise. Another thing impressing to me was the air of hope and good cheer pervading all who were present at the opening, and there were a good number from the town present.

Personally, I appreciate the fact that there are men in the faculty of the college. I feel that this will be helpful to the college, and especially will mean much to the young women who go there.

There is real close relationship between Millsaps and Whitworth; this will become closer and closer as time goes by.

Dr. Winfield has made a fine start, and the people seem to have found a friend in him and have demonstrated their friendship to him and his work. Mrs. Winfield and the daughter, Miss Ruth, are delightful indeed and make one feel perfectly at home. It is a great place, and we pray for them that its greatness is just beginning.

We would urge upon all that they do their best to have a fine missionary program and take as large an offering as possible and send it in. We are facing a shortage in our missionary work because of the lack of funds. Your money to this cause is the only money spent for this cause, and we are more than anxious for the lines to go out if the money will only come in.

This is also the last call for Sunday School Day money. It would be hard for us to go to Annual Conference and the Sunday School Day fund be smaller than it was last year. If you have observed the day and have not sent in the money, please do so. If you have not observed the day, it would be well for you at least to have the sermon on the religious education of children and take the collection.

Miss Alford has gone out into the field this month as our Elementary Superintendent. Blessings upon her. She has made good, and with your prayers and good wishes will make a servant we will all thank God for.

Yours in His service,

JOHN C. CHAMBERS.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

It is not too late to order programs for the observance of Childhood and Youth Week. This project has all the advantages of Rally Day. It is really a rally day that counts for permanent results. The teachers make visits into homes of the people, invite them to the service held especially for parents, and at that meeting enterprise something of value to the children. The results of Rally Day soon pass away; the results of Childhood and Youth Week abide for many days to come. One is promotional; the other educational.

We have received remittances from 133 schools on the observance of Sunday School Day. We mailed programs to about 200 schools. Let us hear from you, real soon as to what happened to the sixty-seven schools. The Board has done the work for these schools.

Did you order the new Cokesbury Record Books? If you forgot this, order a full set for your school. The use of this system of records will begin to build up your schools in a very short time after they are put into the hands of the officers and teachers. See the list as advertised in the Workers' Council. Is it possible you do not read this magazine? Order it and read it. You do not have the money? You have the money for gas and oil?

Rev. J. E. Cunningham, pastor, and Mr. W. P. Kretschmar, superintendent, worked diligently to have an enrollment of sixty in the Training School being held this week in Greenville. They caught this number, but a lot of them fell back in the water. Any way, we are having a good school, even if the number is not what we expected. This is the last school for the Conference year. Greenville is getting along very well, thank you. The only signs of the flood that devastated this section last year are visible in the work of the church—and the church will arrive after a time.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

Sunday, Sept. 23, was spent in Monroe and West Monroe. We visited Monroe Sunday school first. The pastor, superintendent, and other leaders extended me a cordial welcome. Almost the first thing said to me by the superintendent's wife was an invitation to take dinner with them. This makes the Conference Superintendent feel at home.

I spoke a word to the Intermediate-Senior Department, of which Mr. A. W. Trotter is superintendent. The next department I visited was the Men's Bible class, which had sixty-two members present, with Mr. Sam Collins as teacher. I consider the Bible class of Monroe one of the outstanding classes in Louisiana Methodism.

After a conference with the pastor about the details of the Training School, we reached West Monroe in time for the closing period of their Sunday school. The first thing we noted was the improvements of the building, which will cost about $2,500. We found a good interest in the Training School from all of the leaders, from the pastor down to the superintendent of the Cradle Roll Department.

We preached for the pastor at 11 a. m., and enjoyed noon hospitality at the parsonage with Mr. and Mrs. McCoy, both of whom are in fine favor at West Monroe.

We reached home, Alexandria, in time to visit Pineville Sunday night. They had a large attendance at church.

"Childhood and Youth Week" should mean much in the Louisiana Conference this year. The Conference and district leaders are interested, and many of the local schools will observe this week. Pamphlet literature, etc., will be sent to any local school who will write us. Some literature has already been sent out.

Mrs. Marion S. Monk, Superintendent of Elementary Work in the Monroe District, writes: "We are going to observe this week, and a committee was appointed at our last Council meeting; but I am anxious to get all literature, including poster. Will you kindly forward at once, as I wish to get committee at work."

She hopes to get several other schools in her district to observe this week.

SUNDAY SCHOOL.

We were called upon recently to baptize a Cradle Roller, Borron W. Owen, son of Mr. G. T. Owen, Jr., and Kitty Owen, of Baton Rouge. We had the honor of baptizing Master Borron Owen's mother while pastor at Plaquemine. Baptism of Master Owen took place at Alexandria in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Trent L. James.

Tuesday, Sept. 25, we spent in New Orleans at the special meeting of the Board of Education at the invitation of its chiarman, Dr. H. T. Carley.

We arrived in New Orleans Tuesday morning in time to visit the District Sunday School Superintendent, Mr. J. H. Carter, before the Board called their meeting. On arrival at First Church, where the Board meeting was held, we found many outstanding laymen and preachers of the Conference preseot.

Bishop Candler was present aud made an inspiring address, which if every Methodist in Louisiana could have heard, our problem of financing our Conference schools would have been solved. Many plans were discussed, and no doubt some definite plans and much good will come out of this get-together meeting.

We had many individual conferences about Sunday school work. On Friday night, Oct. 5, at Rayne Memorial, there will be a district rally meeting of the Sunday school workers in the interest of the Training School, which is booked for Oct. 14-19.

During our visit in New Orleans I was a guest in the home of Rev. H. L. Johns, pastor of Carrollton Avenue Church. When it comes to hospitality, Brother Johns is a "Master."

In company with Dr. Cleanth Brooks, of Alexandria, and Rev. D. B. Boddie, of Opelousas, we left New Orleans for home by auto. En route we stopped for a short visit with Dr. Briscoe Carter, of Ponchatoula, reaching home about 4 p. m.

Mr. A. M. Mayo, superintendent of the Lake Charles Sunday school, sent us an attractive invitation of the commencement exercises of his Sunday school, which will be at 11 a.m. Sunday, Sept. 30. We offer congratulations and best wishes.

We also received fall program of the Staudard Training School of First Church, Shreveport. Mr. W. A. McKennon, Educational Director, writes: "We have sent out 2,000 of these programs."

Prospects are fine for the three last Training Schoools this fall, Shreveport New Orleans and Monroe.

We have before us fall program of Rev. H. L. Johns, Carrollton Avenue Church. It is full of information and good things. He begins his letter with the following verse:

"Methodist members, large and small,
Babies, Young Folks, Dad and All,
Let me have some words with you—
Read this message right straight through!"

A GOOD YEAR.

I have held eleven revival meetings, all of which were spiritual revivals in the old-time way. God has wonderfully blessed our meetings, for which we give him all the credit—we can do nothing without his help. We have had about 140 conversions; 122 have joined the Methodist Church, others joining other churches; got a good title to one church lot; two to be finished, and three to be dedicated, Sunday schools organized where there were none. REVIVAL AT HOPEWELL CHURCH.

Brother Ware, from Daleville, Miss., has just closed out a fine meeting at Hopewell, on the Cleveland charge. I think he was the man for the place. He did some old-time, soul-stirring preaching. Old grudges were brought to light, confessed and, we trust, settled forever. This seemed to help break the ice so God could bless. Sinners rushed to the altar without a song even and were converted to God. This continued until the closing service. On Friday evening, about twenty-five young people claimed Jesus as their Savlour. There were nine accessions to the church. The Christians were revived. It was the best meeting we have had in years, and, best of all, it still continues. Our prayer meetings are being conducted by these new converts, and God is blessing.

Brother Ware is a man of God, and he is using him to dig up sin. No church would make any mistake in securing his help in meetings. We were not privileged to have Sister Ware until the last day, but I am sure she is a fine worker in revivals, too. We would gladly welcome them back any time. We bid them Godspeed.

CLARA BARNETTE.

GUNNISON AND SHERARD CHARGE.

Dear Dr. Carley: This is our first year on the Gunnison and Sherard charge and it has been a very pleasant and successful year. We have a good people to serve. The churches are very well organized, the Sunday schools are doing good work, the Missionary Societies are active and doing a great work in helping to extend the Kingdom of God. Thirty-two members have been received into the church, twenty on profession of faith.

We have recently had Brother E. G. Mohler, our Extension Secretary, with us at Gunnison in a Cokesbury Training School. He did good work; his teaching is sane, safe and religious; he is brotherly and works well with the pastor and is doing a work that is very much needed in most of our small Sunday schools.

The Conference year will soon close. We are looking after all the interests of the church and hope to be able at the Annual Conference to report everything in full. J. J. GARNER.

NEW BRICK CHURCH AT MANGHAM, LA.

Dear Brother: You will doubtless be interested to know that on Sunday, Sept. 30, we will open our new brick church building. Dr. N. E. Joyner will preach the first sermon at 11 a.m., and Rev. E. C. Gunn will preach at night.

The meeting will continue for ten days, led by Rev. M. S. Monk.

All former and neighboring pastors, and you, too, are especially invited to attend some time during the meeting.

We expect to have not over a $4,000 debt on the building, some $7,000 having been raised from our little membership of about ninety people.

It is a real accomplishment for that small number to carry on their regular work and build such a building. Much of the credit for this is due to Rev. J. C. Price, as he had it all planned when the flood came last year.

I do not believe a more harmonious committee has ever been elected than the one that carried on this work. They are: Mrs. E. D. Baker, chairman; Dr. W. M. Wooten, Dr. C. E. McConnel, Mr. R. E. Kenton, Mr. J. G. McCormick, and Mrs. W. D. Humble.

I intentionally placed Mrs. Humble last so I could say something about her, for Miss Kate, as she is called here, is the one who collected practically all the money for the church building.

We are confident that Mangham will pay all assessments in full this year.

Sincerely,

J. W. FAULK.

A LETTER FROM REV. W. D. BASS.

Dear Brother Carley: Am just home from an evangelistic tour of several small towns in Arkansas to Mobile, Ala. Scores were saved and added to the churches. We went into the open in one community and had additions enough for Dr. Cummings to organize a church membership which will pay its pastor about $300 another year; also arranged plans to build a house of worship. We do these things anywhere we have the material and untrammeled opportunities.

We did not find but little jealousy or prejudice in Arkansas against a local preacher evangelist. The people saved from sin is what they want, whoever the man may be who does the preaching.

As this is the fourth year of our beloved presiding elder, Brother "Lige" Cunningham, I wish to say that he has served the Corinth District well, and our Bishop would not make any mistake should he see proper to continue him in the same capacity elsewhere, as the law limit will not allow his return to us. W. D. BASS.

The Holy Communion

THERE is no time in the Christian's life when he comes into closer and more intimate relationship with the Divine than when he sits at the Lord's table. Why not approach its celebration with unalloyed joy, and casting all fears, thinking only of the wonderful privilege?

"The Sanitary" INDIVIDUAL COMMUNION Cups

It is now generally recognized that the Sanitary Individual cup increases the attendance because it removes all fear of uncleanliness, and promotes a deeper reverence in the communicant. The Sanitary Communion Outfit Company offers an improved and satisfactory outfit throughout, including the highly polished beautiful mahogany tray here shown, which eliminates all noise, is lighter and more easily handled than others and is more in keeping with the furniture of the church than a tray of any other material.

FROM THHE LOUISIANA FIELD SECRETARY.

Dear Epworth Leaguers: After spending most of the morning reading my October Epworth Era and this week's Christian Advocate, I'm just wondering what experience of mine I must teH you about this week. I want to thank three of my district secretaries for the articles on the League page concerning the work they are doing. Of course we know that the young man who set the type didn't mean to make the mistake of calling our friend W. L. McDuff by the new name of Mrs. W. L. McDuff. Some of our Leaguers are already wondering when "Mac" conferred the M. R. S. degree on some young lady and even turned the job of district secretary over to her. Well, it's all an error, Leaguers, so don't send in your congratulations to Mac yet.

I'm so glad that our young people are back in school again and are returning to their regular routine of life. I think It's a great mistake for our people, both young and old, to think that they need a vacation from religion every summer. Is it right that we should just "close shop" for the summer and neglect our Leagues, Sunday schools, and church services to go pleasure-seeking? Possibly my readers will think that I'm not the proper one to turn my letter into such a sermon on Summer Dissipation; but when I see so much of it throughout the State I can't help but hope that our young people of Louisiana will learn to spend their vacation time in more service to the Master and remember that:

"The ones who seek their happiness
By buying cars and clothes and rings
Don't seem to know that empty lives
Are just as empty filled with things."

Since writing you last week I've had some very interesting meetings with the different Leaguers in the Baton Rouge District. I went from Covington to Bogalusa, where I joined the Bogalusa Leaguers in a meeting at Franklinton and the Leaguers there. We had a fine group of young people present and enjoyed a splendid business hour and social time together. While in Franklinton I was with Miss Ora Hooper in Rev. F. N. Sweeney's home. I then went to Amite and enjoyed being with the pastor and Leaguers there at Brother Tucker's prayer meetinf, followed by our League hour in the social room of the church annex. At Hammond I was joined by Mr. Willis Beck, one of the Baton Rouge district secretaries. We drove to Ponchatoula to meet with the Leaguers there and had the pleasant surprise of attending a "Father and Sons banquet" given by the men's Mible class. They very cordially invited the Leaguers to attend also. After the banquet a large group of Leaguers met with me in the church auditorium, and we had a very profitable evening reviewing our League work together. I discovered that Ponchatoula has a splendid group of Leaguers and is successfully sponsoring a Senior and Hi League and an Epworth Junior Society. I appreciate the co-operation they get from the adults of the church, which is a great contributing factor in their success. Ponchatoula sent four Leaguers to Mansfield Assembly. On Friday night the Hi and Senior Leaguers of Hammond gathered for a business meeting and social hour together. We were glad to have the pastor, Rev. W. R. Harvell, present with us. While in Hammond I had the pleasure of being in the home of our former district secretary, Miss Wilda Addison. Sunday I attended Sunday school and church at First Church, Baton Rouge. Dr. F. L. Wells certainly inspires those who hear him deliver his powerful messages. Our Leaguers learned to love Dr. Wells while at our summer assembly because he is truly our young people's friend. Dr. Wells now has the splendid assistance of Mr. Charles H. McEuen, formerly of Austin, Tex., who is now in charge of student work and music at First Church. On Sunday evening the Senior and Hi Leaguers of First Church and the Senior Leaguers of Keener Memorial met together at their League hour at First Church. Sunday night I attended church services in Rev. Henry Bowdon's beautiful new church, Keener Memorial. The congregation at Keener Memorial has every right to be proud of this beautiful and spacious new building. Monday evening the Leaguers from the two churches met at Keener Church for a business meeting and social hour together. The Leaguers of Baton Rouge are already making plans for their Efficiency Institute to be held some time in February. I was most cordially entertained in the home of Miss Inez Easton, our district secretary for the Baton Rouge District, while in Baton Rouge.

After meeting at Zachary to-night I will go into Alexandria District for work.

Your co-worker in his service,
ELIZABETH LANGFORD,
Field Secretary.

$100,000—A GOAL OR A BY-PRODUCT?

By Ina Corinne Brown.

The goal—in money—for the Epworth League Mission Special is $100,000. This one hundred thousand does many interesting and helpful things. It really finds its way around the world and brings light and new life to many persons in many places.

But important as this missionary money is, it is not our real goal. It is instead something of a by-product. We have never reached the hundred thousand mark. We could do so easily if it were really our goal. We could put on a bit of high pressure, inaugurate a few tag days, ice cream suppers and other such means of raising money. But the object of the Epworth League is not and never has been to raise money. The object of the Epworth League is to develop the Christian character of young people and to train them for serviceable Christian living. Part of any such training must be the

"I Advise Every Minister with any spare time to take up this good work"

Rev. C. E. King Missouri

"I made my spare time yield me an average of $47.42 extra money each week doing this pleasant, outdoor work of 'meeting and talking to folks' during the first 11 weeks that I engaged in it—and I was proud of the nature of the work I was doing! For, I was helping people to make their land more fruitful and profitable and their homes more pleasing and valuable, by inducing them to plant Stark Fruit Trees, Flowering Shrubs, Shade Trees, Hedges, Vines and Rose Bushes.

"Since I know the Stark men and know them for sincere Christian gentlemen, I believe other Ministers of the Gospel will find joy and honest profit in this good and necessary work of helping improve Nature. So, I have permitted Stark Bro's to publish this statement in a few publications of the Baptist (my own faith) and those of other denominations. I suggest that you write Stark Bro's for their spare-time proposition, for both women and men. You will find it attractive—and clean and honest."

instilling of right habits of giving. This is a much bigger job than raising money—and a more difficult one. It requires time and care and patience, but it is infinitely worth while.

To have real educational value and to build itself into helpful and permanent habits, giving must be regular and systematic, it must be proportionate, it must be intelligent, and it must include causes which broaden the interest and deepen the sympathies.

Our task then is not to raise one hundred thousand dollars—important and worthwhile as that would be. Our task is to train the "last Leaguer in the last League" in these fruitful, helpful and permanent habits of giving.

To train Leaguers to give regularly and systematically, the plan in the local League should be that of weekly or monthly payments. To teach Leaguers to give proportionately, each should make a pledge according to his means rather than to give so much "dues" regardless of his ability to give. To give intelligently, Leaguers must know where the money goes and what it does. To give so that his interest is broadened and the sympathies deepened, at least a part of every person's giving should go outside local needs. The Epworth League Mission Special is planned to give the widest possible interest. Our interest follows our money and the Leaguer who gives intelligently to the Mission Special will find his interest going around the world.

A hundred thousand dollars or the training in giving of the "last Leaguer in the last League?" The hundred thousand is important and fairly easy. But it is secondary. The training of two hundred and fifty thousand young people is our real job. Let us do that job well and the hundred thousand drops into its rightful place as a by-product.

But have you set about the real training in giving of the last Leaguer in your League?

FITNESS FOR SCHOOL.

By Dr. Oscar Dowling, President, Louisiana State Board of Health.

Children who enter school physically or mentally unfit will soon feel the effects of their unfitness, though it may not be apparent immediately to teachers or parents.

A recent study of the vision of nearly 2,000 children showed that 45 per cent of those examined needed glasses for school work. Without examination, numbers of children are unaware of their defective vision, the teachers likewise. The same is true of hearing. A child partly deaf loses much that is said by the teacher and other pupils. He learns to guess at what is going on, and for a time "gets by," but he cannot make even average grades.

The near-sighted eye may be discovered by the use of the Snellen chart, but far-sightedness is not always discovered by this test. A hearing test can be given by the taecher with a watch. If defects are discovered, the child should have a thorough examination by a physician.

Frequent colds with possible infection of ears result from bad tonsils and presence of adenolds. Colds mean loss of time from school and are always a serious potential danger to health.

Every child should have his teeth in good condition before the opening of school, and he should have been trained to obey the rules of mouth hygiene.

While we must stress the physical, we should remember that there is a mental side also. We are governed by our feelings, and how we feel depends largely upon our physical health. If undeveloped teeth press upon a nerve, if eyes are tired, or hearing defective, the child is likely to be cross and unruly. Local irritation throws the brain out of the normal, and the conduct of the child reacts to the discomfort that results. The adjustments necessary to school life are sufficiently disturbing to most children without the addition of pain from a physical defect.

WOMEN'S PAINS

They Were Relieved by Cardui Which This Georgia Lady Took on Her Mother's Advice.

Columbus, Ga.—"I don't see why women will drag around, in a half-hearted way, never feeling well, barely able to drag, when Cardui might help put them on their feet, as it did me," says Mrs. Geo. S. Hunter, of this city.

"I suffered with dreadful pains in my sides. I had to go to bed and stay sometimes two weeks at a time.

"I could not work, and just dragged around the house.

"I got very thin. I went from a hundred and twenty-six pounds down to less than a hundred.

"My mother had long been a user of Cardui, and she knew what a good medicine it was for this trouble. So she told me to get some and take it.

"I sent to the store for Cardui, and before I had taken the first bottle I began to improve. My side hurt less, and I began to mend in health. I took the second bottle, and felt much better. I followed this by two more bottles.

"Cardui acted as a fine tonic. I do not feel like the same person. I am well now, and still gaining. My sides do not trouble me at all." For sale by druggists, everywhere. Give it a trial. NC-188

Don't Let Vile CATARRH BREATH Turn Folks Against You!

The breath of love and the breath of catarrh just won't mix—and all the sweetly scented mouth washes and breath lozenges can't hide its offensive odor—make up your mind to that!

You've got to clear out the catarrhal mucus in the nasal tract and soothe inflamed membranes before you can overcome this loathsome condition. And it's surprising how quickly you can do it and get rid of hawking and coughing by simply smoking a few of Dr. Blosser's Cigarettes each day for a few days.

The warm purifying vapor reaches with its healing medication every crevice and fold of the germ-infested membranes as nothing else can.

The very first cigarette will do wonders in opening catarrh-stuffed nostrils and letting you breathe freer—and it won't be long before mucus discharge stops and bad breath is banished.

Dr. Blosser's Cigarettes contain no tobacco—no habit-forming drugs—safe for everyone. They have been of untold benefit to catarrh sufferers for years and one inexpensive box will prove it to you. Get it today from your druggist.

FREE SAMPLE—A sample package containing 4 cigarettes will be sent to you entirely free and post-paid if you will write to The Blosser Company, Dept. T-K, Atlanta, Ga.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY SOCIETIES CAN MAKE MONEY SELLING THE NEW

SCRIPTURE TEXT CALENDAR

Churches and Church Representatives! Let It Earn for You!

Everyone who sees the new Scripture Text Calendar wants it. This type of selling is an easy, dignified way of earning money and is endorsed by pastors of leading churches over the country. From $25 to $500 and up can be made in a very short time by following our successful selling plans outlined for Sunday School classes, Ladies' Aid, Young People's Societies and individuals. You have an added advantage in the fact that national advertising in leading magazines has familiarized everyone with Messenger Sacred Calendars. The way has been prepared! Selling these calendars is not only profitable but it is a truly Christian way of spreading God's word, placing a wholesome, spiritual influence in every home in your community.

The Most Complete Sacred Calendar

Thirteen costly religious paintings are reproduced in full colors; daily Scripture verses and lesson references for Sundays make this calendar a daily reference and joy in the home.

Special Prices to Churches and Church Representatives

Profits are easily earned with these greatly improved Scripture Text Calendars which practically sell on sight.

Quantity	Cost	Sell for	Profit
100	$17.00	$30.00	$13.00
200	32.00	60.00	28.00
250	40.00	75.00	35.00
300	45.00	90.00	45.00

As Christmas Gifts

Appropriate, thoughtful, useful, Messenger Sacred Calendars make ideal gifts for Christmas, for their beauty and interest keeps fresh through twelve months of the year.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

THREE AFFLICTIONS.

The human race is heir to many ills, a catalogue of which would fill many pages. We have no disposition to attempt to enumerate any considerable number of them, but we do have it in mind to call attention to three of these ills against which the race has to contend.

The first of these ills is hardening of the arteries. This is an affliction incident particularly to old age. The physicians say its appearance is hastened by careless living and bad habits, though these are not invariably to be connected with it. In this affliction, the arteries lose their resilieney, the blood is forced through them at high pressure without the relief afforded by expanding walls, and great suffering—sometimes death—results. The physical body that has hardening of the arteries has lost largely its efficiency—its power to do and its power to resist—and sooner or later it falls into the grave.

The second of these afflictions is hardening of the brain. It represents, not a physical, but a psychological condition. It may grow out of bad mental habits in early life, but its principal cause is lack of use of the whole brain tissue. This lack of use of the whole tissue—accompanied, it may be, by the over-use of small portions—results, not in the softening of those tissues, as is the case with muscles, but in their hardening. They lose their elasticity and become incapable of functioning except in a most rudimentary way. The usual symptoms in a hardened brain are intolerance, bigotry, narrowness, harshness, bitterness. When such a brain comes into contact with new ideas, new currents of thought, new aspects of truth, it cannot expand to receive and co-ordinate them. The brain that has gone through the process of hardening has lost largely its efficiency—its power to think and let think—and sooner or later it falls into the grave.

The third of these afflictions that the race is heir to is hardening of the heart. This is not a physical or psychological condition, but a spiritual state. The outward surroundings of early life may have something to do with it, but it is the result principally of an inward attitude and condition. It grows out of selfishness and self-seeking. Its main symptoms are indifference to the needs of others, unconcern about the great issues of life, disregard of the claims of God upon the soul, and a barrenness of life that is both pathetic and tragic. When such a heart comes in touch with some great need, when it finds itself in the current of some great flood of pure and holy emotion, it remains unmoved, unconcerned. It cannot feel and it does not care. The heart that has become hard has lost largely its efficiency—its power to respond to the heart-cry of the world—and sooner or later it falls into the grave.

Perhaps flabbiness of arteries, brains, and hearts is just as bad as hardness.

THE FOURTH QUARTERLY CONFERENCE.

Some of the fourth quarterly conferences have already been held, and the others soon will be. We know with what anxiety the pastor looks forward to this occasion, especially when it is not certain that the charge is going to meet its financial obligations in full. The reports at this time usually give a fair indication of the prospects. But a bad fourth quarterly conference does not by any means make it necessary to close the year with a deficit for any cause. It is still some weeks till the meeting of the Annual Conference, and much can be done in the remaining time. If pastor and people begin now with the determination to report everything in full, there are very few charges where that desirable end cannot be attained. Hard work, with a little enthusiasm mixed with it, can do wonders. Much of this work ought to have been done weeks ago—but it is not too late.

COLLEGE SENIORS AND CHURCH.

A recent investigation by the Institute of Social and Religious Research, New York City, shows that unexpectedly large majorities of seniors, both men and women, in American colleges attend church either regularly or occasionally. In answer to a questionnaire sent to students of twenty-three colleges, 83 per cent of the men and 91 per cent of the women said they were church attendants. The showing is very much worse, however, with reference to Bible reading. Only seven per cent of those answering, both men and women, said that they read the Bible regularly; 30 per cent of the men and 47 per cent of the women said they read it occasionally, and the rest who answered said they very seldom if ever read it. A substantial majority of the seniors who answered the questionnaire declared they believed themselves to have improved in moral habits during their college years.

We do not know how much significance is to be attached to figures of this kind; but it is at least encouraging to know that the church has not lost its hold on college students and to know that college influence is not, as some would have it, almost wholly bad.

"PHYSICIAN, HEAL THYSELF."

It is a fine thing for a man to practice what he preaches—provided he preaches the right thing. We have noticed a good deal in the newspapers about "religious tolerance" in the present political campaign. Religious tolerance is a fine thing, and everybody ought to practice it. But from the same sources from which come these righteous pleas for religious tolerance we have seen the severest condemnation of political tolerance, some of these condemnations going so far as to suggest political and social ostracism for those who decline to vote for their candidates. We believe in religious tolerance; we also believe in political tolerance. "Physician, heal thyself."

A TIMID SPECIES.

A Viennese psychologist has recently stated that "mankind is, as a species, tremendously timid." He adds: "We need encouragement, not discouragement." We are not so sure about his first statement, but we agree fully with the second. If the species is timid, many individuals of it have perfectly overcome their timidity, or learned perfectly how to conceal it. The "shrinking violet" type of humanity is not altogether common. But even the conceited folk fare better on encouragement than they do on discouragement; and the really timid perish without the helping word. It is a pedagogical crime to berate a timid little child for its delinquencies when its whole being is trembling with the terror of timidity. Scolders are poor teachers. A kind word will get a timid person—man, woman, or child—much further along the right road than a swift kick. A teacher that understands books but doesn't understand children is a teacher by profession and not in fact. We suspect that as much trouble arises in schools from incompetent teachers as from incompetent pupils. "We"—all of us—"need encouragement, not discouragement."

THE INTERDENOMINATIONAL PROGRAM OF EVANGELISM.

The Commission on Evangelism and Life Service of the Federal Council of Churches has prepared a suggested program of evangelistic activities for the fall of 1928 and the spring of 1929 that promises much of good to those communities where it is put into effect. The Commission itself expresses the conviction that life and spirit are of more significance than methods and machinery, and it does not claim too much for its plans; but it recognizes the fact that definite methods of work have been notably blessed of God and have produced gratifying results. The Commission is working on the assumption that definite results are not likely to follow indefinite plans; and its purpose is to suggest the definite plan. Not many good things "just happen."

SOME ADVANTAGES, BUT

A movement has gained considerable headway to adopt an international fixed calendar which would divide the year into thirteen months of twenty-eight days each, beginning on Sunday and ending on Saturday. When we first saw mention of it, we thought, What a fine thing it would be to have an extra payday every year! and we were for it. But when we realized that such a scheme also involved paying bills in the same ratio, we were not so sure about it. Not having worked the scheme out in detail, we have adopted a policy of "watchful waiting," feeling sure that Mr. Emerson's theory of compensations will balance things up in the long run. Anyway, there is no rose without a thorn.

THE VISION SPLENDID.

By the Rev. J. W. Llghtley, President of the Wesleyan Conference.

Broadcast from Wesley's Chapel, City Road, London, on Sunday Eveuing, Sept. 2, 1928.

"Whereupon, O King Agrippa, I was not disobedient unto the Heaveniy vision."—Acts 26:19.

I want to say a word, first, about this vision of Saint Paul. Despite all modern attempts to explain a vision of this type, it remains a very wonderful thing. It has usually been associated, not invariably, with a certain preoccupation of the mlnd with some very important subject, and the course of the thought, the emotions, and indeed, as a rule, the whole life have been very deeply affected. Again, generally, quite unexpectedly, like a flash, the past and present and the immediate future stand clearly outlined.

It may be said of Paul's vision that it was a long time ago, and visions do not happen to-day, or they are very rare. But they always were rare. The form may vary, but they are always characterized by suddenness, unaccountableness. Those of you who are in the entrancing time of youth, or are in middle life, or in later age, will know equally well how, though they may come very rarely, yet there are certain epochs in life when visions do come. You may not be able to evoke them, but there is no need to be ashamed of them. They are yours, God-given, and they should be greatly valued.

I want to go on to speak about the emphatic word in this passage, in which Saint Paul says of his vision that he was not disobedient unto it. Now the distinguishing feature among men is not that some have visions and some have not, but that some are obedient to their visions and some are not. There are men to-day of very great powers who are not in the churches, and, worse than that, they are not greatly assisting the movement for the moral uplifting of humanity, but who have had visions enough to stir the world, and have treated them as of little avail; they are stagnant, thoughtless, indifferent. When a man says to some of us who have to do with men in Christian work that if he only had the gifts what he would do, he knows and we know, and he knows what we know, that that is not where the trouble lies.

The great point of emphasis in this passage, therefore, is that Paul says he was not disobedient to his vision. If you will allow me, those of you who are near and those of you who are very far, briefly but with great earnestness, and recognizing the importance of this occasion, I want to ask you with me—for I would not be dissociated from you for one moment—I want to ask you with me to face up to our visions now. Have we been obedient to them?

To the Young.

I speak, first of all, to you who are young. We hear great things of you to-day, and those of us who are no longer in the first flush of our youth are very thankful that so many things we hear are so splendid. You know the world is wrong, you know it ought to be righted; you even see how it may be righted. You are not, all of you, associated with the Christian church, you are not in its most intimate counsels, but you see what can be done, and you say, with your hand on your heart, you have fallen in love with Jesus Christ. That is your vision. Now here comes the question, not mine, but the question already in your own hearts, and the question from this text: Are you obedient to what you see? I ask you, in heaven's name, to face up to it, to do something, to be obedient. Your vision may not be mine; it may be vastly better.

Then may I say a word to those who are older, the middle-aged, you upon whom so much responsibility has been resting. You have your visions. Ah, yes, you say, many of them, long years ago. Well, perhaps another has come to-day. You have just come back from your holiday. Do you get nothing but physical rest when you are away from home? Surely not. Did you have a vision about yourself, for instance? What sort of man did you picture yourself? A man who was genuine; a man who was not always asking but was much more frequently giving; a man who, having taken up a task, would not throw it down again because some one displeased him; a man who stood four-square to every wind that blew. Was that your vision? No man worth calling a man would have a vision poorer than that. As one who has got to the same time of life as yourself, I would ask, are we obedient to our vision? What is the good of merely talking? What is the good of criticizing? What is the good of saying, "If only I had my time to come over again, what I would do!" Is not the very need of the day, the need of every man, to live true?

A Chance for You.

Now let me say this concluding word. There are a great many, I have no doubt, listening to me to-night who would say, if they were speaking to me personally, that they are not among the ordinary or orthodox type of Christian, or they would have been in church and would have been doing a great many things they have given up. Well, here is a chance for you. I would like you to be associated with the Christian church, and I pray God that the day may come when you will be: I think that is the best way in which a man can realize the best that is in him. But, meanwhile, don't you see that your vision is your own? When it came to you I do not know, but there was a vision of goodness and a vision of service, a vision of purity and a vision of sacrifice. It does not turn upon questions of orthodoxy, it does turn upon the question of devotion to our common Lord. May I remind you that you are not the only person concerned in that vision of yours. The members of your family may know nothing about it, but there is another, and that is the Divine Spirit, who lives in you, and who it was, if your vision was a good one, who called your thought away from mundane things, away from money-getting, away from personal advanage. He called your thought to something higher, and he is standing by now.

And so now, once again, having turned our backs upon our holidays, as most of us have done, and having taken a firm grip, as I hope, upon the great spiritual, the great religious forces of our various churches, will you with us join in the sentiment expressed by the apostle Paul, and with great humility, and with a consciousness that words of themselves are of no avail, but in the strength of God, say quietly in your heart now, "I will not be disobedient to the vision God has given me?"—New York Christian Advocate.

THE OPENING OF SOUTHERN METHODIST UNIVERSITY.

By Herschel S. Burgin.

The formal opening of Southern Methodist University for its fourteenth annual session took place Monday morning, Sept. 24, in McFarlin Memorial Auditorium, with the holding of a convocation, the first in the history of the institution to be held at the beginning of a term. More than 120 members of the faculty in formal regalia marched in academic procession from Dallas Hall to their places on the platform in the auditorium. Members of the Board of Trustees, including R. H. Shuttles, chairman, and W. B. Hamilton, chairman of the Fifty-Year Program Committee, who spoke briefly toward the close of the service, and other officers of the university, sat with the faculty. The student body and friends of Southern Methodist University constituted the audience.

Dr. Charles C. Selecman, president of the university, delivering the principal address of the occasion, took as his text Numbers xiii, the account of the sending of spies into the Promised Land by Moses from among the wandering hosts of the Children of Israel. Comparing the Promised Land to Southern Methodist University, Dr. Selecman likened the students to the israelites, the faculty to the armed men guarding the walls of the beleaguered cities of Palestine, and the Sophomores to the giants that infested the land. After pointing out various pitfalls to incoming students, and giving advice to the faculty, he concluded by saying with all earnestness to the newcomers, "Let us go up and possess the land, for we be well able to take it!"

Addressing the students, Dr. Selecman said in part:

"The college campus is at once the most dangerous and the most glorious place on earth for you.

"In the realm of Science, it is dangerous for a young chap to get a little knowledge and go out as an iconoclast. It takes a while to acquire the modesty of a Hyer or a Shuler and know when to keep still, and to know that because you happen to get hold of some truth that had been hidden from your father or your grandfather, it does not necessarily follow that the whole system of religion and morality and government is overturned thereby."

Addressing students, faculty, and the public, Dr. Selecman continued:

"One of the dangerous things about the college campus is that it is a place of freedom. It is a place of reasonable academic freedom for both faculty and students.

"We want it to be known that it is not an institution where straight jackets are furnished to the members of the faculty. However, it would be well for scientists to remember that we have not employed them to teach theology, and historians and philosophers to remember that there ought to be enough in their field of learning to keep them fairly busy, and for all to remember that the class room is not a place for the introduction of controversial subjects.

"I am ambitious not only to have better students at Southern Methodist University, but also to have a better faculty. I do not mean by that, individual members, but I mean that you and I and all of us should be ambitious to improve. I do not think it is any compliment to a teacher to send out word that he has slain Freshmen or Sophomores, or any other tribe in this Promised Land, with a big sword.

"I hope the time will never come when it will be easy to conquer any of these walled cities. It would be a fierce indictment of this university if the word should go out, 'it will be easy to pass your work there.'"

To the Freshmen, Dr. Selecman stressed the importance of learning proper methods of study:

"In this Promised Land the most important thing is for you to acquire habits of industry and a love for knowledge and a taste for scholarly work.

"The good student is the one who is the outstanding success after a while, because the man who has superior brains and superior personality and superior resources to succeed and conquer the walled cities of this Promised Land may be depended upon to stay there and defend that land after it is conquered."

Regarding athletes and athletics, Dr. Selecman continued:

"I want to say a word to athletes, or would-be athletes. Our business is not to train muscle. Our business is to train muscle and brain. We have no interest whatever in the ruffian type of athlete. I do not even like to look at one of them. But, on the other hand, I will confess to you that I am fond of athletes and athletics of the right kind If you are a good student, we are not going to think any less of you for catching a forward pass or kicking a goal. But if you get athletics out of their proper relationship, it is all spoiled.

"To the faculty, on the subject of athletics, I will say, let us deal with an athlete just no better or no worse than if he were not an athlete. In matters of the class room, of discipline, or anywhere else on the campus, an athlete should be neither a favorite to be nursed along nor a victim to be talked against.

"To the public, I would like to say that we are undertaking to keep all the rules of the Conference and other legitimate rules with reference to every athlete. Occasionally I hear it said that athletes are hired, and that Southern Methodist University has 'ringers.' Well, you cannot keep folks from talking, but you can live right and let them talk Any one who charges us with spending money for athletes is not in possession of the facts and is recklessly talking out of his ignornace, or is deliberately deceiving the public."

Before closing, Dr. Selecman outlined a development program for Southern Methodist University for the coming year:

"We have set ourselves a development program this year. I would like to see us complete the Administration Building and finish paying for the Engineering Building; to cancel the floating indebtedness that has now risen to around $300,000, and that has been made necessary by our increased enrollment and certain new buildings the funds for which have not been collected; and along with this, add to the permanent endowment of the university one-half million dollars, as gifts in Dallas. If these things would be undertaken by Dallas, its Chamber of Commerce and its citizens, then I think we could go outside to our friends and increase the endowment for our School of Theology—for the outside is very much interested in our School of Theology—build a dormitory for that school, and add another half-million to the general endowment of the university.

"I have wondered if some time this year, or soon, this magnificent student body would not catch the spirit of promotion and enterprise and help us put over something that appeals to you. Maybe you will think up some way of showing your spirit and your interest in this promotion program of our new university and organize among yourselves and determine upon some worthy objective."

Dr. Selecman addressed his final words to the students:

"Before us is the Promised Land. I close where I began, by saying, 'Let us go up and possess the land, for we be well able to take it!'"

Following the announcement by Dr. Selecman of a luncheon to be served in Arden Forest, south of the university, to all Methodist pastors of Dallas then meeting in quarterly conference at Southern Methodist University, and to the faculty and students of the School of Theology, Dr. O. T. Cooper, presiding elder of the Dallas District, pronounced the benediction.

BROOKHAVEN DISTRICT GROUP MEETING.

A meeting of the northern group of the Brookhaven District was held in the basement of the beautiful new church at Hazlehurt at 2 p. m., Aug. 29. (Dr. Crisler and his congregation are to be congratulated on the erection of this beautiful building.)

The meeting was called to order by Rev. L. E. Alford, pastor of Crystal Springs church, who is chairman of the group.

J. E. J. Ferguson was elected secretary.

A very helpful program was rendered. Talks were made by our presiding elder, Rev. W. H. Lewis, Dr. Charles W. Crisler, Revs. J. E. J. Ferguson and L. M. Sharp.

All the charges were represented. Reports from these charges were encouraging. Successful revivals had been held throughout the group which shows growth along the spiritual line Forty four have been added to the church on profession of faith.

Some old debts on churches and parsonages have been paid. One new church and two new parsonages have been built, and other improvements have been made on church property

Reports indicate both pastors and people are optimistic and hard at work trying to reach the goal along the financial line, despite the failure of truck crops and other calamities

SAFETY SIGNALS.

By Rev S. J. Davies

Real education, education that is worthwhile, that includes getting knowledge, acquiring self-control mastery of the will, so as to direct it for the best and highest purpose, is in itself a process of revelation The glory of the day is preceded by the glimmering dawn; the gem of a larger life is cradled in the seed; and the thought of a little child lies within the borderland of God's kingdom. "Knowledge comes, but wisdom lingers," sings the poet, and wisdom is knowledge stored, crystallized, ever ready for usage and application. If you or I master some great truth by earnest study and effort, some intricate problem in mathematics, some mystery in science, or catch the glow and meaning of some great author as we follow his thought on the printed page, there is not only the joy of victory given us, but with it that of a possession, a larger vision, and a new revelation. God has made every man debtor to the world at large, and he who is unwilling to pay, to share with others his wealth, whether that wealth be in knowledge or other gracious gifts, both he and his possession shall die together. For it is only by using do we develop the growing. The law of increase is the law of righteous living. It is the intellectual athlete that wins in the game of life, and he who shirks the discipline and training in the broad field of mental and spiritual rehearsals will be ruled off the field. The lessons of to-day prepare one for the tasks of the morrow. Achievement and revelation go hand in hand in this sense of growth and development. To know is to learn, and to learn is to grow, and real education, after all, is but an enlargement of life, as I think our blessed Lord would have us live it.

If things come out just right, I expect to buy a new suit of clothes soon. Most of us preachers want a new suit to wear at Congress. I shall be careful in selecting this suit, for it and I shall spend many days together. The color, texture, weight and make of this suit will call for some thought and judgment on my part, for with a few notable exceptions shabby clothes cover a shabby man. Just common decency and good order are incentives for right dressing. I have worn pretty fair clothing for some years, but never was fool enough to be vain about them; but I always feel better when I think the apparel is fair and fit.

I wonder if Doctor Luke or some other friend had given Paul a new suit when he wrote that wonderful chapter II Cor. 5, when he talked about the heavenly house and the new clothing he was to wear. It's true, as some of the wise ones tell us, he mixed his metaphor; yet every one that reads it can see just what he was driving at. He was looking for a new suit of clothes to wear at the heavenly Conference. The old suit that he had worn must have been considerably travel-stained and shabby by this time, for it was mortal and he longed to be clothed with immortality. And the faithful old fellow seemed somewhat tired of wearing old clothes, and he felt assured of a new house and a new suit. No doubt he is satisfied; for years he has been clothed upon, with holiness, immortality and beauty, and is living in a new house. Now some of the active, effective preachers can get two or three sermons from this screed, for the Bible has much to say about garments of praise, of holiness, of beauty, etc. Go to it be loved and wear a new suit of spiritual power

MISSIONARY FACTS

By Dr Elmer T. Clark

1. The Methodist Episcopal Church, South, carries on missionary work in eleven foreign fields namely Africa Belgium Brazil China Cuba, Czechoslovakia, Japan, Korea Mexico Poland, and Siberia Manchuria

2. Home mission work of the Southern Methodist Church is divided into army and navy work, city and industrial work, immigrant work, Indian work, Negro work, rural work, and Annual Conference sustentation.

3. The Methodist Episcopal Church, South, has more than 78,000 full members on its foreign mission fields, but this by no means represents the full constituency of the church, as there are thousands of probationers.

4. Approximately 30,000 students are enrolled in Southern Methodist schools and colleges in foreign mission fields.

5. The Methodist Episcopal Church, South, now has 487 missionaries (including wives) on its eleven foreign mission fields.

6. The Methodist Episcopal Church, South, supports or aids in the support of thirteen hospitals in foreign lands- three in Africa, three in China, three in Mexico, and one in Belgium.

7. The Home Department of the Board of Missions carries on work among the following foreign peoples in the United States: Mexicans, Cubans, Italians, Orientals, French, and Syrians.

8. China is the oldest mission field in the Southern Methodist Church, work having been authorized there in 1846, two years after the division of the church.

MINISTERIAL HELP AVAILABLE AT MILLSAPS COLLEGE.

Dear Brother Carley: The Ministerial League of Millsaps College is going about its work with much interest. At a recent meeting the boys made it known that they would be very glad to preach in any vacant pulpit on any Sunday. We realize that all the training necessary for a preacher is not obtained in the class room, even as efficient as our courses at Millsaps are. There is a lesson and a blessing to be derived from preaching that we cannot get anywhere else. Therefore, we ask the pastors to use the ministerial students here as much as possible. The only thing to be done on your part is to let us know where and when we are wanted, and pay our expenses to and from the church. We will appreciate any pastor's sending for a supply man at any time.

Write me at Millsaps College or call me up, telephone 1624-J.

IS YOUR BIBLE INTERESTING?

Little Mary wanted to learn her Sunday school lesson, and had asked her older sister to help her At length the sister finished her duties and taking her Bible from the bureau called:

"Come Mary! I will help you now, and then you can go back to your play."

Mary came running, all ready to begin, but on seeing the Bible her sister had brought said

"Sister, let's read the lesson out of Grandpa's Bible."

"Why; what difference will that make?"

"Grandpa's Bible is so much more interesting than yours."

"Oh, no, Mary! They are exactly alike"

"Well," replied the observant little girl, "I think Grandpa's Bible must be more interesting than yours, he reads it so much more" Christian World.

URGENT NEED FOR "HARVEST DAY."

Dear Dr. Carley: Will you kindly permit just a few lines in regard to "Harvest Day" for the Orphanage, which is to be observed throughout the State in all our churches and Sunday schools, next Sunday, the 14th?

A number of times complaint has reached me from a few of our interested friends that nothing was said in their church, and no appeal was made for the Orphanage and its cause in their congregations. Surely there is no Methodist preacher in the Louisiana Annual Conference who will refuse to present this appeal, or fail to urge his people to be as generous and liberal as possible in contributing to this cause. Some have even said that because we have been able to show a slight balance in the Treasury from year to year, instead of a serious deficit, that there was no need.

Please allow me to say that while we have been marvelously blessed of God during the past years, there is constant and ever-growing need, not only for the proper maintenance and upkeep of our work, but there are heavy demands for repairs and expansion. The "bitter cry" of children over the State rings constantly in our ears, and we must do all we can for these helpless, homeless ones. We take no public collections, we send out no collectors or solicitors. Our work is entirely dependent on the two days, Easter Sunday in the spring and "Harvest Day" in the fall, for the funds with which to carry on. The only opportunity your people will have to give to our cause is on these two days, set apart by the Annual Conference for this purpose.

Our need is imperative. We have nearly two hundred children to care for, to educate and to equip for life. We had only $23 left in the treasury at the close last month. Had it not been for a few friends who came to our relief, we could not have paid our bills for last month. We are facing a winter with its increased expenses, with practically an empty treasury. Our sole dependence is the collections taken next Sunday. We trust every preacher in the State will urge his people to give and to give generously. We feel sure the Sunday schools will do their part. We hope the amount secured over the State will be the best we have ever receivd and that our work may go forward without let or hindrance.

Thanking you, I am,

Cordially,

THE BUSINESS WORLD AND GOD.

By Rev. J. Tillery Lewis.

In the above caption I have not put the business world first because I believe that business considerations are the first considerations of life, for they are not. To be sure, the vast majority of successful men put business as the first consideration of life—so did the rich fool. I have put business first because I mean to draw a lesson from the business world illustrating the moral righteousness of God's requirements for those who enter into the enjoymeut and blessedness of the deeper and richer experiences of the spiritual life.

There are certain fundamental and basal attributes of character that one must possess, or convince the business world that he does possess them, before said individual is trusted with the big responsibilities and the money of the business world.

First, a man who desires to get and keep the confidence of the business world must be truthful. He must be a man who is known to speak the truth under any and all circumstances. He must be a man who when he says anything whatsoever, he is believed without the suspicion of a doubt. He must be konwn to be a man of truth.

Second, the man who would enjoy the confidence and trust of the business world must be an honest man. He must know the difference between what belongs to him and what belongs to another. He must be scrupulous in his discrimination between his own and another's and studiously avoid appropriating to himself and his own interest auythiug whatsoever that does not by every law of right belong to him. He must be known to be an honest man.

Third, he who would succeed in the business world must be accurate. He must know what it means to be accurate and he must make no mistakes that can be charged to carelessness and indifference.

Fourth, he who would succeed in the business world must be prompt and reliable. The business executives must often trust many important things to others for which they are themselves directly responsible. They must have men in their employ whom they kuow to be prompt and reliable in whatever is intrusted to their care.

Fifth, he who would succeed in the business world must regard himself und his time, both when on duty and when not on duty, as belonging to his employer. When off duty he cannot afford to engage in any form of recreation and pleasnre that will likely unfit him for what will be required of him when on duty. His time and talents are being paid for by his employer and he must see to it that his efficiency while on duty is not impaired by what he does when off duty.

Sixth, he who would advauce in the confidence and trust of the business world must be courteous. To be courteous means to be kindly and considerate of the other fellow's feelings and rights. Politeuess goes a mighty long way toward making the life of any man a success, especially when one must constautly come in contaot with the public.

To sum up, one must be altogether trustworthy. One canuot be altogether trustworthy who does not embody in his character the foregoing attributes of character.

Any young man who goes into the business world and establishes in the mind of the business world the fact that he possesses these six attributes of character, will rapidly climb toward the top in whatever business he may be employed. Without these attributes of character, no man can rise very high in the thought and estimation of the business world. There are a few of these attributes which no man can fail to manifest without losing out altogether in the thought and estimation of the busiuess world. One is truthfulness, another is honesty, and still another is accuracy.

Whether or not a young man succeeds in the business world is dependent wholly upon himself. If he is willing to pay the price for success, he can own and possess it. If he refuses to pay the price, he is forced to take the consequences of a life of failure that he himself purchased with his own choosing.

Just as there are fundamental and basal laws underlying success in the business world, so, too, are there fundamental and basal laws underlying success in the spiritual world.

First, one must believe that God is and that he is a rewarder of those who diligently seek him. One who believes in the indefinable, unknown, indefinite, and unapproachable imaginary and unthinkable God of evolution will never succeed in the spiritual world. If the creator of this universe is just blind force, then every man must be his own God or he must worship the sun, the State or some other body whence is thought to come the blessings and joys of life. Man's first law looking toward success in the spiritual life is belief in a personal, omnipotent, omniscient and omnipresent God who is a father to mankind. Abraham thus thought about God.

Second, he who would succeed in the spiritual life must trust God. He must believe that all things work together for good to them who love God, to them who are the called according to his purpose. One must put himself wholly in God's hands with absolute faith in the ultimate triumph of justice, righteousness, love and mercy despite the frequent appearance of lowering clouds, the roll of thunder and the flashing of the lightning.

Third, he who would succeed spiritually must obey God with faith and confidence. God's commands often lead into the pathway of self-sacrificing service, the enduring of hardships and persecutions for righteousness' sake; but he who believes God, walks amid all this with a calm trust in the wisdom, power and love of the Father, though he must face and endure physical death.

Fourth, he who would succeed in the spiritual life must crucify his material self to the realization of the God-attributes of life in his own nature, which attributes are love, joy, peace and happiness of soul that can be had only by those who walk not after the flesh but after the spirit.

Abraham believed God, and his faith was counted unto him for righteousness; but that belief of Abraham did not consist alone in his mental assent to the existence of God. Abraham's faith included all four of the above mentioned requirements for the successful spiritual life.

If in the business world one must meet certain requirements to come into the blessedness of the faith, confidence and assistance of the business world, why should it be thought strange that God has laid down certain requirements to which man must measure up before he comes into the blessedness of that supreme and hallowed fellowship with God out of which one can know that he is succeeding in the spiritual life?

The responsibilities, the trusts and the obligations of the business world are for but a few short years; yet without the attributes enumerated for success in the business world, one can within a few days or weeks wreck and destroy all that another man has spent a lifetime in accumulating.

The responsibilities, the trusts and the obligations of the spiritual life are for eternity. God cannot afford to intrust to any living soul the great and eternal responsibilities of life to one who is ignorant of their value and is untrustworthy as to his faith, love and loyalty to God.

When one takes the time to think through it, the Christian religion is the most reasonable life that any man can live, because through and by it man learns the underlying and basal laws for success in the spiritual life. Beyond that, he comes to know, love, walk and fellowship with God.

WHAT THE PREACHERS ARE PAID.

By Rev. W. E. Guthrie.

The average salary of the preachers in our church in the different Annual Conferences is as follows, according to the general minutes:

Northwest Conference, $662; Denver Conference, $950; Kentucky Conference, $1,288; Illinois Conference, $989; Western Virginia Conference, $1,613; Southwest Missouri Conference, $1,461; Baltimore Conference, $2,448; St. Louis Conference, $1,429; Arizona Conference, $1,097; Missouri Conference, $1,274; New Mexico Conference, $1,194; Louisville Conference, $1,396; West Texas Conference, $1,802; Western North Carolina Conference, $1,857; Holston Conference, $1,539; North Texas Conference, $1,720; East Oklahoma Conference, $1,410; Tennessee Conference, $1,328; West Oklahoma Conference, $1,782; North Carolina Conference, $1,526; North Mississippi Conference, $1,683; North Alabama Conference, $1,634; Alabama Conference, $1,619; Florida Conference, $1,946; Little Rock Conference, $1,735; Virginia Conference, $1,978; Upper South Carolina Conference, $1,641; North Georgia Conference, $1,556; Mississippi Conference, $1,659; South Georgia Conference, $1,712; South Carolina Conference, $1,823; Texas Conference, $1,815; North Arkansas Conference, $1,296; Central Texas Conference, $1,713; Pacific Conference, $1,462; Louisiana Conference, $1,844; Memphis Conference, $1,664; Northwest Texas Conference, $1,708.

The average salary for the 6,826 pastors in our church is $1,601. But there were 1,243 preachers last year whose assessments were less than $1,000 each and 311 of these were assessed less than $500 each. While the salaries of North Alabama Conference are $33 above the average for the whole church, we have 99 preachers who are assessed less than $1,000, or, in other words, more than one-third of the pastors in the North Alabama Conference received less than $1,000 last year.

There are 300 preachers who received a salary of $3,000; 182 received $3,600; 136 received $4,000; 49 received $4,500; 7 received $4,800; 65 received $5,000; 9 received $5,500; 30 received $6,000; 5 received $6,500; 6 received $7,000; 6 received $7,500; 1 received $8,000; 1 received $8,125; 1 received $8,600; 1 received $9,000; 3 received $10,000.

Eight hundred and two preachers received an average salary of $3,828, and six thousand and twenty-four preachers received an average salary of $1,303. But there were at least one thousand preachers who received about an average salary of $500. The average given in my other article on the Alabama, North Alahama and Florida Conferences was taken from the assessments rather than from the amount paid, hence the difference.

How the vast majority of the preachers can carry on, support their families and educate their children, the world will never know. No group of men this side of the pearly gates are doing the large volume of business that the preachers are doing according to the capital they have to operate on. When will the men who are making the largest contributions to the citizenship of our land receive an adequate support for the education and comfort of their families? Let us hear what the laymen of the church have to say. Surely the hands of him who left the plains of Divinity-Divine to come into this old world, rest on the heads of the men who are holding the front lines or else they would desert their post. But does this excuse a vast number of laymen who are growing richer and richer day by day? But the shame piles higher and higher upon us when we think of that holy group of men whom we have superannuated and made little or no provision for their support.—Alabama Christian Advocate.

THE FAITH OF A PRIME MINISTER.

An Address by the Right Honorable Stanley Baldwin at the Annual Meeting of the British and Foreign Bible Society, London, May 2, 1928.

(Mr. Baldwin's grandfather, the late Rev. George MacDonald, and his uncle, the Rev. Frederick W. MacDonald, were presidents of the Wesleyan Conference. Our report is printed from special correspondence in the Post, Wellington, N. Z.—Editor.)

"If I did not feel that our work was done in the faith and the hope that some day it may be a million years hence—the Kingdom of God would spread over the whole world, if I did not believe that, I could have no hope, I could do no work, and I would give my office over this morning to any one who would take it."

"The circulation of the Scriptures," continued the Prime Minister, "may be said to have grown side by side with our Empire, but you acknowledge no limit in your work, of place or of tongue. You have circumnavigated the whole world, and you have brought to naught the confusion of tongues of Babel. It was Milton who said, 'Books are not dead things; books contain some potency of life, and their activity is dependent on the soul whence they spring.' That is supremely true of the Book which you circulate. It is not only mere literature—whatever that phrase may mean—it is not only the gratest literature in the world, but above and beyond all that, it is, and always has been, of the nature of a high explosive in the world. I want to turn to one more page of your report, which will serve me as a text for some of the things I want to say to you. 'For every copy of the Revised Version we sell eighty-six of the Authorized Version.' That made me realize, if I had ever had any doubt, that, whatever may be the reason, there is nothing that can take the place of the Authorized Version in the affections of the English people.

"We must not forget that this company of translators, who worked at Oxford and Cambridge and Westminster, had before them not only the original texts of those great versions of Tyndale and Coverdale. They had work before them what had been done in Geneva, and done by the Elizabethan bishops; they had the version of the New Testament which had been done by the Catholics from the Vulgate, and they had that great version of the Bilde by Luther in Germany. They were a company of great scholars, and they had a profound feeling for the excellencies of their own tongue. Their contemporaries were Shakespeare, and Marlowe, Ben Jonson, Bacon, and Walter Raleigh.

"The immense popularity of that verson caused our countrymen at that time to steep themselves in it, and you find the men of genius, such as Bunyan, so soaked in it that when he wrote his 'Pilgrim's Progress' you might read page after page of it and believe that it almost came straight out of the Bible. And the hope of Erasmus a century before almost took life in that age of which I speak. It was in 1516 he wrote these words in his preface to the Greek and Latin New Testament: 'I wish that even the weakest woman should read the Gospels, and the Epistles of Paul. I wish that they were translated into all languages so that they might be read and understood not only by Scotsmen and Irishmen—(laughter)—but also by Saracens and Turks. I long for the farmer to sing portions of them to himself as he follows the plough; for the weaver to hum them to the tune of his shuttle, and for the traveler to beguile by their stories the tedium of his journey!' A most remarkable anticipation uttered a century before of what almost came to pass literally.

Immortality of the Soul.

"The Bible penetrated the life and thought of our people in the seventeenth century, and transformed their daily experience. It had this effect, not only because of the supreme quality of the literature, but because the Spirit breathes upon the Word. For three centuries the Authorized Version has shaped the lives, colored the traditions of our people, fashioned our literature, and filled our memories with the unforgettable experiences of childhood.

"There are many who share the fears that were expressed many years ago by Matthew Arnold, the large numbers of people read no version, authorized or revised. If it be true, it is not for me, it is not for us, to allocate the blame, but I do feel that much of the blame should be shared, and must be shared, by some of us who are here. Neither politicians, on the one side, nor ecclesiastics of many denominations, on the other, can be altogether freed from the blame if that be true. I feel that the people should have the opportunity of speaking its message in common with all other literature, and let me remind you of this, to lead up to what I want to say. Mr. Middleton Murry, in speaking of the effect of reading Milton's 'Areopagitica,' made this pregnant observation—that when he had read it it did not make him think of the liberty of printing, but of the immortality of the soul.

"That is an instance of the power of transfiguration that is always found in words of genius, and in the same way, to the man or woman who reads his Bible a similar transfiguration occurs, and what is Jewish, or Greek, or Oriental falls away, and there emerges, and must emerge, a universal appeal to mankind of the personality of our Lord.

The Divine Fire.

"It is the high explosive, but it works in strange ways, and no living man can tell or know how that Book, in its journeyings through the world, has started the individual soul in ten thousand different places into a new life, a new world, a new belief, a new conception, and a new faith. These things are hidden until some man, some people is touched beyond all others by the Divine fire, and the result is one of those great revivals of religion which repeatedly through centuries have startled the world and stimulated mankind, and which, as sure as we are meeting in this room, will recur again. So much of our time in this world we seem to be carrying on our struggle in twilight or in fog; friends, and men who ought to be friends, hit blindly in the melee, wounding men who are or ought to be their brothers, without thinking of the light which comes from that Book to lighten that twilight or dispel that fog. The Kingdom of God may be very far off, but this society works on through good times and through evil times in faith." New York Christian Advocate.

SPECIAL TRAIN TO CONFERENCE AT PHILADELPHIA.

To those who will attend the Mississippi Conference.

Dear Friends: The regular schedules on the Gulf, Mobile and Northern Railroad from Jackson to Philadelphia are not convenient for those who desire to leave home on Tuesday, Nov. 6, and reach Conference for the opening session that night.

If we can get one hundred (100) passengers, the officials have kindly consented to furnish us a special train to leave Jackson at 3:30 p. m., Tuesday, Nov. 6, and arrive at Philadelphia at 6:45 p. m. This will enable many of us to finish up last minute details on Tuesday and get to Conference in good time.

For those who use clergy permits the round trip fare from Jackson to Philadelphia will be $4.34; otherwise $6.50.

Those arriving in Jackson on trains as late as 3 o'clock Tuesday afternoon can get the Conference Special in ample time. It will, however, be necessary for me to have one hundred (100) or more names who will go, on or before Nov. 2, in order that the special can be secured.

Please notify me at once if you desire to take advantage of this accommodation.

Yours cordially,

J. L. DECELL,
Box 321-W., Jackson, Miss.

THE PARABLE OF THE OBSERVATION CAR.

I rode upon the Dixie Flyer. And the Stars were all on Duty when we left Chicago, but they went on strike ere we reached Danville, and by the time we were at Terre Haute the Rain descended as if the waters had been gathered for the Occasion. And I arose in the morning and spake unto the Porter, saying, in which Direction might one expect to encounter a Dining Car?

And he said, Thou hast me guessing, Colonel, for I know not in what Direction we are going. We are on a Detour around a Washout, and we shall be Two Hours late at Evansville where we take on our Diner.

Then I walked toward the Rear of the train that I might find the Observation Car. And I found it not, though it had been the next Car after mine own. And when I came to the Day Coaches I reversed my machinery and walked back.

And the Porter said, If thou seekest the Observation Car it is the Next Car Forward. For this Train is Reversed.

So I went to the Observation Car, and found a Good View of our Locomotive, going Forward Backward, as is the custom of some people.

And I said unto myself, As Observation Cars are constructed, this thing of hauling the Observation Car at the head of the Train is not an One Hundred Per Cent Success. And it were better that the Passengers should view the Receding Scenery rather than that the Engineer should look Backward. But taking Life as an whole, there be too many men whose Observation is Rearward, and not enough whose Outlook is Ahead. Wherefore I will not attempt to Run the Trains, but as I wait Patiently for Breakfast I will Admonish My Fellow Men to Do their Observing toward the Future. It will be a great day for the more or less Human Race when it rideth with its Observation toward the Front.—Parable of Safed the Sage, in Christian Index.

MISSIONS AND NON-CHRISTIAN PRACTICES IN AMERICA.

By J. W. Leggett, Jr.

(This oration was the winner in the Mississippi Conference of the "Know Missions" Oratorical Contest. Mr. Leggett represented the Mississippi Conference in the semi-final contest at Lake Junaluska.—Editor.)

The question, "Why send missionaries to convert another nation when America as a whole is not a Christian nation?" has prompted me to choose for my subject to-night "Missions and Non-Christian Practices in America."

First, I want to ask you a question. Is our religion worth exporting? To answer this we must ask these questions. Has it made our nation a greater nation? Has it made its individuals more noble, more pure, more Christ-like? Has it helped to soothe the pain of a sufferer? Has it healed a broken heart? Has it brought joy? Has it brought peace? If we will look around us, we can answer all these questions with "yes." When we see the churches, schools, hospitals, and other great institutions, we see the result of Christianity in our country. Have these not helped to make our nation a greater nation? Can you imagine what America would be if it were not for the influences of Christianity in our country? It would not be the America that we love to-day. We would probably be a warring nation, greedy and eager for a chance to suppress and subdue a weaker nation. We would probably be feared and hated, where we are now honored and respected.

Now let us look from the nation to the individuals. Has it made its individuals more pure, more noble, more Christ-like? I am quite sure that every one in my audience has witnessed the transformation of a sinner into a Christian, and I should think that most of my audience has witnessed that transformation within his own soul. Did it make him more noble, more pure, more Christ-like? Did it make you more noble, more pure, and more Christ-like? I am sure that each of you will answer from both observation and experience in the affirmative. Now let us answer our last questions. Has it healed a broken heart? Has it helped to soothe the pain of a sufferer? Has it brought joy? Has it brought peace? Those of you who have the abiding presence of Jesus Christ within your heart know that it does all of these things. You have in some mysterious yet realistic way felt the presence of God in the time of trouble. He has given you courage to go forward to fight the battles of life.

He has put hope where hope had fled,
Made light the dark path we are called on to tread.

If it has done these things for America and American people, is it not worth exporting to other nations? Will it not be good for conservative China, for philosophical India, for artistic Japan, or for sunny Africa? After all, are we not all created in the image of God, and do we not all have the same innate tendencies? Are these people not reaching out and longing for that something which will satisfy the soul? Do we not know that this something that satisfies is God? Then is it not our duty to take Christianity to them?

I hear the argument: "Well, yes, when we have won our American brother and when we have freed America from heathenism we should; but not before." I hear again the oft-repeated phrase. "Charity should begin at home." Yes, it should, but it should not end until it has circled the globe and entered every home within God's kingdom. Then I hear God's word misconstrued. "But if one provide not for his own house, he is worse than an infidel." Surely God meant for you to provide for your own house; but he also wants us to help others. I hear my Christ as he says, "Love thy neighbor as thyself," and I picture the scene of the Good Samaritan that shows me that no race, no caste, no creed, no geographical line set apart my neighbor, but every man is my brother. I hear Christ again as he says, "Bear ye one another's burdens." I know of no way to help them but to point them to the one who said: "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Take my yoke upon you and learn of me; for I am meek and lowly in heart; and ye shall find rest unto your soul. For my yoke is easy and my burden is light."

Then I hear the words again: "Yes, we should tell them, when we have converted America;" but are we not doing our part in America? We have thousands of churches all over our country; in these churches we have thousands of preachers, who are pleading for sinners to come to Jesus. They have pleaded since America was established; they are still pleading. Where is the person in America who, with a little extra effort on his part, cannot go to Sunday school every Sunday morning or that cannot hear the Word of God? Have we not furnished ample opportunity for every unbeliever in America to accept Christ? Shall we, then, withhold the gospel from the rest of the world because all of America has not accepted?

Listen! Suppose my mother were very ill and near unto death and I have a wonderful remedy that will restore her to health. I offer it to her; she refuses. I implore her to take it; she still refuses. She is dying of her own free will. My pal's mother is sick of the same disease. He knows not of the wonderful remedy that I have. What shall I do? Withhold that which will restore their home to happiness because my mother has refused? Shall I let a home be broken because I cannot save the unity of my own? The case is the same with America. Large numbers have come; others have refused; but we pleaded with them. We are still extending the invitation to them, but at the same time we extend the invitation to all the world.

There are a great many asking, "Whither are we bound in America?" When one looks at the present trend of things he cannot help wondering. Some of the more pessimistic think that within a few years we shall have forgotten God in America and other nations will be sending missionaries to us. What will really happen, no one can say, for, "Truth is the daughter of Time." The curtain between us and the future is held firmly by the unrelenting hand of Time. She slowly raises it and reveals only the present to us. We can only prophesy for the future and trust that it will be good. We are in an age when there was never so much earnest effort to bring souls to Christ; and yet there is an element that was never so bent on destroying souls. The crime rate is higher; morality is at a low ebb, and it seems as if all the evil forces have been challenged to cope with the good. We see the missionary as she leaves home, loved ones, and comfort, and makes her way into the low and dirty countries to take the gospel of Christ, thinking of no remuneration other than seeing souls saved. By her side we see another figure, the capitalist. He makes his way into the same country, gobbles up the wealth and comes home. One went and gave all that she had; another went and took all that he could. We see the hospitals as they rise up to relieve pain and restore health and vigor. As her enemy we see the bootlegger as he secretly makes the moonshine and gives it to men slowly to kill and destroy that which has been built up. We can only wait to see the results, but I firmly agree with the poet:

"Right is right since God is God;
And right the day must win."

I feel that there will be a climax to this fight between good and evil, and evil will have to retreat.

Realizing that America is not wholly Christian, we accept the challenge to Christianize it. We must substitute good for bad. We must thoroughly Christianize the capitalist, the bootlegger, the theatres, the government, and even the church. There is much to do, but we can do it with the help of Christ. When this transformation of America shall have been accomplished, and the spirit of Christ moves our nation within and without, then shall the task of Christianizing the non-Christian nations have been made easy.

Allen, Miss.

THE DEMANDS OF RELIGION.

Every once in a while the follower of Jesus Christ needs to remind himself that his religion makes certain positive demands of him. It is true that it comes to him with offers of comfort and joy and deep satisfaction such as he can attain unto through no other medium, but not only does it give to him rich and full and abiding treasures of hope and gladness and strength, but it makes as well certain rather imperious demands of him. The religion that tries to make more than it seeks to give would have difficulty in proving itself a religion worthy of the Christian name.

This human life of ours has its evils and its ills, and the man who would claim to be a follower of Jesus Christ cannot by any possibility justify himself in anything like indifference to all these. Jesus himself was mightily concerned about them, even about such things as disease and ill health, and gave of his time and strength and infinite patience throughout much of his ministry to the healing and bodily restoration of the people. Sometimes we find it easy to think that other people's diseases and discomforts and disappointments may work out to their spiritual good, and therefore that we may be somewhat indifferent toward them, but we didn't learn that habit from our Master. Apparently he was never indifferent to anything that affected the well-being of the people, even in a physical way.

And if he teaches us that we as his followers have a duty to perform in relation to these mere physical ills of life, surely he would teach us that our duty is equally plain in regard to ills and evils of a still more positive character. There are diseases that ruin the bodies of men, but there are as well ill things in the world that ruin the minds of men, too, that destroy their liberty and opportunity and corrupt their souls. And against all these things the whole spirit and teaching of Jesus tell us we as his followers must wage a relentless warfare. There is therefore a place for militant Christianity, and so long as sin and wrong and injustice are in the world there will continue to be a place and great need for it. And the man who insists on basking himself in the comforts and satisfactions of his religion and refuses to listen to its call to service and sacrifice and broadening human fellowship and love is denying something that must always be very fundamental in that religion. Genuine religion does bring its great comforts to a man's soul, but it brings its great dissatisfactions as well, so long as we are living in a world in which there are so many things that hurt and spoil and mar and make ugly the lives of men.—The New Outlook.

THINGS WORTH STRIVING FOR.

One church prints on the back of its program of service these words:

I will not worry.
I will not be afraid.
I will not give way to anger.
I will not yield to envy, jealousy or hatred.
I will be kind to every man, woman, and child with whom I come in contact.
I will be cheerful and hopeful.
I will trust in God and bravely face the future.

Read them again. They are words worth while.—Bulletin of Myers Park Methodist Episcopal Church, South, Charlotte, N. C.

"So far as we can judge," write the missionaries from China, "the anti-Christian movement so much in evidence a year ago is gradually subsiding. The opposition of recent years has given the teachings of Jesus a degree of publicity that we never anticipated. It now seems very probable that all the agitation against the gospel will in the end make for its advancement."

DOTTY'S GOLD PIECE.

Dotty was a happy little girl, for her Uncle Frank had given her a new, round shining gold piece for her very own.

"You can spend it for anything you want most," uncle had said.

Dotty thought a long time. Then she said suddenly, "May I send it to missionaries that mother tells about? They want so many things."

"Why, if you think the missionaries need it more than you do," answered Uncle Frank in surprise.

So the gold piece went to the mission board, and Dotty had a warm feeling around her little heart.

Some time later a lady gave a talk in the Sabbath school where Dotty attended. And this is the story she told:

"Some months ago a little girl from the Sabbath school sent a gold piece to the board in New York. It was 'From a little girl to a little girl.' Just like that. No name. Well, the man there read the letters from missionaries over the sea, then he knew just what to do with that gold piece. In one of the hospitals where many children are, a certain kind of knife was needed. It would help many half-blind children see the sunlight again. So the man in New York set the gold piece to work. 'Go pay for that knife,' he said, and the gold piece did just as he told it to do. That gold piece has helped twenty little girls to see again. They can see their mothers' faces, the green grass and God's beautiful sunlight once more. Did you know that one gold piece could do so much work?"

The children turned and looked at Dotty and then clapped their hands. They all knew that it was Dotty's gold piece the lady was talking about.

And wasn't Dotty happy? Twenty little girls across the sea who were no longer blind! —From Every Land.

JIMMY'S TEXT.

One day it was pouring down rain, and Aunt Carrie was getting short of stories. Jimmy Bates said: "Let's play church."

There were five Bates children and two cousins. They put rows of chairs together for pews, and the big armchair for the pulpit, with the hassock for a step to get up.

The pulpit was so fine that each wanted to be the minister. But Jimmy said he ought to be, because he knew most texts, so he must be the "goodest."

"Why, Jimmy!" said Aunt Carrie.

But the others said he might if they could take turns passing the plate.

The plate was mother's card tray. They had buttons for money. They began by singing a hymn.

Then Jimmy, with grandpa's spectacles 'way down on his nose, mounted to the pulpit. How they all envied him!

"My friends," began Jimmy.

"You should say 'brethren,'" said little Helen, softly.

"And brethren," added Jimmy, crossly, "my text this afternoon is, 'Do unto others as you would' "

"O, Jimmy," wailed a voice in the first row, "you can't have that. You know you took my ball away from me this morning, and I wanted it so."

"Never mind," said Jimmy. "My text to-day is, 'Judge not' "—

"But, Jimmy," piped another voice, "you said you guessed Benny Green played truant yesterday, because he wasn't in school."

Jimmy swallowed very hard, and, thumping the back of the chair with his fist, said: "Here's another, 'It is more blessed to give than to receive.'"

"O, Jimmy," howled the whole congregation, "not that. You ate up all the jam at the dolls' tea party, so we didn't have any!"

At this the poor little minister broke down and cried. But Aunt Carrie said: "I know the best text of all, 'Love one another.'"

Just knowing texts isn't much use, unless we try to live them.—Exchange.

MOTHER GOOSE.

That was her real name and not a fictitious one, as many people suppose. Elizabeth Foster was born in Charlestown, Mass., near Boston, in 1665. Her family being Puritans, she was reared to be industrious. At the age of twenty-seven she was married to Isaac Goose, who was a widower with ten motherless goslings. Her family, and indeed Elizabeth herself, opposed the match, but at length her kind heart was softened by the pitiful plight of Father Goose and his goslings, and she married him.

Then six children of her own were added to the number, making sixteen in all. No wonder she afterward wrote that she had "so many children she did no know what to do." She probably sang them to sleep at night to "Rock-a-bye, baby, on the tree-top," or "By-o-baby bunting, father's gone a hunting," and on wash-days they merrily rubbed to "Rub-a-dub-dub, three maids in a tub."

When Joshua and Giffillan took the pails and went to the top of the hill behind the house for water and disaster befell them, she probably made them laugh, even while the tears stood in their eyes, and they were being plastered up with vinegar and brown paper, by singing "Jack and Jill went up the hill."

She also put into rhymes the tragedies that occurred in the neighborhood, telling of the children that were drowned, "Sliding on the ice, upon a summer's day," and about the poor pussy that the naughty Johnny Green put in the well. But finally the flock were all scattered. Father Goose departed this life very suddenly one winter's day. Her favorite daughter, Elizabeth, who had married Thomas Fleet, a printer, prevailed upon her to make her home henceforth with them, and to this fortunate circumstance we owe it that thousands of children all over the world have been made happy by her jingles.

Thomas Fleet had a printing office of his own, and to his wise head came the thought that if his own children were so pleased and entertained by his mother-in-law's fun, why could not others be also? He therefore began to write down her jingles whenever he had a chance to do so, following her about the house and even asking for more, as the children always did.

One day Mr. Fleet laid before Mother Goose's amused and astonished eyes the first volume of the now famous book. She laughed aloud when she turned to the title page and found pictured thereon a goose with its mouth wide open. The book bore the title, "Songs for the Nursery; or Mother Goose's Melodies for Children. Printed by T. Fleet at his Printing House, Pudding Lane, 1719. Price, two coppers." Her historian tells us that for thirty-eight years she lived to add new rhymes to each new edition, and died in 1737 at the age of 92, "her name a household word, dear to children, her memory blessed by mothers in many lands."—Our Home.

BOB'S PROMISE.

"Oh, come on, Bob," urged his companions, as Bob hesitated.

"I—," he began, and Harry Payson laughed out loud. Bob squared his shoulders then. He would not have Harry Payson laugh at him.

"Come on," he said. "Guess I'll go, after all," and off they started.

Now, Bob had hesitated because he had promised mother he would go right home from school and clean his play-room.

"I'll clean it to-morrow," he told himself, as he tramped along with the other boys and girls. "An afternoon like this in the woods is too good to miss. Mother won't mind when I tell her."

One of the boys had brought his bow and arrow along, and they were going to have a fine time shooting at a mark.

Soon Bob heard a familiar sound. "Bow-wow-wow," it said.

"Bob," some one called. "Here's your puppy dog."

What she was doing there so far from home, Bob did not know, but there she was, tired and dusty, but very happy to have found her little master again.

"Peg, you go home," ordered Bob, and Peg tried to tell him in her best doggie language that she didn't know the way.

"Let her go, Bob! she'll find her way home again," said Harry Payson, but this time Bob did not heed Harry's words.

"Guess I can't go with you this afternoon," he said, as he faced them all. "I can't take Peg along, you know, and I can't leave her here."

"But, Bob, you're not going to spoil everything because of a dog?"

Bob had made up his mind now. He called to Peg, and started off on the run.

"Good-bye; I hope you have a good time," he called out, looking back, and then went on running, every step taking him farther and farther away from temptation and nearer home. Peg barked happily as she ran after him.

In half an hour mother put her head in the play-room door.

"Little boys who keep their words are always rewarded," she said. "Uncle Jim wants to take you for a ride in his new car. I'll finish up for you, dear."

"Can I take Peg with me?" Bob asked. "She deserves it more than I do."

The story was told then. "By all means bring Peg," said Uncle Jim, so the three went off for their drive. And now, when Bob is tempted to do wrong, he thinks of Peg and of the ride she gained for him with Uncle Jim—and then he is tempted no longer.—I. Winifred Colwell, in Child's Own.

A HERO.

A few years ago a fire broke out in a charming little Swiss village. In a few hours the quaint farmhouses were entirely destroyed.

One poor man was in greater trouble than his neighbors, even. His home and cows were gone, and so also was his son, a bright boy of six or seven years. He wept and refused to hear any words of comfort. He spent the night wandering sorrowfully among the ruins of his home.

Just as daybreak came, however, he heard a well-known sound; and, looking up, he saw his favorite cow leading the herd, and coming directly after them was his bright-eyed boy.

"O, my son, my son!" he cried. "Are you really alive?"

"Why, yes, father. When I saw the fire I ran to get our cows away to the pasture lands."

"You are a hero, my boy!" the father exclaimed.

But the boy said: "O, no! A hero is one who does some wonderful deed. I led the cows away because they were in danger, and I knew it was the right thing to do."

"Ah," cried the father. "He who does the right thing at the right time is a hero."—Exchange.

The motorist had had an accident with his light car on the Brighton road. He limped painfully to a telephone box and called up the nearest garage.

"Hello," he said. "I've turned turtle. Can you do anything for me?"

"I'm afraid not," came the sweet feminine reply. "You've got the wrong number. What you want is the zoo."—Vancouver Province.

"Father, freight is goods that are sent by water or land, isn't it?"

"That's right, son."

"Well, then, why is it that the freight that goes by ship is called a cargo, and when it goes by car it is called a shipment?"

And then Johnny wondered why father put on his hat and sauntered outside to get the air.—Presbyterian Advance.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. W. H. Giles, pastor of St. Mark's, this city, is assisting Rev. J. A. Bonnecarrere in a meeting at Donaldsonville, La., this week.

Rev. and Mrs. W. C. Newman, Houlka, Miss., announce the birth of a daughter, Betty Westbrook, on Sept. 26. Blessings upon the little lady!

Mr. John Brown, Mandeville, La., underwent a serious operation at the Baptist Hospital, this city, last week. His friends will be glad to know that he is recovering nicely.

Miss Lilla Stewart, of Minden, La., was one of the graduates at the summer commencement exercises of Southern Methodist University. She received the B.S. degree.

Rev. Robert W. Vaughan, superintendent of the Louisiana Methodist Orphanage, and Rev. L. W. Cain, presiding elder of the Baton Rouge District, paid the Advocate office appreciated calls on Monday of this week.

Dr. S. H. Werlein, formerly of the Louisiana Conference, completed his fourth year as presiding elder of the San Francisco District, Pacific Conference, and was transferred to the Texas Conference last week.

Wesleyan College began the work of the present session on Sept. 12 in its magnificent new plant, the opening exercises being held in the auditorium of the gymnasium building. The enrollment this year is far in advance of that of last year.

We regret to learn that Rev. R. P. Neblett, our pastor at Kosciusko, Miss., has recently suffered from an attack of the "flu." His pulpit was filled at the morning hour on Sept. 30 by Rev. T. L. Oakes, and at the evening hour by Rev. O. A. Clark.

Pine Ridge church, on the Natalbany charge, Louisiana Conference, paid its benevolent claims in full on the last Sunday in September. The amount was paid in cash—not subscriptions. Rev. Watt H. Royal is the energetic and successful pastor of the Natalbany charge.

Miss Octavia Virginia Rickey, daughter of Rev. and Mrs. H. W. Rickey, Tallulah, La., left on Monday, Oct. 1, to enter Scarritt College at Nashville, Tenn. She was accompanied by Miss Mary Jane Matthews, of Mansfield, who will also enter Scarritt. They will be room-mates.

Rev. G. P. McKeown and Mr. Ferguson, of Woodville, Miss., were in New Orleans this week on the sad mission of receiving the body of Miss Daisy Ferguson, missionary in Brazil, who died recently, which arrived Sunday night by steamship. Interment of the body will take place in Woodville.

Rev. and Mrs. A. M. Serex sailed from New York on Friday of last week for Brussels, Belgium, where Brother Serex will complete his work for the Doctor of Philosophy degree in the University of Brussels. Their address while abroad is: 596 Chausses d'Alsemberg, Uccle-Bruxelle, Belgium.

Rev. Archie P. Stephens, whose home is in Kosciusko, Miss., has recently returned from an evangelical tour in Alabama and other States, in which he was in charge of the music. He held the prayer meeting service for Rev. R. P. Neblett, the pastor at Kosciusko, on Wednesday evening of last week.

The Chinese friends of the late Dr. W. H. Park are seeking to raise a fund of $20,000 as a permanent endowment fund, the interest of which is to be used perpetually to provide for medical treatment of the poor in Soochow and vicinity. Dr. Park spent his active life as a medical missionary in China.

Protection Against Old Age

Rev. W. W. Jones, Crenshaw, Miss., has our thanks for two subscriptions to the Advocate, recently sent in. We bave very pleasant recollections of the hospitality of Brother Jones and of the good people of Crenshaw and of Sledge during the district conference last summer, which we were privileged to attend.

Rev. W. H. Saunders, who wrote the interesting account of the opening of the new Methodist church at Hazlehurst, Miss., for the Advocate last week, writes to say that he inadvertently omitted the names of Rev. J. G. Galloway and Rev. W. H. Lewis as visitors at the opening services. He greatly regrets this omission.

We learn from the Winnfield News-American that the revival services at the Methodist church in Winnfield came to a successful close last Sunday night. The preaching was done by Rev. K. W. Dodson, presiding elder of the Minden District. The church at Winnfield has had a fine year under the pastorate of Rev. C. C. Wier.

The Licensing Committee of the Columbus District will meet in West Point, Miss., on Oct. 15. The members of the committee are W. N. Duncan, W. R. Lott, R. A. Tucker, V. C. Curtis, and W. M. McIntosh. There are several applicants for license to preach and for recommendation to the Annual Conference for admission on trial.

The Standard Training School conducted in the Jefferson Street Methodist Church, Natchez, Miss., which came to a close on Sept. 28, was successful in every particular. The Methodists and Presbyterians united in the work of the school. Forty-two credits were issued. Rev. O. S. Lewis, pastor of the Jefferson Street Church, was the director of the school.

Mrs. W. F. Bang, mother of Mrs. J. H. Carter, this city, died at her home in Nashville, Tenn., on Sept. 28, in her eightieth year. She was a former president of the Tennessee State W. C. T. U., and was an active member of the Methodist church. Mrs. Carter was with her at the end. The Advocate extends sincere sympathy to the sorrowing family and friends.

The revival meeting recently held in the Methodist church at West Point, Miss., in which the pastor, Rev. W. R. Lott, was assisted by Rev. Alonzo Monk, Jr., who did the preaching, and Mr. H. W. Goodpaster, song director, resulted in a genuine revival, which touched all the churches of West Point. Thirty members were added to the Methodist church.

New Orleans suffered a real loss recently in the death of Mr. Thomas G. Rapier, for many years Editor of the Picayune, and later connected with the Times-Picayune. He was a devout member of the Roman Catholic Church, a simple, unassuming Christian gentleman, an unostentatious friend of the poor, and active in many good causes. He showed his faith by his works.

Rev. C. K. Spell writes that he is working for the present in Mississippi, having recently been in meetings with Rev. Gus Kelly and at Pineville, Miss. He has placed his membership and credentials in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. His permanent address is Kirbyville, Tex., but he is making Raleigh, Miss., his headquarters while in this section. He is available for meetings.

Miss Barbara Lutz, of this city, passed to her reward, after a long illness, last Sunday. She was buried from the Second Methodist Church on Monday morning. She was a consecrated Christian woman, whose going away makes sad many hearts. She was a sister of Dr. A. S. Lutz, presiding elder of the Alexandria District, Louisiana Conference. The Advocate extends sincere sympathy to the sorrowing family and friends.

The First Methodist Church of Baton Rouge, La., is asking for the "consistent loyalty" of every member during the month of October. A fine program of activities has been arranged. Sunday, Oct. 7, was observed as "Whole Family Day;" next Sunday will be "Visitors' Day;" Oct. 21 will be "Young People's Day," and Oct. 28 will be "Everybody's Day." Dr. Frank L. Wells, the pastor, has led his people in what promises to be one of the best years in their history.

The following sad news comes from Rev. Paul D. Hardin, pastor of the First Methodist Church, Brookhaven, Miss.: "Doctor G. J. Caraway, the father of Rev. P. M. Caraway, pastor of Parker Memorial Church of New Orleans, died at his home here last Saturday morning and was buried in Rosehill cemetery of this place in the late afternoon of the same day. Rev. W. H. Lewis, presiding elder, Dr. G. F. Winfield, of Whitworth College, and Rev. L. J. Snelgrove, our pastor at Monticello, Miss., assisted the pastor in the funeral services. Doctor Caraway was seventy-one years old, an active practicing physician, a faithful and loyal member of the First Methodist Church of Brookhaven, Miss., at the time of his death. He leaves a widow and eight children to mourn his going away." The Advocate extends sincere sympathy to the sorrowing family and friends.

Dr. Carlton D. Harris, editor of the Baltimore Southern Methodist, suffered a stroke of paralysis on Saturday, Sept. 22, from which he died on Friday, Sept. 28. Dr. Harris was a loveable man, a fine editor, active in the work of the church, the author of several books, and a faithful servant of the Master. He will be greatly missed. Rev. N. B. Harmon, Jr., son of Rev. and Mrs. N. B. Harmon, of the Mississippi Conference, has been elected editor of the Baltimore Southern Methodist to succeed Dr. Harris. The new editor is a member of the Baltimore Conference. Brother Harmon is splendidly equipped for editorial work, being a keen observer and trained writer. On behalf of his many friends in this section of the church, we extend to him a hearty welcome to the fine field of service to which he has been called.

We take the following interesting item from the Meridian (Miss.) Star: "The Sunday school class of the East End Methodist church, composed of women between the ages of 65 and 95 years of age, taught by Mrs. C. M. Martin, has gained the reputation of always meeting its requirements. Recently this class was asked to contribute $50 toward the new church building fund, and Sunday when the contributions were laid upon the altar by the classes, this organization far exceeded its quota and gave $75 instead. Mrs. E. J. LeGrande, 95 years of age, and the oldest member of the class, was given the privilege of placing the love gift, and leaning on the arm of her teacher, Mrs. Martin, this dear old woman, who holds an almost perfect Sunday school record, walked proudly down the aisle and laid the $75 on the altar."

A NOTABLE BOOK.

The Macmillan Company brought from the press this week a book by Rev. W. L. Duren, D.D., that we believe will be widely read throughout the Christian world and that will become one of the classics of the subject with which it deals. The title of the book is, "Francis Asbury," the subtitle being, "A Biography of the Founder of American Methodism and Unofficial Minister of State." The announcement of the publication of the volume states: "The purpose of this book is not to create a hero or to make a good story, but to interpret a life. It includes all that the author has been able to find out after prolonged research from dependable sources, both direct and collateral."

Dr. Duren is too well known to the readers of the Advocate to need a special introduction. He was born and reared in Mississippi; was graduated from Millsaps College in 1902; for eighteen years he was a member of the North Mississippi Conference, filling its leading appointments; for six years he was a member of the Louisiana Conference, serving as pastor of Rayne Memorial, New Orleans, all that time; for the past two years he has been pastor of St. Mark Methodist Church, Atlanta.

Dr. Duren writes with fine literary style; he has made an exhaustive study of his subject, and he has brought to the interpretation of the life of Francis Asbury a keenness of perception that makes the book interesting as well as profitable.

The publisher's price of the book is $3; but by special arrangement, Dr. Duren has the privilege of sending it to any person in Mississippi, Louisiana, and Georgia for $2.25 postpaid. For a dozen copies or more to one address, he can make the price $2, carriage extra. Orders at these prices must be sent direct to Dr. Duren, and he will supply them as long as his limited allotment lasts. His address is 113 Fifth Street, N. E., Atlanta, Ga.

THE BATON ROUGE DISTRICT FLYING SQU ADRON.

The Baton Rouge District, Louisiasa Conference, under the aggressive leadership of Rev. L. W. Cain, the presiding elder, is making diligent effort to bring up all assessments for the benevolences in full this year. At the recent check-up meeting in Hammond, it was indicated that fourteen of the charges confidently expected to report everything in full. In order to assist the remaining ten charges, the "Flying Squadron" has been organized. Under the leadership of the presiding elder, the squadron will visit every church in the district where its help is needed in the effort to make a one hundred per cent report at Conference. The squadron is composed of preachers and laymen, who are putting their hearts into the work. Great results are expected.

FINE MEETING AT NEWTON, MISS.

The Rev. W. E. Thomas, general evangelist, of Nashville, Tenn., is with us in a two-weeks' meeting. From the beginning, September 30, the attendance and interest have grown and we are having a great time.

This is the third time I have had Brother Thomas in meetings, and by all odds his preaching and effective personal work are ahead of all former occasions.

We close next Sunday night, by which time we are expecting great results, for the Lord is graciously with us.

Thomas suits me better than any helper I have ever had. He is available for a meeting or two before December. J. EARLY GRAY.

FINE RESPONSE TO "ORPHANAGE WORK DAY."

Dear Brother Carley: On Saturday, Sept. 29, at 4 p. m., we took six mail sacks of literature and letters to the post office in Jackson, advertising our Work Day.

Monday morning, Oct. 1, at 8 o'clock, we had our first contributions to this fund.

By Friday morning, the 5th, with our first mail delivery we have placed in the bank practically $1,000, with Work Day still ten days off.

We appreciate this prompt and loyal response, which indicates that our goal will be reached.

Thanking you for your articles in the Advocate, I am,

Sincerely,

B. F. LEWIS, Superintendent.

SAID WESLEY.

God can do much work in a very short time. Many are the examples in the Acts of the Apostles of God's working his faith in men's hearts, even like lightning falling from heaven. So, in the same hour that Paul and Silas began to preach, the jailer repented, believed, and was baptized, as were three thousand by St. Peter on the day of Pentecost, who all repented and believed on his first preaching. And, bless be God! there are now many living proofs that he is still mighty to save.—Exchange.

Memorial resolutions are subject to the same rule as obituaries.

RESOLUTIONS.

Whereas, God, in his divine providence, has seen fit to remove from our midst our friend and co-worker, MR. WALTER E. BLESSEY, the members of the Workers' Council of Parker Memorial Church are desirous of testifying their respect for the memory of the departed and of expressing their earnest and affectionate sympathy to his wife and family; therefore, be it resolved:

1. That it is but a just tribute to the memory of the deceased to say that in regretting his removal from our midst we mourn one who was, in every way, worthy of respect and regard.

2. That in the death of Walter E. Blessey, our Council laments the loss of a teacher whose keen insight and loyal devotion endeared him to his boys; and his cheerful liberality and genial companionship will be missed by all.

3. That we sincerely condole with the wife and family of the deceased on the dispensation with which it has pleased the Almighty to afflict them, and commend them for consolation and comfort to him who doeth all things well, and whose chastisements are given in love.

4. That these resolutions be spread upon the records of our Council; and that a copy of this testimonial of our sorrow be forwarded to the wife and family of our departed friend by the secretary of our Council.

Signed: P. M. Caraway, pastor; W. H. Favourite, Superintendent Adult Department; Mrs. W. H. Favourite, Superintendent Intermediate-Senior Department; John S. Pearce, General Superintendent; Mrs. T. L. McKnight, Miss F. D. Walker, Corinne A. Pfaff, Committee.

New Orleans, La.

IN MEMORY OF MRS. J. R. JONES.

We cannot and will not say that she is dead, she is just away. With her smile and a wave of the hand she has wandered into an unknown land and left us dreaming how very fair it needs must be since she is there.

In loving remembrance of our dear friend and co-worker, we, the members of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Main Street Methodist Church, of Hattiesburg, Miss., offer the following tribute to her memory. During her sojourn in Hattiesburg, Brother Jones as presiding elder of the district, Mrs. Jones joined the church and entered whole-heartedly into its various activities. Our church was made richer and stronger by her efforts. She endeared herself to every member of the Sunday school by her wise counsel and helpfulness.

The Missionary Society found her ever ready to respond to calls for service. She was a cheerful contributor of her time, her talent and her means, faithful to her tasks, and courageous in her convictions.

The church and the Conference have sustained a deep and irreparable loss in the passing of Mrs. Jones; therefore, be it resolved:

That we hereby tender our sincere sympathy to the sorrow-stricken husband and other relatives, and point them to the Great Comforter, who alone is able to bind up the broken hearts. That in appreciation of her life and service to us, her unselfish devotion, we cherish her memory and strive to emulate her many virtues. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to Brother Jones, a copy be spread upon the minutes of our local auxiliary, and a copy be sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

Signed: Mrs. A. F. Yoakum, Mrs. H. Ogden, Mrs. D. E. Edwards, Mrs. R. L. Hunt.

All Communications for This Department Should Be Addressed to Mrs. Janie Drake Cooper, Church Hill, Miss.

Despise not any man that lives,
Alien or neighbor, near or far;
Go out beneath the mighty stars,
And see how very small you are.

The world is large, and space is high
That sweeps around our little ken;
But there's no space or time to spare
In which to hate our fellow-men.

—Sam Walter Foss.

PIONEERS.

Geographical frontiers? Yes, generations of pioneers have crossed and criss-crossed them. They have been or are fast being woven into the fabric of this close-knit world. There will be few more argosies of adventure of the sort that, with Commander Byrd, are sailing for farthest south.

But of other frontiers there are plenty. And enough adventure for pioneers who dare to cross them. Here are a few:

The frontier of race prejudice. Try some day, for yourself, to cross that well-nigh impassable barrier. But it must be crossed. No discovery of geography is as important as the discovery, in human relationships, that men, made in God's image, can live together as brethren.

The frontier of war! Men, in these post-war years, have been crossing this border. They have been battering down the old philosophies of force. Many of them have paid a price for their daring. But a world, one day, will be more Christ-like because these pioneers have driven war into oblivion and proved that there is a higher righteousness than that of arms.

The frontier of economic injustice. Lives have been risked to plunge in and unravel the mysteries of the world's great unknowns. Risks, as real, are involved for any individual who dares to sponsor, seriously, the cause of those who suffer economic oppression. But their cause, if they ever find a more abundant life, must be sponsored.

Frontiers are not wiped out. Only geographical frontiers. Those of injustice, intolerance, prejudice, remain. Men with courage enough for their crossing were never more in demand.

Palestine was a small State. Jesus, so far as we know, never traveled out of it. But he crossed more borders than any man who ever lived. The world waits for his kind of pioneers.—Stanley High, in Christian Herald.

THE DEATH OF MRS. HOWARD MOREHEAD.

It is with deep regret that we learn of the death of Mrs. Howard Morehead, nee Janie Watkins. For twelve years she was a missionary to China, representing the Woman's Missionary Society of the Mississippi Conference. She first taught at the Laura Haygood College, Soochow. Returning to this country, she took her Master's degree at the University of Chicago, majoring in history. Later, she returned to China, and held the chair of History in the Gin-Lin College, at Nanking, until her marriage to Mr. Howard Morehead, July 26, 1923.

After a brief and painful illness she died on the 29th of September, 1928, in the King's Daughters Hospital, at Greenwood, Miss. In her death her family, her friends and her church are bereft of a wonderfully sweet and helpful spirit. Our sympathy goes out to all her dear ones, particularly to her sister, our beloved Mrs. B. W. Lipscomb, of the Woman's Council, Nashville.

GREENWOOD DISTRICT, ZONE NO. 3.

The third zone meeting of the year was held at the Methodist church at Doddsville, Sept. 12. The zone chairman, Mrs. George Sledge, presided, and Mrs. J. E. Coleman acted as secretary.

Psalm 19:11 was said in unison, after which, "O, Zion Haste," was sung. Mrs. J. M. Cochran gave a most cordial welcome; Mrs. Hill, of Drew, responded.

Morning devotional was conducted by our beloved and honored visitor, Mrs. W. M. McIntosh, of Columbus, whose message on Christ's first miracle was a real uplift and inspiration to all.

Mrs. Thorsen, of Memphis, former member of Doddsville Missionary Society, was introduced to the meeting and made an inspirational talk. Brothers Storment and McCafferty were introduced as preacher visitors.

Reports from all auxiliaries represented were made.

Mrs. Wafford and Mrs. McCafferty were appointed a committee to write a letter of condolence to Mrs. Leigh McLean.

Letter from Mrs. Bailey was read by Mrs. Sledge.

Ruleville's invitation for next zone meeting was accepted.

Mrs. Fisackerly and Mrs. A. C. Johnson delighted the audience with a lovely duet.

Mrs. McCafferty led a round table discussion on "What Does Missionary Society Mean to Me Individually."

"How Are We Taking Care of Our Young People" was discussed by Mrs. J. E. Coleman.

A lovely solo by Mrs. Fisackerly was enjoyed by all.

A rising vote of thanks was accorded Doddsville for the day's hospitality and entertainment.

A rising vote of thanks and appreciation was given Mrs. McIntosh for coming to us on this occasion.

The fitting climax of the day's privileges was the wonderful message on Prayer brought by Mrs. McIntosh. Her review of pioneer missionary workers and her personal touch with many of them was an inspiration and spiritual uplift.

A number of sentence prayers of reconsecration closed the session's work, and meeting adjourned, after which a lovely luncheon was served by the Doddsville Society.

MRS. GEORGE W. SLEDGE,
Secretary.

NOTES.

A great gift for suffering humanity was John D. Rockefeller's recent contribution of $100,000 to the Leonard Wood Memorial for the Eradication of Leprosy in the Philippines. This brings the total already pledged to this cause to over a million dollars.

Toyohiko Kagawa, a graduate of Princeton, writes from Kobe: "As Wesley's movement saved Great Britain from a revolution when France had its great revolution, so we are looking to the kingdom of God movement to save Japan."

Dr. S. Parkes Cadman urges us to look forward. He says: "To think of the future is a trait of the civilized man. He speculates upon contingencies and possibilities ahead. He sows that he may reap, and stores the grain against the coming of winter. He builds not for to-day, but for to-morrow. He projects his purposes into the periods when they shall ripen fast and unfold their deeper importance to generations yet unborn. It is the barbarian who gorges now and starves later. A sure mark of backward races is their carelessness of what may be so long as they are in touch with what is."

In 5 MILLION HOMES TONIGHT

A host of babies will enjoy sound sleep tonight. And their parents will have unbroken rest. Castoria is the cause of this contentment in a multitude of homes.

Good old Castoria! Children cry for it. Mothers swear by it. Not a household where there is an infant should ever be without it. A few drops of Castoria quiet Baby in a perfectly innocent manner. It is natural slumber that follows. Castoria is a purely vegetable product. No opiates. No narcotics. Of any kind.

Now you know why trained nurses give Castoria as often as an infant is ailing, or even restless. And why doctors tell mothers it is the first and only home remedy when Baby has constipation, colic, diarrhea, or other upset. It is made for babies, and safe to give babies, and other things are not.

Fletcher's Castoria is "old-fashioned" if you count its fifty years, but it's an old-fashioned mother, nowadays, who worries along without it. Twenty-five million bottles bought last year! Think of the number of mothers who rely on Castoria! All these mothers can't be wrong! To keep a bottle in the house is a precaution you owe your little one.

Children Cry for Fletcher's CASTORIA

Sunday School

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

Quiite a numher of our hest schools will ohserve Childhood and Youth Week thls week and next. Please use the report hlank on the program to make your report of the work done. You want your school represented at our Annuai Conference and in the report of the church at large. If the report ls made out as soon as the work is done, it will not require hut a few minutes. One of the weak things in the work of the teachers is, they do not visit the homes where the children live. Many of the rough piaces in our work can be smoothed out by a telephone visit, hy a note, by a half-minute visit at prayer meeting, or at church, or on the street, or a short visit in the home. Let us try more visiting in the homes and note the results. The visitor will be blessed and the ones visited benefited.

The number of credits issued at the Greenville Training School was not large, but the teaching was of the best. The students had many obstacles to overcome. The fact is, many were heroic. The Greenville Methodist church has the "salt of the earth" in it. They will overcome the obstacles that confront them and continue to do the work of our Lord. There is no more princely man among us than Jim Cunningham, and he has associated with him in the work at Greenville worthy men and women. May the Spirit teach and inspire and give power to the church in this Delta city.

Brother Mohler and the writer had the privilege of attending the openlng services of the new educational building at Winona the last Sunday in September. The house was well filled with men, women, young people and children. The Promotion services were correctly observed, they were impressive, and altogether educational. The bullding is a credit to the architect, the builder and the people who made it possible. It is a gem; it is the last word the church has to say in the way of a building. It is a mllestone along the path of progress in caring for childhood and youth. Rev. Mellville Johnson and his loyal people are to be congratulated on the compietion of this excellent piece of work.

The present situation ln these United States of America and of the State of Mississippi shows the need of sound Christian teaching, not to a handful of children who attend the Sunday school, hut to the masses of the peopie. The church is in the world to teach the whole world the things of Jesus Christ. We are compelled to get rid of spiritual illiteracy or we shall he enslaved hy ignorance. There is no need to wink and hlink. We must give more religious education or the nation will he lost. Indlviduals wili be saved, but the hody politic will commit moral suicide. The foundation for teaching ail the people is in our Christian colleges and in our system of training schools estahlished for the benefit of the masses of our Sunday school teachers. God forhid that we should do less of this work, but more. It is a matter of life or death.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

Fifth Sunday, Sept. 30, was a great day in the Alxandria District. At each of the three zone meetings, Sunday school work was presented.

At Oberlin, Rev. A. K. McLellan, Extension Secretary, reports a good meeting. The next meeting of this zone goes to Elizabeth.

We were present at the Lecompte meetlng. Six schools were represented. Mr. T. W. Holloman, Conference Lay Leader, spoke to the group on Conference collections ln full. Dr. Cleanth Brooks brought a great Bible message.

The third rally was at Pitrevilie, with Mr. Leon Campbeil, superintendent of the White Chapel Sunday school, presiding. A good attendance reported.

Fifth Sunday institutes, zone meetings, etc., could he made a great factor in Sunday school work if we would use them.

"Home-Coming Day" was observed at Cheneyville recently. Your writer and famiiy had the privilege of attending this happy occasion. The superintendent and his wife, Mr. and Mrs. S. D. Jordan, were the promoters of this service. Mr. Jordan's father was one of the founders of the Cheneyvllie church.

The 11 o'clock program in the church and the Fellowship meeting on the church lawn proved an interesting and profitahle occasion.

The pastor, Rev. H. B. Thomason, made an interesting talk on Mlssions. He and hls wife are spending their vacation in North Louisiana thls week

Promotion Day, Sunday, Sept. 30, proved to he a great day in Louisiana Methodism. We learned that the Sunday school in Alexandria had an attendance of 471 on this occasion, with the following record in the Elementary Departments: Beginners, 51; Primary, 78, and Juniors, 84. This church has just recently raised in cash $13,000 for their new educational bullding.

We congratuiate the congregation and the pastor, Rev. J. H. Bowdon, of Keener Memorial Church, on the completion of their new $50,000 church. In the building of this church, they have had the Sunday school and its needs in mind.

Miss Ava Wren, superintendent of Pine Grove Sunday school, near Minden, writes :"Will you piease send us some leaflets on the Home Membership? We notice the change and some of the teachers are asking for the ieaflets."

We hear good reports of the new church at Monroe, known as the Gordon Avenue Methodist Church, with Rev. H. F. Camp as pastor. The church has all the reguiar church organizations: Epworth League, with Mr. S. P. Quigley as president, and Sunday school, with Mr. R. H. Goza as superintendent.

Rev. E. W. Day, pastor at Haughton, gives us a cordiai invitation to visit his charge and help in Sunday school work. He says: "If you can only he here a few nights it wili be helpful."

Mr. D. B. Talley, of Bogalusa, District Secretary of the Baton Rouge Dlstrict, writes: "We observed Promotion Day in our Sunday school last Sunday with a very attractive pageant, and will observe 'Chiidhood and Youth Week,' and culminate the services with the Hoiiest Task Pageant, on Sunday, Oct. 14."

We prophesy "Chiidhood and Youth Week" will mean much to Louisiana Methodism this year.

Mr. A. M. Mayo, Lake Charles, sends us an outline program of his Workers' Council meeting. His announcement to the Department Superintendent reads: "Piease remember next Tuesday, the 9th, at 6:30 p. m., will be our regular Workers' Council meeting. Each department wili meet around its individual table and group, and during lunch (which will be provided by each group) the department matters wiil be taken up. There will he presented matters for the entire school to consider afterwards. I trust you wili arrange for your entire force to he present. Will look for a report on your department."

Thursday, Oct. 4, was spent in Shreveport. There was a meeting of the District Superintendents of Missionary Education and Extension. The following District Superintendents were present: Rev. D. B. Boddie, Alexandria District; Rev. H. E. Pfost, Minden Distrist; Mrs. L. D. Chaffee, New Orieans District; and Mrs. E. M. Venabie, Shreveport District.

Three members of the Conference Staff were present: Dr. W. W. Drake, chairman; Rev. A. K. McLelian, Extension Secretary, and the Conference Superintendent, C. D. Atkinson.

By special invitation, Rev. J. G. Sneliing, Conference Missionary Secretary, and Rev. W. D. Kieinschmidt, presiding eider of the Minden Distrlct, were present.

Many matters of importance were discussed, pertainlng to the extension work of our Conference Board.

Friday, Oct. 5, finds us en route to a hig Sunday school meeting for the New Orleans District.

Conference Superintendent.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

The Natchez Standard Training School was as find a spirited Training School as I have been in—that is, there was an uplifting feeling in the school which made you feel glad that you were there and you wanted to come again and be in another school. Rev. L. P. Anders, from Washington, was present at the school, with a goodly number of his workers. This interest on the part of Brother Anders was greatly appreciated by those responsible for the school. Rev. J. B. Cain and Mrs. Cain attended from Fayette. This is the first time Fayette has had a student in a Standard Training Schooi. Brother Cain added much to the spirit and interest of the school. The Presbyterians of the city ran a school at the same time and piace and it was a real abiding joy to feei and appreciate the spirit of friendliness that obtained. The number of credits was smaller than we had hoped, but, ali things considered, it was a great time. We hope that next year this can be a co-operative school and that we can have a larger and better attendance than ever.

We have had a fine schooi here at Jackson. We ciosed with 42 credits issued. Two revivais going in the two churches and two deaths of prominent people who were definitely interested lost us severai credits. We had more credits from Capitoi Street Church than we have ever had. Galloway Memorial had 4 credits; Millsaps Memoriai had one credit; Grace had 5 credits, leaving Capitoi Street with 32, whlch is a fine showing for Capitol Street. The report from Capitol Street Beginners' Department was that all but one of the teachers in that Department had taken a unit of credit this year; several of them had 3 credits this year, and several had two credlts. This is a fine showing and will mean a real ongoing for the future. We had the pleasure of having Mr. R. L. Landis, the superintendent of Leadership Training of the Presbyterian Church, to teach in this school.

He made a fine teacher and delighted his class and we were so very, very glad to have him. We appreciate his fine brotherly spirit. God hless and keep him and his.

Sunday School Day money is dribbling in slowly. We are approximately $300 behind the income from this source of last year. We want to pay all our bills and not have to borrow any more money. Each Sunday school which has not seut us an offering can help us by sending in an offering. Please help us. We have reached the point of dire need. We launched a program requlriug $1,000 more Sunday school money than we had last year and here we show up in this plight this near to Conference. May I say this, that almost universally each Sunday school which has sent in an offering has sent in more thau ever before? This we appreciate. Many schools have sent no offeriug.

The fourth Suuday has just passed. This month we ought to have at least $700 mission money. This would offset the small incomes from other months. Please send in the offering right away.

Remember to pray for us and pray for the work.

Yours in Him,

JOHN C. CHAMBERS.

REV. CHAS. ASSAF.

Dear Brethren: Brother Assaf has done a remrakable year's work. His reports have verified that.

These few remaining weeks before Conference and some time after Conference he is not ordinarily called for service. He will do good wherever called as a personal worker, evangelistic service, or helper in getting up collections or starting the new year.

This man from afar who lahors among us, deserves our confidence, prayers and co-operation.

Yours sincerely,

J. L. DECELL.

Mother!

Clean Child's Bowels with "California Fig Syrup"

Hurry Mother! Even constipated, bilious, feverish, or sick, colic Babies and Children love to take genuine "California Fig Syrup." No other laxative regulates the tender little bowels so nicely. It sweetens the stomach and starts the liver and bowels without griping. Contains no narcotics or soothing drugs. Say "California" to your druggist and avoid counterfeits. Insist upon genuine "California Fig Syrup" which contains directions.

RESOLUTIONS.

The following resolutions were adopted by the fourth quarterly conference of the Gallman charge, Brookhaven District, Mississippi Conference:

Whereas, our presiding elder, Rev. W. H. Lewis, and our pastor, Rev. J. E. J. Ferguson, are completing four years of faithful service among us as presiding elder of the Brookhaveu District and pastor of the Gallman charge; and,

Whereas, the law of our church limits the presiding elder to four years, and the policy of our present presiding bishop is not to continue a pastor in the same pastorate longer than four years;

Be it resolved by the fourth quarterly conference of the Gallman charge, now assembled, That we express to them our appreciation of their work among us. They have both shown hy work and word that the advancement of the Master's kingdom ou earth holds first place in their hearts and have taught and worked to that end. We feel that they have not failed. "Verily, they have their reward." And if we of the Gallman charge should be so unfortunate as to lose Brother Ferguson, we do most heartily recommend both of them to any congregation to which they might be assigned.

Second: That a copy of the foregoing be sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication.

Respectfully,

I. W. ENOCHS.
R. J. FAIRCHILDS.

FROM BRANDON, MISS.

Dear Dr. Carley: Dr. Decell recently held our fourth quarterly conference at Brandon. Ilis sermou was carefully thought out and presented with power. The Brandou church and Mount Carmel, a small country church, paid out in full for the year. I have every reason to believe others will come up to their obligations in the near future.

We have received to date about seventy new members on the charge; but, as the register has not been revised for several years, we will drop some who have been lost sight of, and we are granting certificates to some who have moved away. Despite all, there will be some net gain.

Brother Marlin H. McCormick, pastor at Clinton, preached six sermons for uie at Thomasville several weeks ago, and did well. I have know Brother McCormick since he entered the ministry and have watched his growth with interest.

My people offered me a month's vacation in Augnst, but I could not get to it then. They kindly extended my opportunity to suit my pleasure, and I got away for two weeks. Wife asked me if I knew how to take a vacation, and a brother wanted to know if I ever rested before; but I relaxed about as completely as a man can who loves his people and has zeal for God. My laymeu and Brother J. H. Foreman carried on beautifully in my absence. I have coutended for years that everybody ought to have a vacation at least once a year, but I have always needed thirteeu months a year instead of twelve.

I see oue of our Mississippi State Senators contends that every man should bo free to vote according to his own conscience, and he is being denounced by some who are loudest against "intolerance." One reporter tells of how the vote is to go in his town and warns all of different mind to keep silence, as no other sort will be tolerated there. Please ask somebody if this is democracy, and if we are still in America.

Personally, I have always been in the habit of discussing moral principles and applications and leaving my congregation to vote as judgment dictated; but some of the politicians are becoming so unworldly now that they are narrowing down morality till there is about to be nothing left to apply moral principles to. We are heing told that prohibition is not a moral question; some are asserting that violations of chastity and of family obligations are all right except as they are contrary to social conventions. I suppose murder will be all right hy and hy. I have even heard it said that the only reason preachers oppose the sale of whiskey is that these preachers are afraid somebody will get the money they want.

I am thankful that the charge I serve is made up of people that have some sense, and that there are others.

ROLFE HUNT.

Brandon, Miss.

WHOOPING COUGH.

By Dr. Oscar Dowling, President, Louisiana State Board of Health.

Whooping cough is extremely dangerous to small children, and is often the forerunner among older children of pneumonia or tuberculosis. The largest number of deaths occuring from whooping cough is among children uuder five years of age.

In 1927 there were 213 deaths in the State of Louisiana from whooping cough, and for the first six months of 1928, ninety-eight deaths.

While reports of this communicable disease are not as complete as they should be, 748 cases were reported during 1927 and 268 in the first six months of this year.

The problem of the control of the spread of whooping cough rests with the parents. It means the keeping of the children of each family away from other children when they have a cough or cold.

Whooping cough is more contagious during its early stages, before the first whoop and just after it. It is difficult to diagnose at this early period, hut if all children under five with colds or coughs were not allowed to mingle with other children, it would help greatly in the suppression of whooping cough. If the cold is slight, it is only necessary to isolate the child for two or three days; if the cold persists, a physician should be called.

It is not unusual to hear a child "whooping" in public assemblies; it is not unusual to find them also in railroad or street cars. Children with whooping cough should be kept at home at least until they cannot spread the infection.

We take the disease too lightly and fail in proper means to prevent its spread.

How Doctors Treat Colds and the Flu

To break up a cold over night or to cut short an attack of grippe, influenza, sore throat or tonsilitis, physicians and druggists are now recommending Calotabs, the purified and refined calomel compound tablet that gives you the effects of calomel and salts combined, without the unpleasant effects of either.

One or two Calotabs at hed-time with a swallow of water—that's all. No salts, no nausea nor the slightest interference with your eating, work or pleasure. Next morning your cold has vanished, your system is thoroughly purified and you are feeling fine with a hearty appetite for breakfast. Eat what you please—no danger.

FROM THE LOUISIANA FIELD SECRETARY.

Dear Epworth Leaguers: I am glad to report that I am now in the Alexandria District and am very favorably impressed with the beginning made by our new District Secretary, Miss Frances Sloan, and the Hi League and Junior Society secretary, Miss Agatha Brewer. Stay with them, Alexandria District, and they will bring you out on top before they will quit.

I want to thank Rev. J. A. Knight for his hospitality while in Melville. I was so pleased to see that the town of Melville has made such wonderful progress in correcting the suffering and destruction caused by the overflow last year. On Friday night I met with the Bunkie Leaguers. The pastor, Rev. L. N. Hoffpauir, and several Leaguers made my stay with them most pleasant.

On Sunday a most profitable day in Louisiana Leaguedom was spent in Alexandria. The Conference president, Charles white, called a meeting of most of the district secretaries and Conference officers to map out plans for the winter's work. Besides the president and field secretary, those present were: Miss Elizabeth Daniel, Pineville, secretary; Mr. F. H. Riggs, Monroe, treasurer, and the following secretaries: Miss Frances Sloan, Alexandria; Miss Agatha Brewer, Lecompte; Mr. Willis Beck, Hammond; Miss Elsie Whitman, Lake Chrales; Miss Flavia Spell, Rayne; Miss Carmen Moffitt, Selma; Miss Helen Hunt, West Monroe; Miss Elizabeth Murphy, Arcadia, and Miss Lillian Hanson, New Orleans. The officers were in session from 9 until 11, and from 1:30 until 5. They attended services at First Methodist Church, after which they were shown over the new educational building. At 12:30 the Alexandria Leaguers entertained the visitors at a delightful four-course banquet. The meeting resulted in each secretary's determining to return home and make every effort to have his district the best in the State.

On Sunady evening I attended the devotional services of the Alexandria League, and enjoyed hearing the program on "Workers Together With God" well rendered by those taking part. On Monday evening I met with the Pineville Leaguers in a business meeting and social hour. Since my visit with the Boyce Leaguers for Tuesday evening was canceled, I met with the Council officers of First Church Epworth League in Alexandria to review their policy of work for the year.

I have just mailed out our Louisiana League Life Bulletins to the Hi and Senior Leagues over the Conference. I do not yet have a correct mailing list of all of the chapters; so if your chapter fails to get an issue, it may be that you have not sent in your list of officers to headquarters.

I am so pleased to hear of the Young People's revivals being held this month throughout the Conference. Our Assembly dean, Rev. J. B. Grambling, is conducting one at Arcadia this week. The Minden Leaguers plan to have one in which they will conduct the services themselves. Our Leaguer, Mr. Jolly Harper, now acting as student pastor at Southwestern, Lafayette, is to assist in a revival at Lafayette. The New Orleans City Union will hold one some time during October. The Lake Charles Leaguers will lead their own services. I hope that there will be many others scheduled and that you will let us know of your plans.

Two district secretaries report that they underwent operations for tonsilectomy, Miss Mary Searles and Miss Helen Hunt, and are getting along just fine. Wallace White, of Alexandria, also had his removed.

I will be in the Minden District on Oct. 10-18, and will go from there to the Shreveport District for Oct. 19-27. Trusting that your work is growing rapidly and that you will let us know of your projects, I am,

Your Field Secretary,
ELIZABETH LANGFORD.

WHAT DR. CALDWELL LEARNED IN 47 YEARS PRACTICE

A physician watched the results of constipation for 47 years, and believed that no matter how careful people are of their health, diet and exercise, constipation will occur from time to time. Of next importance, then, is how to treat it when it comes. Dr. Caldwell always was in favor of getting as close to nature as possible, hence his remedy for constipation, known as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, is a mild vegetable compound. It can not harm the system and is not habit forming. Syrup Pepsin is pleasant-tasting, and youngsters love it.

Dr. Caldwell did not approve of drastic physics and purges. He did not believe they were good for anybody's system. In a practice of 47 years he never saw any reason for their use when Syrup Pepsin will empty the bowels just as promptly.

Do not let a day go by without a bowel movement. Do not sit and hope, but go to the nearest druggist and get one of the generous bottles of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, or write "Syrup Pepsin," Dept. BB, Monticello, Illinois, for free trial bottle.

IS YOUR LEAGUE "ALL WET?"

By Ina Corinne Brown.

Did you know that Leaguers everywhere last year averaged only a little more than a two-cent postage stamp a month for the Mission Special? Hard to believe, isn't it? But it's so. A League that can't do better than that is "all wet," don't you think? Well, some are even worse than that because ever and ever so many chapters did not give anything at all, and lots of others gave only five or ten dollars for the year when they could have given five times as much just as easy.

Sept. 23 was Missionary Pledge Night. Either on or near that date every single member of every single League should have made a pledge to the Missionary Special. If yours have been made, why that's fine. If not, begin now! If you have the pledges made by the week or the month and collect them that way, you have no idea how easy it will be. Folks who would faint at being asked for a dollar a year will cheerfully promise ten cents a month—and you know what twelve times ten cents comes to. There isn't really anything the matter with our Leaguers. We've just been too careless or too thoughtless or too indifferent to go about this business of the Mission Special in a business-like way.

We've been all wet!

But some folks are tired of being "all wet," and they say their private slogan is to be, "It ain't gonna rain no more." Some of us have to be a bit more dignified so we say, "A paid pledge from the last Leaguer in the last League." But both slogans mean the same thing—that we aren't going to stay "all wet!" We are going to get out of that postage-stamp-a-month class.

If you would like some help in doing this, you'll find it in the September Era. There is a little play called "All Wet," which is written especially for the Epworth Leagues who happen to be in that condition. It is quite simple, takes only about twenty minutes, and requires very little rehearsing. You can put it on at the League hour or any other time which suits you. It would be nice for Senior and Hi Leagues to put it on together and invite the rest of the church.

A few extra copies of the play have been pirnted and single copies will be sent free on request as long as they last.

It may not be such a disgrace to be "All Wet," but you're ruined if you stay that way!

MORNING PRAYER SERVICE AT PONTOTOC.

Brethren of North Mississippi Conference: It has fallen to me by appointment of the committee of arrangements to lead the morning "Prayer and Fellowship Meetings" at the Pontotoc session of the Conference. The meetings will be held in a room provided by our host at 8:30 during the four days of the first week, and all ministers and laymen are urged to spend these few minutes in prayer, praise and fellowship. This is a fine opportunity for each of us to be helpful in a spiritual sense to every member of the Conference.

WHEN RELIGION GOES,

As chief magistrate of New York, if I can point to any one cause more than another which is responsible for the demoralization of the present generation, it is the prevailing lack of faith in religion.

It is the feeling that has come into being, expressed in pathetic letters left behind by student suicides, that there is no meaning in life, that this universe is run by mechanical processes rather than by a governing spiritual power, that immortality is a delusion, and religion an exploded superstition. Therefore, all that is left is the gratification of one's impulses, the enjoyment of pleasure till pleasure palls, and the getting of a "kick" at any cost, and securing what one wants by any means.—Judge McAdoo.

Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic

A Tonic for Pale, Delicate Women and Children. 60c.

A package of Grove's Liver Pills is enclosed with every bottle of GROVE'S TASTELESS CHILL TONIC for those who wish to take a Laxative in connection with the Tonic.

Don't Neglect CONSTIPATION and Mr. Gunther says:

"I AM 64 years of age and always physically fit. I never have a cold or suffer pain of any kind and I owe it all to PE-RU-NA." (Many thousands write grateful letters like this one.) "I had a bad attack of la-grippe which left me in a run-down condition—lost considerable weight—had just about given up hope when a friend advised PE-RU-NA." (Such good advice has helped many to new health and vigor.) "Since taking it I feel better. Before I had taken a full bottle I began to gain in weight—my appetite was better—I took 4 bottles and was no longer constipated." (Signed) Chas. L. Gunther, Louisville, Ky. (Isn't it wonderful to think that PE-RU-NA is able to give such thorough, immediate relief as this? Get it at your druggist—and get it now—today—why wait?)

REPORT OF SUB-DEPOSITORY AMERICAN BIBLE SOCIETY.

My report from the Sub-Depository of the Southwestern Agency of the American Bible Society, 900 St. Charles Street, New Orleans, La., for the months of July, August and September, 1928, is as follows:

The distribution has been 290 Bibles, 839 Testaments, and 16,731 portions of Scriptures; total, 17,910 volumes. Of these, 5,182 have been donations and 12,728 have been sales.

To aid in this great mission work a patient in a hospital sent us $1; a lady friend of this work, at Bridge Hampton, N. Y., sent $10; a man who is deeply interested in New Orleans gave $5.

During these three months we have traveled more than one thousand miles, visited fourteen towns, and distributed Scriptures at about fifty stations. We have also, directly and indirectly, distributed 60,000 tracts and religious papers.

Often we find families no member of which can read save the youngest children. A gospel in the hands of a child is a power for good, and we have known the parents to listen eagerly to the Good News as the little ones haltingly pronounce the Words of Life.

Hospitals, rescue homes, jails and slums have been visited and supplied with Scriptures. We have climbed dark and rickety stairs and searched out the poorest of the poor, to supply them with the Word of God.

One of our leading pastors has said: "Excepting, perhaps, New York, there is not a more stragetically located city in America than New Orleans. There are other and larger cities, but there are none that need the gospel more, and none more important as a great base of operations."

"For we preach not ourselves, but Christ Jesus the Lord; and ourselves your servants for Jesus sake." II Corinthians 4:5.

Sow your cities down with this Book; broadcast it in every town and hamlet; send it to the solitary dwellers in forest and prairie; send it out to all people in all lands. Trust in it, hide it in your own hearts, believe in it, and in him who is revealed in it.

We need your co-operation and prayers.

In His Name,
G. A. PERKINS.

NERVOUS HEADACHE

Kentuckian Tells How Taking Black-Draught Relieved His Pains and How Well He Feels Now.

Waynesburg, Ky.—How a few doses of Thedford's Black-Draught brought relief to a man who had been suffering from frequent spells of severe headache, is told below in the statement of Mr. Charles F. Todd, of Estesburg, near this place.

"I was suffering with nervous headaches. About once a week I would have these headaches, and have to quit work, and go to bed for about twenty-four hours. I would have pains in my neck, and right behind my right ear.

"A merchant at Estesburg saw me one day when I was suffering, and told me to try taking Black-Draught, which I did.

"I took a package home that night, and took a few doses. It relieved me. From that time on, I would take Black-Draught as soon as I felt like I was going to have one of those headaches—and they wouldn't come on.

"Every few weeks, I take three or four doses of Black-Draught, and I feel so well, and do my work, and don't lose any more time with headache.

"I haven't had a headache in six months."

Costs only one cent a dose. Get a package today. NC-189

THE SILENT YEARS.

Life-forces are complex. It is easy for us to look at the experiences of active life for an explanation of character; but the explanation is not always—not often, perhaps—to be found there. It is further back, in quieter places, in deeper sources. But for the silent years, there would probably be little of great achievement.

The Silent Years of Christ's Life.

We have no record of the life of Christ from the time he was twelve years old to his baptism. That constitutes a period of about eighteen silent years in the preparation for his ministry. We do not know what took place in those years, but we may reverently undertake to reconstruct their history—at least we may surmise some of the influences that entered into his life during those years. Passing over his home life, the influence of his supposed father and his mother and of his brothers and sisters; passing over the process of his human education, through which he gained an intimate knowledge of the law and of nature; and passing over those associations with his fellowmen that reacted upon his human nature in some kind of formative way, we may pass directly to a consideration of the forces that had to do directly with what he was to be and what he was to do "in the fullness of time."

We cannot believe that he entered passively, unresistingly, into a work that was going to break his heart with the agony of rejection by his own people, that was going to bring the tremendous burden of a world's salvation upon his shoulders alone, and that was going to lead him irresistibly to the sacrifice of his own life in keeping with the will of God and for the good of his fellow-men—even those who hated him with an undying hatred. In those years of preparation—those silent years over which the curtain has been drawn—he faced the issues clearly, fought the battles valiantly, and won the victories gloriouly that gave him peace of soul that never forsook him and gave him power that has endured to the present day. Tear out the pages of those silent years and there is no explanation of those magnificent achievements which place him head and shoulders above all that had gone before him, which make him the model and ideal of all who come after.

In those silent years, he measured the power of evil. His eyes were not blinded to the forces that held dominion over the lives of men and ruled in the hearts of so many that drove them about as upon the waves of an angry sea and filled their souls with a discontent—nay, more—with an anguish that never gave them surcease from their sufferings. In the clearness of his vision he saw men and women all about him—individuals of his personal acquaintance—whose lives were in the grasp of a principle, a power, that made them violate the fundamental requirements of that law that had been given their fathers by Jehovah himself on the lofty summit of Sinai. He saw men possessed of demons, their faces disfigured by sin, their lives disordered and made failures by sin, their hopes blighted and their ambitions faded away, in subjection to that which never gave peace, which never can give peace, which to-day is the great discordant and destructive element in the human heart. He measured the power of sin as he saw it manifest in the lives of his fellow-men.

He measured it accurately, too, because of the solicitations it made to him to yield to its seductive influences. He never yielded to those solicitations, nor was his pure life ever stained in the slightest degree by the touch of that which affected those around him; but just as the appeal was made to him in that supreme moment when he stood on the verge of his public ministry, so we may be sure that in those silent years temptations assailed him, to yield to which would have broken that intimate communion he had with the Father, and would have forever unfitted him to become the sinless Redeemer of the race.

So he knew the insistence, and the insidious attacks, of sin. Never for a moment does it give up the fight; and its way of approach is ever varying and changing. Even under the form of an angel of light would it lead us to destruction. "Tempted in all points like as we are"—what a history of spiritual struggle! "Yet without sin"—what a vision of magnificent victory! In those silent years he measured the power of evil. He knew what he had to fight against. He knew what we have to fight against.

In those silent years, he estimated, too, the capacity for development of the human life. He was to deal with life. Men and women were the objects of his work. He must know what they could do. He guaged the range of their vision. He learned the reach of their faith. He reflected upon their power to suffer. He measured the limit of their power to achieve.

In those silent years, Jesus was learning not only the strength of the enemy he was to fight, but also the capacity of those with whom and for whom he was to fight.

In those silent years, he developed, also, the possibilities of God's power to help. His familiarity with the history of his people made him to know that "man's extremity is God's opportunity. The fulfillment of the divine promises gave him a sure knowledge of the infinite resources of the Father. His own intimate fellowship with God enabled him to know in his own soul the limitless reaches of the divine wisdom and power and love.

In those silent years, Jesus learned the power of sin, the capacity of the human soul, and the power of God to help. With a full knowledge of these Christ was ready—and only then was he ready—to begin his ministry. He knew he had to face poverty, opposition, contumely, rejection by his own, persecution, death. He had learned what life is, what his work was to be, what materials he had to deal with; and he had adjusted himself to that work. He was a heroic figure—a glorious figure—as he went out to meet John and the multitude. There was no hestiation in his step, no doubt in his voice. His eyes shone with noble purpose and triumphant faith. Those silent years had culminated in the absolute, unreserved consecration of himself to his mission. He never faltered or drew back for an instant. All his questions had been settled, and settled forever. How well spent those years had been!

The Silent Spaces in Human Lives.

Most of the great achievements and great characters among men can be traced back to the silent spaces in their lives. Moses and Paul and countless others came from isolation to the leadership of untold multitudes. It is not always a physical withdrawal—a sojourn in a physical desert—that makes a great life; but it is the silent facing of the great issues and the silent contemplation of the great questions and the great problems of life that fit men for great living and great deeds. The tragedy of many lives is that there has been no silent facing of life as it must be lived.

In every great life there comes the silent period of awakened spiritual perception, when the voice of conscience speaks in terms of the divine imperative to the listening soul. There comes, too, the silent period of intellectual conflict, when doubt and fear tear at the vitals of the soul and threaten destruction. Comes, too, the silent period of sorrow and disappointment, when God's providences seem dark and his goodness is hidden. And then comes the silent hour when we face the problem of evil and we are tempted to call in question all the revelations of the divine nature. These are the times to try men's souls; but untried souls are not equal to a great adventure. An issue is never settled till it is settled right; and it is in the quiet facing of these issues that we get our bearings, establish our faith, adjust ourselves to time, and fit ourselves for eternity.

In the very midst of life's rush and worry, great questions of the spiritual life may thrust themselves upon us, with all their train of doubts and fears and problems, and insistently demand consideration. Give it! Deep down in the quiet of our souls, with ourselves and God alone to witness, we need to fight out the problems, as Moses did, as Jesus Christ did, as Paul did, as every man who gos out to fight and to conquer must. It is in these quiet spaces of life that God blesses us and prepares us to be a blessing to the world when the silence is broken by the hoarse cry of the combatants on life's battlefield. There is a warning and a promise in those strange words, "Be still and know that I am God."

POETICAL TEXTS.

By Mrs. George S. Brown.

"The law of his God is in his heart; none of his steps shall slide." Psalm 37:31.

Creeping Up the Stairs.

"In the softly failing twilight
Of a weary, weary day,
With a quiet step I entered
Where the children were at play;
I was brooding o'er some trouble
That had met me unawares,
When a little voice came ringing,
'Me is creeping up the stairs.'

"Ah, it touched the tenderest heart strings
With a breath and force divine,
And such melodies awakened
As mere words can ne'er define;
And I turned to see our darling;
All forgetful of my cares,
When I saw the little creature
Slowly creeping up the stairs.

"Step by step, she bravely clambered
On her little hands and knees,
Keeping up a constant chattering,
Like a magpie in the trees.
Till at last she reached the topmost,
When o'er all her world's affairs,
She, delighted, stood a victor
After creeping up the stairs.

"Fainting heart, behold an image
Of man's brief and struggling life,
Whose best prizes must be captured
With an earnest, noble strife;
Onward, upward, reaching ever,
Bending to the weight of cares;
Hoping, fearing, still expecting,
We go creeping up the stairs.

"On their steps may be no carpet,
By their sides may be no rail;
Hands and knees may often pain us,
And the heart may almost fail;
Still above there is the glory
Which no sinfulness impairs,
With its rest and joy forever,

—Old Favorite.

We find so many lessons in life watching little children. Their implicit confidence, their trustfulness, their simplicity, purity, faith, their forgetfulness of injuries and ready forgiveness, make us all realize that Christ was wise when he told us to become as little children if we would enter the kingdom of Heaven.

If we see before us a way that is high and steep and difficult of ascent, we falter and sometimes fall, but the child sees one step at a time and goes, never doubting but that the next can be conquered. If we do go, we are so prone to sigh and groan, but the child goes singing and laughing all the way.

Nothing is worth having that is not difficult to obtain and that does not require effort. The child does not appreciate being lifted up the stairs in a pair of strong arms; but when the ascent has been made unaided, he looks back with great delight—he seems to realize that he has accomplished something. We always appreciate most what we have worked hard to obtain.

We have, all through life, many steps on which there is no protecting carpet; we may have no helping hand to guide us as does the rail by the stair; the ascent may be steep, and the way seem long and weary, but we take comfort from the thought that we have only to go one step at a time. It is not expected of us to get to the top landing with a jump. It is all the better for us if we go on hands and knees, praying all the way, and when at last we gain the topmost rung of the ladder, there is a glory that awaits us of which we never dreamed, when we stood faltering at the bottom of the stair.

VISCOUNT ALLENBY RECEIVES ARABIC BIBLE.

The American Bible Society presented a copy of an Arabic Bible to Field Marshal Viscount Allenby at its headquarters, Bible House, Oct. 4 as a token of esteem in which the victor of Jerusalem is held by Bible lovers. During the late war and thereafter Viscount Allenby showed unusual consideration for the religious susceptibilities of the multitude to whom the lands of the Bible are holy ground.

The presentation was made by E. Francis Hyde, president of the Society, before a large group consisting of the officers of the Society, the board of managers, noted churchmen and the Bible House staff.

"This Bible will be one of my most cherished possessions," said Viscount Allenby on receiving the red leather-bound specially inscribed volume. "Your president, Mr. Hyde, a non-military man," continued the Viscount in part, "has just given me the best definition of military strategy I have ever heard when he said that military strategy consisted of putting your own troops into the place where they will do the most damage to the enemy and the least to yourself. History repeats itself. We found the Bible to be a good guide in fighting a campaign in the Holy Land, for we traveled through the valleys, drank at the wells and went forward and backward over the great military roads used by the warriors and the people of long ago. But I hope I have seen the last of war."

Dr. John H. Finley, who escorted Viscount Allenby, made reference to his great love of the Bible, and recalled a night in Palestine when he and the Viscount had read the thirty-fourth and thirty-fifth chapters of Isaiah together.

The Arabic Bible presented the Viscount was translated by American and native scholars and published by the American Bible Society. Tens of thousands of copies have been issued by this Society and the British and Foreign Bible Society in the last sixty years.—American Bible Society Bulletin.

RECOGNITION OF THE HOLY GHOST.

By Dr. H. C. Morrison.

Much is said about the need of a great revival. Not only devout ministers and godly lay people, but prominent business men and thoughtful statesmen realize that the great need of the country is a turning away from the material, the mad hunt for wealth and pleasure, the lifting up of high moral standards, and the deepening of the spiritual life of the people.

Men are insisting that we must have a genuine revival of religion. Let it be understood that this must be Bible religion; the very beginnings of such a revival must be a recognition of the personality, presence and power of the Holy Ghost. We must unhesitatingly recognize the fact that without him there can be no genuine revival of religion.

Of course, we can have "decision days," and Easter morning gathering in of people; we may set on foot some sort of plan of visitation for persuading people that it is their duty to unite with some church, but this is not the sort of revival we need. We need a tidal wave of repentance, sorrow for sin, forsaking of it, and confession of it. We need mourning over past sins and earnest, importunate prayers for forgiveness. There needs to come down from God out of heaven an unearthly and powerful influence that will bring into the hearts of men a wholesome and reverential fear of God, hatred of sin and longing after salvation.

Such revival is impossible without the Holy Ghost. Our Saviour assured us that when he came into the world he would "convince men of sin, of righteousness and the judgment." This work cannot be wrought in the hearts of men without the Holy Ghost. He alone can awaken the heart, make it feel its burden of sin; make the inner man to understand his own wickedness, his lost condition, his need of a Saviour, and cry out to the Christ who alone can save. The Holy Ghost can so illuminate the minds of men that sin becomes hateful and righteousness beautiful and most desirable. The Holy Ghost can lift up before men the coming judgment. He can make them to feel the need of preparation for that great day when they must give an account to God for their past.

If we would have the revival that's needed, we must pray for, pray to, and seek the revealed presence of the Holy Ghost. We must preach to the people the fact of his presence and his office work in salvation. We must stir them up to seek him and to prepare their hearts to receive him. God so loved the world that he gave his Son Jesus to die for it. Jesus gave himself willingly to the agonies of the cross, and now the Holy Ghost has come into the world to administer the love of God, the merit of Jesus' sacrificial death, to illuminate with conviction, to stimulate saving faith, to regenerate the souls of men, to give himself in a gracious baptism of fire sanctifying, abiding, and empowering God's ministry and people for a mighty spiritual awakening in the world. Without him our successes only sink us into deeper failure. If we would have the revival so badly needed, we must have the presence and power of the Holy Ghost.—Editorial in the Pentecostal Herald.

MISSIONARY EDUCATION IN A NEW ORLEANS MISSIONARY CHURCH.

Rev. W. H. Giles, pastor of St. Mark's, New Orleans gives the following account of missionary education at his church. It has many constructive suggestions so we pass it on to you:

"The staff workers, with others who are Sunday school teachers at St. Mark's, have, as is the case in many other churches, done their share in the attempt to teach the regular quarterly missionary lessons and the designated study books on missions by way of the antiquated lecture method. However, we have used other methods and principles which to our judgment have proved profitable and enjoyable to both teachers and pupils.

"The few times within the past two years we have given time and energy to training the boys and girls to dramatize missionary lessons and stories have proved most profitable and enjoyable. When any means of participation by the children and young people are provided for, especially such as is offered through pageantry, the impressions and reactions desired are easily obtained, both by the entertainers and the audience. Through taking part in a pageant one of our boys was converted, joined the church, and accepted a call to the ministry. He is now a student in one of the church colleges, and is making a splendid record.

"Worth-while results have been realized through the presentation of the regular monthly missionary programs as worship programs when adapted to the departmental groups. Another means that has proved satisfactory is the presentation of the programs by a few or all the members of a certain class or department before the whole school. The boys and girls seem always to enjoy greatly these expressions of their fellow-pupils; and other responses are gratifying.

"Poster making is a fascinating project used by the boys and girls in all our departments; especially the intermediates and seniors. A set of open-faced rubber stencils, colored crayons for shadings and drawings, pictures clipped from magazines appropriate to the theme or program to be advertised can be used to produce most attractive and 'catchy' posters. The pleasure and profit the boys and girls get from this project is worth far more than the expense involved. Some of the best and most original posters made at St. Mark's have been on missionary themes.

"Electrical maps afford another worth-while project. A common panel of beaver board, water colors, a few ordinary brass brads to be used as markers and indicators, to which the cheap single insulated wiring is to be connected, a cheap buzzer, and a pair of dry cells make up the material needed to make the maps desired. The rest may be left to the originality of the young people, or some one who can draw a map. During one of our Daily Vacation Bible Schools a group of intemediates studied the Book of Acts, using a large electrical map to trace the missionary journeys of St. Paul. At the close of the school several of the boys could accurately trace the journeys, telling the incidents which happened in Paul's experiences at each place. One boy gave this demonstration at the close of the school, to the great delight of a large audience. There is no better method to teach Bible and missionary geography.

"We are fortunate in possessing a stereopticon machine, of which we have made much use in teaching missions. We have shown slides covering most of the mission fields of the world. Some of these we procured from our own General Boards, and others from private agencies. When the lectures are given in good style and not too long drawn out, the results of this method are very satisfactory. The investment in the machine and the time taken to put on the lectures right is well worth the price and effort of any church. The young people and old enjoy it, and the cause is promoted.

"As a result of the above methods used we have developed a fine missionary spirit at St. Mark's. Both children and older folk respond joyously and liberally to the missionary calls when called upon, for the reason that they know about the nature and needs of the call."—From Louisiana Sunday School Bulletin, September, 1928.

FROM THE PELICAN PINES.

By Rev. S. A. Steel, D.D.

Viney, the cook, got sick, as cooks will sometimes do, just like white folks. I can get breakfast and supper, but dinner is too much for me; so without consulting milady, I took the initiative, as Jonathan did at Michmash while Saul was taking his nap "under a pomgranate tree which is in Migron," and arranged to take our noonday meals at the college. I didn't consult milady because I was afraid she would say "no," (and her yeas and nays are ultamatums), fearing that it might embarrass Mrs. Sharpe, the matron, who might not like to break her rule and admit us, or appear unfriendly and refuse us. It happened just as I expected, and for a couple of weeks we have been enjoying Mrs. Sharpe's excellent fare and the delightful fellowship of President Rawlins' table. I sit next to him, milady sits next to the queen, and on the other side of the table sit three little monkeys! I call 'em that, because on my birthday recently they gave me, as a reminder of their regard, a blotter with three little red-faced monkeys on it, and the words, "Don't monkey with my desk." But I never saw a monkey that was any kin to these little ladies.

Well, this close contact with the college has given me an insight into the way it is run, the refined and stimulating atmosphere of the place, the elevating social environment in which a girl finds herself placed at Mansfield College. A girl must be mighty rough raw material if she does not come from that educational loom with the impress of noble ladyhood stamped upon her nature. The long history of the college, its traditions, the legends that cling like ivy to its walls, the high ideals, not only inculcated by its instructors, but lived before the pupils by the president, his family, and his teachers—all are in the highest degree favorable to the development of noble character. As I see the school assembled in the dining room they impress me as a large Christian household.

It is a pity that the Methodists of Louisiana don't put this noble institution on a broader basis. I think the true policy would be to correlate it with Centenary College. It is out of the question to think of removing it from Mansfield, or of letting it pass from the church it has served so well and so long. Let it remain where it is, and has been for more than seventy years, and continue a strictly girls' college; but so relate it to Centenary that the educational system may be unified and may co-operate without friction. It was a wise thing to move Centenary from its original location in Jackson, and to establish it in a growing city like Shreveport; but for many reasons a girls' college is better located in a smaller place and amid a refined community. Mansfield is a thriving little city. It has not yet arrived at the stage where the distractions of city life disturb the quiet ongoing of normal activities. During the adolescent period, when their habits are being formed, and when the gold of character is being wrought into permanent shape, girls are fortunate who are temporarily anchored in a quiet harbor like Mansfield, rather than in a turbulent port.

The campus never looked prettier. Peyton, the colored man of all work, is still there, though his faithful horse, after twenty-seven years of service, took a notion to die recently. But the mower keeps the lawn smooth and somebody's fine taste gives the place the appearance of elegance and comfort. The laughter of merry girls vies with the songs of the birds in the trees, and now and then the sweet notes of a violin enhance the charm, or that musical hypocrite, the victrola, spoils it! I wish every Methodist in Louisiana would take five dollars stock in this college, and the two vacant tables in the dining room would be filled with girls.

Milady forbids my talking politics at the table, and maybe that is well,- since the elephant is greasy and the donkey has cockleburs in his tail.

Mansfield, La.

TO THE PREACHERS AND MY FRIENDS OF THE NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Dear Brethren: Just how much I miss your fellowship I cannot begin to tell, but I do know that soon you will be gathering in your Conference, and for the second time in twenty-three years I will not be able to meet with you, and it does make me feel sad. And when you are there, don't forget to remember me in your prayer.

This is a great country in many respects, and the people are fine, but it can't be just like home without you all. I am trying to sell Watkins' Products for a living, and could do well if I were strong enough to do the work; but it seems to tire me so easily that I can't do much with it. So I guess I will have to give it up and find lighter work. I am doing some preaching on a mission charge, but it doesn't help out much on the living, for there is so much expense in serving it. I guess I won't take a charge here, another year, as I can't get a transfer here. There are fifty-two preachers besides myself trying to get into the Northwest Texas Conference. There is only one way to get in, and that is to get up a swap.

I hope every one of you will get just the charge you want; but if you don't, go to the one you get rejoicing, for I can tell you, a sorry one or a charge with poor pay, such as I had to serve the most of the time on account of my health, is much better than none at all.

I received only two answers to my other letter I wrote to you, so please do better this time. I am lonesome and want to hear from you.

Your brother,

J. G. JOHNSON,
Breckenridge, Tex., Box No. 1697

THE MISSISSIPPI AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES WILL PLEASE NOTE.

At the 1926 sessions of the two Conferences of Mississippi, commissioners were appointed to act in conjunction with like commissioners from the two Woman's Missionary Societies of the State in arranging for the employing of a religious secretary to look after the spiritual interests of our Methodist girls at M. S. C. W.

In the spring of 1927 this commission met at the pastor's study of the First Methodist Church of Columbus, Miss. Organization was effected and Miss Pauline Wynn, daughter of Dr. R. H. Wynn, of the Louisiana Conference, was employed as the secretary.

Miss Wynn was on hand at the opening of the 1927-28 session and soon effected an organization among our Methodist students known as the Methodist Student League of M. S. C. W. A most wonderful work was done by Miss Wynn during the 1927-28 session. Through this League Miss Wynn is training and teaching these girls of our church Methodist doctrines, Methodist polity, and Methodist aspirations for the kingdom of God throughout the earth. While these girls are being trained by the State for the higher intellectual obligations of life, we Methodists of Mississippi, through Miss Wynn, are training them for more efficient work in our church when they shall have finished their college work.

Miss Wynn was back in Columbus, just before the 1928-29 session, with a committee of girls from the Methodist Students' League to assist in getting our Methodist girls properly placed and to give them a hearty Christian welcome to the Methodist family of M. S. C. W.

Your commissioners have just had a meeting of the commission at which Miss Wynn made her report. Those present were more than pleased and satisfied with the work Miss Wynn is doing for our girls at M. S. C. W. We believe there is not a more important work being done by Methodism in the State than the work being done by Miss Wynn at M. S. C. W. In looking after the spiritual and moral good of our 575 Methodist girls in that institution.

Within the next two weeks a report of the work being done by Miss Wynn will be made through these columns. It is hoped that this report will be read by all Methodists of Mississippi.

J. TILLERY LEWIS,
For the Commission.

WHEN HOPE WAVERS.

Wavering in faith or hope or love is impossible if our faith and hope and love are on the right foundation. "Let us hold fast the confession of our hope that it waver not," says the apostle. Then he gives the reason for such absolute assurance: "For he is faithful that promised." The slightest sign of wavering is a doubting of his faithfulness, not ours. Hope, then, has moved off the Rock. James, in giving the secret of obtaining things from God, says to be sure to ask in faith; and he adds two words that explain what the faith that gets things is—"Nothing doubting." To hesitate or waver in the slightest degree is to change "faith" to another word of five letters "doubt." And love never wavers; it beareth all things, believeth all things, hopeth all things, endureth all things . . . never faileth." Faith, hope, love, these three abide, because their alpha and omega is God; in him they have their source, their continuance, and their object.—The Sunday School Times.

SHARP CRITICISMS AND GLOOMY PREDICTIONS.

By Bishop Warren A. Candler.

At the Protestant churches sharp criticisms have been leveled during the last several years. Gloomy predictions with reference to their future have been published.

Some of these sharp criticisms and prophecies of evil have been marked by such manifest malevolence that they lie outside the limits of respectful consideration. But there are others which deserve the most careful attention; for they issue from too friendly and intelligent sources to be lightly esteemed and deliberately ignored.

In the October numbers of three leading magazines appear notable articles which pious Protestants will do well to read. One of these articles is entitled, "The Decline of Protestantism;" another is under the caption, "Why the Protestant Church is Dying;" and the third discusses "The Vanishing Clergy." The two last mentioned are from the pens of Presbyterian ministers.

To what church, if any, the writer of the first named artfcle belong is uot stated. From the reason he gives for "the decline of Protestantism," one might Infer that he is a Roman Catholic. He attribntes in the maln this alleged decline to the Protestant assertion of the right of individual judgment in matters of religions faith. After mentioning other causes for the decline of Protestantism which he thinks he sees, he closes his piece as follows:

"With all these causes operating to bring about its decline, there remains still another which has not been mentioned, but which is perhaps more interesting to consider—if not more powerful—than the others. I refer to the seeds of self-destruction which were within Protestantism when it emerged from the womb. For its fundamental principle of ratlonalization, that is to say, the right to doubt and the duty to reject all that could not be proved by reason—bequeathed without condition to every one as a method of righteous escape from Catholicism's requirement of nnqualified and nnfaltering faith—has finally been carried to its logical and inevitable conclnsion. Millions of men and women, nominally Protestant (i. e. neither Catholics nor Jews) now deny the reasonableness of the institution that taught the valldity and righteousness of doubt; now reject as unsusceptible of rational proof, and therefore untrne, the very essence of the so-called "Protestant Faith." Protestantism has, then, to employ a phrase of a modern philosopher, finally rnn ont of Its course and turned against itself. Beset by myriad adversaries, its fiual act is to rnn npon Its own sword."

If thls view of the disintegrating and destructive power of the freedom of faith be accepted, we mnst expect at an early day the death of all forms of Christianlty, Protestant and Roman Catholic, and the religion of the "Orthodox Greek Church;" for men will not renonnce reason and commit intellectual suicide. Reason must not be nsed nnreasonally, but it cannot be safely renounced. Tertullian said: "Reason Is a divine reality; and God, who purposed, disposed, and ordered nothing without reason, wills that all things should be treated and considered with reason." To the same effect speaks the great Bishop Butler in his justly famous work, "The Analogy of Religion, Natural and Revealed, to the Constitntion and Course of Nature," sayiug: "I express myself with caution, lest I should be mistaken to villify reason; which is indeed the only faculty we have wherewith to judge concerning anything, even revelation itself."

Religion will never decline by the reasonable use of reason; and it always suffers wheu it exalts reason to such an elevation that its reasonable exercises ceases.

The writer of the article, "The Vanishing Clergy," lives at Buffalo, N. Y., and for the most part invokes the statistics of deuominations In the North to show that Protestantism is declining because its clergy is decreasing.

For example, he does not mention the Southern Presbyterian Church, with an Increasing mlnistry; but he shows that in 1925 the Northern Presbyterian Church had 10,017 preachers, which number had fallen in 1927 to 9,961, showing a loss of fifty-six iu two years.

He deals with the Baptists as one body, although the Baptists of the South outnumber the Baptists of the North. He does not mention the Methdists at all, among whom is found no decrease in their ministry.

In the denominations he mentions, all of which are Northern bodies, he finds a decrease of 721 preachers during 1927, although their gains in membership amounted to 151,944.

The article entitle, "Why the Protestaut Church Is Dying," is from the peu of a Northern Presbyterian missionary on furlough in the homeland, and its outlook also is from the standpoint of the northern churches. It is a vigorous paper, and the writer points out the mortal ailments of his "dying" Protestantism as follows:

"1. Fatty degeneration of the heart (wealth, luxury and ease).
"2. Pernicious anemia (lack of blood in theology and the fight with sin).
"3. Cerebro-spinal meningitis (destruction of backboue and brain center).
"4. Cancer (nnbelief in the supernatural).
"5. Neritis (super-sensitiveness to criticism and ridicule)."

He has put his finger npon the diseased spots In the Protestant bodies of the North, especially when he directs attention to their "lack of blood in theology" and their "unbelief in the supernatural."

These maladies are not so prevalent among the churches of the South, although they are beginning to appear in some of the Southern churches, issuing in a great measure from Northern theological seminaries, and a few Southern institntions which ape Northern schools of theology.

Hereby the churches of the South may well be warned. They cannot live on ratlonalism, which is the unreasonable use of reason.

The most rationalistic denomlnatlons in America show the greatest decline in both their membership and their ministry.

Who expects a revival of religion nnder a modernistic preacher? When did snch a preacher, through his ministry, ever add a soul to the number of the saved? His faithless preachments are, and ever must be, forceless and fruitless.

An authoritative gospel is required to bring men to repeutance and subdue and extirpate sin In their lives.

Upon this point the author of the artlcle, "Why the Protestant Church Is Dying," speaks with great positiveness and potency. Revertlng to his five-fold diagnosis he says:

"The fourth disease diagnosed is the most deadly of all, 'cancer (unbelief in the supernatural).' An Almighty Father, a Divine Saviour, an Omnipresent Holy Spirit, a Holy Catholic Church, the forgiveness of sins, the resurrection of the body and the life everlasting are the supernatural foundations on which the church is established, and even the happy 'communion of saints' constantly calls for supernatural graces. Any skepticism as to the supernatural eats at the very vitals of the church's life and if not checked will inevitably result in death. Yet our days have seen 'Christians' advocating the theory of 'a limited God,' a Saviour who is merely 'super-man,' a 'spiritual Influence,' from inheritance, association and education, a church which is but a social fellowship, a forgiveuess freely granted with no atonement or regeneration, a survival of the human spirit only in a very uninviting paradise little better than Nirvana. And as for the daily living of a supernatural life in a delightful communion of saints, they do not even dream of it, but seem to prefer a natural life iu a very nnharmonious communion of sinners, all of them snatching for life's largest plums with little regard for one another or for the interests of the kingdom of God."

As the only cure for the spiritual ailments he diagnoses, the writer declares that a general revival of religion is the divine remedy for present pathological conditlons in the Christian church, and he goes on to say:

"That the church passed through a much longer and far more hopeless period of decline and decay in the Middle Ages, but came forth into tremendous vigor of a new life in the Reformation. It seemed again almost ready for its demise at the passing of the eighteenth centnry, but a great revival of religion came in response to the incessant prayers of the few faithful, and produced not only a mighty reaction to the well-nigh discarded faith, but such a movement as the world has not witnessed since Christianity's earliest days toward the taking of the gospel to the nations 'sitting in darkness and in the shadow of death.'"

But how can such a revival begin under the preachments of rationalists? Through them it cannot come at all.

The revival of religion which our country needs so sorely at this time must begin In the churches of the South and through their ministers, most of whom have not yet been paralyzed hy the unbelief of Modernism.

It behooves these churches and preachers in the South to lay aside all side issues of every sort and devote themselves wholly to spiritual efforts to rescue the nation and spread Scriptural holiness over the land.

ON A KOREAN CIRCUIT IN CALIFORNIA.

By C. K. Yim and Tark Kim.

(Note to Editor: Rev. C. K. Yim, Korean Methodist pastor in charge of the church at Oakland and at Sacramento, Calif., is supported as a special by the First Methodist Church of New Orleans, La., of which the Rev. J. B. Peters is pastor in charge.—Bureau of Specials.)

We had our Annual Confreence (the California Oriental Missions) last Monday In San Francisco. In this Conference, Oakland, Sacramento, Stockton, Reedley, and San Francisco were represented as far as the Korean missions are concerned. The reports from these various missions showed a remarkable progress in our Korean missions during last year—an increase in the membership, financial condition, and the loyalty and enthusiastic activities on the part of our people. This is true particularly in my district—including Oakland, Sacramento circuit and Stockton-Reedley—which gained nearly 15 per cent in membership and about 100 per cent in finances, or over $2,000 raised for all purposes.

High Lights on the Charge.

In the early part of July, Oakland church joined the San Francisco church in extending a great welcome to the twenty-two Sunday school delegates from Korea to the World Sunday School Convention in Los Angeles. The joint welcome meeting of nearly 200 members had greatest enthusiasm and love for the delegates from our home land. In return, we received great inspiration from those who brought us most blessed messages. Oakland church sent Mr. E. H. Kim and me to the convention as delegates to help our Korean delegates for their success.

A few weeks ago Bishop Hay held the anniversary meeting or service of Oakland and San Francisco, and gave most inspiring messages, in which I was interpreter. It was my first time for us here to have Bishop Hay. The meeting brought out over 100 people, besides children.

Oakland-Sacramento circuit raised over $1,100 for all purposes this year. This sum was almost three times as much as the year before. About 15 per cent of the membership increased. Church buildings were improved. The ladies in our church newly organized a Woman's Missionary Society. The membership is over ten. Rev. David Lee, of San Francisco church—the man loved universally by the Koreans all over this country—passed away last June. Oakland-Sacramento churches and San Francisco, together with Korean National Association and other fraternity organizations, took charge of this funeral as a "public funeral," which was most magnificent and the greatest one we ever had among the Koreans.

Stockton-Reedley gained more than 10 per cent in membership and raised nearly 75 per cent more than the previous year.

Our Educational Work.

We have four Sunday schools with more than 100 pupils and twelve teachers. Oakland, Stockton and Reedley schools are conducted purely in Korean. They are making a great progress.

Sacramento Sunday school is only one to be conducted in English. But it will be changed into Korean. In Stockton we have a children's club, the aim of which is to develop the character of self-expression of the children.

In our Sunday school of Stockton, one girl and one boy are asked to pray in beginning of the school and the closing two or three children under 7 are asked to tell the stories they heard in their classes. They are doing wonderfully well. Now all other schools will follow this method also.

Mr. Tark Kim opened summer languages and daily Bible school in Reedley this summer for two months. The result was very remarkably successful in every way. All other Sunday schools are doing wonderfully well. We have now three language schools, three teachers, with about seventy-five pupils, who are making a great progress in learning Korean and the history and geography. We have raised nearly $700 for the support of these language schools during the last fiscal year.

Oakland, Calif., Sept. 5, 1928.

SEASHORE DIVINITY SCHOOL IN 1929.

All undergraduates of the Alabama, the Louisiana and the two Mississippi Conferences will be specially interested to know that in 1929 Seashore Divinity School will hold steadily to its habit of giving instruction and examination in the full Courses of Study in all four classes and for Admission on Trial.

Action taken by the General Board of Education limiting such work when done by the "Pastors' Schools" has caused some of our young men to fear a change of policy on the part of Seashore Divinity School. We have never had any intention of changing. For twenty years we have been showing others how to do the job. Besides, Seashore Divinity School is not a "Pastors' School," but is operated under Directors elected by the Alabama, the Louisiana, and the two Mississippi Conferences.

A recent ruling of the Commitee of Appeals (Aug. 23, 1928,) on the above mentioned action of the General Board of Education states specifically, "it (the General Board of Education) does not have authority to limit the number of credits for undergraduate courses which may be obtained in a single two weeks' session to two units."

Let all the undergraduates in the four patronizing Conferences take their courses of study in 1929 at Seashore Divinity School from June 11 to 25, inclusive, where they will have the added helps and inspiration of competent instructors and happy student fellowship—besides the platform addresses. There they will have, not merely the book, but the real helps and atmosphere of a school.

But remember the requirement for examination is that the full course of study must be carefully read before the session of the Seashore Divinity School.

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON FINDINGS FOR THE CONFERENCE OF PASTORS AND LAYMEN OF THE BATON ROUGE DISTRICT HELD AT HAMMOND, LA., SEPT. 18, 1928.

The program of our great church, as authorized by our General Conference, presents a challenge to the faith, liberality and consecration of all our people. Our opportunity to co-operate is presented in the assessments levied upon each charge, and our failure to meet these assessments in full hinders to that extent the various enterprises in which we should have a vital interest. The progress of the kingdom of God is delayed if we fail to do our full share to meet these solemn obligations.

We rejoice that reports from all sources concerning the business conditions in this part of the South are full of encouraging promises. The leading business journals of the country are saying that we are rapidly recovering from the depression of last year, and that we have every reason to expect more prosperous conditions throughout the coming year. The plans of the Federal Government to make the repetition of such a flood impossible should give us heart.

We find, from the reports of the pastors, that our Baton Rouge District is making progress. There were many encouraging statements made in the meeting. However, it was evident that our pastors, official members, and all others connected with our churches will need to hestir themselves to reach the goal we have set for ourselves in the matter of paying the salaries of the pastors and the assessments in full.

Therefore, it is the sense of the meeting that our presiding elder, Rev. L. W. Cain, should send to all the charges a sufficient number of copies of this paper for it to be put into the hands of all official members. In the love of the kingdom of our Lord, and in a just pride in the program of our church, and with zeal for the best interests of the Baton Rouge District, we urge all our people to do their best to see that our obligations are paid in full.

We suggest that every charge be organized to bring this subject to the attention of every member; that responsibility lists be placed in the hands of canvassers, with the request that they lay this cause upon the hearts of all our people, and that everybody be given an opportunity to co-operate in this part of our Master's service.

The time is short; the need is great; the program is compelling; our Master is expectant. Think of how many different forms of service may be rendered and of how much good may he accomplished by a contribution to the Conference assessments. We suggest that where it has not been done, some form of information concerning the various causes be prepared for distribution, that our people may be informed as to the causes to which their contributions will be applied. People give more liberally, as a rule, when they know the ways in which their gifts will be used for the Master's kingdom.

MISSION SPECIAL, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

I would like to close my report on "The Mission Special" Nov. 3, in order that I may get it ready for the Annual Conference; therefore, I appeal to those who still have money to send to the treasurer to get it to Brother Broadfoot by that date, or earlier, if possible.

I expect to have an itemized report made for Conference, showing the amount paid by each charge, and I would appreciate getting every payment on this report so I may include it Nov. 3; however, if you just cannot pay it until you get to Conference, bring it with you, and I will change the report by adding the amount you bring.

The amount received to date does not equal the amount paid last year by our Conference. Please send your remittance as early as possible.

Yours in the service of him who said, "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to all people."

W. D. HAWKINS, Missionary Secretary.

TO THE PASTORS OF THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Dear Brethren: Some of you did not understand just the information I desired with reference to the Missionary Committee for the next Conference year. I would like for you to send to me the name and post office address of each member of the Missionary Committee for each church in your charge; also indicate who is chairman and who is Voice Agent (not for the Missionary Society, but for the Missionary Committee) for each church.

You may want to use the same persons, or a part of them, or you may want to have an entirely new committee for the coming year; whatever you decide about the personnel, the committee should be named to serve during the new Conference year. If you have this committee selected, I would be glad if you would send me their names and post office addresses so that I may cultivate them before the District Missionary Institutes are held. If you have not appointed your committee, please do so and send as soon as you appoint them. Please mail me your entire list for each church, indicating chairman and Voice Agent at each church at your earliest convenience.

Thanking you for your splendid co-operation during the year and praying God's richest blessings upon you and your work in these closing days of our Conference year, I am,

Sincerely yours for service,

W. D. HAWKINS, Missionary Secretary.

THE OXFORD UNIVERSITY CHURCH MATTER —AN OPEN LETTER.

Dear Brother Caffey: Your letter to hand. I will endorse any proposition for caring for the Methodist students in the University of Mississippi that is commended by the Board of Missions and the Board of Education.

I doubt the wisdom of your eleemoysnary plan, as proposed. To issue bonds is but to give a partial payment-mortgage against the normal assets of the Conference and church, easily voted on, but hard to pay off, when all other claims just as urgent must be met.

We must provide other ways of raising funds for outstanding worthy causes, but out of the line of the usual budget, for two reasons:

1. The proposition must have the informed assent of the church laity, who will pay the bill.

2. To put it in the budget, of which only about 68 per cent is now being paid, will only add to the present bad business methods.

The merits of the cause are not questioned. Its success depends upon the plan adopted. Would it not be better not to bond it, but ask the Board of Missions and the Board of Education to send a man into the field for the funds desired? While we think it not the best way to build to meet the Oxford University Methodist students' need by bonds, and while we believe a better way is to send a man into the field for funds to meet this very urgent demand upon the church, we will cooperate with any plan that will meet the needs and is properly commended to the Conference.

Yours cordially,

Como, Miss. C. M. CHAPMAN.

NONE BUT CHRIST.

When Martin Van Buren lay dying, his last words, as the spirit took its flight, are said to have been: "There is but one reliance." In life, as in death, this is a true saying. There is but one reliance, but, thank God, it is an all-sufficient one —the Arm of Omnipotent Love. "Therefore," let us say with the ancient psalmist, "will we not fear, though the earth be changed, and though the mountans he moved in the heart of the seas." As we enter upon the new year, let us face its possibilities with a confident faith. For, though it is not true, alas! that "all's well with the world," it is true that "God is in his heaven," and in his earth as well, and is our ever-present refuge and strength. What more do we need, what more can we ask, as we step across the line into 1929?—Standard.

THE HEALING SHADOW.

O Lord, who art as the Shadow of a Great Rock in a weary land, who beholdest thy weak creatures weary of labor, weary of pleasure, weary of hope deferred, weary of self; in thine abundant compassion, and unutterable tenderness, bring us, I pray thee, unto thy rest. Amen.—Christina G. Rossetti.

DID YOU KNOW?

By Rev. R. H. Wynn, D.D.

Did you know "that no Board of Stewards or pastor shall incur any indebtedness for the payment of the preacher's salary or the benevolences, which indebtedness shall be left upon the charge for his successor to raise?" Borrowing money from the bank or elsewhere to secure a report of collections in full, when, as a matter of fact, they have not been paid or subscribed, is in opposition to our law, and constitutes an unjust charge upon the budget of the following year.

Did you know that, beginning with this year, "the requirements for admission on trial into the traveling connection, so far as academic training is concerned, shall be at least two years of work in a standard college, or its equivalent; provided, that under special conditions, clearly recognized as unusual, the Annual Conference may by a two-thirds vote admit a candidate who does not meet this academic standing, in which case the presiding elder or the Committee on Admissions shall furnish to the Conference a statement of particulars showing definitely in what respects the case is special and unusual?"

This rule was enacted in 1926 with the provisions of a two-year period of grace, and is now in operation. (See Discipline, Par. 824.)

REPORT OF THE CONTINUATION COMMITTEE, WORLD CONFERENCE ON FAITH AND ORDER.

The attitude of the Continuation Committee of the World Conference on Faith and Order, which is now in charge of the Church Unity movement launched a year ago at Lausanne, Switzerland, regarding sectional and inter-denominational plans for unity, is revealed in a report just issued by the Secretariat of the Conference. In a resolution adopted at meetings held from Sept. 6 to 8 in Prague, Czechoslovakia, copies of which are about to be sent to the one hundred or more churches represented at Lausanne, the committee states its position as follows:

"That the Continuation Committee reaffirms the foundation principle of the World Conference on Faith and Order, as expressed in the initiatory resolution adopted at Cincinnati in 1910, that the ultimate union of the churches requires 'the clear statement and full consideration of those things in which we differ as well as those things in which we are at one.' It is of the opinion that, while particular schemes of reunion must certainly be left to the churches themselves acting on their own initiative, the movement on Faith and Order, in carrying on the work of the Lausanne Conference, should endeavor to bring inter-church enterprises for reunion to the knowledge of its adherents in all the churches, thus encouraging the organic growth of church unity."

The committee took this action in reply to a communication received from the American Episcopal Church, which pointed out the danger of "letting immediate and partial solutions distract us from the fullness of the reunion which is our aim." This communication went on to say that "many sincere and earnest proposals for immediate action are being urged. It is greatly to be desired that those churches that find such proposals consonant with their principles should act on them without delay. But there will still remain the underlying differences of opinion that emerged in our discussion at Lausanne, particularly with regard to the ministry, the sacraments and the nature of the church. We must keep the way open to deal with these questions by patient study and conference until their solution can be found and the way open for full and complete unity of all the churches."

The Business Committee, consisting of nineteen Americans, which met at intervals during the past year in New York, reports that the principal work of the year has been to distribute the reports of the Lausanne Conference to the participating churches, to foster local and sectional conferenees and to supervise the extensive correspondence carried on by the Secretariat with churches in all parts of the world. Literature has been circulated in three languages, English, French and German.

As evidence of the progress of the Church Unity Movement, the report calls attention "with especial satisfaction and joy" to the meeting of the International Missionary Union, held at Jerusalem at Easter-time this year, and heartily concurs in the conclusions reached at this meeting concerning the vital importance to church union of effective co-operation of the indigenous churches on the mission field.

The Continuation Committee confirmed the election of Dr. S. Parkes Cadman, of New York, and Bishop William F. McDowell, formerly of Pittsburgh, but now of New York, as members of the Continuation Committee, and elected Dr. Alfred E. Garrett, of Philadelphia, as a representative of the Society of Friends.

The American members of the Continuation Committee who attended the Prague meeting were: Dr. Henry A. Atkinson; Ralph W. Brown, general secretary; Dr. Cadman, and Bishop McDowell.

"NO SUBSTITUTE FOR THE CHURCH."

It has been said that there is "no substitute for the church." Is the statement true? Will it hold water in these days when everything truly Christian is under an unprecedented fire of criticism? Is there any better agency than the church for calling men and women to righteousness, for inspiring wholesome social movements, for bringing in the reign of God upon earth?

We answer emphatically, there is no substitute for the church. Other means aplenty have been tried in the task of promoting human goodness, and they have made their contributions. But can these agencies be compared for one moment in fruit-producing power to organized Christianity? Culture clubs, lodges, ethical movements, have stirred slumbering ideals in the hearts of men, but they have notoriously been unable to furnish that sustaining power so necessary for the continuous realization of those ideals. It is clear, likewise, that from the church has come, directly or indirectly, the inspiration for almost every worthwhile philanthropy and reform. Bible teachings as expressed through the church are slowly but surely saving the world. Organized Christianity, moreover, never before came so near proclaiming the gospel just as it fell from the lips of Jesus as it is doing to-day.

But beyond the influence of the church upon the individual soul, what is to be said of the exercise of the power of Christianity in the wider ranges of life? What of social issues? of politics? of international problems? In every one of these fields the gospel is the leaven of righteousness—a fact that is becoming more and more apparent to every thinking man with the passing of the years.

What a demonstration of the truth of the assertion that there is no substitute for the church to be found in the missionary enterprise. Judged from the standpoint either of actual converts and their record of achievement or of the transforming influence of Christianity upon other religious and ethical codes, the value of the church's organized movement for world evangelization is proved beyond all doubt. In fact, just now the success of the church in its foreign work has been so great that we are at the turn of the road. The churches in China and India particularly have so caught the spirit of the gospel that they are almost ready to take leadership and themselves to carry the flaming torch forward and upward to the higher peaks of Christian achievement in their native lands. There never was a more critical time in the history of Christian missions than is faced by church leaders in this delicate period of transition. Now, if ever, the helping hand must be strong and firm. We are putting national churches on their feet. Giving should be generous beyond all precedent. Praying should be persistent and earnest for the welfare of these new churches just emegring into the light. * * *.—Editorial in Zion's Herald.

HE WAS A GENTLEMAN.

A few days ago I was passing through a pretty, shady street where some boys were playing at baseball. Among their number was a little lame fellow, seemingly about twelve years old—a pale, sickly-looking child, supported on two crutches, who evidently found much difficulty in walking, even with such assistance.

The lame boy wished to join the game, for he did not seem to see how his infirmity would be in his own way and how much it would hinder the progress of such an active sport as baseball.

His companion very good-naturedly tried to persuade him to stand at one side and let another take his place; and I was glad to notice that none of them hinted that he would be in the way, but that they all objected for fear he would hurt himself.

"Why, Jimmy," said one of them at last, "you can't run, you know."

"Oh, hush," said another, the tallest in the party; "never mind; I'll run for him," and he took his place by Jimmy's side, prepared to act. "If you were like him," he said aside to the other boy, "you wouldn't want to be told of it all the time."

As I passed on, I thought to myself: "That boy is a true gentleman."—Exchange.

A STORY OF LIGHTS.

One night, when the sun had disappeared and the birds had tucked their heads beneath their wings to rest, one of the night birds flew close to an electric light.

"Of what use are you?" asked the bird. "You give so little light compared with the sun."

"I do the best I can," said the light. "Think how dark this corner would be if I were not here! People walking and driving might run into one another, and some one might get hurt."

"That's true," said the bird, and away he flew. Then he came near a gaslight, standing apart from houses and busy streets.

"Of what use are you?" asked the bird. "You do not give as much light as the electric light."

"I do the best I can," said the light. "Do you not see that steep bank just beyond? If I were not here, some one might fail to see it and fall."

"That's true," said the bird, and away he flew. Soon his sharp eyes spied a lamp in a window.

"Of what use are you?" asked the bird. "You do not give as much light as the gaslight."

"I do the best I can. I am in the window to throw light down the path, that Farmer Brown may see the way when he comes home. I do the best I can."

"That's true," said the bird, and away he flew.

But again his sharp eyes spied a light—a tiny candle light in a nursery window.

"Of what use are you?" asked the bird. "Your light is so small. You do not give even as much light as a lamp."

"I do the best I can," said the candle, "and I can easily be carried from room to room. Nurse uses me when she gives the children a drink of water at night or sees that they are snugly covered up in bed. I do the best I can."

"That's true," said the bird; and away he flew, thinking, as he saw the many lights here and there, little and great: "All are helpers."—Kindergarten Review.

COME LIFE, COME DEATH.

Is it not beautiful to think that the very same act of mind and heart by which a man commits his spirit to God in life may be his when he comes to die? . . . It is wonderful to think that life and death, so unlike each other, may be made absolutely identical in the spirit in which they are met.—Alexander Maclaren.

The Home Circle.

"THAT WHICH IS LEAST."

A crumb will feed a tiny bird;
A thought prevents an ugly word;
A seed brings forth full many a flower;
A drop of rain foretells a shower.

A straw the wild wind's course reveals;
A kind word oft an old grudge heals;
A beacon-light saves many a life;
A slight will often kindle strife.

A humble hand may alms bestow;
A goodly life marks heaven below;
A little child confounds the wise;
A lark sings nearest to the skies.

A sunbeam makes the earth rejoice;
A flower will teach, without a voice;
A brave man's arm will right the wrong;
A simple prayer will make us strong!

I'M SORRY.

"Oh, I'm so sorry. It was stupid of me. I hope you'll pardon me."

Nettie Lowe had, through thoughtlessness, pushed another girl's elbow and caused her to spill on her new dress some of the tea she was drinking. The girl jumped to her feet quickly, a retort on her lips. But at the sight of the look of contrition on Nettie's face and the words of apology she forced a smile.

"Of course, I guess there's not much harm done. It will dry out all right."

Nettie's face cleared and she walked on. But behind her the girl who had accepted the apology looked thoughtful.

"I wonder how many times a day Nettie has said, 'I'm sorry'? Have you ever counted them?" said a girl who was standing near.

"Yes, and written them down in a book, with the reasons therefor. I thought it might be interesting to check up on her and I've done so. She'd be surprised if she should see it."

"She might," the others agreed, "and then again she might be mad."

Belle Brown nodded.

"Well, anyway I'm going to show her the book," maintained Belle. "I think it will do her good to see it, whether she likes it or not."

Belle was as good as her word, and the next time she saw Nettie she held out the book.

"Here, Nettie, I thought you might be interested in this," she said. Then without giving the other girl a chance to reply, she turned and walked away.

Nettie opened the book wonderginly. As she turned the pages her look of wonderment increased. For this is what she saw:

"The I'm Sorry Record. This contains the number of times Nettie Lowe is sorry."

Then appeared entries like these: "Forgot to bring the book she promised Natalie Clark and caused her inconvenience. Was sorry, but that did not help matters any." "Bumped into Hilda Foote because she failed to look where she was going. Was sorry, but that didn't keep her from crushing the eggs that Hilda carried."

So she read on, item after item. Every one of them recorded an accident that might have been avoided with a little more care. When she finished the reading she closed the book hard. Her face was a trifle red and she appeared to be angry. Going to her home, she shut herself into her room. But when she next appeared the angry look had been replaced by a thoughtful one.

That afternoon she went over to Belle's house. Belle saw her coming and was a bit apprehensive. Had she blundered after all and taken the wrong method? It was only her honest attempt to help Nettie that had made her do this thing, but perhaps she had been wrong about it. She hoped that Nettie had not come to break off her friendship.

But Nettie was not at all angry. Instead she smiled as she handed the book back.

"You must have put a lot of work on this, Belle," she said. "I'm returning it to you. I wish you would keep on making a record every time you hear of my saying I'm sorry because I have done something that would not have done had I had my wits about me. I promise you that I'm going to make your duties very heavy."

Since that time there has not been a single new entry in the book.—Albert R. Rand, in Kind Words.

AH LING FINDS A FRIEND.

Little Ah Ling's father and mother died when he was three years old and left him to the care of a cousin. The cousin had no time for a boy with a lame back, who ate food but could do no work. His own children were strong and straight and could help him in the field, so he could raise many vegetables and make much money.

All Ah Ling could do was to lie on the bed, and each year his back grew worse. When he was six years old, he was so bad that his cousin was sure he was going to die. And it wouldn't do at all to have a poor sick boy die in his house. A Chinese man couldn't have that happen. Ah Ling's spirit might stay around the house and bother him.

So he took Ah Ling to a place where people were carried to die if they had no one to take care of them. Then he went away and left the little boy lying all alone on a mat on the floor.

It was very lonely there, with only an old man on the opposite side of the room for company, and the floor was cold and hard. A teapot of tea stood on the flood beside the mat, but Ah Ling felt almost too weak to reach out and pour a little for himself to drink.

The day passed at last, and night came. The night was lonelier than the day, for it was dark and there were not sounds on the street outside. And besides, it was cold. But at last he fell asleep, and when he awoke it was broad daylight and the sun was shining. He poured out a little of the cold tea and drank it, then he lay quiet on his mat.

By and by the sun shone in at the door and it felt warmer. For a long time Ah Ling watched the sunbeams dancing on the floor. Then a shadow darkened the doorway, and a man entered. He was a tall man and stooped a little as he came through the low doorway. When he straightened up, as Ah Ling saw that he was not a Chinese, but a white man—a foreigner—and the little boy was frightened.

But how strange! The man spoke to him in his own language and his voice was very kind. He took the thin, little hands in his and felt the poor, lame back, then he smiled ever so kindly and went away.

Before long, a Chinese man came in a sedan chair, picked little Ah Ling up and carried him away in his chair. Ah Ling had no idea where he was going, but he was too weak to care.

Presently, he found himself before a great big building, into which the man carried him. It was a hospital, but Ah Ling knew nothing about hospitals. After he was carried in, he was given a nice, warm bath, dressed in clean hospital clothes, tucked into a clean bed, and given something hot to drink. It was so lovely and comfortable in bed that he fell asleep and slept for hours.

When he awoke the strange, foreign man stood by his side. It was the doctor who looked after the patients in the hospital. He smiled at Ah Ling and held his hand awhile, then went away again. Every day he came for a few minutes, and every day Ah Ling grew more fond of him. He grew more fond of the nurses, too. They fed him and talked to him and told him stories, and as soon as he was able, taught him to sing the hymn, "Jesus Loves Me." Little Ah Ling could understand the part which said, "They are weak, but he is strong," for he was very weak, but he could not understand the part about Jesus loving him. No one in all his life had ever loved him.

"But, yes, I love you," the head nurse said. "We all love you."

He only looked at her gravely and answered, as he always did, "Nobody loves me."

"Oh, yes, we love you. Jesus loves me."

"Oh, yes, we love you. Jesus loves you," she told him again. But he shook his head

"Nobody loves me," and he looked very little and lonely as he said it.

However, after a while he learned that they did love him, and that Jesus loved him, and he learned to smile at people and to reach up his arms to be taken up.

And, little by little, he grew stronger until one day they took him up to the operating room and the kind doctor performed an operation to make the lame back better. He was very weak after the operation, but after awhile he began to grow stronger, and after a long time there came a day when he stood up alone. Great was the excitement among the nurses. And later, when he was able to walk about—slowly, slowly at first, and afterwards faster and surer—there was rejoicing in the hospital.

All these months he had been learning of the kind heavenly Father and his care, and by the time he was able to walk he knew that the heavenly Father had looked down on him in love and made him well. So every night, before he got into bed, he prayed a "Thank you" prayer to God.

"Thank you heavenly Father, for making my back well so I can walk, and thank you Jesus, for loving me. Thank you for the kind doctor and the nurses. Help me to be a good boy. Amen."

When the cruel cousin heard that Ah Ling was still alive and getting strong, he came to take him away to work in the field again. But the doctor would not let him go.

"No," he said, "he is not able to work in the field. And, anyway, you did not take care of him when he was ill and needed you, and now I am going to take care of him and send him to school."

So Ah Ling went away to school to study, and some day, he says, he is going to be a doctor, too, and help to make lame backs well.—Presbyterian Advance.

A STORY.

He was six years old and was coming to the end of a longer journey than the average person of ten times that age has ever taken. There was a large tag dangling from the lapel of his little coat.

"This boy is six years old. He is Chinese."

Both were obvious. The card said his uncle in Sixth Avenue, New York, had put him on the Norfolk steamer, and his father was awaiting him in Norfolk. The little fellow did not seem perturbed in the least. He appeared to be taking things philosophically as the Celestial always does.

When the steamer docked, the boy was shown the way to the gangplank. And some of the passengers were interested to see the greeting between the father and son. But the lad did not seem as excited as he should have been.

There was the father standing at the foot of the gangplank. The lad walked down as calmly as if he had been returning simply from a day's visit somewhere nearby, and had not just come to the end of a journey of many thousand miles.

The father spoke two words—two singsongs word—that no one but the boy could understand. The little fellow spoke two words of his own, and that was all. There was no embrace.

The father looked about quizzically, and then turned to a man who had assisted the boy down the gangplank.

"Where's the blanket?" the elder Chinaman inquired.

"What blanket?" the stranger asked.

"The boy had a blanket when he left China," the Chinaman said, in almost perfect English. And then the two went on.—Exchange.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Dr. E. K. Means, pastor of Court Street Methodist Church, Lynchburg, Va., will be the host of the Virginia Conference this year.

The official board of the First Methodist Church, New Orleans, recently unanimously requested the return of Rev. J. B. Peters as pastor for another year.

The official board of Rayne Memorial Church, this city, at a recent meeting unanimously requested the return of Dr. J. B. Mitchell as pastor for next year.

According to the World Wide Sunday School News, the Sunday school enrollment of the world is 33,014,952. Of this number 19,970,629 are in North America.

Judge Percy Bell, teacher of the Big Brothers' class, Greenville, Miss., was the teacher of the great Character Builders' class, Memphis, on Sept. 30. Judge Bell is one of our great Sunday school teachers.

As the result of a month of personal evangelistic work, the pastor, Rev. Leon I. McCain, added fifty-four members to the First Methodist Church, Minden, La., the names of which are reported in the bulletin for Oct. 7.

Sister Eliza Turner, Sarepta, Miss., in renewing her subscription to the Advocate, says: "I do hope I can take it while I live. I am 71 years old and in bad health. I never get to go to church, and it is a great joy to me to get the paper."

A delightful occasion on Friday evening of last week was a fellowship gathering of the members and friends of Carrollton Avenue Methodist Church, this city. A fine meal was served and an interesting program rendered.

Rev. Fred W. Campbell, local preacher of the New Orleans District, is a student in the Baptist Bible Institute, this city, taking courses that will qualify him for admission on trial in the Louisiana Conference. He is employed in the local post office, working at night.

We are glad to learn that the advance sale of Dr. Duren's new book on Asbury has been very satisfactory. The special price made by Dr. Duren to persons in Mississippi, Louisiana, and Georgia, holds good only so long as the supply allotted to him by the publishers lasts.

At the fourth quarterly conference of the First Methodist Church, Ripley, Miss., of which Rev. H. P. Lewis is pastor, reports indicated that all claims would be met in full at Conference, this in spite of an increase of $600 in the budget. Pastor and people have had a delightful year together.

The bulletin of the Crawford Street Methodist Church, Vicksburg, Miss., for the week of Oct. 14, Rev. J. L. Neill, pastor, is an eight-page pamphlet in which the pastor discusses very effectively the Christian minister as to his calling, his character and qualifications, his duties and his message, and the Biblical authority for his taking part in political affairs.

Rev. W. L. Linfield, our pastor at Ocean Springs, Miss., paid the Advocate office an appreciated call on Tuesday morning of this week. He and Mrs. Linfield were in the city to be with their daughter, Mary Barrow, who underwent an operation for appendicitis last week. We are glad to report that she stood the operation well and is recovering rapidly.

Protection Against Old Age

We learn with sorrow of the death of Brother B. T. Clements, Lisbon, La., on Oct. 5. He was 81 years old, and for sixty years had been a member of the Methodist church at Lisbon. He is survived by his widow, his death breaking a happy union that had lasted fifty-nine years. Mrs. Clements, who is a shut-in, requests the prayers of all Christians in her great sorrow.

The editor of the Advocate spent a very delightful day on Wednesday of last week in company with Rev. L. W. Cain, presiding elder of the Baton Rouge District, and Rev. A. L. McQueen, pastor of the Springfield charge, trying to land some of the elusive fish that abound in the beautiful waters within the bounds of the Springfield circuit. The effort was fruitless, but "a good time was had by all."

At the recent session of the Pacific Conference, Rev. A. Inman Townsley and Rev. H. W. Jamieson, both formerly of the Louisiana Conference, "swapped" appointments, Brother Townsley going from San Bernardino to Wesley Church, San Francisco, and Brother Jamieson going from Wesley Church to San Bernardino. Both these brethren are rendering efficient service in the Pacific Conference.

Rev. L. W. Cain, presiding elder of the Baton Rouge District, writing under date of Oct. 12, says: "The first meeting of the 'Flying Squadron' at Walker last night was a pronounced success. All the six churches were represented except one, the smallest. There was a large attendance, splendid collection, and every one of the churches represented said they expected to pay the Conference collections in full." Fine!

A new book, "Tinker and Thinker: John Bunyan," is just from the press, written by Dr. W. H. Nelson, editor of the Pacific Methodist Advocate. Dr. Nelson is a former Louisianian, who has made a name for himself by his brilliant pen. This volume will, we are sure, add to his prestige. It will sell for $1.50. The book is especially appropriate at this time, 1928 being the three hundredth anniversary of the birth of John Bunyan.

The following distressing news comes from Rev. J. O. Ware, our pastor at Edwards, Miss.: "Mrs. J. E. Crisler, the mother of Dr. C. W. Crisler, of Hazlehurst, Miss., had the misfortune on the 8th inst. to fall and break her hip. Sister Crisler is in her ninety-third year. She has long loved the church and has taken pleasure in keeping in touch with it as well as with current events. All that is possible is being done for her comfort."

Dr. Charles S. Macfarland, General Secretary of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, has issued an emphatic denial to the newspaper report that Dr. S. Parkes Cadman, President of the Federal Council, is to receive a salary of $25,000 as radio preacher over the network of the National Broadcasting Company. The sum mentioned is the entire budget for the radio service, including musical talent, program, and administrative expense.

The New Orleans Standard Training School began its eighth session at Rayne Memorial last Sunday afternoon. More than 100 students were reported as enrolled for credit, and others were expected to join the classes. The following teachers were present: Mrs. John A. Rice, Tulsa, Okla.; Mrs. G. R. McDonald, San Antonio, Tex.; Dr. R. E. Smith, Shreveport; President D. B. Raulins, Mansfield; Rev. O. W. Moerner, Nashville. Rev. B. C. Taylor presided at the opening session, and Rev. Guy M. Hicks conducted the devotional exercises. Mr. J. H. Carter, educational director, made official announcements.

Dr. W. Winans Drake, pastor of Trinity Church, Ruston, La., writes under date of Oct. 10: "Our community is saddened by the passing away of one of our most useful and best known Christian citizens in the death of Mrs. Alice Cary McKinney, on Monday evening, Oct. 8, in the Highland Sanitarium, Shreveport. We buried her yesterday among a crowd of sorrowing friends from various sections of the State. She was a devoted member of our church, president of the State W. C. T. U., a useful citizen. A more extended notice will follow." The Advocate extends sincere sympathy to the sorrowing loved ones and friends.

Louisiana Avenue Methodist Church, New Orleans, is experiencing the thrill of achievement. The old wooden church building, which has been little used for many years, has been remodeled and made into beautiful Sunday school rooms and an auditorium. This move meets a long-felt need and will now take care of the Sunday school in an adequate way. Formal dedication services were held last Friday night. A unique part of the service was the dedication of each room separately by the pastor, Rev. B. C. Taylor. Fifty New Cokesbury Hymnals were donated to the school by members of the congregation and friends, who were charged 35 cents for the privilege of writing their names therein.

On Aug. 23, 1927, Bishop Warren A. Candler celebrated his seventieth birthday. On that occasion a notable group of friends assembled at his home in Atlanta and presented him with a Franklin automobile as a token of love and esteem. Appropriate addresses of greeting were made by distinguished visitors, to which Bishop Candler made characteristic fitting reply. The remarks made on that occasion by the visitors and the honored Bishop have been put in pamphlet form and published by the friends of the Bishop. We are happy, having been present on the occasion, to be the recipient of a copy of the pamphlet, which serves as a reminder of a very beautiful incident.

BOARD OF EDUCATION, NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

The Board of Education of the North Mississippi Conference is called to meet in their room at Pontotoc, Miss., on Wednesday afternoon, Oct. 31, at 2:30 o'clock. This is a very important meeting and requires that every member should be present. We will at this meeting discuss, and prepare for presentation to the Conference, the report of the committee appointed at our last Conference to suggest adequate means whereby to endow Grenada College.

J. TILLERY LEWIS, President,
Board of Education.

TOO MANY BRAKES.

There are hundreds of Christians to-day, or church members at least, who are of little use to the kingdom because they continue to hold as their philosophy of wealth, "What is mine is my own—I'll keep it." They are the emergency brakes of the church, locked tight against any forward movement because traveling takes gas and gas costs money. Whatever progress the machine makes comes from working the engine hard enough to pull the car in spite of the dragging brakes. That naturally makes them hot and the consequent noisomely pestilential odors offend the sensibilities of every one in the neighborhood. I have known dozens of God's children who might be powerful influences for good but for their stingy philosophy of life.—W. K. Anderson.

EVIL COMPANY.

Sophronius, a wise teacher, would not let even his grown-up sons and daughters associate with those whose conduct was not pure and upright.

"Dear father," said the gentle Eulalia to him one day when he forbade her and her brother to visit the ill-behaved Lucinda, "dear father, you must think us very childish if you imagine that we should be in any danger."

The father took a dead coal from the hearth and handed it to his daughter. "It will not burn you, child; take it."

Eulalia did so, and her hand was soiled! and, as it chanced, her white dress also was blackened.

"We cannot be too careful in handling coals," said Eulalia in vexation.

"Yes, truly," said the father. "You see, my child, that the coals, even if they do not burn, blacken; so it is with the company of the vicious."

From the German.

MY NEIGHBOR.

What is meant by our neighbor we cannot doubt; it is every one with whom we are brought in contact. First of all, he is literally our neighbor who is next to us in our own family and household; husband to wife, wife to husband, parent to child, brother to sister, master to servant, servant to master. Then it is he who is close to us in our own neighborhood, in our own town, in our own parish, in our own street. With these all true charity begins. To love and be kind to these is the very beginning of all true religion. But, besides these, as our Lord teaches, it is every one who is thrown across our path by the changes and chances of life; he or she, whosoever it be, whom we have any means of helping—the unfortunate stranger whom we may meet in traveling, the deserted friend whom no one else cares to look after.—A. P. Stanley.

A noble and Christian character ended on earth on Sunday, Oct. 7, when the soul of MISS BARBARA LUTZ departed from this life to the Great Beyond. She was a faithful member of Second Methodist Church, New Orleans, and sister of Rev. Albert S. Lutz, presiding elder of Alexandria District. Her illness, which begun a few years ago, caused her great suffering, but she bore her cross with patience and never lost her Christian attitude and faith in God. She was always cheerful when receiving visitors, and friends that visited her during her illness were inspired through her wonderful courage and Christian faith. She realized that she could not recover from her illness and was submissive to God's will. On Oct. 8, at 10 a. m., impressive burial services were held at Second Church, and a great number of her friends were gathered there, and so the remains of our dear "Miss Barbara," as she was known to many, were borne and laid to rest in St. Vincent de Paul cemetery.

"I cannot say, and will not say,
That she is dead, only just away.
Just away where no shadows fall,
In perfect peace awaiting all,
Longing perhaps in her love to say,
'I am not dead, only just away.'

"With a cheery smile and a wave of the hand,
She wandered off in an unknown land.
Think of her far away, my dear,
As fair in the land of there as here,
Think of her just the same, I say,
She is not dead, only just away."

LULU WENDT,
A. Friend.

The death of PRENTISS McLEOD on the morning of Aug. 18, 1928 at Fondren, removed one of Saucier's highly beloved citizens and brought sorrow to a host of friends who loved his noble qualities. He was a member of one of Noxubee County's oldest and most highly esteemed families, a son of the late Dr. J. F. and Mrs. Mary Dantzler McLeod, born near Macon on Dec. 27, 1867, where he was known and loved for his many fine traits of character. He was reared under the influence of Christian parents and grew up into a Christian life, being a member of the Presbyterian church since early youth. He was educated in the schools of Macon and Moss Point, and spent a great portion of his life in Moss Point in business, after his father's death, which occurred in his youth. He was married on Sept. 9, 1909, to Miss Cordelia Roan, of Lorman, Miss. To this union were born three children, Prentiss, Jr., Wilton Brinton, and Mary Elizabeth. Saucier had been his home for several years before his death. For the last year Prentiss had been in declining health and was taken to the sanitarium at Fondren, in hopes of regaining his health, several weeks before death claimed him. Besides his widow and children, he leaves two sisters to mourn their loss, Mrs. Ben D. Silva, of Patterson, Calif., and Mrs. Henry E. Harlan, of Rogers, Ark. To the sorrowing friends and relatives he leaves all the influence and memories of his kindly deeds and noble character as an inspiration and inheritance; and if we live as God directs, we will meet him some day where all is joy and peace, where good-byes are never said. The knowledge that he is in heaven makes heaven a nearer and dearer place to us. "We cannot say, we will not say, that he is dead, he is just away," for,

"Fading like the stars in the morning,
Losing the light through the glorious sun,
So do we pass from the earth and its toilings,
Only remembered by what we have done."

A FRIEND.

A good woman is gone. GRANDMA PUSEY ended a long and useful life on Sunday evening, Sept. 30, at her home in Ponchatoula, La. She was a native of Sallisbury, Md., having been born there in 1838, where she spent her girlhood days. Her maiden name was Sallie W. Bradley. She was married to Andrew J. Pusey in 1860. They moved to Indiana, where they lived until 1878, and in that year they came to Ponchatoula, La., and lived here ever since. They bought the Lige Settoon farm lying east of the Ponchatoula River, and made it one of the best farms in the neighborhood. They were virtually the pioneer strawberry growers of this section. Two boys and one girl were in this home. One son, Wilson J. Pusey, died in 1903. The other son is well known, being Andrew J. Pusey, our townsman; and the daughter is with us also, being Mrs. Helen Weitzel. Mrs. Pusey was 90 years, 3 months and 20 days old. Her husband preceded her to the grave, passing away in 1904. Mrs. Pusey was active in church work before her declining days, and will be sadly missed by her friends and relatives, all of whom were attentive to her during her last days on earth. Her daughter and husband, and many granddaughters deserve special mention for their untiring attention to her while sick. She united with the church when but 14 years old, and at the time of her death was a devoted member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. She was buried in the Ponchatoula cemetery beside her husband, the funeral service being conducted by her pastor, Dr. Briseoe Carter, assisited by Rev. J. W. Booth, and Rev. A. J. Coburn, surrounded by many friends, who virtually banked the grave with flowers. May we all exemplify her example, that at the resurrection morning we shall meet her again.

A FRIEND.

MRS. SARAH A. JENNINGS, nee Harris, was born in Union County, Ark., May 13, 1849. Her parents moved to Claiborne Parish and settled in the vicinity of the little town of Arizona, when she was but 3 years of age. She lived practically all of her life in this community. She was married to Joseph W. Jennings, Sept. 13, 1868. She was the mother of six children, four of whom survive her. She joined the Methodist church, with her husband, in 1885, under the ministry of Rev. J. W. Medlock, of blessed memory throughout Louisiana Methodism. She departed this life Aug. 23, 1928, and was laid to rest in the Homer cemetery, beside her beloved husband, who had preceded her just eight months before. It was my blessed privilege to have been an inmate of her home for several months in my boyhood days. Many of the most sacred memories and valued lessons of life circle about this humble, godly home, of which she was the heart and soul. She was of the old Southern type of home-makers, now so rapidly vanishing from our land. She was a devoted, loyal wife and companion to her husband, sharing with him the burdens and responsibilities of life, and keeping for him a comfortable home with all that term implies. She was a devoted, loving mother, giving, at all times, the best of her heart treasure to the comfort, joy and happiness of her children. She was a true, consistent Christian, a loyal, devoted member of the Methodist church. In this blessed home family prayer was the constant and invariable rule, and when for any reason the husband and father was not there, she would conduct this service. While never possessed of much of this world's store, there was a gentleness of nature, a sweetness of disposition, a richness of character, that far surpasses all the wealth this world can give. It is such mothers as she that have made this the land of the free and the brave, that have enriched, beyond the power of words to tell, this glorious life of ours. She left to mourn her loss four children, a number of grandchildren, a host of friends and relatives. The children are: Ed and Olin Jennings and Mrs. Edgar Maddox, all of Homer, La., and Mrs. Mack Parker, of Benton, La. To these we extend our deepest sympathy. They mourn, but not without hope, for they are assured that beyond the skies their beloved parents have reunited, and are now building another home, "not made with hands," and await their coming with a welcome far beyond our power to conceive.

ROBT. W. VAUGHAN.
Ruston, La.

On the morning of Aug. 25, 1928, our dear mother fell on sleep in Jesus, to await that glorious resurrection morn, when the souls of the saints shall be gathered to God. Mother had reached her seventy-fourth mile post, and it can be truthfully said these years were not spent in vain. Mother was kind and affectionate. She loved her family with an ardent love. She gave her children the best advice possible, bidding them walk circumspectly before the world. She took great pride in telling others that her children never gave her any trouble. She reared a large family—eight boys and two girls—and with this large family she was ready on the Sabbath day for church and Sunday school. She never said, "Children, go on to church," but, "Come, let's go." Mother joined the Methodist church about forty-five years ago, and lived a consistent Christiann to the end. She loved the church and her pastors. They were welcome in her home. They found a friend in her. She was loved by all who knew her, and made friends wherever she went. Two years ago, while in the hospital, the nurses would gather in her room to hear her cheery laugh, because she helped them to see things in a different light. They hated to see her go. Oh, we know the angels were waiting at the pearly gates when her coming was announced. She suffered a great deal for two or three years, yet never complained. She bore her sufferings with Christian fortitude. She often expressed a desire to go home to God, and when the end came she quietly and peacefully went away. Oh, how we miss her; miss her visits to our homes, her love and advice, her cheery disposition! While she is separated from us now, thank God we will be with her again some day. Mother was twice married. The first time was to Henry G. Carter, he dying in just a few years, leaving her a widow with two small children. She again married William J. Scott. They lived happily together for about thirty-five years. She was again left a widow, but her children were all grown, so she made her home with them till the end came. Those who survive her are: Rev. H. E. Carter, Strongs, Miss.; H. H. Carter, Morton, Miss.; E. H. Scott, McComb, Miss.; S. S. Scott, Columbia, Miss.; W. V. and O. C. Scott, Fernwood, Miss.; J. H. Scott, Sumrall, Miss.; Mrs. A. W. Tucker and Mrs. C. E. Fink, New Orleans, La.; besides two brothers, two sisters and a host of friends. Rev. C. M. Crossly, of Columbia, with the assistance of Rev. W. H. Lane, Sumrall, Miss., and Rev. Mr. Price, pastor of the Baptist church, conducted the funeral service. "She is gone, but not forgotten." One who loved her.

ZONE MEETING AT CAYUGA, MISS.

The auxiliaries of zone 4, of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Vicksburg District, met at Cayuga, Thursday, Sept. 27. This was an unusually interesting meeting because of splendid attendance and a fine program. Mrs. L. W. Alford, of McComb; Mrs. W. T. Hegman, of Holly Bluff, and Miss Lill Hartwell, of Port Gibson, were the principal speakers, and their messages brought help and inspiration to the women present.

During the social hour, at noon, all enjoyed a lovely lunch, spead under the trees. It was provided by the Cayuga ladies, and was a very delightful feature of the day.

The visitors united in thanking Cayuga for the many kindnesses extended, and all felt that it had been a great privilege to have been present.

These meetings have a wonderful influence in drawing our women together and inspiring them to better work in their home auxillaries.

KATE DRAKE,
Zone Secretary.

LAKE MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

Early in the year our society decided to try mite boxes, and not to resort to suppers, bazaars, or other means to raise money. So the boxes were secured and distributed, and we planned to open them once each quarter, at our social meetings.

At our first social meeting we had Mrs. A. S. Oliver and Mrs. Bessie Hopkins with us, and they added greatly to the interest and enjoyment of the meeting. Mrs. Oliver brought a message full of enthusiasm from the Council, and Mrs. Hopkins spoke lovingly and helpfully of the missionary and his work. Following this, the boxes were opened, and the proceeds were $60. We felt encouraged, as we hadn't ever made that much during the first quarter. A plate lunch was then served during a social hour.

Our second social meeting was unique, for the men entertained us, telling about women of the Bible. Several splendid papers were read, and also a poem written by Mrs. M. L. White. Then the boxes were opened. We had $20; but a large number of the boxes were not sent in. Another unique feature awaited us in the lunch room, where a lovely birthday cake was cut honoring one of our members.

We're keeping busy. You'll hear from us again. Here is Mrs. White's poem:

Our Mite.

Dear friends and co-workers, we greet you;
We're glad of your presence to-night;
We'll try to say something inspiring,
Though our theme is so small—just a mite.

We call ourselves working for missions;
The work of the saved for the lost;
The work that brought Jesus from heaven
To redeem us; we know what it cost.

We have this great country he gave us,
This wonderful land of the free,
That we may show forth his salvation
To heathen lands over the sea.

O, may we not fail in this duty,
While we of his bounty partake—
May we each take upon us the burden,
And help save the world for his sake!

And now we will open our boxes,
With a prayer that each nickle and dime—
With his blessing and guidance—accomplish
Much good in a work so sublime.

We cannot do much—just we women—
But then we should never forget
The poor widow's mite and its message,
We honor her memory yet.

And here's to the men in our number:
You've stood by us all the way through;
And whatever our efforts shall merit,
A large share comes justly to you.

We get along fine in fair weather,
Without ever a halt or a hitch;
But we need you—we can't do without you—
When "Lizzy" goes into the ditch.

Let us pray to the "Lord of the Harvest"
To send workers to fields that are white—
Some are ready and waiting, O help us
To do what we can with our mite.

TO MEET IMMEDIATE NEEDS.

We must first recognize their immediacy. We must pick out of the many things that need to be done the things that clamor to be done now. While the wise man always takes the far-away look, he is also ready to see the task next at hand. A great part of life consists of meeting crises and emmergencies. The sad although not disheartening fact appears that we do not always have time for careful consideration. The duty just ahead strikes us full in the face. We cannot back away from it; we must go through with it.

The science of first aid gives us our clue. By following certain well-established principles that have proven themselves in practice what we may at least meet the crisis with intelligence and effect. Here are some of the needs that confront us in our organized work: Are our committees in shape to work and are they working? Have we systematic plans to meet and to win new members? A survey of our own attitude toward our Christian work. Are we the slaves of fitfulness and the up-and-down habit of work? Are we losing our grip upon ourselves by the attrition of carelessness or indulgence? Are we becoming sickly in our Christian life by malnutrition and the lack of spiritual air and exercise?

Be prepared! Let this slogan be our incentive. If, in our everyday life, we gird on the whole armor of God, we will be ready when the call to battle comes. Be prepared by taking the whole matter and laying it in his hands and by awaiting his word of guidance. "This is the way, walk ye in it!" By meeting immediate needs, prayerfully, diligently and cheerfully, we will be equipping ourselves for the greater task on ahead and for the larger achievements, too.—Christian Herald

TERRIBLY ILL

Kentucky Lady's Health Was Very Bad. Had Severe Pains and Could Not Sleep.

Lexington, Ky.—Mrs. J. H. Nichols, who lives at 513 Elm Tree Lane, this city, says that Cardui has been of valuable assistance to her on two occasions, which she tells about below:

"Some few years ago, my health was bad. I had very severe pains in my sides. My nerves were in a terrible condition. I could not rest.

"The lower part of my body was very sore. I could hardly stoop over to lace my shoes. I would have to put my foot on a chair. I did not feel like eating, and did not sleep well at all at nights.

"A friend of mine recommended Cardui. I began taking it and saw quite an improvement in my condition. I kept it up until I felt strong and well."

About a year ago, Mrs. Nichols says, she found herself in a nervous, run-down condition. "I took Cardui again," she adds, "and it helped me wonderfully. It is a splendid tonic."

Thousands of women have written to tell how Cardui helped them to get rid of pain and suffering. Cardui is a mild, medicinal tonic, made from purely vegetable ingredients. At all drug stores. NC-190

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

Mrs. H. J. Norris, superintendent at Oak Ridge, writes: "Please send me the leaflet helps you have for 'Childhood and Youth Week.'"

First Church, Baton Rouge, with Dr. Frank L. Wells, pastor, and Mr. W. S. Holmes, superintendent, is to be congratulated on the work they are doing for their young people in Sunday school, especially the students from the university. Mr. Charles H. McEuen is director of the Student Work.

On Sunday, Oct. 21, "Young People's Day," Dr. J. Marvin Culbreth, Secretary of Religious Education, of Nashville, Tenn., will visit Baton Rouge and speak to the young people.

Mrs. H. A. McDonald, secretary-treasurer of the Sunday school at Rayne, sends in Sunday School Day offering. The Rayne Sunday school is one of our schools which never fail to send an annual offering.

The New Orleans District elected its Sunday school officers at its rally at Rayne Memorial Church, Friday night, Oct. 5. The officers are: Mr. E. E. Cayard, District Secrtary; Mrs. Clarence Snelling, Elementary Superintendent; Rev. B. C. Taylor, Adolescent Superintendent; Dr. R. S. Crichlow, Adult Superintendent; Mrs. D. L. Campbell, Vacation Bible Schools; Mrs. L. D. Chaffee, Missionary Superintendent.

On Sunday, Oct. 7, we visited in the Ruston and Shreveport Ditsricts. We reached Haughton by auto in time for the 11 o'clock service. We spoke to an attentive congregation on "Religious Education." The pastor is Rev. E. W. Day, and the superintendent, Mr. A. G. Nelson. We enjoyed noonday hospitality at the home of Mr. and Mrs. McDay. Mrs. McDay is a daughter of the late Rev. N. S. Cornell, who was a member of our Annual Conference during his lifetime. Mrs. McDay knows the art of ministerial hospitality.

Rev. A. K. McLellan, who accompanied me in the auto, is conducting a Cokesbury School at Haughton this week.

We reached Shreveport at 3 p. m., in time to be at the opening of the seventh session of the Standard Training School, which promises to be larger than last year. The courses are: "Bible," Dr. R. E. Smith; "Pupil," Mrs. R. E. Smith; "Junior Lesson Material," Mrs. G. R. McDonald; "Sunday School Management," Rev. Clem Baker; "The Home in Society," Mrs. John A. Rice.

At night we visited Mangum Memorial Church. The superintendent at this church is Mr. A. M. McGuirt. He was reported in the sanitarium for a serious operation. Later we visited him in the sanitarium and found him doing as well as could be expected, with hope of a recovery. Mr. McGuirt is a member of our Conference Sunday School Board.

We reached home from North Louisiana Tuesday by way of Ruston. The hills and valleys in this section of the State are beautiful in the fall.

Dr. W. W. Holmes, presiding elder of the Shreveport District, stated this year is his twenty-fifth anniversary as a Methodist minister. We extend him our congratulations and best wishes.

At the beginning of the new Sunday school year we hope many of the schools will put on a local training class. Dr. W. W. Drake reports he has organized a class for a course on the New Testament. Hope a number of our pastors will try out a training class this year. Dr. Drake's class follows the prayer meeting hour on Wednesday night.

Rev. W. L. Doss, Jr., was a welcomed visitor in our office recently. No presiding elder in Louisiana Methodism looks after the Sunday school interest more diligently than does the Lake Charles District presiding elder. He has taught in two of his District Training Schools this year.

Rev. Claude K. Smith, of Pineville, has set aside this week for "Childhood and Youth," and is holding services daily, with the hearty co-operation of his young people.

We hope to receive many reports on "Childhood and Youth Week" from the local superintendents and pastors during this month.

Rev. M. S. Monk, of Monroe, was a welcome visitor to our office to-day. He is delighted with his faculty for Training School. He reports a meeting of the district Sunday school staff recently held in Monroe.

C. D. ATKINSON,
Conference Superintendent.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES.

Sunday School Day offerings are coming slowly. We are more than anxious about this important matter. Think of it—there are 412 Sunday schools, and at this writing 264 Sunday schools have not responded. Several have told us that they were going to, and several said they would send in the money soon. This cheers us, but we had so hoped to have at least 300 schools to respond. You can figure how far behind we are.

The glad thing about this matter, so far, is that we are only $100 behind the offering at this time last year. This means that we are getting larger contributions from those Sunday schools sending in the money. We trust that this will continue. The Sunday School Board launched its work with the expectancy of $1,000 more from this source than ever before. We are evidently not going to get as much as last year. This will be a great disappointment, and, to say the least, rather discouraging. I am trusting in you, my brothers, to give us a helping hand.

If you have been reading the missionary items, you have been impressed with the great need of the cause. In our own Conference, your Sunday School Board has rendered aid in fifty places never before helped. We appreciate this opportunity to serve. Fifteen Standard Training Schools were held. These schools cost money. These schools were well placed as to reaching a large number of people.

Money to do missionary work comes partly from your missionary offering. We had hoped that this offering would be larger this year than last year. We checked up on the 13th, and we discovered that it would take at least $2,000 to make the offering to missions from our Conference equal the offering made by the Conference last year.

One Sunday school was saving all its fourth Sunday offerings to send them in at one time, when the bank failed; now where is the money that should be in the work and multiplying itself?

Forty-seven Sunday schools which sent in an offering to missions last year have sent in nothing this year. My, Is this the mind of the Conference towards missions?

One hundred and sixty-seven Sunday schools in the Conference have sent no mission offering. How can we ever hope to have a missionary people with this state of affairs?

There is one fourth Sunday left—October 28. I hope that every Sunday school in the Conference will have the missionary program on this day and immediately send in their offering.

The work of the Dual Extension Secretary alone is worth every dollar of this money, if nothing else was done with it. But there are many other things accomplished with this fund here in Mississippi, as well as the vast amount of good in Europe.

Now is the time for all good Methodists to come to the help of the Sunday School Board.

Your Board's report will be the best in the history of the work in many, many particulars; but in two or three we won't be able to make such a good showing unless these last few weeks show a decided improvement.

Pray for the workers.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

If the Sunday school superintendents care to have a Methodist Worker's Guide similar to the one sent to them a year ago, let me know. If it has not been worth anything to them, we will not go to the expense of sending them out. A post card saying you want it or you do not want it will be sufficient.

The West Point school observed Childhood and Youth Week and took as their "Forward Step" the installing of the New Cokesbury Record Books. Send in your reports if you care to be on the list of the "faithful."

We held an institute at Moorhead on Thursday, the 4th. Six schools were represented. Pastors, superintendents, and teachers took a deep interest in the items discussed. Rev. J. D. Wroten, District Superintendent, planned the program and did the advertising with the assistance of Rev. J. A. George, pastor of the Moorhead church. Mrs. A. C. Johnson, Jr., of Doddsville, the District Elementary Superintendent, entered into the work heartily.

On Sunday, the 7th, we held a similar Institute at Eureka, on the Shuford circuit. Rev. A. C. Johnson, pastor, and Rev. A. T. Clanton, District Superintendent, planned this meeting. At the institute held at Moorhead we had an attendance of about forty; at this institute we had around three hundred, dinner on the ground. The meeting with the small attendance was much more satisfactory and we accomplished more good. We need to hold something like ten institutes in each of the presiding elder's districts so we can reach every school in the Conference.

Institutes have been conducted by Rev. C. A. Parks, Rev. W. R. Hammontree, Rev. E. G. Mohler, and Rev. H. R. McKee. The attendance upon these meetings was good, and at every place where the meetings were held the people requested that the meetings be held again.

On Tuesday, the 9th, the pastors held their monthly Association at Free Springs, on the Tyro circuit. The outstanding address of the occasion was made by Rev. B. G. Whitehurst, on "Scriptural Baptism." His address equaled the addresses made by Rev. T. M. Dye in his palmy days. Brother Whitehurst was clear, forcible, witty, eloquent, and deeply religious. The pastors and the visiting members enjoyed the occasion immenseiy. The building at Free Springs is a two-story concrete, imposing and attractive. When Rev. A. M. Bennett was pastor of this charge several years ago we held an institute in a very poor, one-room building. The leaven of the gospel lodged in many hearts that day, and the outcome of the institute is this creditable house of worship. The institute has a big place in our work.

We have checked up the school at Shersrd. The thirteen officers and teachers of this school hold eighty-one credits; eleven have been taken this year. All the teachers except three have one or more credits, all save one have read one or more approved books during the year. This is a small school, but it is doing a wonderful piece of work. Back of all their enthusiasm and constant progress is their interest in the training of their workers. On Promotion Day, the teacher of the Intermediate-Senior group of boys and girls had a map of Paul's journeys held up before the congregation; one pupil gave a brief outline of Paul's life, another told of his first journey, another of his second, and another of his third and fourth journeys. The older members of the school were amazed and delighted at this excellent piece of teaching.

The school at Duncan was checked up and found to be in a prosperous condition. One of the outstanding features of this school is the progress that has been made in conducting the worship programs from Sunday to Sunday. Rev. R. G. Lord is pastor of this school, and Mr. B. F. Wylie is superintendent. These two men have the work at heart. They rejoice together at the response they are receiving from the teachers and members of the church. Under the leadership of Brother Lord, the work always prospers. it is a joy to be associated with such a man.

THE NEW REGULATIONS REGARDING ADOLESCENT REGISTRATION.

The churches with two or more Wesley Bible classes in the Adolescent ages will do well to organize these classes into a Department and maintain their touch with the Nashville headquarters through departmental agencies. This is now possible. The registration of the Department in place of the class enables the class to have more freedom in their plans and in their work than otherwise. It is understood, of course, that if any class desires to be registered, this new regulation does not interfere with them. This means to me that if the Department is not registered, the class may be; and if the Department is registered and the class desires to be, it may.

I am calling attention to this matter separate from the Conference notes because now is the time of reorganization and re-registration. The Intermediate classes should change their officers every three months. If registration as a Department, this may be done and only the Sunday School Department notified of the change without notifying Nashville, which interrupts the mailing list and the records kept. This is only one illustration of the value of departmental registration.

The following is the graduated scale of the fees and dues for departments with varying numbers of classes:

1. For Young People's and Adult Classes: $1 registration fee and annual dues required of an individual class.

2. For Young People's Departments and Senior-Young People's Departments: $2 for departments of two to four classes; $3.50 for departments of five to seven classes; $5 for departments of more than seven classes.

3. For Intermediate Departments, Senior Departments, and Intermediate-Senior Departments: $1 for departments of two to four classes; $1.75 for departments of five to seven classes; $2.50 for departments of more than seven classes.

4. For Intermediate-Senior-Young People's Departments: $1.35 for departments of two to four classes; $2.35 for departments of five to seven classes; $3.35 for departments of more than seven classes.

We are anxious that each church have some young person in charge of the departmental registration of that church and to be the one officially responsible for this work. I am hoping that this will appeal to the young people and the Sunday school at large and that we will have a very fine response to this.

It is gratifying to me to know that we have eighty-two Adolescent classes in good standing at this time, which puts us thirteenth in the list of Conference classes. I hope that our standing next year with the new regulation will be far ahead of this.

There is no need in our whole organization as great as the Adolescent need. The freedom and initiative given to the class by this new regulation will be thoroughly appreciated by the young people themselves.

INSTITUTE RALLY AT STRAYHORN METHODIST CHURCH.

The churches under Rev. A. L. Davenport's charge met Sunday, Sept. 30, at 10 a. m., at Strayhorn for the purpose of a Sunday school rally. The program, which was in charge of Rev. Mr. McKee, of Hernando, proved inspirational to all those who attended.

In the beginning, suggestions were made for an ideal Sunday school, and plans to this effect were carried out in the actual teaching of the lesson, in the report of the secretary, and in a closing song.

Among the important speakers of the day were: Professor E. E. Sanders, of Strayhorn; Mr. Johnson, Rev. G. A. Baker, of Coldwater; Rev. A. L. Davenport, of Arkabutla; Mrs. G. A. Baker, of Coldwater, and Mr. J. M. Abercrombia, of Sarah.

The gist of the program was as follows: "The Value of an Institute" was discussed in that it gives the pastor an opportunity to meet workers of their charge; provides a definite time for a regular coming together of the workers; increases the spirit of unity; stimulates a healthy rivalry among the students; gives to each school the best that's being done; contributes to the development of the workers, and keeps before the public the needs and the work of the Sunday school.

"The Training of Children in Worship" was ably discussed in that the importance of this training should be appropriate for the child.

In the topic, "The Evangelism of a Sunday School," the fact that the beginning of a Sunday school should be in babyhood was stressed in that then was the time to get the child in the right line of thought.

Results as to the number of schools represented were as follows: Strayhorn; 72; Arkabutla, 4, and Hunter's Chapel, 7.

A "Demonstration of a Sunday School Survey" was then given.

Thoughts along the line of getting the right kind of foundation, the aim and real work of the Sunday school, and the responsibility of living right before the younger people were discussed in the topic, "Can We Have Successful Instruction Without Expression in Religious Education?"

Good plans were given for a C-type school, under which were suggestions for the different classes: a Home Department, programs for the special days, and the Workers' Council.

A round table discussion as to the particular needs of a Sunday school was given in five-minute talks.

An abundant dinner was served on the ground at 12:30 p. m.

Before the adjournment, 100 per cent charts (Sunday school attendance) were presented. It was decided to have another rally day at Hunter's Chapel.

Mr. J. H. Abercrombia, of Sarah, was elected president, and Professor E. E. Sanders, of Strayhorn, secretary. The meeting adjourned at 3:15 p. m.

SAME PRESCRIPTION
HE WROTE IN 1892

When Dr. Caldwell started to practice medicine, back in 1875, the needs for a laxative were not as great as today. People lived normal lives, ate plain, wholesome food, and got plenty of fresh air. But even that early there were drastic physics and purges for the relief of constipation which Dr. Caldwell did not believe were good for human beings.

The prescription for constipation that he used early in his practice, and which he put in drug stores in 1892 under the name of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, is a liquid vegetable remedy, intended for women, children and elderly people, and they need just such a mild, safe bowel stimulant.

This prescription has proven its worth and is now the largest selling liquid laxative. It has won the confidence of people who needed it to get relief from headaches, biliousness, flatulence, indigestion, loss of appetite and sleep, bad breath, dyspepsia, colds, fevers. At your druggist, or write "Syrup Pepsin," Dept. BB, Monticello, Illinois, for free trial bottle.

FROM THE LOUISIANA FIELD SECRETARY.

Dear Epworth Leaguers: I always like to tell about the Epworth Leagues that are doing good work when I visit them. I was very pleased to find that the Hi League at Opelousas was keeping up with its records, having good devotional services with programs well rendered and an interesting group of young people carrying on the four departments of work.

If I remember correctly, I stated in last week's letter that our friend, Jolly Harper, was doing student work at Southwestern, Lafayette. I wish to correct this statement, as Jolly is still assisting Rev. D. B. Boddie in his mission work around Opelousas, but is going to Southwestern each day, continuing his work on his A.B. degree.

On Friday evening I again had the pleasure of meeting with the Grambling Union, this time at Glenmora. This was one of the best union meetings I have had the pleasure of attending. The Leagues composing this union were very fortunate in having their Conference president, Charles White; the Alexandria District Secretary, Frances Sloan, and their union president, Mary Lyles, all present. After a devotional program, which was made attractive by several musical numbers showing the splendid talent within the union, the members entered into a business session. At the close of the business hour over seventy young people enjoyed a period of games, which was soon interrupted by the Glenmora Leaguers, who served punch and cake to those present. On next month the union meets on the first Sunday at Oakdale, where they will attend the devotional hour and night church services at that place.

On Saturday I went to Marthaville, where I had the pleasure of meeting with the Leaguers there. Brother Anders was kind enough to take me to Natchitoches durng the day, where I enjoyed a short visit at the Normal with some of my former teachers and frieuds there. Sunday morning I returned to Natchitoches in time for Sunday school, and certainly enjoyed visiting in my former teacher's class. Mrs. Hyams is still meaning as much to the Normal students that come her way as she did to me when I had the happy privilege of knowing her. I attended church and heard Rev. H. N. Brown preach. After services there I took dinner at Normal with friends. I enjoyed the hospitality of Brother and Mrs. Brown during the evening and until my departure Monday morning. Sunday evening I took charge of the devotional services at the League. Miss Marie Martin is now president of that chapter and is anxious to see it develop into one of the best Leagues in the district.

I am now in Jonesboro, but will leave to-day to begin my work in Minden District. Rev. J. F. Dring tells me that Jonesboro is to have a Young People's revival next week.

Brother Carpenter, of Lottie, La., writes that he has organized an Epworth Junior Society, and asks for literature. I'm proud of the new Hi Leagues and Junior Societies over the Conference, and am waiting to hear of more being formed.

Your co-worker in his kingdom,
ELIZABETH LANGFORD,
Field Secretary.

GRENADA REVIVAL.

Dear Dr. Carley: We closed on last night a most gracious revival in the Grenada Methodist church. We have had the old-time Methodist gospel preached by Dr. Jere M. Glenn, of Young Harris, Ga. A good number have been received into the church and there are more to follow. The entire community has received a real spiritual uplift. All denominations joined in the meeting, and commendations of the most generous kind came from every element of the community.

Dr. Glenn is the type of evangelist needed in the church to-day. There is no "clap-trap," no superficial, sensational appeal. He preaches the old-time gospel with a power not often experienced. His sermons are clear, deeply spiritual, and scriptural. He preaches "The Word." He has a pastor's heart and the heart of an evangelist. He knows the organization and the work of the church and helps every department of church work and life. Our church is happy over the results of the meeting. We desire to commend Dr. Glenn to any of our pastors in need of evangelistic help.

Stubborn Cough Quickly Ended by Famous Recipe

Here is the famous old recipe which millions of housewives have found to be the most dependable means of breaking up a stubborn, lingering cough. It takes but a moment to prepare and costs little, but it gives real relief even for those dreaded coughs that usually follow the "flu."

From any druggist, get 2½ ounces of Pinex, pour it into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup or strained honey. Thus you make a full pint of better remedy than you could buy ready-made for three times the cost. It never spoils and tastes so good that even children like it.

Not only does this simple mixture soothe and heal the inflamed throat membranes with surprising ease, but also it is absorbed into the blood, and acts directly upon the bronchial tubes, thus aiding the whole system in throwing off the cough. It loosens the germ-laden phlegm and eases chest soreness in a way that is really astonishing.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway Pine, containing the active agent of creosote, in a refined, palatable form. Nothing known in medicine is more helpful in cases of severe coughs, chest colds and bronchial troubles.

Do not accept a substitute for Pinex. It is guaranteed to give prompt relief or money refunded.

REVIVAL AT ST. MARK'S, NEW ORLEANS.

The indispensable needs for religious revival existing in most of our Methodist churches was keenly realized and felt in St. Mark's, New Orleans. Feeling the need for renewed consecration and inspiration for more effective Christian service, the pastor and staff workers agreed, two weeks ago, that it was expedient to postpone the beginning of fall program of community center activities for ten days, and center all interests, energies, and prayers on revival. Due to irregular and complete unemployment for the past eighteen months of most of our church people, many of them have moved away in search of work and life's dire necessities; while others remaining in town have lost hope and courage in attempting to find regular work, have drifted from church; some, as a consequence of such circumstances, have been greatly tempted. Thus it was realized that the evangelistic call to repentance, faith, church attendance, loyalty to Christ was the need of the hour.

Upon invitaion, Rev. J. B. Peters, pastor of First Methodist Church, New Orleans, enthusiastically accepted and offered, gratis, to bring the messages. Although kept strenuously at work during the daytime in his own pastorate, for ten nights he brought brief, simple, and soul-stirring messages to splendid congregations; adapting himself most admirably. As a result, those present were attentive, appreciative, and eagerly responsive to Brother Peters' gospel appeals. Eleven adults joined the church, and all were greatly revived. Increased church attendance is bound to follow.

Represented in the congregations almost every evening were Greek Orthodox, and Roman Catholics, Episcopalians, Lutherans, Presbyterians, Baptists, Methodists, North and South. Of nationalities, they were from many lands. One evening the pastor noticed in the congregation, a pure-blooded American Indian, a couple from England, a steamer captain from Scotland, several born in the countries of Italy, Germany, Mexico, and France. Rev. A. J. Martin, who led in song, greatly delighted the French folk several evenings by singing to them in their own language. W. H. GILES, Pastor.

CONVERSE—HORNBECK CHARGE.

On Tuesday night, Sept. 25, Brother C. B. White, of Marksville charge, began a meeting for me at Hornbeck, and continued to Thursday night, Oct. 4. Only a ten days' meeting, but one of great interest and of far-reaching results. His faithful and fearless preaching of the gospel mightily stirred many souls. Many of the long-time citizens of Hornbeck and community said they had never seen so many Hornbeck and community people before so interested in attending meeting, as was true of this one. People of the other churches of Hornbeck became deeply interested and kindly co-operated to make the meeting a success. A beautiful brotherly spirit prevailed to the close of the meeting. Brother White won the high esteem of everybody, because of his manly and Christian dealing with all. He is capable of holding a series of meetings in any of our churches. The visible results of the meeting were thirteen accessions to the Methodist Episcopal Church, South—six by letter and seven on profession of faith. All were grown people except two small girls. God was very gracious to us.

J. H. FRENCH, Pastor.

A GOOD REPORT FROM GALLMAN CIRCUIT.

Mr. Editor: If you will allow me space in the Advocate I will try to let you and your readers know something of what has taken place in church work on the Gallman circuit within the last four years.

Four years ago, Rev. W. H. Lewis came to the Brookhaven District as presiding elder, and Rev. J. E. J. Ferguson came to Gallman circuit as pastor.

To be sure, Brother Ferguson came to serve a good people—commonly speaking, morally speaking—yes, as the world calls good; but, seemingly, so inactive. I have been a member of the board of stewards for twenty-eight years continuously and have attended the quarterly conferences reasonably regularly and heard the different pastors make their formal reports as to the spiritual condition of the church; but actions speak louder than words; but again, so inactive—so few coming to Sunday school and such small congregations at the regular preaching services. Out of a fairly good membership, too. I said inactive; yes, distressingly few who would lead in prayer when called upon. As I sit quietly by and look on or observe, I see it is different now. At one church especially where there were three who would lead in prayer in years past, now those who will not lead are very much in the minority. This applies to young and old, male and female. I have heard the question asked over and over again as to the number of Leagues and prayer meetings and Missionary Societies, and so often have I heard it answered, no Leagues, one League, one prayer meeting, possibly one Missionary Society, and no one trying to have more. Go to the records and you will find it different now. I am still going to quarterly conference, and have been hearing a different report as time has passed with Brother Ferguson as pastor. I feel that it must be "handed to him," as he is the leader.

Four years ago Brother Ferguson moved into an old parsonage that we people ourselves had been ashamed of for twenty-five years or more, and for the last fifteen years it was all but unbearable. Brother Ferguson said we must have a new one. He took the lead, not sparing energy, and gasoline, and now Gallman circuit has as roomy and comfortable a pastor's home as there is in the Brookhaven District.

There are pianos in place of organs in the churches. The people are decidedly more active and willing workers than they were in time past.

I would not close without trying to bestow an honor upon one to whom honor is due in the person of Mrs. Ferguson. Truly, she has filled her place well, and has been a wonderful helper and worker.

A STEWARD.

FROM SOUTH SIDE, CORINTH, MISS.

Largest number present at Sunday school since last spring. Fine crowd of young people at the Epworth League; house full at the preaching hour, good services. Three grown people joined the church on professiou of faith, making a total of ninety-three received into the church at South Side this year. We are hoping to make it 100 by Conference. Our presiding elder tells us that we are leading the Conference in additions to the church.

We are happy to say that this year has been the best in history in the seventeen years of our ministry. I have held ten revivals and the Lord has wonderfully blessed us in the work. We have had two hundred and nineteen conversions, organized about seventy-five family prayers in the homes, More than five hundred people promised to read the Bible daily; Sunday schools organized where there was no school; prayer meetings are being held in some of the churches where we held revivals.

I will go to Conference with a full report, all collections in full. I don't deserve any credit for our success, I feel like it is an answer to the many prayers of the good people that have been praying for us. I don't feel worthy of any praise. We give God all the praise. Bless his holy name.

B. F. BULLARD, Pastor.

There's peace in the household guarded by Castoria. Peaceful sleep for Baby. Uninterrupted rest for Mother. For a few drops of pure Castoria will quiet any fretful infant. Or put the little one back to sleep when there's an upset during the night.

Parents, don't try to do without good old Castoria! It isn't fair to the baby, and it makes things hard for you. You can't give Baby medicine meant for grown-ups—or shouldn't! Castoria is the solution. It is always safe. It always does the work. And although it acts as swiftly as an opiate or a narcotic, it contains neither. Castoria is purely vegetable. Give it whenever there's constipation, colic, diarrhea.

No less than five million modern mothers have come to depend on Castoria, for twenty-five million bottles were bought last year! Get yours today; don't wait for some night when it's needed, and the drugstore is closed!

SMITH DEFEATED

Do you desire to assist in the overwhelming defeat of the "wet Tammany candidate" for the Presidency, Governor Alfred E. Smith? If so, help to give the voters important facts.

It is desired to send at least four additional communications to each voter. The cost of each separate communication (including printing, folding, addressing and mailing) is approximately three cents. Therefore, for example, the cost of reaching even 200,000 voters in Virginia with four communications would be approximately $25,000, and, in fact, the Smith Democratic Committee of Virginia is asking for $250,000 or $300,000.

The cost of similar work in Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Lousiana, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas and West Virginia will be in proportion to the number of voters in those States.

Send check for largest amount possible to TREASURER ANTI-SMITH DEMOCRATS, BOX 674, RICHMOND, VA., if you want this work done properly and Smith overwhelmingly defeated.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

A SOLEMN THOUGHT.

A great American statesman is said to have declared that the most solemn thought that had ever entered his mind was the realization of his personal accountability to Almighty God. That thought is, indeed, a solemn one. When a man realizes for himself that he will have to give an account to the Supreme Ruler of the Universe for the life he has lived, he is likely to consider all else incidental until he has made an adjustment of his life to the requirements of the divine law that will prepare him to meet his God.

The trouble with too many people to-day is that they do not take God into account. If they think of him at all, they think of him as some remote, indefinite kind of being that has little concern about the affairs of this world, and less power to direct them if he were interested. The awfulness of sin as a violation of divine law that inevitably and invariably results in eternal woe unless repented of and atoned for, is lost sight of in a kind of maudlin reliance upon the mercy and goodness of God. Moral decency and social respectability are thought to take the place of the new birth and a transformed life. The judgment is, to them, a vain figure of speech.

So far as we recall, no great revival has ever swept the world that did not grow out of a realization of the awfulness of sin and a realization of the accountability of the sinner to Almighty God. And no great revival can come until men are made to realize that their destiny hangs upon the question of their personal relationship to God and to Jesus Christ, his Son, whom he has sent. Sin is still the thing men need to be saved from.

THE COLLECTIONS.

There are three compelling reasons why the assessments for Conference and General Work should be paid in full:

1. The activities carried on by our church for the establishment, extension, and maintenance of the kingdom of God urgently need all the money called for in the assessments. These assessments may not be the actual minimum requirements; but they represent an amount that is actually below what could be profitably spent in carrying on the work. The following causes are among those dependent upon these asssessments for their ongoing: Education, Missions, Sunday Schools, Epworth Leagues, Church Extension, Temperance and Social Service, American Bible Society, Lay Activities, Hospitals, Superannuate support, Theological schools, and various other items of administrative expense. When our church fails to pay these assessments, all these causes suffer.

2. We are able to pay these assessments in full. Some of our people are poor, it is true; but most of them are fairly well-to-do, and many of them are wealthy. Most of us spend more money on luxuries and for needless self-indulgence than we give to the church. It is not that we should deprive ourselves of the comforts and conveniences of life, but that we should realize that the claims of the kingdom of God are as strong as any others that rest upon us. If every member of the church would give a fair share of his income to the work of the church, he would still have enough left for all his legitimate needs and the church would have ample funds with which to carry on its work.

3. As members of the church we have solemnly promised to support its institutions. The needs of these institutions are represented in these assessments; and when we fail to pay our part of these, we are violating the vow we voluntarily assumed. It is no light matter to promise to do a thing and then fail to do it. Especially is it blameworthy when our failure to keep a promise is not due to inability, but to carelessness, indifference, and neglect. There is no escaping responsibility to perform the vows we have made unto the Lord.

The need is great, we are able, and we have promised; what more needs to be said?

ONLY THE LORD CAN.

William Edward Hickman, the slayer of the little California school girl, paid the penalty of his crime on the scaffold on Friday of last week. In a letter to one of his former high school mates, written just a few days before his death, Hickman declared that he believed in the mercy of the Lord and that his sins had been forgiven. Only the Lord could forgive such a crime. All mortals can do is to pray for such sinners and leave them in the hands of a just and merciful God.

One paragraph of the letter reads: "Bill, I hope you and the other fellows will lead honest lives for the joy and peace they will bring you. Sin leads to misery and damnation. Please pray for me and all the other condemned men here at San Quentin."

The sinner realizes two great facts in this confession: An honest life brings peace and happiness, and sin leads to destruction. The lesson is plain enough—would that all would heed it!

"THE NEXT STEP FOR THE CHURCH."

Under the above caption, Dr. Joseph Fort Newton reviews in the November McCall's Magazine a recent sermon by Bishop Francis J. McConnell, in which the Bishop makes a plea for prophetic leadership. We quote from McCall's:

"'The next step for the church,' states Bishop McConnell, 'is to make a definite place for the moral prophet. There never will be a great number of prophets in the church at any one time. Few souls are made for prophecy. All the more reason, then, why we should deliberately make room for the genuine prophet when he appears. A prophet is a moral genius, and genius has a way of reporting itself present, and of making itself heard. The only question is whether the prophets will get their hearing inside or outside of the church. Some of us would like to see the prophets take a hand in a fresh protest against the smug adjustment of the church to the standards of the world. It is all very well to talk of erasing the line between the sacred and the secular, but wearing our Sunday clothes every day comes at last to wearing our every-day clothes on Sunday. The prophet will have nothing to do with the pragmatic idea that practical success is a test of truth. He knows that many things are successful practically and rotten morally. Just now we hear much about self-expression for the purpose of self-realization. We need the stinging irony of the prophet, who wants to know which self it is we are expressing.'"

Dr. Newton's comment on these words is: "Here are plain, and wise words by a bishop who is also a prophet, and they need to be heard and heeded from end to end of the land, by people of all religious communions. Such thinking makes us thank God for a prophet who is also a great and beloved bishop."

FOOTBALL AND SPORTSMANSHIP.

For many years we have been interested more or less in football, keeping up with the results of games during the season and witnessing such contests as came our way. We believe in intercollegiate sports of all kinds, under proper regulations, and especially in intercollegiate football. We cannot, therefore, be accused of criticizing the game as an opponent of it; we are thoroughly convinced, however, that a change in one particular at least is needed for the sake of good sportsmanship.

The change we have in mind is one that will make it illegal to use more than a limited number of men—say eighteen—in a given game. To the average onlooker, it does not look like good sportsmanship for a coach to use two or three full teams during a game, wearing out its opponents who may not have a full force of reserves with a first set of players, and then sending in an entirely fresh team to play against one already worn and weary by the strenuous struggles of the first half. That kind of strategy may win the game; but from our point of view there is very little credit in a victory so won. If there is any sport in chasing a fox with a pack of hounds, that sport would degenerate into the lust of the killer if the pack that started the chase were withdrawn when poor Reynard was almost run to death and then a new pack put in the chase to make the kill. The poor animal didn't have a chance.

In professional sports, such as baseball, for example, a limit is placed upon the number of men that can be carried at one time by a team. No matter what the reason for this may be, it is a pity that amateur sportsmen should fall below the professionals in the ethics of the game. If thirty men can't beat twenty men in a football game, they ought to be ashamed of themselves; and if they do beat them, they ought to be ashamed of themselves. Sportmanship is the thing—not winning the game.

HOPE THOU IN GOD.

By Dr. George H. Morrison, Glasgow.

"Why art thou cast down, O. my soul! Hope thou in God."—Psalm xlii 5.

The Psalmist here is talking to himself. "Why art thou cast down, O, my soul? Hope thou in God." That is one of the habits of the saints. It is always a highly profitable habit. It means that we look squarely in the face of things that are lurking in the shadows. And very generally when we do that, with the fears and despondencies that haunt us, things prove not so desperate as they seemed. We all know how in the dead of night the slightest noise is apt to startle us. Imagination riots in the darkness. But we smile when we switch on the light, for the footstep is but a creaking board, and the knocking but the flapping of a blind. So it is with the soul. Formless fears are always the worst fears. Nameless and undefined despondencies are often the most depressing of despondencies. And just to face them, and drag them to the light, and manfully charge them to declare themselves, is very often the spring of new tranquility. Why art thou cast down, O my soul? Come, my soul, answer me that question! Stand there and be interrogated! Give thy reasons! Why art thou cast down? Very generally when one does that things prove so much less hopeless than they seemed, that the soul descries the glimmerings of morning.

Now, many people when they read these words are apt to interpret them erroneously. They regard them as a call to trust; but that is scarcely the meaning of the words. When I trust a person I do more than hope. When I hope I do less than trust. To hope in God is therefore something different from a feeble and attenuated trust. It is to base every hope that burns within us on the profound recognition that God is. Base thy hope, whatever thy hope may be, and hopes are of a thousand different kinds; base thy hope, whatever thy hope may be, on the recognition that God reigns, and that God, the God of the whole Bible, a Father, infinitely loving, and at last revealed to us in the Lord Jesus. If that be false, if there be no such Being, our fairest hopes are mockeries. We have nothing to build on but the sand. Our hopes may come to ruin any moment. But if God is, and if we be sure of that, surer than we are of hands or feet, then there is hope for us and for the world. Hope, my soul, because there is a God —that is what the Psalmist really means. Hope, because he reigns. Hope, because he is on the throne. Hope, because he cares for you and loves you; because he cares for all the world and loves the world; because he so loved the world that he gave Jesus.

Now, let us apply that thought a little, and first think of the future of our race. We have many gloomy prophets in the world to-day who think our race is hurrying into ruin. They study history and find no hope in history. They deny the reality of progress. They have lost all hope in civilization since the terrific upheaval of the war. Education, men had hope in that. Civilization, they had hope in that. Increase of intercourse among the nations, men put their hope in that. And then the Great War came, wrecking hopes just as it wrecked cathedrals, and all these rosy, radiant hopes were as houses built upon the sand. What a wise book the Bible is. How it rejects and refuses shallow hopes. It never says to us, "Hope thou in education." It says, "My soul, hope thou in God." Base thy hope on the fact that he is reigning, and moving on in his eternal purposes, to an end that shall be fair as perfect day.

Or, again, take the years that lie ahead, hidden in the shadows of the future. For some the prospect is very dark and anxious. Will your health hold? So much depends on that, for yourself and for your wife and children. Will your powers hold, or some day will they give? Will your loved ones all be spared to you? My dear friend, no hope that is worth anything rests upon contingencies like these. It rests upon the certainty of God. He reigns, he knows you and loves you. In his eyes you are infinitely precious. If you ascend up into heaven he is there; if you make your bed in hell he is there. Would it not tarnish the glory of his name if for a single hour in all the future he were to leave you or forsake you? My soul, hope thou in God. Base your hope of the future upon God. Base it on nothing else and nothing less. Everything else and less is but contingency. Build on the sand, and when the storm comes everything may perish. But who is a rock like unto our Rock?

Lastly, think of the hope of immortality, and of the joy and rest and liberty of heaven, when life shall flower into full perfection and we shall meet our beloved ones again. That hope is in every human heart, and the question is on what do you base it? Well, you may base it on the inward longing, or on the imperfection of our present being, or on the fact that there is so much on board that is not wanted for the voyage. But when the lights burn low, and nothing can be demonstrated, and no argument can silence questioning, "My soul, hope thou in God." Base your eternal hope on the life and love and promises of God. He is the God of Abraham, of Isaac, and of Jacob; he is not the God of the dead, but of the living. No mother would let death rob her of her child, if her power were equal to her love, and with him love and power are alike infinite.—British Weekly.

NEW POLICY FOR EVANGELISM IN JAPAN.

By Dr. Elmer T. Clark.

A distinct forward movement for evangelistic work is now under way in Japan. Through a generous contribution made early in 1928 expressly for the purpose of entering unevangelized territory, new stations have been opened up which have become most promising even in this brief time. Interest in the possibilities of opening up new work in the territory around the Inland Sea was kindled by Dr. S. H. Wainwright, outstanding Southern Methodist missionary to Japan, on the occasion of his recent furlough in the States. Dr. Wainwright has been in Japan for forty years.

Of the new stations recently opened, five are in the Kobe district, two in the Hiroshima, and two in the Matsuyama. Four out of the five in Kobe district are in the city of Osaka, that city of 2,200,000 people. These points are at Juso, where a little church with thirteen members and a Sunday school of thirty-five have been established; at Yodo Gawa, nearly in the heart of Osaka, where there is a congregation of forty; at Chikko, in the harbor district of that great city; and at one other point. The fifth station in the Kobe district is in Kyoto. Other places where the people are eagerly asking for the gospel are being considered for new stations.

Missionaries consider the successful and enthusiastic opening of work in these new places the greatest encouragement that has come to evangelistic work in Japan for many years. For some time, because of lack of funds, it has been impossible to branch out and begin work in new places, even when it was obvious that such places were ready for occupation. Now not only has new work been begun, but the new stations are flourishing and are calling for help to erect permanent church buildings that will insure stability to this work that has been so long desired and is so much prized.

Some congregations, such as at Juso, are offering to assume the full cost of the building if they can but get help to buy the lot on which the church is to be erected. It is estimated that the minimum amount needed to start off a new congregation in Japan on a self-supporting basis is yen 5,000 ($2,500), and the maximum yen 10,000 ($5,000). This by no means covers the total cost of the lot, the building, etc., but represents the assistance needed by the new congregations to stand on their own feet.

In speaking of these appeals for aid to erect new churches in many stations in Japan, Dr. Wainwright says:

"Here is a definite opportunity for service. There are many who have chafed at the restrictions that have necessarily been placed on missionary advance during the past few years. Here is a definite constructive program for such people to undertake. Many men have wanted to put their money into projects where they could watch it grow. Such an opportunity is now at hand!"

LAMBUTH MEMORIAL DAY AT PEARL RIVER CHURCH.

In the historic old church at Pearl River, there assembled on Aug. 2 a goodly number of the pastors of the district, with some 300 laymen and laywomen to carry out a missionary program that had been arranged by Dr. J. Loyd Decell, presiding elder of the Jackson District, who was master of ceremonies.

At 11 o'clock Dr. H. C. Tucker, missionary to Brazil, who had just recently attended the World's Missionary Conference at Jerusalem, brought the message, which was a masterpiece, delivered so clearly, vividly, and with a degree of feeling that moved the congregation. The text and the message we are sending at the request of all who heard it.

At noon the crowd feasted in the "old-time way" from the table that was laden with good things to eat.

At the afternoon hour Dr. Tucker spoke on the methods of reaching men on the mission field, especially emphasizing the method, "teaching."

Previous to the address in the afternoon, Hugh Craig, Jr., son of Rev. and Mrs. Castle, was baptized by Dr. Tucker and Dr. Decell, presented to them by Mr. Columbus Ray, an outstanding layman of the district.

Immediately after the address the business session of the association was held. Among other things settled was the date of this Annual Memorial Day, which is to be held on the first Thursday in August.

Two former missionaries were present and made short addresses—Mrs. Bettie Hughes, a missionary to China for twelve years, and Mrs. Tom Foster, of Tchula, Miss. Rev. W. M. Williams, of Magee, Miss., and Rev. Percy Vaughn, of Ellisville, were visitors with us that day.

A beautiful day, great messages, excellent dinner, thrilled the congregation.

HUGH C. CASTLE, Pastor, Sec'y.

A Message from Jerusalem.

(Resume of address delivered on Lambuth Memorial Day, Aug. 2, 1928, at Pearl River Church, Jackson District, Mississippi Confrence.)

Text: "And after these days we took up our baggage and went up to Jerusalem." Acts 21:15.

The record paints in vivid colors an early missionary meeting at Jernsalem. One of the greatest of all missionaries and a few of his companions in service were hastening from the west "if it were possible for him to be at Jerusalem the day of Pentecost."

The occasion concerned certain matters pertaining to the expansion of the Christian message. The expansive nature of the Christian religion gave rise early in its history to important questions that were taken up to the mother church at Jerusalem for consideration. The preaching of this New Way was proving to be revolutionary and disturbing to long established beliefs and customs, and was raising some very serious questions. The same process has been going forward on an increasing scale through the centuries. Christian truth and influence have become more penetrating and disturbing to all human relationships as the church and ministry have become more missionary in spirit and endeavor.

The record states that after their arrival at Jerusalem "the day following Paul went in with us unto James; and all the elders were present. And when he had saluted them, he rehearsed one by one the things which God had wrought among the Gentiles through his ministry. And they, when they heard it, glorified God." This is only one of several meetings held at Jerusalem in Apostolic days to consider questions arising out of the expansion of the new religion. Ecclesiastical history records many similar gatherings that have been held through the ages succeeding. The most recent was the meeting of the enlarged membership of the International Missionary Council at Jerusalem, March 24-April 8, 1928. Like its predecessors, this meeting was called to consider matters pertaining to the expansive nature of the Christian religion and questions pertaining to all human relationships, international, inter-racial, economic, social and religious, which have grown out of the missionary enterprise.

Between those early missionary meetings at Jerusalem and the recent gathering of the International Missionary Council there are similarities and striking contrasts.

The first were composed of groups, small in number, coming from very limited areas, meeting to consider chiefly a religious and racial question: that of preaching the gospel to the Gentiles and of their acceptance of Jesus Christ and his salvation. I was recently on the Mediterranean and could in imagination picture that little missionary group with Paul and a small amount of hand baggage on board a little sailing vessel driven by the winds across those waters as they were hurrying on to Jerusalem; they landed at Caesarea, took up their baggage, walked along the dusty highway through Samaria, over the hills of Judea, arrived at Jerusalem, where the brethren received them gladly.

I pictured in my mind the contrast in preparation and travel for the recent missionary meeting at Jerusalem. There were 240 members from fifty-one nations representing all the continents and many of the islands of the world. These were seen packing their baggage, embarking in great ocean steamers traversing all seas, hurrying on by railroad and automobile, if it were possible for them to be at Jerusalem for Easter Week and the meeeting of the International Council. This larger company, from the ends of the earth, like the former small group, "were received gladly" by the Committee on Arrangements; but unlike them were not entertained within the walls of the old city, being instead housed for fifteen days in tents and huts erected specially for the purpose on the Mount of Olives. Our meetings were held in a large building, property of a German Missionary Society, just across the road. This building was erected during the recent world war for the German Kaiser; it fell into the hands of the British Government when the Protectorate was established over Palestine; then in turn passed it on to the German Missionary Society, who invited the Council to make use of it as a hall for the meetings, dining rooms, where all could eat and fellowship together, and rooms for the work of the various committees.

Apparently but limited preparations were made for those early missionary meetings in Jerusalem. A most comprehensive program had been arranged for this last meeting in that city. The International Missionary Council is the outgrowth of the work of the Continuation Committee set up by the World Missionary Conference to Non-Christian Peoples at Edinburgh, Scotland, 1910. The great topics relating to the work and responsibilities of the world missionary enterprise, with certain papers on the same, had been sent ahead of time to all the members for consideration and study.

The enlarged membership of the Council for this special meeting was made up of fifty per cent from the sending countries, the home churches, and fifty per cent chosen from the receiving countries, the mission fields; these latter were chiefly nationals, men and women, preachers and laymen, themselves eloquent proofs of the power and sufficiency of the missionary message to the nations. On board the steamships bound for the greatest crossroad of ocean highways in the world, the Suez Canal, the delegates could be seen grouped together day after day in study and discussion of the topics and papers that had been placed in their hands.

The gathering, with nationals in native costume mingling freely with Europeans and all Westerners, was at times quite picturesque. The method of procedure was systematic and thorough. The subjects for study and discussion were presented by members selected beforehand for the purpose; they were then considered in group meetings; afterwards by special committees (every member of the Council was assigned to one of the committees), who drew up reports, findings and recommendations that were brought before the Council as a whole, discussed, amended and adopted.

It was recognized that the expanding missionary enterprise has helped to create, bring to the front and accentuate many of the greatest problems that confront humanity to-day; hence the wide range of the subjects on the program. It was also emphasized that the missionary forces at home and abroad must now help to find a solution to these problems; they cannot escape the responsibility.

The missionary enterprise and message have invaded the realms of all religious systems of the world, and are causing discussion and uneasiness. If this work is to be justified, there must be something unique and superior in the missionary message that would justify the work. What, then, is this message? The method of this comparative study of religions was not a syncretism, as some feared might be the outcome, but a ringing statement of the supreme and unique place of Christ and of his life and death and resurrection as a redemptive act of God. He is our message; he is the hope of the world.

Christianity is a religion of progress. It stimulates to industry and achievement. The Council was impressed that seemingly a new religion is rapidly spreading among men everywhere, the religion of Secularism. Expanding commerce and industry are inseparably related to the missionary enterprise. Questions between capital and labor, child labor, enforced labor of natives amounting in some places to almost slavery, housing conditions, health, hygiene and general welfare are problems rapidly developing and becoming all the time more acute on the mission fields. The missionary and native worker cannot be indifferent to these things. A wise solution for them must be found. The Jerusalem Council says Christ, his gospel and ethical teachings, are the hope. These relationships must be Christianized.

Vast multitudes of the world's population are living in rural areas with all the disadvantages and absence of the means of education, medicine, and many other human comforts and advantages. The expanding missionary work is facing these situations and needs. Here again Jerusalem says Christ and his gospel are the hope and the solution of the problems.

The penetration of the gospel message and influence, proclaiming the brotherhood of all believers and the rights and equality of opportunity for all the sons of God, has invaded the realm of race relationships. This is one of the most vital and disturbing questions of the day. Is there hope that a way may be found for all races of every color and distinction to live together in peace and goodwill on the earth, while each maintains its special identity, traditions and characteristics if thought wise and need be? The Jerusalem Council believed there is, and that way is the Christ way. He is the truth and the life and the way.

Likewise the burning theme of international relationships was carefully considered and discussed in the light of the expanding influence of Christianity. The problems now confronting diplomats, statesmen, economists and scientist in this field were brought to light and carefully reviewed. There were experts on these subjects in the Council who gave freely of their expert knowledge and counsel. Again the Christianization of relationships and the application and practice of the principles of Jesus Christ furnish the solution, lead to the elimination of war and establish peace among nations.

Jesus Christ, the missionary message, to be proclaimed, translated into life and applied to all human relationships, is the spiritual cure for all these ills. The regeneration of the individual soul and life is the beginning and fundamental starting point.

The missionary method is spiritual, deals with spiritual forces, resources. Christian religious education becomes increasingly an important item in the method. Prayer releases the spiritual forces and influences indispensable for the successful carrying out of the enterprise.

Early morning prayer meetings, with ritual for those who preferred that method, with song, Scripture reading and brief comment and extemporaneous prayer for others more accustomed to this fashion, and silent prayer where not a word was spoken for those who preferred the Quaker method, were conducted daily for all. There was daily also a three quarters of an hour for silent reading, prayer and meditation on the Mount of Olives. The daily devotional half hour in the morning session was a vital part of the program. The special services at Bethany on Palm Sunday, the Scripture reading and prayer services on the anniversary of the betrayal held in the Garden of Gethsemane under the old olive trees by the moonlight at 9 o'clock at night, the discourse and service on Good Friday, the wonderful Easter morning exercises, the never-to-be-forgotten sermon on the Resurrection, culminated in a most wonderful spiritual experience. To the leader's "Christ is risen" all responded "He is risen indeed," and then Anglican, Presbyterian, Baptist, Lutheran, Quaker and all the rest joined in the celebration of the Holy Communion, as had been agreed upon privately the day before. It was indeed a mountain-top experience.

TO THE PASTORS OF THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Dear Brethren: we are urging again that you try to hand your reports to the Annual Conference the first day of the Conference, not later than the second day.

If this is done, they can be audited and handed to the statistical secretaries in time to prevent their delay in tabulating and reporting figures to the Boards.

Let each presiding elder have his man from his district ready the first day to assist in the receiving and auditing the reports as provided in resolutions of last Conference, Journal, pages 63-4.

Be careful to make out reports accurately, and save delay and trouble.

T. B. COTTRELL,
For Auditing Committee

The hospital at Huchow, China, was formerly a union enterprise carried on by the Southern Methodists and the Northern Baptists, but recently the Baptists have withdrawn and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, is now carrying on the work alone. This hospital is considered one of the finest to be found anywhere in China and is doing a splendid work. Dr. Fred P. Manget is in charge of the hospital.

THE ONLY TIME THE GOSPEL "FAILS."

By Rev. H. M. Ellis.

"I've got no faith in Dr. Goodman's malarial remedy. I tried him, but he didn't do me any good. So I'm done."

"Did you follow his directions and take his medicine?"

"Why, no. But I called him in and got his prescription filled, and there the stuff sets on the mantle now. It ain't no good."

"But it has cured many others who have taken it. Why not follow his directions and give the remedy a fair chance?"

"I don't believe one word of their claims for it; and I just ain't going to take it. So that's the end of it."

Say, did Dr. Goodman's malarial remedy fail?

Again:

"That fruit tree agent who passed through here two years ago was a cheat and a fraud."

"Why do you say that?"

"Well, he caught me with his talk, and I paid good money for his trees; but I haven't got a thing for my cost and trouble."

"But the trees he sold everybody else lived and are bearing well. Did you give yours a fair chance?"

"Well, I was busy when they came and just let 'em lie around a few days till I could get time to set 'em out. When I did get the time in two or three weeks, I saw they wa'n't any good, so I saved myself the trouble of setting them out."

Did the fruit trees fail?

It is even so with the gospel of the love of God in Christ Jesus. The only time it ever "falls" is when men refuse to give it a real trial—a fair chance.

A SUGGESTION.

We read a great deal in the newspapers these days about the misfortune that has come to our Baptist brethren in losing almost a million dollars of their missionary money.

It seems to me that if we are as sympathetic with our brethren as we should be, we would take an offering in our Methodist congregations and send it to these Baptist brethren to help make up this deficit. This would be an act of Christian sympathy.

One of my stewards told me that he would give ten dollars to an offering like this. An offering from a large number of our congregations would greatly relieve the burden of our Baptist brethren, and it would bind us closer together in bonds of love and sympathy. It would be another step toward Christian unity.

Yours sincerely,

WM. L. ROBINSON.

A HAPPY OCCASION.

Dear Dr. Carley: My father, Rev. N. E. Alford, is with me to-day, Oct. 15, this being the eighty-third anniversary of his birth. He preached for us yesterday with as much vigor as one many years younger. Our people enjoyed his message, and we all rejoiced together in the Lord.

Father has for nearly a half century been a local preacher and has served as a local supply in the Conference. He has four sons in the Methodist ministry, one son-in-law, and one daughter a graduate from Scarritt College, now in charge of the Kingdom House at St. Louis, Mo.

He is a grandson of the late Quinea Lewis; an own nephew of the Revs. H. P. and W. B. Lewis, late of the Mississippi Conference. Including those who have married our relatives, there are more than twenty ministers of the Lewis family. Counting other ministerial relatives, with the direct descendants of the late Quinea Lewis, there are more than thirty in our family who are preaching the gospel. Of this number, all are Methodists but five or six.

This is a record for which we are thankful. "We thank God and take courage." Father is happy on the way, and requests that we send greetings to all his relatives and friends, with the hope that we all, some sweet day, may meet where they never grow old and where parting is nevermore!

J. MARTIN ALFORD.

IN SUPPORT OF THE EVANGELISTIC WORK OF THE WHOLE CHURCH.

By Dr. John W. Shackford.

The Sunday school has long been recognized as a most important agency of evangelism in the church. It may, however, be a matter of interest to those who have found valuable suggestions in the plan of evangelism now for several years recommended by the General Sunday School Board to know the circumstances under which this plan was prepared.

In 1920, following the Centenary Movement, Dr. O. E. Goddard, who was then engaged for the Board of Missions in outlining a church-wide campaign of evangelism, approached the Sunday School Board, asking its co-operation. A committee was appointed representing the Sunday School Board to outline the steps of a practical plan by which the Sunday schools could co-operate in this church-wide campaign of evangelism.

Dr. Goddard and representatives of the Sunday School Board had numerous conferences regarding the lines of co-operation. The program of evangelism which the Sunday School Board finally approved and recommended was the outcome of thorough understanding and co-operative planning, and was, of course, but a development and enlargement of what was already being done in many Sunday schools.

The main features of this Sunday school program of evangelism outlined at that time and now familiar to the church, are as follows:

I. An increased emphasis on evangelism throughout the entire year's program of the Sunday school.

II. A special period of evangelistic emphasis during January, February and March, this to include three essential phases:

1. A period for the preparation of the forces through prayer, study and consultation. (Suggested for January.)

2. A period of personal and class evangelism. (Suggested for February.)

3. A period for the careful training of pupils to be received into church membership.

This plan has the twofold value of recognizing the evangelistic purpose and work of the Sunday school throughout the year and of specific emphasis at certain times upon this essential work. It further calls attention to the absolute necessity for the careful preparation of the whole working force of the Sunday school through prayer, conference and study in order that mechanical and harmful processes may be avoided and that the resident forces of the Sunday school may enter into the work of evangelism prepared in mind and heart for this work. And, finally, it lays a new emphasis upon the need for the careful preparation and training of those who are to be received into church membership.

This plan proved so widely satisfactory in the Sunday schools and seemed so sound and practicable that it has been continued from year to year by the General Sunday School Board without substantial change, and is again being recommended by the Board. Our Sunday schools throughout the church are being urged to observe this special season of evangelism along the lines indicated during January, February and March.

The very circumstances under which this plan was worked out indicate the desire of the General Sunday School Board to make the evangelistic program of the Sunday school an undergirding and re-enforcement of the entire evangelistic work of the church. There is of course nothing hard and fast in the plan suggested. Nor is there anything in the plan which would leave any possible grounds for seeming competition with other evangelistic plans and programs that may be under consideration.

The work of the Sunday school, like that of any real school, is continuous, and the programs of the Sunday school are most effective as they become a continuous and regular part of the Sunday school work. For this reason the General Sunday School Board does not seek to provide new or striking changes in its program of evangelism, but rather endeavors to encourage the enlargement, enrichment and more effective use of a program which has already taken its place as a regular and established part of the general program of Sunday school work.

REV. W. S. SHIPMAN—AN APPRECIATION.

By Rev. James H. Felts.

Our memoirs are full of words of appreciation of the departed. To this I do not object. How many good things do we say of the living? I have known Rev. W. S. Shipman for some twenty-five years, known him well. I have been his presiding elder, neighbor, at times intimate friend. I know his family, and something of their worth. As preacher, presiding elder, and pastor, he has made just an average record. If he has an enemy, I do not know who it is. If he does not love the Lord with all his heart, no one knows it but the Lord himself; I doubt if Shipman knows it. If he does not love men, it is a strange situation. Men love him with a devotion that is beautiful. Old and young, rich and poor, all kinds and conditions of men in this delta country, love W. S. Shipman.

But I am not thinking so much of his friends or his definite work as a minister. I am thinking of the contribution he has made to the citizenship of the State and nation. He has three sons and one daughter. Not one of them but would do honor to any father in the State. One of them is with the United States Government in connection with what is being done for our war veterans. One of them is a practicing physician in a great city north of us. He is a specialist. His equipment is second to none. One of them is a teacher. He, too, while scarcely more than a boy, has won a place in scholarship second to few men of his age. His daughter is the wife of a successful delta planter. Every one of these children is a clean, fine, strong, useful citizen and church worker. And these children have been without the "mother touch" since they were small and immature. W. S. Shipman has made just about the greatest contribution to church and State that one man can make. I uncover before him while he yet lives, and thank God for him. His faith and devotion are worthy of all praise. His children not only rise up and call him blessed; they reflect the splendid manhood found in the father. May his days be lengthened, and the evening time be bright.

MAGEE AND SANATORIUM CHARGE.

Dear Brother Carley: I think that the people of Mississippi should know more about this Sanatorium and the blessings it brings to the sick of our State, not only in their restoration to health, but in teaching the method or remedy to prevent the spread of this tuberculosis germ. It is pitiful to see whole families prostrated by this awful disease. There are a number of small children in the Sanatorium.

One of the most inspiring experiences I have ever had, is to see seventy-five to one hundred convalescing patients, assembled for worship, with their faces beaming with hope and joy because of the assurance of the return of health, reunion with loved ones in the home, and partakers in all the affairs of life.

Now the State is doing all this for the bodies of the sick. Who will care for their souls?

The church alone can do this. I am thankful that the Methodist church is trying to do its part in this great work. We furnish the New Orleans Christian Advocate and the Home Department Sunday school literature for the patients. These are appreciated. The pastor of the Magee charge tries to serve the over three hundred patients, and the three churches on the Magee charge at the same time. This cannot be done as it should. One or the other or both will be neglected. Think of the sick, and some dying, begging for the bread of life, and spiritual comfort, that can come only through the human touch of a God-sent man, being denied, because we have not time or money to minister to them! Our hearts bleed when we turn away when they ask for prayer, when the time is out and we can't read God's Word and pray with them. Think how long it would take to have services with three hundred patients, devoting two hours a day for four days in a week! We have tried to minister to all, regardless of denomination. They all appreciate it.

The three churches on the charge have done real well, considering the little service they have had. They have paid all assessments and missionary special in full for the four years, and will do the same for this, the fifth year. All but one church have paid the five-year quota for Superannuate Endowment in full, and we hope to get that by Conference.

We have had 197 additions to the church. We thank God for his blessings upon these people and his work.

SAFETY SIGNALS.

By Rev. S. J. Davies.

Like the ebb and flow of ocean tide, the numbers of those dependent on the Board of Finance, General and Conference, increase and decrease. The old men and widows die, the dependant orphans attain the majority age, and are no longer applicants for aid. The end of the Conference year draws nigh; the superannuates will be in evidence; the bishops will be kind and courteous to the old men; the preachers considerate and fraternal; the laymen, remembering old scenes and bygone fellowships, have a tender chord in their hearts for their whilom pastors; and eyes will glisten and faces shine—and—and—well, you know how it is—the air of blessed comradeship. I have been wondering now for some five or six years—and also some thousands other superannuates—why all this esteem, love and fellowship has not done more for these aged preachers. Dr. Todd has played on a harp of a thousand strings concerning the "forgotten man," and the Board of Finance secured last year an agent in every Annual Conference to advocate the cause of those lost to memory. Something like $30,000 has been expended in overhead expenses, and yet the results are disappointing. There are some faithful men who have elected to put heart and soul, energy and push into this movement, and their success should be a strong incentive to others to do likewise. Meanwhile, those dependent on the bounty of the church are cultivating the doctrine of watchful waiting.

This condition of affairs calls for a story. I will recount one, heard from Bishop Tigert some years agone.

The colored folks of a South Georgia community were having a "baptizin." The crowd was gathered on the bank of a wide, generous stream. Candidate after candidate had been submerged beneath the liquid wave. As the interest reached an enthusiastic climax, a huge alligator was seen making his way down stream, directly toward the preacher and his helpers. One cautions applicant for the rite saw the reptile and held backward, refusing to enter the water.

"Come on, brother," shouted the preacher, "don't be skeered of dat 'gator—jist think of Jonah and de whale."

"Yaas, but dat whale, he had a conscience; a Georgia gator will swallow a nigger whole, and den climb up a sand bank and forgit all about it."

I have rescued the story from memory's store. The moral is yours—leave it or take it, beloved. Memory ties us to all the beauty, the humor, the incidents and accomplishments of the past. Forgetfulness is sometimes criminal, not infrequently it brings sorrow or even remorse in its train. There is a sad note in Kipling's refrain, "Lest we forget, lest we forget."

Shreveport, La.

WHO MAKES THE MINISTER?

What makes a minister? Who makes a minister? Is it the man himself, is it God himself, or is it the church? The minister is made; this is particularly true of him. The lawyer is made; the doctor is made; the business man is made. No one of these springs into life full-orbed and completely equipped.

What is it that makes a minister? It takes a great lawsuit to make a lawyer. What is it that makes a minister? A doctor is not made by the many trivial cases he has, but rather by some serious case into which he throws not only all his professional training, but all of his personal skill. He saves a man's life, and wins a life reputation. What is it that makes a minister's life?

The church which he serves. It can either make him or break him. Place the responsibility wherever you will, here is where it belongs by right. Many churches never help to make a great minister. When great ministers cease to appear, they must take the blame. Great preachers come only through the making of many churches.

A great preacher cannot be made by a congregation of small hearts and minds. The minister will have to dominate such a crowd and make that congregation great in mind and heart, or it will make him small in mind and heart.

The attitude the average church takes toward its minister is something like this: the church finds itself without a preacher. There is a meeting, and the members of that meeting begin to discuss the kind of a man they think their church needs. They succeed in creating in their own minds a conception of a man who would ideallstically fit into their situation. Then they go forth to find their man. How frequently they make a pathetic failure in their selection.

The reverse method should be used. The church should train itself to take a minister and give him a chance to train himself and to fit himself into their needs and into their forms. Frequently a church calls a young man straight from college. The leaders do not think for a moment of his personal side or what they can do for him, but of what he can do for them. They should keep their mind, not on his making a church for them, but on their making a minister of him. They should seek by their fairness and their love and their patience in making out of this young man a good minister of Jesus Christ, and thus produce for the kingdom of God another man for the ministry. Only very few churches have this conception of their relation to their minister.

They approach him in anything but in the spirit of brotherly love. They take the attitude of those who taste him to see whether they like him. They do not even give him a chance to win them or do his duty or represent his best. They pre-judge him; they do not give him a fair chance. Many of the men of larger means treat him as they do their hired man, as though he worked for them, as though he were their religious chauffeur, their spiritual air-pilot. They exhibit him and take pleasure in him because of his superiority over others.

What an ideal church we would have if every congregation felt that their business was not to select a minister who would make their church great, but that their supreme responsibility in selecting a minister was to help make him another great and useful minister for the kingdom of heaven. Surely we would have a different church if some of our laymen would take this attitude toward their minister. There would be fewer ministerial breakdowns; there would be many more stronger men than there are to be found to-day. Indeed, when the minister is left to make himself and falls, who should bear the blame?

Moreover, it is not altogether true that God makes the minister, or that the college makes the minister, or that the seminary makes the minister, or that the community makes the minister. Suppose that every minister should be received into the heart of his church and that there he should find himself surrounded by warm and sympathetic brothers and sisters who loooked upon him as their leader in helping them to follow Jesus Christ, and in assisting them in winning their neighbors and friends to their Lord and Master? What a different situation he would find

The ideal church is yet to be. There may be a few of them, but they are very few. The minister of Jesus Christ, instead of finding in his new charge warmth and welcome, sympathy and encouragement, too frequently has to create them for himself after he has well located himself on the ground of his new parish.

The inefficiency of the ministry to-day may be found at this point. The average layman feels no responsibility in making his minister. Indeed, he does not appreciate the fact that he has a large part to do in creating an atmosphere in which his minister can work. Moreover, he appears to have no conception whatever of his responsibility to the successful operation of the pastoral end of his church life.

The ideal atmosphere for the minister is one in which the pastor is supported on every hand by the warm affection, the manifest encouragement, and the evident spiritual concern of the people in the work the minister has to perform.

The prayers of the laymen of the local church should give permanent form to the spirituall life of every local congregation. This should be lived and perpetuated independent of the minister. It should give form and character to the spiritual life of the local congregation, and it should never be dependent wholly upon the initiative of the minister and his leadership.

It is our conviction that ninety per cent of our ministers would have successful pastorates if the local church would do its part. Moreover, it is our conviction that ninety per cent of the failures of our pastors is the result of failure on the part of the congregation. It is the easiest thing in the world for a congregation to crucify their minister by failing to understand him, by being impatient with him, by permitting gossiping tongues to retail depreciation of his work. If every church would awaken to its responsibility and the part that it has to do in making the ministry, it would not take half a generation to improve the ministry one hundred per cent. Thus would our church life be entirely transformed.—Editorial in Western Christian Advocate.

THE FIRST AMERICAN BISHOP.

The Father of Spirits endowed Chas. B. Galloway with such alertness of intellect, such graces of spirit, such vigor of manhood, such eloquence of speech, such oratory of temperament, such royal simplicity of bearing, such winsomeness of personality as was doubtless never surpassed in all the annals of time. Certainly I never knew one who approached him in a combination of such wealth of inducment.

His native ability, his acquired accomplishments, his buoyant spirits, his broad catholicity, his perfect poise, his royal manhood, his devotion to duty, his unselfish service made his ministry unusually fruitful. The lives, characters and teachings of the first disciples of The Man of Galilee were not prosaic recitals of his eager, ardent soul, but the very acme of divine romance which inspired his intellect, enthralled his imagination, fired his zeal, thrilled his very being till he was aflame with fervor in the Master's service.

The founders and pioneers of Methodism, worthy successors of those first disciples, made a similar appeal to this modern Apollos. Imbued with their spirit, he made profound study of their lives, and gave himself with absolute abandon to their mission of spreading Scriptural holiness in all lands. Interpreted by his alert mind, his flaming spirit, his eloquent tongue, his oratorical temperament, his kindling eye, his beaming countenance, his resonant voice, his graceful bearing, his sparkling pen, his virile manhood, they stood out as living persons in God's epic to his and to future generations. Their mission found forceful illustration and emphasis in his life and ministry, which are still bringing forth fruit.

Born and brought up in Carroll County, diligent as a lad on the farm, educated in her rural schools, converted and inspired at her Methodist altars, further trained in Carrollton's high school, W. L. Duren early showed the metal and temper which have characterized his subsequent life. Impressed and inspired by the editorials and sermons of Chas. B. Galloway, young Duren became his ardent admirer and devoted disciple. At Millsaps College, Bishop and student became fast friends, the Bishop being impressed by the diligence and manifest capacity of the student, while the student increased in appreciation of and devotion to the Bishop.

After serving with great acceptability and growing usefulness the best pastoral charges, and a term as presiding elder in North Mississippi, Brother Duren served a fruitful six years as pastor of Rayne Memorial Church in New Orleans; and is now in the midst of a successful pastorate of St. Mark, Atlanta. During a busy pastorate Doctor Duren has made diligent study of early Methodist history. His contributions to our Methodist weekly press have not been frequent or voluminous, but have been eminently wise and markedly helpful. His expository studies of the sacred Scriptures published in the Sunday School Magazine have shown the vigor of his intellect, keen discrimination, wealth of learning, devoutness of spirit; free from the superstition of bald literalism and traditionalism, and not tainted by vain iconoclasm.

His studies in Methodist history led him to a careful consideration of the life, character and times of Francis Asbury, which has produced the best of all the excellent books attempting to interpret the soul of that pioneer hero and saint of Methodism. Reading the glowing pages, one is at a loss which most to admire, the exhaustless patience of research, the discriminating use of sources, the skillful marshaling of facts, the keen analysis of principles, the masterful grasp of conditions, the vigor of thought, the perfection of idiom, or the terse beauty of language in which all is expressed. The book is a masterpiece of a skilled worker, who hath no need to be ashamed. No Methodist minister can afford not to possess and read with care this book, which should be in the library of all intelligent Methodist laymen. While a Methodist book, by a Methodist preacher, about a Methodist bishop, it is free from denominational boasting that would in any sense in any degree offend a Christian of any church. Its perusal would be helpful to any thoughtful person of any faith, or of no faith. It should have widest circulation, and I trust every Mississippi Methodist will procure and read Doctor Duren's Asbury. It would give me great joy if Doctor Duren could find time to give a similar discriminating study of one of Asbury's foremost successors in the Methodist Episcopacy.

The distinguished author, my beloved friend during a third of a century, was good enough to let me read this product of his vigorous, graceful pen in the manuscript. Immediately upon the conclusion of that reading I penned the foregoing appreciation. There was one brief page that I did not read till the printed volume reached me. Despite the addition of that one brief page, I send forward what I wrote during the early days of 1928.

SEEING THE INVISIBLE.

By Bruce S. Wright, D.D.

"He endureth as seeing him who is invisible."

Here was a man who renounced the visible for the invisible. What was it that he renounced? Egypt's court, and all the glamor and ease and widespread power of Egyptian court life. Had he not been adopted into the king's household? Was he not the chosen son of the pharaoh's daughter? Had not the influence and opportunity of that position been thrown about him all the formative years of his life? Could he not have stayed right there, near the throne; perhaps some day ascending the throne? Was there not ever before his eyes the glitter of the visible crown; ever in his hand the feel of the visible scepter; ever in his heart the thrill of visible marching armies and conquering hosts? The visible world of which he was a part was very visible, indeed. But the seeds of the invisible world had been sown in the soil of his youth by his faithful mother-nurse. That was something he could never forget. And in the sure test the invisible triumphed over the visible.

We live in a world of visible things.

"The world is too much with us; late and soon.
Getting and spending, we lay waste our powers."

One of the first acts of a baby's life is to reach for some object he sees. One of the last acts of a man's earthly career is to reach for something tangible and visible. A drowning man "grasps at a straw." We are like the drowning man, for we grasp at visible things. We build a house and begin at once to fill it with visible objects. The commercial world makes its appeal on the basis of the visible, making the windows attractive with objects to be seen—and bought. Entertainment is planned following the psychology of the visible. Travel is advocated that people may feast their eyes upon visible monuments. One is considered fairly well educated if he has seen a number of cathedrals, some pictures and pieces of sculpture, a few old houses and some noted streets and historic fields. Even worship takes the visible into consideration. Various visible symbols of religious significance are used to help us in our worship of the invisible God.

Behind this visible world is a vast invisible realm upon which the visible depends. Like the invisible framework of structural steel that holds together the visible skyscraper, so all the visible kingdom has behind it or within it an invisible realm, the essential element in strength and stability. God works through both the visible and the invisible. He has given us this great world of the visible, but he asks that it be controlled by the laws of the invisible realm. That the visible home be controlled by invisible love. That the visible temple, spires, and symbols of worship be controlled by invisible faith. That the visible life of trade be controlled by the invisible spirit of fair play. That visible wealth be controlled by the invisible grace of generosity. That the visible relations of races and nations be controlled by the invisible kinship of the human family. Whoso drinketh of the water that I shall give him shall have within him a well of water springing up into everlasting life. That is the invisible controlling the visible.

The workings of the invisible world are quiet, but certain and powerful. The sun is constantly drawing water from the sea, lakes, and streams, storing it in the clouds, therewith some day, somewhere to refresh the parched ground. No one sees that process, but all the time it is going on. Nor can any one stop it; it is the power of the invisible world of nature. So the Everlasting Son of God is drawing men and women and little children to himself. By the unseen forces of sacrifice and service, love and loyalty, human life is lifted to the level of the eternal. The flower comes to fragrance and beauty through the workings of an invisible power. So character unfolds; one sees the result though he does not see the process.

One cannot endure unless he sees him who is invisible; unless his eye of faith is keener than his eye of sense.

"Never morning wore to evening
But some heart did break."

In that trying hour he endures who sees him who is invisible. So Bishop Quayle endured. The song of "The Skylark of Methodism" was stilled; his eager feet could no longer roam abroad; the glad handclasp he could no more give; stricken, he was sustained by the invisible Christ. Hear his testimony: "Having been saved by the grace of God, I have been 'allowed of God to be put in trust with the gospel.' Had I a hundred lives to live I should desire to spend them all in this sublime service. It has been a sunny life, radiant as spring."

The conclusion of the whole matter, gloriously illustrated by triumphant multitudes from Moses to Quayle, is that the invisible God rules the world, the invisible Christ is powerful in the hearts of those who receive him.—In the Christian Advocate.

FROM THE MERIDIAN DISTRICT.

The outstanding building achievements in the Meridian District during the Conference year now drawing to a close are: new churches at Pachuta and Fifth Street, and a new parsonage at DeKalb.

The church at Pachuta is a substantial brick building, with several Sunday school rooms, in addition to the auditorium. This house has been completed for some time, and Sept. 23, a homecoming day was observed, with sermons and addresses by former pastors. Rev. R. A. Allums, the pastor, and his people have also achieved well in exchanging the former parsonage for one more desirable next door to the church.

Within a very short time the congregation of Fifth Street, where Rev. W. B. Jones is pastor, will have ready for use a magnificent structure, replacing the one destroyed by fire several years ago. Bishop Darlington officiated at the laying of the corner stone, Sept. 23.

The new parsonage at DeKalb, where Rev. H. E. Raley is finishing the fourth year of his pastorate, is a splendid house, with modern equipment.

Notwithstanding late and short crops, the people are responding to the efforts of pastors and officials; and we are expecting a creditable showing of the business affairs of the church in the district when the Mississippi Conference convenes at Philadelphia, Nov. 6, in its one hundred and sixteenth annual session.

Last year six charges paid in full all assessments for the year: Central, East End, Poplar Springs, Shubuta, Waynesboro, Lauderdale and Electric Mills. The last mentioned pastoral charge, Lauderdale and Electric Mills, at the fourth quarterly conference, Sept. 9, reported all assessments for 1927-8 paid in full.

THE RIGHT KIND OF BOY.

Here's to the boy who's not afraid
To do his share of work;
Who never is by toil dismayed,
And never tries to shirk.

The boy whose heart is brave to meet
All lions in the way;
Who's not discouraged by defeat,
But tries another day.

The boy who always means to do
The very best he can;
Who always keeps the right in view,
And aims to be a man.

Such boys as these will grow to be
The men whose hand will guide
The future of our land; and we Shall speak their names with pride.

MARJORIE'S CHILDREN'S DAY.

Dr. Elwood had just returned from the hospital and was looking very thoughtful and sad.

"What is the matter, father?" asked his little daughter Marjorie.

"Oh, I'm thinking of Emily Monroe, poor child!"

"Who is she?"

"She is a young girl in the hospital. She had to have an operation a few days ago. She was so brave, but she is drooping now, and I am very much afraid she will not pull through. I'm sure she is homesick."

"Why doesn't her mother go to see her?" asked Marjorie, eagerly.

"Her mother is dead."

"Where is her father?"

"On a long business trip in the Far West."

"Has she any sisters?"

"Yes, several, but they are little children, and are in a distant city, too far away to come to visit Emily. What she needs is cheer."

The following Sunday morning little Emily was lying on her bed at the hospital, her limbs tied, for she was not allowed to move them. Her face was pitifully pale and sad. Her eyes were closed, but slow tears forced themselves between her lids and rolled down her cheeks.

She was homesick—so homesick!

Presently the nurse came in softly, and, resting a hand on the aching head, said, "Would you like to see a dear girl who is waiting in the hall?"

The tearful lids opened, revealing an eager look in the brown eyes.

"Waiting?" she asked.

"Yes, she came to see you."

"I do not konw any girls in this town. Who is she?"

"She is Marjorie Elwood, the doctor's daughter."

"Oh, I love Dr. Elwood. Please bring his daughter in."

Presently Marjorie stood by Emily's bedside. Her face was radiant.

"I know you're Emily," she said gently. "Papa told me about you. I'm Marjorie Elwood. I've brought you these; aren't they sweet?" and she held out a bouquet of sweet June roses.

A smile broke out over the wan face as the frail hand clasped the roses and kissed them.

"Oh, I thank you! I thank you so!" she cried out. "How did you happen to think of bringing these to me?"

"Why, it is Children's Day at the church and I wanted you to have a share in it."

The nurse left the two girls together for fifteen minutes, during which time Marjorie did most of the talking. She told Emily of the songs that were to be sung that night, of the flowers and the birds, and the recitation that little Tom Clark was to give. "I'll coax him to come over with me some day and recite it for you," she said

Marjorie told other cheering things—how her brother Roland had a wonderful dog that could play many tricks and dance, and that when she came again she would bring some more interesting things.

"Time is up," said the nurse, coming in quietly.

"All right," was Marjorie's cheerful response. Then, bending over Emily, she touched her forehead softly with her rosy lips, and laid down on the coverlet a small box with a pictured cover.

In the evening, just as Marjorie was about to start for the "children's services," her father came in. He had just returned from the hospital.

"My dear," he said, "Emily is much better. She has improved wonderfully since morning."

"Oh, I am so glad!" said Marjorie.

"She was asleep when I came in," he said, "and there was a smile on her face. Upon a little stand beside her bed was a bowl of beautiful June roses. In her frail hand there were clasped some sweet rosebuds. A small box lay on the side of the bed. Its contents were scattered over the spread. There were pictures and booklets that would interest her. I took her temperature and felt her pulse, and then looked at the nurse. She said, 'It was Miss Marjorie who brought these flowers and pictures and made it so cheerful for Emily.' It was a heaven-born thought that took you there, my dear. I verily believe she was pining for home or the sight of some of her people. You did a good deed, Marjorie, and Emily is likely to get well."—Alabama Christian Advocate.

TOMMY'S HORSEBACK RIDE.

By Irene Abell Allen.

Tommy stood on the back porch of the farmhouse and gazed gloomily out upon the wide expanse of field and pasture. The ripening grain held no interest for him.

What interested Tommy was the undulating streteh of meadow with its clumps of oaks and maples and the green fringe of pillows along the river. For it was across this meadow that he was longing to gallop on the little pony his father had secured for him and his sister, and he couldn't. His blue eyes were cloudy, and his round freckled face was unwontedly sober.

"It isn't fair for Twina to have the pony all the time, even if she has been sick," he muttered discontentedly to himself. "And half the time she just thinks she might want it and then doesn't use it after all."

He started slowly toward the barn, scuffling his feet in the dust and scowling as fiercely as his good-natured face could scowl. There was nothing he loved more than riding Crazy, as they called the spotted "calico" pony, but his father had expressly stipulated when he bought him that Twina, who was convalescing from a serious illness, was to have him whenever she wished.

"Our business this summer, son," he said, "is to help Twina get well and strong again. After that is accomplished it will be your turn; so be patient in the meantime."

That had seemed reasonable enough at the time. But Tommy had not yet learned how capricious and trying the little invalid was going to prove. But for a long time he was very patient, for he had not forgotten the weeks when his little sister had hovered between life and death. Now, however, she was quite well and nearly as strong as ever, and Tommy was beginning to chafe under the burden of her childish fancies.

"There's no sense in her having her own way all the time," he told himself rebelliously as he eyed Crazy contentedly munching his oats. Then he made a sudden resolve. He would saddle and bridle the pony and get away for his ride before Twina had a chance to say she wanted him.

In spite of his haste he had but just started down the meadow when Twina appeared at the yard gate.

"Oh, Tommy," she called.

"You can just wait till I get through with Crazy this time," he shouted back rudely, and galloped on down the trail toward the river without looking back

At first he was rather gleeful at his triumph. Finally he glanced back, but Twina had gone into the house.

"I suppose she will cry, and mother will baby her as usual," he said scornfully. "I wonder if she thinks she can have her own way always just because she was sick once!"

Back and forth along the river road and all around the meadow trails he rode for a long time, taking care to keep too far away from the house for any one to call to him. He was having a wonderful time, he told himself, riding while the morning was fresh and cool. Father and the hired man had gone to attend an auction sale in the next county and would not be back until late, for father was going to buy some cows and bring them back with him. There was no one to interfere with his pleasure—but mother and Twina.

Nevertheless, he was not having such a good time as he thought he would. He was ready to go back to the house long before his stubborn will would permit him to do so.

Finally he turned back and led the pony into his stall. But that done he had an unaccountable aversion to going into the house. He could see the tear-stained face of his little sister and the hurt and troubled look his mother would be surely wearing. But he might as well go and have it over with; so he sauntered in with an appearance of unconcern that would have deceived nobody.

But there was nobody there to be deceived At first rather relieved, he finally became curious and then anxious. What had become of mother and Twina?

At length, after searching the whole house, he came upon a note from mother.

"Dear Tommy," he read," "Twina and I have gone with Mrs. Gay and Fred to Sternsville Twina tried to tell you, so that you could come, too, but she could not make you hear, and they could not wait long. We will be late getting back, but there is plenty to eat in the pantry, and you may go to Mrs. Turner's if you get lonesome.

"With love.

Mother."

Tommy stared at the note in dismay. They had planned this trip to Sternsville, with its shopping and lunch at the restaurant, its ice cream and motion picture show, and now he had missed it. And he was very sure it was not because they had been in an undue hurry, but because he had stayed so long after refusing to listen to Twina.

A lump rose in his throat, and he had to blink very hard to keep the tears from overflowing.

What a long day it was! He would not go to Mrs. Turner's, because she was a woman who would have understood at once that there was something more to his being left behind than he wished to tell her. He could ride Crazy all he wished, but instead of spending the long hours rambling over the farm on the pony's back he went to the stable and turned him into the pasture.

There was plenty to eat, and his heavy heart did not affect his appetite. But one cannot eat all the time. And even the diversions of watching the oldest Turner boy do the chores did not last long or arouse much interest. He went to bed early.

But he had not yet fallen asleep when he heard mother's step on the stair and hurrying along the hall into his room. She stooped over his bed.

"Tommy, dear."

"O, mother." There was a break in Tommy's voice as his arms went around her neck.

"I could not enjoy the day with you here alone and so disappointed, dear." Mother's arms clasped the small boy very tightly.

"It was my own fault," he sobbed "If I hadn't been so mean to Twina, I would have been here to go with the rest of you."

"I know, dear. But you had a nice time riding all day?" There was a question in mother's voice, though if it had not been dark he would have seen an understanding little smile tugging at the corners of her mouth

"It was no fun to ride any more I felt so mean about the way I had acted."

Then the smile spread to mother's eyes, and she gave him a kiss and took him downstairs to see what they had brought him.—Christian Advocate.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Dr. Charles C. Selecman, president of Southern Methodist University, celebrated his fifty-fourth birthday on Oct. 13.

We are happy to learn that Rev. S. L. Riggs, our pastor at Cedar Grove, La., after a serious illness, is regaining his health.

Mr. Thomas S. Southgate, Norfolk, Va., one of the best known and most useful laymen in the church, died suddenly in Philadelphia on Sept. 28.

The New Orleans Standard Training School closed a successful session on Friday night of last week. One hundred and seven credits were awarded.

"I've been reading the Advocate for forty years or more—can't do without it," writes Mrs. Josie Newsom, of Tylertown, Miss., in renewing her subscription.

Mr. and Mrs. Joe A. Tolle announce the birth of a daughter, Betty Jo, on Oct. 13. Mr. Tolle is a son of Dr. H. F. Tolle, Lakeland, Fla. Blessings upon the little one!

The church at Como, Miss., will report at Conference a beautifully decorated church, a fine organ, and all collections in full. The pastor, Dr. C. M. Chapman, serves a fine people.

Rev. J. G. Sneiling, Louisiana Conference Missionary Secretary, returned on Monday of this week from Vinton, La., where he assisted the pastor, Rev. R. S. Walton, in a fine meeting.

A great congregation assembled at Rayne Memorial, this city, last Sunday morning at the Home-Coming Service. Dr. J. B. Mitchell, the pastor, preached an inspiring sermon on Citizenship.

Rev. G. W. McLain, in renewing his subscription to the Advocate, writes from Peoria, Arizona: "After three years at Bowie, we were moved to Peoria, a distance of 270 miles. Peoria is located in the Salt River valley, near Phoenix."

Rev. A. A. Simms, in writing to ask us to send his Advocate to Pachuta, Miss., instead of to Picayune, Miss., states that his health is good and he expects to become effective at the approaching session of the Mississippi Conference.

The Minter City and Glendora charge, North Mississippi Conference, reported at the fourth quarterly conference that all salaries, all the benevolences, and the Grenada Special were paid in full. Rev. A. Y. Brown serves the fine people of this charge.

Rev. John L. Sutton, manager of the Mississippi Home-Finding Society, paid the Advocate office an appreciated call on Thursday of last week. Brother Sutton was formerly a member of the Louisiana Conference, where his worth is greatly appreciated. He is now a member of the Mississippi Conference.

Ocean Springs and Handsboro, in the Mississippi Conference, have paid their Superannuate Endowment quotas in full. The pastor, Rev. W. L. Linfield, declares that most of the credit for this achievement is due Rev. L. A. Darsey, a superannuate member of the Mississippi Conference, who made a liberal contribution himself and helped to collect the balance.

Next Sunday, Oct. 28, will be observed as Homecoming Day at the First Methodist Church, this city. All the repairs and improvements have been completed on the building, and the main auditorium is now one of the most beautiful in the city. Special music will feature the occasion, and the pastor, Rev. John Brandon Peters, will preach appropriate sermons at both services.

From the bulletin of the First Methodist Church, Shreveport, La., of Oct. 19: "The many, many friends of Dr. and Mrs. W. W. Holmes were indeed happy to have Mrs. Holmes in attendance upon one of the services of the church last week. Mrs. Holmes has been ill for several months, but she is now feeling fine and looks exceptionally well. We rejoice to have her among us again."

The Wicker Tours announce an attractive program of tours for 1929, sailing in winter, spring and summer, to the Holy Land and Europe. These tours will be personally conducted and also independent travel. Dr. Wicker will personally conduct the Summer Holy Land Cruise to Palestine and Europe. If you contemplate a tour abroad during 1929, address The Wicker Tours, Richmond, Va., for itinerary and full information.

On the morning of October 15, in the Methodist parsonage at De Soto, Miss., Robert Henry Moody, six-months-old son of Rev. and Mrs. S. C. Moody, was baptized. The chid was named "Robert" for the late Rev. Robert Selby, who was presiding elder of the Meridian District until his death, May 5, and "Henry" for the present presiding elder of the district, Rev. Henry G. Hawkins, who baptized the child. May the child wear worthily his honored names!

Rev. John S. Henley writes from Athens, La., under date of Oct. 15: "This is my first comunication to you. I came from the Southwest Missouri Conference and have been here one week and have preached at two of the appointments. The good people have received me graciously in place of their former pastor, Rev. S. J. Starkey, who was transferred to the Southwest Missouri Conference." We thank Brother Henley for sending his own subscription to the Advocate, along with two others.

PUBLISHING THE ADVOCATE.

The Executive Committee of the Publishing Committee of the New Orleans Christian Advocate met on the call of the chairman in the city of New Orleans on Oct. 10 to consider bids, contracts, etc., for printing the paper for another year.

After carefully going over the bids submitted, which were three, weighing all items of cost in printing and mailing out the paper, all bids were rejected, and the committee decided to continue to publish the paper itself, employing C. O. Chalmers as Business Manager on the same basis as heretofore. We found we could not do quite so well under any other arrangement.

L. M. LIPSCOMB, Secretary.

"OTHER ITEMS WORTHY OF RECORD."

The above words are the seventh head in the written report of the pastor at each quarterly conference.

Two items of recent happening at Bay Springs I feel are "worthy of record" in the Advocate.

First, in a Sunday school with an enrollment of 106, with an attendance on Orphans' Home Work Day of seventy-two, when all the money gets in, we shall have contributed an average of one dollar per member, and perhaps just a little over.

Second, on Friday night, Oct. 19, our Wesley Brotherhood had its regular meeting, with seven men on the program and every man was there with his part, and our secretary gave in one of the most definite and clear-cut testimonies of how the Lord saved him this year while he thought he was on his death bed, that it has been my privilege to hear in my life, as well as another member, who told how the Lord has saved him this year, and that he and his wife had taken up family prayer immediately after his conversion, and both men are on fire to do something for him who hath done so much for them! I say "Amen!"

The other discussions dealt with how to build up the Men's Bible Class; the establishing of a recreation and reading room in the basement of the church for the young people under the supervision of the social department of the Epworth League; how the Brotherhood could assist the pastor in getting full Conference assessments; comments on the Brotherhood program in the Layman for October, and some suggestions for definite community and church service immediately after Annual Conference. It was the most interesting, spiritual, instructive, and constructive local men's meeting I ever attended. I just felt like reporting it to the Advocate. The Lord is with us and we're marching on.

Profoundly thankful,

J. A. WELLS.

P. S. At all our Brotherhood meetings the Missionary Society ladies set the most appetizing meals any one could wish. This meal is our regular supper we take at the church, and the program follows.—J. A. W.

A PERSONAL LETTER TO THE METHODIST PEOPLE OF MISSISSIPPI.

Dear Christian Friends: I wish you might visualize with me at this time the situation we are experiencing in our Sunday school work here at the Methodist Church in Oxford, the site of our great State University.

Picture, if you please, four large classes assembling in our main auditorium and the difficulty we teachers face to make the lesson period worth while; then let your mind's eye follow some several other classes of young men, teenage boys and girls, and little children, as they wend their way to the public school building to find a place suitable to assemble for worship and the study of God's Book, and to receive the sacred influences that count materially in the lives of our youth and children to the stableness of Christian character so necessary to our future commonwealth. Then think with me how lamentable to be deprived of the blessings of the sacred altars of God's house that have been sanctified and set apart for this particular business—the business of the King—which we teachers, who for twenty-five years and more dedicated our service to, are fully convinced is the most beautiful and necessary business this side of heaven.

I would that you might fully appreciate the prayerful interest, heart-yearnings and solicitude of pastor, Sunday school superintendent, teachers, and the official board of the church, that we might be able to gather in every young person and child that comes to us and make them so comfortable and the study period and the preaching hour so helpful and attractive that they will be constrained to company with us to the exclusion of all that is secular and less worthy of the Holy Sabbath. Then, and not till then, may we see our work prospering in the finished product of Christian manhood and womanhood.

Many a home has lost its hold on its children because it neglected to make that place the most attractive and precious spot in the community for them. Many a church has lost on the same score. We cannot hope to grow and function as we are privileged to if, when our own come to us, we receive them not. We can take care of those of our own community very nicely; but when your sons and daughters come to us, we crave to gather them in, too, and make our church their church; and we want the atmosphere to be so wholesome and sweet that they will be constrained to line up and worship with us at every service.

I wish you might have heard the appeal from our own Judge Hemingway, one of our teachers, chairman of our Board of Stewards, and a man whose heart is in the church, as he portrayed to us last Sunday our little children being forced to go elsewhere to be taught the songs of the church and the stories of Jesus. And, friends, we are doing this very thing here at Oxford to make room for your precious ones who are away from your influence and the influence of the church back home.

We are doing what every gracious, hospitable host and hostess does—we are shifting ours out that yours—and there are several hundred Methodist boys and girls at the University this year—may have our best.

We assure you that we who are at the helm of the church and Sunday school and have had our own sons and daughters away from home and in strange communities, are not unmindful nor unprayerful of yours, and are finding our sweetest joy in being friendly to them.

Now, since I have given you a peep into the situation here, I feel that numbers of you dear Methodists in our great State will enlist your prayerful interest on our behalf and do what you can to assist us in building God a house here sufficient to take care of all that are destined to come to us through the influence of our large and growing University of Mississippi. This is your interest as well as ours.

When you send your children away to school, you see to it that they have every needful comfort for their rooms and bodies; yea, most of you furnish them many luxuries in a material way. I pray you are no less interested for their spiritual welfare. So I beg you as one vitally interested to "Come over and help us" to prepare a place in which to feed their souls. We are not able, but you and we together are well able. Please see Numbers, chapter 13 and last part of the 30th verse.

AN IDLE DAY.

"If I could only have one whole day to do nothing but play in, how happy I should be!" said Rosie at breakfast time.

"Try it," said her mother. "Play as much as you like. Try it to-day."

How the children going to school envied Rosie as she swung on the gate! When they were gone, she ran into the garden, picked some gooseberries and carried them into the kitchen.

"No, Rosie; that is work. Take them away."

Rosie got her doll and played with it, but soon tired; when she played with her ball, it bounced into the kitchen window. Rosie peeped in after it. Her mother was shelling peas.

"May I help you, mother?"

"No, Rosie; this isn't play."

Rosie strolled away with slow footsteps to the garden. She watched the chickens. She heard her mother setting the table for dinner. After dinner Rosie took her little bag of patchwork and stole away to the barn with it, for she could stand idleness no longer.

"Mother," she said as she gave her a good night kiss, "I understand what the teacher meant when she said, 'He has hard labor who has nothing to do'."—Presbyterian.

RESOLUTIONS.

Whereas, our Havenly Father, in tender mercy and infinite wisdom, has seen fit to call our beloved MRS. J. H. SAVAGE to the home where sickness and sorrow are known no more, be it resolved by the Woman's Wesleyan Bible class of the Capitol Street Methodist Church at Jackson, Miss.

1. That this class has lost a noble worker who has given a long life of devoted service to her Lord and Master, ministering to the sick, the needy, and the distressed, in all her ways following the humble Nazarene in a spirit of unselfish love.

2. That we have lost a personal friend who was always an inspiration; a friend who was cheerful, lovable, sincere, loyal and true. We shall cherish her memory always and shall endeavor to emulate her Christian qualities and example.

3. We extend to her bereaved husband and family our heartfelt sympathy, and pray that the God whom she loved and served, and whom they worship, will comfort them and bestow upon them that "Peace that passeth understanding."

4. A copy of these resolutions shall be sent to her husband, son, and daughter, who is so far away, to the New Orleans Christian Advocate, and shall be embodied in the minutes of the Sunday school class.

Respectfully submitted:

Signed: Mrs. J. A. Sharpe, Mrs. Ella F. Crisler, Mrs. E. P. Howie.

On Sept. 12, 1928, at his home in Marks, Miss., BROTHER JOHN M. LAWSHE passed from this world to his home above. But few men, if any, had greater strength of character than Brother Lawshe. He was the son of Brother and Sister W. S. Lawshe, of Water Valley, Miss. Having been brought up in a Christian home, very early in life he was converted and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. He served a great deal of his Christian life as Sunday school superintendent, and for twenty-seven years on the board of stewards in his church. He spent the last twenty-seven years of his life in Quitman County, and the county is better for his having lived in it. No man ever said aught against J. M. Lawshe, but every one loved and respected him as a Christian gentleman. Although he was confined to his bed and suffered many months, he never complained, but looked forward to the time when he could go home and be with his Lord. He had no fear of the end, and said, "I am going to rest." He leaves his devoted wife and one son, John Earl; his father, W. S. Lawshe; two brothers, R. B. and C. A. Lawshe; and one sister, Mrs. J. S. Morgan, of Clovis, N. Mex. After funeral services by the writer, assisted by Brothers Guinn, Cole, and McAtee, his body was carried to Water Valley and laid to rest.

The church has suffered a great loss,
And hearts much pain,
But some day in heaven
We hope to meet him again.

His pastor,
M. E. SCOTT.

GEORGE WASHINGTON ROOT was born May 17, 1860, in Vermilion Parish, La. In the year 1883 he was happily married to Lucy Gertrude Griffith. To this union there are twelve living children, viz.: George, Lillie, Gladys, James, Lucy, Milton, Gilbert, Wesley, Leonard, Roy, Claud, and Edna. Brother Root had been a faithful member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, for thirty-five years; most of this time he served as a steward in the church. His last years were less active, owing to ill health, but his faith kept him sweet—ever ready for his Master's summons. Brother Root had the respect of all who knew him and won the esteem of his brethren by his generous and unselfish disposition. He died at his home in Baton Rouge, Sept. 29, 1928, and was buried in Roselawn cemetery. He was a faithful husband and affectionate father, a worthy citizen, a true Christian, and a kind friend.

THE MERCY SEAT.

There is a spot where spirits blend,
Where friend holds fellowship with friend;
Though sundered far, by faith they meet
Around one common mercy seat.

That thuoght connects the lonely heart with its friends, and gives to human relationships a lovelier and profounder meaning. And then it does something more. It lifts up the soul to realization of a greater companionship—like that other beloved hymn which brings together earth and heaven in blest communion, fellowship divine, since "all are one in thee, for all are thine." The living and those who have gone before, those at home and those who are in far places, the active and strong and also those who are shut away by reason of frailty; all are one in great fellowship when they meet before the mercy seat of the eternal life and love, the God of all ages, all climes, all races, all souls.—Exchange.

All Communications for This Department Should Be Addressed to Mrs. Janie Drake Cooper, Church Hill, Miss.

BIRTHDAY PAGEANT IN HONOR W. M. S.

On Friday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock, in the church parlors of the Centenary Methodist Church, the primary and junior departments gave a beautiful pageant.

This being the fiftieth anniversary of the Missionary Society, it was in the form of a birthday pageant. They had the cake with the fifty candles as a birihday celebration. A jubilee offering of $10 was given. After the program the cake was cut and served with punch.

Mrs. John Godbold and Mrs. N. E. Chadwick had charge of the program, and are to he congratulated on the attractive manner in which it was presented. It has been requested that the pageant be repeated in the main auditorium of the church in the near future.—McComb Journal.

Announcement is made of the arrival on Sept. 23 of Miss Dora Hoover, who will serve as rural worker for North Mississippi Conference. The work is locaied in Columbus District, on Mashulaville charge, about 30 miles west of Macon. Miss Hoover comes highly recommended and is a woman of considerable training and experience. Her appointment is meeting with hearty approval of the presiding elder and pastor in charge, as well as with the Missionary Societies.

Oklahoma Lady Gives Interesting Account of Long Use of Black-Draught In Her Home.

Sageeyah, Okla.—"I have taken Black-Draught ever since I was a child, and can recommend it as a splendid medicine for family use," says Mrs. Cora Maberry, of this place. "My mother used it, in bringing up her family, and after I had a home of my own, I continued to use it, as I thought it was especially good to give the children.

"My children did not mind taking Black-Draught, and so when they got upset with stomach spells, or were constipated, I gave them Black-Draught tea.

"If I found that they were taking cold, I was quick to start giving them Black-Draught, as it helped them to throw off the impurities which caused the trouble.

"My children are all grown now and have homes of their own, but I still keep Black-Draught in the house and use it myself when I wake up in the morning feeling dull and 'headachey', and have a bad taste in my mouth.

"Black-Draught is a simple remedy for constipation, and I prefer it to others because it is purely vegetable. I always feel better after I have taken a course of it."

In use over 87 years. NC-191

ZONE MEETING, RUSTON DISTRICT.

On Sept. 14, Bernice was hostess to zone 4, of the Ruston District.

We met at 11 o'clock for a social hour, which was spent in meeting and conversing with members of the different auxiliaries and visitors.

At 12 o'clock a splendid dinner was served.

Mrs. W. A. Gray, the zone leader, called the meeting to order about 1 o'clock. After the song. "Jesus Calls Us," Mrs. Gray led in prayer.

Mrs. Waltham, from Dubach, read from the sixteenth chapter of Matthew and gave a very interesting talk on prayer—a duty, a privilege, a comfort. She especially stressed the point that prayer should begin in the home and that children should be taught to pray to God when young.

Mrs. Dave Caldwell welcomed the members of the auxiliaries from Lisbon. Dubach, and Summerfield, and visitors from Haynesville and El Dorado.

Mrs. Lowery, from Lisbon, gave an especially fine talk on "What Shall I Tell My Child About God?" leaving us five points to meditate upon: (1) There is a God; (2) He is real; (3) He is always present; (4) He loves prayer and expects us to pray; (5) He forgives us of sin.

Mrs. Waltham led a discussion on this subject in which all mothers were invited to take part.

A young lady from Lisbon read an interesting paper on "Methods in Mission Study."

Miss Winnie Camp, from Haynesville, mission study leader for her auxiliary, told us how she makes her mission study class a real live class.

A vocal solo, "Have Thine Own Way, Lord," by Miss Lucile Gresham, was especially enjoyed.

Mrs. Norwood, from Dubach, gave "Glimpses from Scarritt" in an interesting and instructive way, after which a list of mission study books was read.

In the absence of the member from Harmony Chapel, Mrs. Minnie Porter, of Bernice, read a splendid article from the Voice on the Jubilee offering.

Mrs. Carolyn Dawson, our District Secretary, in her gracious way talked to the women about the work as a whole, and especially about the Week of Prayer, the Jubilee offering, and Revaluation of our task.

After reports and a quiz on the minutes we adjourned, feeling that Bernice had entertained us royally, and that we were better for having come.

Zone Leader.

Sunday School

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

Dear Brother Pastor: Please have one of your good women make the report on tbe observance of Childhood and Youth Week so your school will be included in the report at Conference. Do this or you will be left out. When you do a good thing, tell it so others will fall into line.

Another important matter: See your Sunday school treasurer and have this person to remit your mission money and your Sunday School Day offering, provided this has not been done. "Yes, better late than never."

The fourth year is tbe best with Rev. J. H. Felts at Greenwood. He and his workers have recently started a class of twenty-five of his choicest people in the study of "The Principles of Teaching." Possibly every member of this class is loaded to the limit with work, but they are taking time for study that they may be better equipped for their teaching task.

The school at Aberdeen checks up well, showing progress in several respects, especially in their worship services. The monthly missionary program is in charge of Mrs. C. A. Spragins. This program will be sure to enlarge and enrich the other worship services. This is another great church that is handicapped for lack of room to do the work as it should be done. An excellent lot has been secured adjoining the church, and the day will come when an educational building will be added to the present equipment. Rev. R. G. Moore has wrought well during these three years.

The church building at Booneville is an imposing structure, a credit to the untiring labors of the pastor, Rev. W. H. Mounger, to his excellent people, to the contractors, and to the architect. There is nothing left now but for the people to use the building for all it is worth. Mr. Hill Hodges, recently appointed assistant to the veteran superintendent, Mr. J. J. Taylor, has consented to take charge of the task of putting not less than four hundred in the school during the next three months. Booneville Metbodism will prosper in the use of this great plant under the wise leadership of the pastor and the trained workers who will co-operate with him. It has been said by a few over-careful people that we are putting too much money in buildings. If these buildings are filled with eager boys and girls, men and women, learning the Christ way of living, the criticism is futile. It is the age-long struggle between mammon and God. Mammon must submit to the real, the eternal. Go on with your building if it does take money, the money that belongs to God.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

Sunday School Day offering for 1928 is larger than last year. We congratulate the pastors and superintendents. The ten schools sending in the largest amount are as follows: First Church, Shreveport, $250; Rayne Memorial, New Orleans, $87.48; Alexandria, $78.85; First Church, New Orleans, $58; First Church, Baton Rouge, $56.93; Carrollton Avenue, New Orleans, $50; Lake Charles, $50; Ruston, $50; Mansfield, $42.86, and Parker Memorial, New Orleans, $40.

Tbe district report at present:

Shreveport District	$382.99
New Orleans District	360.52
Lake Charles District	192.16
Baton Rouge District	171.88
Ruston District	169.45
Monroe District	155.18
Alexandria District	139.08
Minden District	45.83

The Bogalusa Sunday school, Mr. D. B. Talley, superintendent, has the honor of sending in the first report on "Childhood and Youth Week" observance. Mr. K. I. Bean is reported chairman of the Forward Step Committee. Attendance at the adult meeting was 250.

Mr. A. M. Mayo, Lake Charles, writes: "Had a fine day yesterday—490 in Sunday school; $137.04 by Sunday school and $86.38 by church, making $223.42 for the Orphanage; two great gospel messages: in the morning by Dr. R. H. Wynn, from, 'Behold, to obey is better than sacrifice, and to hearken than the fat of rams,' and in the evening by Dr. W. W. Holmes, from, 'And Jesus appeared unto them.'"

Mr. W. A. McKennon, First Church, Shreveport, writes: "Our Training School was well attended, having a total of 148 in attendance. The school voted to have another school next year. Our faculty this year was the best we have ever had."

Sunday, Oct. 14, was spent in New Orleans. Sunday morning we visited the Sunday school at Algiers. Rev. Martin Hebert and Mr. E. E. Cayard, pastor and superintendent, gave us a cordial welcome. This school had a fine representation at the Standard Training School.

Later in the day, in company with the pastor and his wife, we visited the "Bonner Memorial Home."

At 2:30 p. m., the eighth session of the New Orleans Standard Training School was opened at Rayne Memorial Church, with prospects of being the largest in its history, Co-operation of all the Sunday schools in the city was noted, almost all the pastors taking credit. The Educational Director of this school, Mr. J. H. Carter, is much pleased with the faculty and enrollment.

Sunday night we visited the Second Methodist Church, reaching there in time to attend tbe Epworth League service. During the day we had visited three churches, and at each place thought of the Sunday school superintendents, as I knew these churches thirty years ago—Mr. Frank Daniels, of Algiers; Mr. J. R. Westerfield, of Rayne Memorial, and Mr. Adams, at Second Church.

Sunday, Oct, 14, was "Harvest Day" in the Sunday schools, aud we hope every school observed this day. The Carrollton Avenue Sunday school, of which Rev. H. L. Johns is pastor, reports an attendance of 335, with an offering of $145.

Rev. A. K. McLellan, Conference Extension Secretary, reports an itinerary of visits to the Sunday schools on the Marksville charge, giving one night to each school. The pastor, Rev. C. B. White, co-operated in such a way as to make this itinerary profitable.

C. D. ATKINSON,
Conference Superintendent.

APPRECIATION.

At the last quarterly conference of the First Church, Water Valley, Miss., the following resolutions were passed:

Whereas, the duties of this conference ends the services of the Rev. E. S. Lewis, presiding elder of the Grenada District of the North Mississippi Annual Conference, with the First Methodist Church, Water Valley, Miss.; and whereas his work has been so helpful and satisfactory in every particular;

Therefore, resolved, That we, the members of the quarterly conference of the First Methodist Church of Water Valley, Miss., in session assembled, do hereby express our high appreciation of Brother Lewis and his faithful work among us.

Resolved, further, That we pledge to bim our prayers and unceasing interest, and as a final service we earnestly request that he give himself to the return of our beloved pastor for another term of service, with the utmost devotion.

Resolved, again, That a copy of these resolutions be furnished Brother Lewis, a copy be sent the New Orleans Christian Advocate, and a copy be sent the Commercial Appeal for publication.

Signed: W. B. Barry, O. T. Hamner.

These resolutions passed unanimously.

HIGH HONOR IS ACCORDED WILLIAM E. WEISS BY GERMANY.

We greet with the greatest of pleasure the news that Mr. William E. Weiss, general manager of the Sterling Products, Incorporated, of Wheeling, West Virginia, has received the degree of Doctor of Philosophy, honoris causa, from the University of Cologne, Germany, one of the largest and most important educational centers in the world.

Mr. Weiss is the more honored by the conferring of this degree for it is the first time that an American citizen has ever been invested with it, and thus it takes on a unique significance that makes it the more valuable.

The honor was awarded to Mr. Weiss in high recognition of his efforts to further the ludustrial relations between Germany and the United States. Those relations have improved materially in the last ten years thanks to the praiseworthy efforts of our industrial leaders, who like Mr. Weiss realize the vital importance of improving our economic intercourse with Germany.

Certainly Mr. Weiss is to be given generous commendation. His work has won official recognition from the German people whom he has so signally befriended as well as from industrial captains in this country, who realize the significance of his splendid ocntributions to the progress of the world.—National Business Review.

THE WORK AT PRICE MEMORIAL, GREENWOOD, MISS.

Dear Dr. Carley: Just a few words with reference to the work at Price Memorial this year. I am closing my quadrennium here; it is also the closing of the first quadrennium of the church. We have had a very good year, in some respects the best year we have had here. We had Brother E. G. Mohler with us in March for a Cokesbury Training School. We issued fifteen credits in this work, which has proved a great blessing to our Sunday school. We have a Progressive "C" Type School, doing fine work.

We had Rev. E. E. McKeithen, our pastor at Drew, with us for a revival of one week. Brother McKeithen did some fine preaching for us, and his work among us was a blessing to the whole church, with five additions to the membership. Our Leagues are well organized and doing fine work.

We claim the fifth Sunday in September as Red Letter Day in our church this year. We had a Home-Coming Day that filled our house full at the morning service, and practically filled it again at the evening service. Rev. L. M. James, our pastor at Waterford, came in the afternoon and preached for us at night. Brother James brought us a good message that completed the day in good shape. This day brought our people closer to one another and the whole congregation closer to God. More of the members were present this day than ever in one day in our church.

In spite of the fact that our regular budget is considerably larger this year than ever, including a raise in pastor's salary of $150, we are going to be able to say at the Annual Conference, "Everything in full, Bishop."

The Lord has wonderfully blessed the people and pastor at Price Memorial this year.

With kindest personal regards, we are,

Fraternally,
J. O. DOWDLE.

APPRECIATION.

(Resolutions adopted unanimously at the fourth quarterly conference, Minter City and Glenmora charge, Greenwood District, assembled Oct. 14, 1928.)

Whereas, our presiding elder, Rev. L. P. Wasson, is making his last official visit to us for this Conference year; and,

Whereas, Brother Wasson has been to us a faithful leader in all the activities of the church and has faithfully preached to us the unsearchable riches of Christ in a most helpful way.

Therefore, be it resolved, That we sincerely thank Brother Wasson for his faithful and painstaking performance of all the duties pertaining to his office; second, that we express our confidence in his proven Christian integrity, and assure him of our continued love and interest in his well-being; third, that if in the providence of God and in the wise judgment of our presiding bishop at the approaching session of the Anuual Conference he be returned to the Greenwood District another year, we wish here and now to express our very great gratification and pledge to him our most loyal co-operation in his administration, with brotherly love and affectionate interest.

Signed: By the Pastor, Entire Board of Stewards, Charge Lay Leader.

AN ORGANIZATION OF "CHARACTER."

"Near East Relief has surpassed all the great philanthropic organizations," said Felix Warburg in an interview. "It has 'character'—loyalty, conscientiousness and vision. I saw its work in the refugee camps of Greece," went on the financier, "when more than a million deportees from Anatolia poured into Hellas after the Smyrna disaster; and in Syria when thousands of Armenian women and children were driven southwards from Cilicia; and again when the orphanages of Greece and Constantinople, Syria and Palestine were full of wretched little creatures rescued from nakedness and starvation. Those relief workers, men and women, were Americans to be proud of. They did not hesitate to do the hardest and most disagreeable tasks. They washed the dirtiest babies and made gallons upon gallons of soup with the most primitive equipment. If there is a job to do no time is lost in talking about it; it is attended to and at once. It is non-sectarian—the fact that a child is suffering or in need is sufficient reason for helping him.

"Every child who has been taught something of hygiene and sanitation is a focus of health for the community where he lives. The elders will listen to him, for there is such a thing as a healthy envy and when the old men see the youngsters improving on the lives of their ancestors they will want to do the same. The mass influence of the 132,000 children trained by Near East Relief is enormous.

"In Athens I saw eight 'ex-orphan' boys on the point of starting for Egypt where they were to be placed in positions. They were fine, upstanding chaps, and no one who saw them could help knowing that they would be valuable additions to any community that sheltered them."

SMITH DEFEATED

Do you desire to assist in the overwhelming defeat of the "wet Tammany candidate" for the Presidency, Governor Alfred E. Smith? If so, help to give the voters important facts.

It is desired to send at least four additional communications to each voter. The cost of each separate communication (including printing, folding, addressing and mailing) is approximately three cents. Therefore, for example, the cost of reaching even 200,000 voters in Virginia with four communications would be approximately $25,000, and, in fact, the Smith Democratic Committee of Virginia is asking for $250,000 or $300,000.

The cost of similar work in Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Lousiana, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas and West Virginia will be in proportion to the number of voters in those States.

Send check for largest amount possible to TREASURER ANTI-SMITH DEMOCRATS, BOX 674, RICHMOND, VA., if you want this work done properly and Smith overwhelmingly defeated.

FROM THE LOUISIANA FIELD SECRETARY.

Those who are aequainted with Minden District know that it takes quite a bit of traveling to get around in the district. Consequently I have been on the move this last week. Because of the efficient and untiring efforts of our district secretaries, Misses Mary Searles, of Minden, and Carmen Moffett, of Selma, I am finding quite an improvement in our League growth in this district. Of course I find some Leagues in every district that are lagging in their work and seemingly inactive; but that is characteristic of young people at times.

At Jouesville I found that there was no active organization, but they are to organize with the help of Miss Moffett on Nov. 3. I'm sorry that I was unable to meet with the Jena, Trout, and Goodpine Leagues. I will look forward to a time when I can meet with them and help them with their League activities. On Thursday night I enjoyed being with my friends, Rev. and Mrs. James T. Harris, in their home in Rochelle. I met with the Selma and Rochelle young people that night. I want my Conference to know that one of the finest Leagues in the State is found in Selma. They are proud of their fine president, Miss Gussie Nugent, and of their pastor, Rev. A. D. Lemons, and I'm sure Brother Lemons is proud of such splendid Leaguers. They are earnest, consecrated workers. Though only a small church, they believe in efficiency. The Selma Leaguers have organized several Leagues in the district and the result of their efforts is far-reaching.

I was indeed sorry to know that my Coushatta Leaguers did not know of my meeting with them. In some way our letters did not go to the proper persons and I arrived in Coushatta Friday evening unexpectedly. Brother and Mrs. Williams were certainly lovely to me and with the help of Miss Bertie Marston we had a League hour all our own. Saturday I went to Campti. That evening I went with Brother Lowrey to visit the Davis Springs Leaguers. We found a large group of splendid young people and a few of the older members awaiting us. The president, Miss Sammy Jackson, is doing a splendid work with her Leaguers and I was proud to find there, too, a fine group of consecrated young people. Sunday morning I had charge of the church hour at Campti and enjoyed addressing the congregation in behalf of our Leaguers. After an appreciative stay in the Lowery home, I went to Doyline for the night service and was surprised to have Brother Day tell me that I was to fill his pulpit and talk to the Leaguers as well as the entire congregation. Brother Day had a full congregation, too, and from appearances must be carrying on a splendid work in Haughton and Doyline. The Haughton Leaguers also met with us. The Doyline young people are to organize a new Hi-League at once.

After church, our friend and Leaguer, Mr. Geo. Nelson, drove me to Plain Dealing, where I now am. I am pleased to tell that the Plain Dealing young people have three active organizations, including the Junior Society, Hi-League and Senior League. Rev. and Mrs. H. E. Pfost are most interested in the progress of their young people and they have splendid leadership in Mrs. Ben Turnley, Mrs. S. C. Barr, Mrs. M. R. Bodinger, Mrs. Frank Collins, and Mrs. Earnest Gillam, who are helpers and counselors of the different chapters. The Hi-League is conducting a Young People's Revival each morning before the school hour. I had the pleasure of meeting with them two mornings and giving them their devotional talk. Monday afternoon I met with the Junior Society and Monday night with the Seniors.

I am getting some splendid reports on our Young People's Revivals. If your chapter is conducting one, let us know about it.

Pardon my unusually long letter, but I always like to tell of such fine things being done by our Leaguers and leaders and to use this means of thanking our Heavenly Father for the consecrated youth that I have the pleasure of working with. Readers, these young people need your co-operation and prayers if their visions and ideals are to become a part of their Christian living.

Your Field Secretary,
ELIZABETH LANGFORD.

DR. CALDWELL'S THREE RULES

Dr. Caldwell watched the results of constipation for 47 years, and believed that no matter how carefui people are of their health, diet and exercise, constipation will occur from time to time. Of next importance, then, is how to treat it when it comes. Dr. Caldwell always was in favor of getting as close to nature as possible, hence his remedy for constipation is a mild vegetable compound. It can not harm the most delicate system and is not habit forming.

The Doctor never did approve of drastic physics and purges. He did not believe they were good for human beings to put into their system. Use Syrup Pepsin for yourself and members of the family in constipation, biliousness, sour and crampy stomach, bad breath, no appetite, headaches, and to break up fevers and colds. Get a bottle today, at any drugstore and observe these three rules of health: Keep the head cool, the feet warm, the bowels open. For a free trial bottle, just write "Syrup Pepsin," Dept. BB, Monticello, Illinois.

AN APPRECIATION.

By Rev. Joseph A. Smith.

"A swift passing to a mightier sphere,
New joys, perfected powers, the vision clear;
And all the amplitude of heaven to work
The work she held so dear."

This appreciation is of one whose life was beautifully simple—the unassuming and yet sublime simplicity in which greatness attains its best.

Agnes Rebecca Jones, wife of Rev. J. R. Jones, presiding elder of the Hattiesburg District in the Mississippi Conference, was born sixty-three years ago in Jasper County, Miss., and died Aug. 26, after a brief illness, in Hattiesburg, Miss. But no simple chronology will fix the limits of her life, or measure its worth. In the personality of this one there was a certain symmetry of moral development, a noble balance of faculties and a gracious and practical wisdom learned in the school of life which deeply impressed those who knew her best with the beauty and strength of her character. She labored for over thirty years in the women's organizations and young people's work of many different charges in the Mississippi Conference. During these years she was tireless nd effective, yet she remained a gentle soul, with love of nature and delight in all simple human relationships.

Mrs. Jones possessed a keen sense of responsibility. She was a woman of great love and discriminating conscience. Her loyalty and ceaseless interest in the work of her local church made her one of the most faithful members in Main Street charge. She was a true missionary in spirit and vision. She felt both the importance and urgency of the task of world-evangelization and gave unstintedly both of her energy and prayers to the promotion of this gigantic enterprise of faith. She was always optimistic in the face of difficulties and was keyed to full faith in the ultimate triumph of the truth as it is in Christ Jesus.

Mrs. Jones was a good woman—and there is no greatness apart from goodness. In lovely and chaste affection, calm, sweet hopefulness, love-inspired and creative faith, her personality richly exemplified the Christian ideal. Her heart was filled with that divine love which is first pure and then peacable. Her spirit was adorned with the grace of humility and the strength of patient and loving self-sacrifice.

One need not try to recount her deeds of intimate tenderness and loyal devotion to her loved ones and to the church. Good deeds will outlast the stars. When marble obelisks, ground into dust by the wheels of time, have been carried away on the wings of the wind, the influence of this good woman will still live. She dared to incarnate the cross in her life and thus forget herself into the immortality of those who serve their fellowmen.

"Lord, help me live from day to day,
In such a self-forgetful way,
That even when I kneel to pray,
My prayer shall be for others."

FATHER'S BIRTHDAY.

Father, dear to the heart of me
Are you who bear that name,
To love always and loved be
By one who's ever the same,
Makes our lives so happy.

God gave me to you,
And He gave you to me;
Always you've been kind and true,
Patient, tender, loving,
All the long years through.

Home you make wondrous sweet;
Hard you worked for us all;
You taught us God, Love Complete;
Heaven's blessings on thee fall,
'Tii in Heaven we shall meet.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S REVIVAL AT FAYETTE.

Dear Brother Carley: We have just closed the first Young People's Revival ever held in this church, possibly the first in the district. The movement was sponsored, of course, by the Senior Epworth League, but we succeeded in enlisting the B. Y. P. U., the Christian Endeavor, the Girls' Reserve and the Hi-Y from the local school, also the Young People's Missionary Society of our own church, and the committee in charge was made up of two representatives from each of these. An advisory committee of older persons represented all three churches.

The public services consisted of prayer groups at 7:15 each evening and preaching at 7:30 by Rev. Otto Porter, of Port Gibson. Brother Porter, in his clear and forceful manner, spoke on "Consecration," "What We Are as Opposed to What We Have," "Sin Finding Us Out," "Watchfulness," and the "Choice of a Life Task," all particularly suited to the needs of the young people. I have never heard a better series of sermons for young people than these five.

Two fine young men, students in the local high school, united with the church on profession of faith. The young people carried on a prayer group of their own, which added much to the development of their spiritual lives. At the closing service the response to the appeal for those who were willing to do in life what God would have them do was heart-stirring and seemingly genuine. We shall be better folks because of this meeting.

REPORT OF TWO GOOD MEETINGS.

Dear Doctor: I always like to share good news with the readers of the Advocate; therefore I am sending you the report of two good meetings held on my work. The first of May, Rev. L. W. Cain, our presiding elder, put me in charge of Sunny Hill and Mt. Hermon, on the Washington circuit, and Bush and Sun, on the Pearl River circuit, as junior preacher under Rev. A. A. McKnight.

Our first meeting was held for Sunny Hill and Mt. Hermon combined, and we secured Rev. Harry Allen, of Macon, Ga., who came with his tent. At this meeting we had a fine attendance, and the church was revived. Nine united with the Methodist Church and nine went to the Baptist Church.

At Bush I secured the help of Rev. Walter Cross, of Cole, Miss., and Rev. Clyde Calhoun, of Columbia, Miss. We stretched their tent Sept. 25 and ran till Oct. 7. I have never seen more consecrated young ministers than they are. They went out into the highways and hedges and brought them in. Several old men were saved. Some over 70 years of age walked two or three miles to attend the services. The Baptists co-operated with us and they got great good out of the meeting. We witnessed the old-time power of the Holy Spirit saving the people at the mourner's bench. Twenty-three united with our church and four with the Baptist; and many backsliders were reclaimed.

Brother Cross is a graduate of Asbury College. He has been accepted by the Board of Mission, and he will soon enter upon his work as a missionary; at present he is serving a circuit in the Mississippi Conference.

My meeting at Sun will begin the third Sunday in October.

Pray for us.

F. N. SWEENEY.

APPRECIATION.

(Resolutions adopted at the fourth quarterly conference of Pickens and Goodman charge, Grenada District, Oct. 11, 1928.)

Whereas, in accordance with the law of the church, our presiding elder, Rev. E. S. Lewis, will be removed to another field of labor at the approaching Annual Conference, he having served us a full quadrennium; therefore be it resolved:

1. That we thank Brother Lewis for his faithful and painstaking performance of the duties pertaining to his office.

2. That we express our confidence in his proven integrity and Christian character and assure him of our continued love and interest in his well-being.

3. We commend him to those among whom he will be sent to labor, and pray God's richest blessings upon him.

We also wish to request Brother Lewis to convey to his wife our thanks for making his ministry to us so helpful. We know that the wife at home in the parsonage is due a large share of reward for the preacher's success.

With brotherly love and affectionate interest,

Signed: S. A. Brown, Pastor, J. E. Chisholm, W. E. Meek.

APPRECIATION.

Whereas, this being the fourth and last year of Brother Cunningham's administration in this the Corinth District as presiding elder, and this being the fourth quarterly conference at Ripley station Methodist Church, we, the members of this church, through and by the official boards, desire to express our appreciation to Brother Cunningham for his faithful and untiring labor with us during the past four years. He has not only given us a business administration, which has been second to none, but he has proved himself to be a great spiritual Gospel preacher, and by his forceful, logical and spiritual preaching he has given us a thought of a deep sense of spirituality that we hope will not be forgotten.

Therefore be it resolved in open session of this fourth quarterly conference, That we express our love and appreciation to Brother Cunningham for his fairness as an executor and his loyalty to Methodism and as a great leader of his flock, and bespeak for him wherever he may go or whatever may fall to his lot that duty and success will be to and for him, and the good will of this church goes with him wherever it may be. We pray God's richest blessings on him and his dear ones.

Respectfully submitted,

S. S. FINGER,

Chairman Board of Stewards.

NOT DOCTRINE BUT LIFE.

"Christianity is not primarily a doctrine but a life," says Professor Soares, of Chicago University. "Jesus' parable of the Two Foundations has been strangely misinterpreted. He distinctly did not say, 'He that heareth these saying of mine and agreeth with them,' but doeth them.' Rock-founded character is that which is established in conduct. Jesus with his wonderful insight has here said exactly what modern psychology says. If you believe, you must act upon your faith or you will lose it; and if you act as if you did believe, you will come to believe."—Exchange.

IMPORTUNITY.

Importunity of prayer is the sign for which God's loving wisdom waits of the sincerity of our desire for his gifts, and of the fitness of our character to receive them. It is the evidence of desire. If our prayer be formal, languid, intermittent, our desire cannot be real and deep. And urgency of prayer is the evidence of fitness to receive.—Archbishop Lang.

In Five Million Homes Tonight

There are times when all a mother's love can't soothe a fretful baby. No way of telling just what's wrong, yet something must be done. Castoria time! A few drops, and Baby has dropped off to sleep. Yet this marvelous means of quieting a restless infant is utterly harmless. There is not one ingredient but what all doctors know and approve, and would let you give your baby every day in the week. In fact Castoria is a purely vegetable product. Gas pains, constipation, even diarrhea can be dispelled in this same manner. Castoria is older than you are, but physicians still say "nothing better for babies." An old-fashioned remedy if you count its years, but parents are old-fashioned who still raise babies without its aid! And at least five million modern mothers keep it handy day and night, for twenty-five million bottles were bought last year! Buy yours now; don't wait until you need it.

Philadelphia, Pa.—"I really can't express in writing how much Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. After my second baby was born I was always tired. I read so much of what the Vegetable Compound has done for others that I gave it a trial. It has certainly done wonders for me. I have praised it to single and to married women and intend to continue it. It seems that taking your medicine has made me a different girl. I also secured Lydia E. Pinkham's Pills for Constipation and they have helped me wonderfully."—Mrs. Helen Sedivi, 4939 National Street, Tacony, Philadelphia, Pa.

A Weak, Nervous Woman Helped

Terre Haute, Ind.—"I have a baby six months old and after he was born I felt so badly I could hardly do my work. I was weak, nervous and run-down. I have taken three bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and would not be without it. I feel lots better and am able to do my housework. I also take Lydia E. Pinkham's Pills for Constipation. I would like you to print this letter in some of the papers for I have often heard remarks about your testimonials. They say, 'You never see letters from anyone in this city. It is always somewhere else.'"—Mrs. J. K. Monce, 1801 Blaine Avenue, Terre Haute, Indiana.

GOITRE NOT A DISEASE

Milwaukee Doctor Makes Remarkable Discovery.

Milwaukee, Wis.: It has been brought to light by scientific research that goitre is not a disease and is not to be treated as such. Dr. A. A. Rock, Dept.788, Box 737, Milwaukee, Wis., a prominent goitre specialist for over 24/ years, has perfected a different method of treatment for his patients that has proved remarkably successful. This same method is now being used for a home treatment of goitre cases all over the country with astounding results. The Doctor states that goitre is a condition which grows worse with neglect and recommends immediate attention no matter how small the growth may appear. He strongly opposes needless operations. Dr. Rock is the author of a book that tells in a simple way about treating goitre at home. He has published this book at his own expense and will send a copy free to anyone interested.

A FIRE-FLY AND A SOUL.

By Rev. Arthur Madison Shaw.

All afternoon the lightnings flash'd,
The rain in torrents pour'd;
White-crested waves the lakeshore lash'd,
Wind howl'd and thunder roar'd

The dark night came; huff'd was the blast;
The murky clouds hung low;
High through the mist a fire-fly pass'd,
And flash'd its fitful glow.

How strange that such a fragile thing
Should cheat the tempest's ire,
And from aloft its splendor fling
In intermittent fire!

Brave sprite!—may He who kept thy form
Secure 'gainst wind and rain
Preserve my soul in every storm
That sweeps life's batter'd plain.

May I with courage wing my flight
The murky mists above,
And fling across the inky night
The glow of faith and love!

THE DRY FANATIC.

By Ernest H. Cherrington, LL.D., Litt.D., Director of Department of Education, Anti-Saloon League of America.

I met a dry fanatic the other day. I had been reading about him so frequently that I rejoiced when the opportunity came to meet this elusive and curious specimen of the genus Homo. In the absence of a stenographic report, these random quotations from his rabid, bigoted conversation may aid social students in forming a just estimate of this variety of kill-joy in all his Puritanical narrowness. Listen to this:

"Yes, I suppose I am a fanatic on prohibition. I don't want to see the law modified or weakened. I don't want to see beer or light wines, the saloon or any part of the old traffic return. I am against every attempt to deal with this question in a reasonable or rational manner. When I was a boy down on the farm in Connecticut we used to go out the old Schaghticoke reservation and kill the rattlesnakes as they lay sunning themselves on the limestone ledges. Possibly we did not deal with them in any rational or reasonable way, but we dealt with them rather effectively and life was longer and happier and simpler just because we were rather narrow-minded and bigoted about rattlesnakes.

"I feel just that way about liquor. I know a chap who says he can take it or let it alone, but I have never met anybody yet who would admit that liquor would let him alone. That's one reason why I'm against it. It was against me first. It was not only against me, but against my business and against my home and against my church and against pretty nearly everything that I cared about in this world.

"I am a peaceable man, but when any bunch rob me, abuse me and threaten the peace, the happiness and the lives of my family and my friends, then I am going to fight.

"I am running a medium-sized business and trying to manufacture something that people will buy if I can make them cheaply enough to compete with the bigger fellows. So long as the open saloon was competing with me for the brains and attention of my workers, I had a hard time. I used to dread Monday, especially if I had a big order which must be gotten out. I never knew just how many fellows would show up at the plant or how much they would be worth after they got there. All I knew was that Monday I lost money. I lost money every afternoon, too. I paid for the time of my men, but I didn't get it. The bartender had seen them first. Liquor just would not leave me alone. It's different now. Monday is just the same as Wednesday or Thursday or any other day. The machines turn out just as much work in the afternoons as they do in the mornings. I can figure on production costs for the first time in my life and I am making some money.

"I suppose I am selfish in wanting profits, but I find that about all of the worthwhile people in my factory are coming to feel just as I do about this question. They are getting more money than they ever got before. That's because my production costs have dropped since they shut up the gin mills. Pretty nearly everybody comes to work here in an automobile. None of them owned an automobile before prohibition. They need automobiles more now than they used to, because most of them have moved out into the suburbs where they are buying their own homes. Before prohibition many of them were glad to pig it in one of two rooms in a ramshackle tenement. That was all they could have in those days, because the bartender got their pay checks.

"I am rather a fanatic, too, on cutting industrial accidents. They were mighty expensive. I never was sure just how big a slice I would have to make in my profits because some woozy-eyed chap stuck his hand between the cogs. I had every safety device I could get; but what use are safety devices when the operator is awry-eyed? About the only safety device that really works, in my experience, is prohibition. I don't know when we have had an accident at the plant. I am glad of that not only because of the financial gain, but because I know most of the people working for me and hate to see them carved up just because they are tipsy.

"They made me a director at the bank a year or two ago, and I got another slant on this prohibition business. I never thought those saving accounts amounted to much. I know better now. They are worth more to our bank than some of the big accounts of our favorite pets. I have noticed that people who used to want an advance on their salaries before pay day are running some pretty good-sized accounts at the bank right now. They are not putting all their money in the bank, of course. They are buying insurance. They are furnishing their homes. They are sending the boys and girls to school longer than they used to. When people borrow money now, they do it to get something that is an investment, not to make up for the money they tossed over the bar on pay night.

"Of course, prohibition has cut out our cheap labor. The sober men know they are worth more, and they get it. They won't send their boys into the factory either as soon as they have passed the school age. But, then, I never did think much of cheap labor. I would rather get the best and pay its worth, and the best is sober, twenty-four hours in every day and seven days in every week.

"They tell me there is a lot of bootleg liquor being drunk to-day. I read somewhere that the people in this country were drinking more than ever. It may be so, but I am lucky in not living in any of these places. I know some folks who drink, just as I know some folks who do all kinds of things that they should not. But I also know that there are mighty few drinkers among the workers in our community and there are just as few drinkers among the bosses and employers. I am not much on society, but my wife is, and each of us has noticed that folks who used to serve cocktails three years ago have cut it out. Of course, we are not in the Four Hundred class and I don't know what they do. But we are in the hundred million class and I guess the rest of that crowd behave just about the same as the people we run around with.

"Yes, I know I am a fanatic. I suppose I'm a bigot, too, whatever that is, but I'd rather be a bigot than a spigot. I'd rather have my health than take a drink. I'd rather know my business is prospering than return to the old days when the corner saloon stole the skill and efficiency from the men to whom I was paying good wages. I'm glad my boy and girl don't see a drunken man in six months, although we had plenty of them when we had license here. I am not very pious and I suppose I don't go to church as often as I ought to, but I'll back up the churches any day in their fight to keep our town or State or nation clean and sober.

"I am not satisfied with prohibition, of course I am not satisfied with anything. I know most things in this world can be improved. I am trying to improve some of them without playing any 'holier than thou' part, and anything I can do to get more prohibition, and better prohibition, I'm glad to do. If that be fanaticism and if that be bigotry, well, I guess you'll have to make the most of it."

A fanatic? Well, perhaps he is fairly representative of the great body of the American people who are coming to see very clearly in spite of all the camouflage offered by the apologists of the liquor traffic, that there is no place in this interlocking, high-powered civilization for beverage alcohol, but that this belongs to lower and slower civilization.

POETICAL THOUGHTS.

By Mrs. George S. Brown.

"But the Lord said unto Samuel, Look not on his countenance, or on the height of his stature; because I have refused him; for the Lord seeth not as man seeth; for man looketh on the outward appearance, but the Lord looketh on the heart."—(I Sam. 16:7.)

A Talk With the Waves.

O waves, as you ceaselessly roll on the shore,
With your fretful splash and your noisome roar,
Do you not tire of the meaningless strife,
Of endless disturbance the whole of your life?

Is it worth while to moan and complain?
O where is your victory, what is your gain?
Can you not calmly and quietly lie,
Waiting in patience for the days to go by?

Struggling and murmuring all are in vain,
The world is so busy 'twill heed not your pain,
'Twill laugh when you laugh, O waves of the deep,
But 'tis not the world's way to weep when you weep.

You say I don't know, my words are unjust;
You lash, and you roar, and you moan, for you must,
You are moved by God's hand and you do but obey,
You are faithful to duty by night and by day.

I heed your rebuke, O voice of the sea,
You cannot be still, but busy must be!
There's work in the world for me and for you,
And I to my duty must be just as true.

—Mrs. George S. Brown.

No wonder that our Savior said, "Judge not, that ye be not judged." We are so ready to condemn and to criticize and to pass harsh judgment, never really knowing surroundings and conditions. Our lives have different environment, we are constituted so differently, so we cannot tell what we would do if placed in similar conditions to those we condemn. We wonder why some are so restless and so like a cyclone, and we do not realize that their temperament is such that they cannot keep still. Like the waves of the sea, they lash and they roar and struggle because impelled by some hidden force that we cannot see. It is impossible for them to sit down calmly and quietly. Maybe we have a phlegmatic temperament, and we are not stirred by the every-day occurrences of life. It would be as difficult for us to get up and make a big ado as for the others to be quiet. We are not fashioned after the same pattern. Therefore we should have patience and be gentle with those who differ from us.

The things of nature do just what God wants them to do. The flowers bud and blossom, then wither and lie buried in the earth, until touched by the Master hand. The little inanimate seeds obey the laws of Nature. The waves of the sea lash and moan when stirred by the wind and storm, but they lie calm and quiet when they hear the Savior's, "Peace, be still." So we may learn a lesson from them and in the work our Lord assigns us, busy and bustling when he bids us be, but patiently waiting when he says, "Wait on the Lord, be of good courage."

SALEM CAMP MEETING AND THE DEVOTIONAL LIFE.

By Elam F. Dempsey, D.D., Presiding Elder of the Oxford District.

I. An Oft-Expressed Desire.

Many have expressed a desire to have the numberless spiritual truths heard at Salem camp meeting put in permanent form and made accessible to multitudes who could not come. Herein, I am doing this in a small way.

Quite a number of hearers have the excellent habit of noting in their Bible texts, from which they have heard sermons, together with name of preacher, date, and place. Two such Bibles have been shown me by godly women—one in Turin and one in Milledgeville. Another good habit is to make the Bible a sort of scrap-book of sermon-reports from the press and, especially, of sermons which the owner of the Bible has heard delivered. By this means these devout spirits obey Jesus' injunction, "Take heed how ye hear." Such readers of our church press, of their Bibles, and such hearers of the sermons are before my mind as I write these lines and I am hoping this statement may increase their number. O, that our people, from youth to old age, may become increasingly a Bible-reading and a Bible-loving nation!" Wherewithal shall a young man cleanse his way? By taking heed thereto according to thy word" (Psalm 119:9). "O God, thou hast taught me from my youth: and hitherto have I declared thy wondrous works. Now also when I am old and gray-headed, O God, forsake me not; until I have shewed thy strength unto this generation, and thy power to every one that is to come" (Psalm 71:17, 18). Now, hear God's answer to his child's piteous plea: "Fear thou not; I am with thee; be not discouraged; for I am thy God: I will strengthen thee; yea, I will help thee; yea, I will uphold thee with the right hand of my righteousness" (trustworthiness, dependability, reliability, fidelity, integrity). (Isaiah 41:10). God is the rock-foundation for youth, maturity, age. See Isaiah 40:11, Psalm 19:14 (margin on "Strength"), Dent. 32:31, Matt. 7:24-29, Matt. 16:18, Rom. 8:33, I Cor. 10:4. Any other foundation is sand and will destroy all men or nations who build upon it.

II. Salem Means "Peace."

The word Salem means "peace," and is found in many combinations in the Bible, the chief example of which is the word "Jerusalem." When the fathers, one hundred and five years ago, named their camp grouud, they evidently hoped it would be a means of bringing many souls to know "the peace that passeth understanding" (Phil. 4:7). Their holy wish has been granted, for, during its century and one lustrum of existence, many have been saved, reclaimed, and advanced in grace. Bishops Audrew, Pierce, Haygood, Candler and Dickey, together with other notable men not a few, have proclaimed with power sent down from heaven, the gospel from "the stand" beneath "the arbor," here. Credit for this "genuine spirituality" is due, not only to the faithful pastors and devout preachers, but to the consecrated men who compose the board of trustees, the present chairman being Hon. W. S. Ramsey, Covington, Ga., who has held this responsible office for twoscore years.

The music was especially good; Prof. R. F. Hicks, director.

III. The Preachers and Some of "Uncle Nath's" Sayings.

Those who preached this year were Bishop W. A. Candler, Revs. Nath Thompson, N. P. Manning, W. T. Irvine, J. R. Jordan, P. A. Kellett, M. L. Smith, L. Rumble.

Among the visiting ministers, who, without exception, were helpful to the meeting, were Revs. A. O. Baggerly, J. Foster Young, Simeon Shaw, R. E. Rutland, R. B. Smith, W. Huck, S. B. Hay, Percy Whitworth, E. M. Lott, Howard Sims, H. J. Penn and H. C. and T. J. Christian (both of whom, brothers, are "sons of Salem" in a very special sense, as they were born nearby and their father was one of the "tenters" in other days).

Rev. Nath Thompson, pastor of Woodlawn (Methodist) Church, Augusta, Ga., who is affectionately known far and near as "Uncle Nath," and is equally widely noted for his eloquent, witty and persuasive pulpit oratory, preached twice daily—with several "children's services" thrown in for good measure—at 11 o'clock each morning (except Sunday) and at 8 o'clock each night, saying enough sage things to fill a very readable book of good size. I give herein only a few from one sermon, based on Romans 12, the entire chapter, which he called "Inspired Advice for the Successful Living of Everyday, Practical Religion." He said: "I believe in a whole, wholesome, every-day religion—and Sunday, too, thrown in for a rarity." . . . "You don't judge a possum dog by his bark—but by the possum up the tree." ("A tree is known by its fruits") . . . "The eyes of the world are going to judge us" (professing Christians) "by what we do" . . . "The folks who did the most good are the folks who practiced their religion." . . . "You can detect the current of the wind—its direction—better with a feather than with a windmill." . . . "At another camp meeting, I noticed a certain preacher, at the preachers' tent, feel all the beds, and—he took the best:—he's not preaching now! He located, or, as I heard the word once used, he 'dislocated'!" . . . "These little graces, kindnesses, commend us to the world. They have a tremendous influence on our reputation and in the building of character." . . . "Let's be sensitive to the least thing that's selfish, or the least thing that expresses the Spirit of Christ." . . . "Suppose every one of us here should go back home and become a first-class, practical Christian in our own church." . . . "The climax of God's gift is his only begotten Son on the cross." . . . "Every one of us is as near and dear to God as is the greatest of earth." . . . "Love, in order to live, must find expression." . . . "It is easier to be a whole Christian than a piece of a Christian. It is easier to love God with the whole heart than with 99 per cent of it." . . . "You talk about religion not being practical, why, it's the only practical thing. Nothing fits the need of the world as it does." . . . "Nothing will so preserve the beauty of girlhood as a good case of religion." . . . "Nothing so energizes muscle or mind as a good case of religion." . . . "The best decision we can make is to decide to make a whole Christian. And, why not? It's a reasonable thing, a moral, wholesome way to live. Christ is no piece of a Savior. He has no weak place in him at all. I'm going to be a 'hundred percent'er!" . . . "Even a ball player must play the game with all his heart, if he is to enjoy it." . . . "The most fun I have in life is to love my neighbor."

Two other "saying" I will give, taken from another sermon: "Men sin for two reasons: First, they sin because they 'can quit'; and, second, they sin because they 'can't quit.' They sin, first, because they are 'strong,' and, then, they sin because they are 'weak.'"

Indelible impressions for good were made by this man of God, who is, also, sage, poet, seer, and man of letters. Long since, he should have put into book form his pungent essays, entitled "Uncle Nath's Notions."

IV. A Yale Man at 3 P. M. at This Georgia Camp Ground.

Rev. M. L. Smith, a Yale University man, now busy with his Doctor of Philosophy thesis, "Atticus Greene Haygood: Christian Educator," brought the Sunday afternoon message, which was Scriptural, fervent, practical. It met a hearty response from the nearly two thousand who heard it. His text was II Timothy 4:6-8, "For I am now ready to be offered, and the time of my departure is at hand. I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith. Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous judge, shall give me at that day; and not to me only, but unto all them also that love his appearing." After speaking of the occasion for the writing of this epistle—a most valuable bit of exposition—the speaker went into the heart of his subject, declaring, with electrifying effect, that "Men judge our efforts to live an apostolic life, by—what we do!" A chorus of "Amens!" greeted these words. And, from that point onward to the end of the learned but evangelical sermon, such responses were numerous. From one-third to one-half of the two thousand hearers pressed forward to take Dr. Smith's hand as they pledged themselves to strive to live "the apostlic life and win the crown of righteousness."

V. Southern Methodism's Senior Bishop at 11 A. M. Sunday.

In conclusion, from the Covington News' account, I give the following: "The sermon by Bishop Candler on Sunday of camp meeting is like the camp ground itself—an institution. For many years the Bishop has been preaching the morning sermon and people came many miles to hear him, and many of those who came have been hearing him for many years at every opportunity. He is easily one of the greatest preachers in America.

"Bishop W. A. Candler's visit and sermon at 11 a. m. Sunday deserves a special treatment. Such preaching belongs to the supreme tradition of the pulpit. For sustained thought, lofty emotion, eloquence of the first order, it left nothing to be desired. His theme was 'The Love Which Is Inspired by Forgiveness.' The Scripture text was the passage dealing with the Pharisee, the Savior, and the 'woman which was a sinner,' who washed his feet with her tears. A richly fruitful expository sermon was built around each of these three characters: (1) The Pharisee; (2) The Savior; (3) The woman which was a sinner. With startling effect, the great Bishop said, 'The first of her sin had burned off her name, so that she is nameless forever in the Scripture record.' Magnifying God's love, the thought was brought out that God never put upon another the responsibility of assuring the repentant sinner that he is forgiven. 'There was a convict,' said the Bishop, 'whose governor became certain was innocent of the crime charged against him. A pardon was drafted and sent, but the messenger met inevitable delay, so that, when he arrived, the convict, poor fellow, had been dead two or three days. He was free but did not know it. God never allows this to happen with those he pardons. No tallest arch-angel is trusted with this message; God himself speaks pardon to the stricken sinner.' At the close of this powerful message, hundreds pressed forward to shake the hand of Bishop Candler in token of their purpose to lead a holy life."

The messages of the other ministers not reviewed in detail, sustained a high average of excellence for clear thought, pointed speech, and heart appeal. Good fruit will come from the seed they sowed.—Wesleyan Christian Advocate.

BISHOP CANNON'S STATEMENT.

(In answer to the charge that his attitude in the present presidential campaign is due to religious bigotry, Bishop James Cannon, Jr., has issued the statement that follows. In speaking for himself, Bishop Cannon speaks for many others against whom the charge of intolerance has been brought. He and they have the right to be heard.—Editor.)

Along with other Democrats who are opposing the election of Governor Smith on the ground of his Tammany origin, affiliation and control on his open, vigorous and persistent attack on the Eighteenth Amendment, I was accused in the secular press by Mr. J. J. Raskob of using "Prohibition as a cloak for Bigotry," and Governor Smith at Oklahoma City declared that Senator Owen and others, including myself, who are opposing him on account of his Tammany affiliation are using Tammany as a "red herring," and that the real ground of opposition to him is "my religion." This charge of religious bigotry made openly by the leader has been echoed all along the line, with Senator Robinson, Mr. J. W. Davis, and the Smith newspapers leading the van.

So far as I am personally concerned, my prohibition record of thirty years brands it as absolutely false. I declared my opposition to Reed and Ritchie before the Houston convetion and would have publicly opposed either of them, if nominated, as I have opposed Smith.

This charge of intolerance is in reality a smoke screen intended not only to becloud and obscure Prohibition and Tammany, real issues in the campaign, but to arouse in Governor Smith's behalf the very religious intolerance his supporters are publicly denouncing so vigorously.

And now, at the very time when Smith, Robinson, Raskob, Davis and the Smith press are circulating sweeping charges that intolerant Protestant bigots, especially in the South, are making religious appeals against Smith, I have before me incontrovertible evidence of the use being made of religious appeals in behalf of Governor Smith, not by isolated individuals, but by official organs of the Roman Catholic Church, which Governor Smith's opponents are charged with making an issue in this campaign.

It comes from so responsible and prominent a quarter that it seems inconceivable that the leaders of the Smith movement do not know of it, especially as it is certain that this is only one manifestation of a very general organized efforts to secure support for Smith on religious grounds.

I quote from the editorial page of "The Missionary," official national organ of the Catholic Missionary Union, published monthly at the Apostolic Mission House, Washington, D. C., issue for October. The president of the organization which issues this publication is no less distinguished a leader of Governor Smith's church than His Eminence Patrick Cardinay Hayes, whose seat is in New York. I quote from a four-column editorial which appeared in this publication about the time Governor Smith was denouncing religious intolerance in his Oklahoma City speech and attributing bigotry to those who refuse to support him. "The Missionary" says, editorially:

"This campaign has been intensely significant to Catholics because it is so plainly part of our Divine Lord's own age-long and world-wide campaign. Warfare is being waged in this Presidential Campaign on the mystical body of Christ, rather than on the man Alfred Emanuel Smith. Each detail of the current struggle fits into the gospel story with astonishing precision.* * *

"With this in view, is it any wonder that all Catholic lovers of Christ are feverishly praying for Governor Smith's success?

"Have you ever thought of what life in the United States will mean when it becomes the fashion—the rage—to be Catholic? This change is almost certain to come. It is highly probable that it will come suddenly. You will go to sleep some night in the same atmosphere you and your ancestors have breathed for the past four hundred years, the oppressive, dull, sad atmosphere of a detested, sullenly tolerated sect, and you will wake up in the morning to find Catholic interests in big type on the front page of your daily paper and the world clapping its hands in applause. * * *

"Watch and see! America is going to become pro-Catholic all at once, because this is the nearest approach to gracefulness with which any one who knows he is in the wrong can begin to be right. We should be charitable enough to take no notice of the change, forget America was ever anti-Catholic and carry on as if we had always been, all of us, loyal children of Holy Church.

"This change may take place early in the administration of (Governor) Smith as President—Democratic President—of the United States."

I quote also from an editorial appearing in the Union and Times, official organ of the Diocese of Buffalo (N. Y.- published by the Buffalo Catholic Publishing Company, at St. Stephen's Hall, Buffalo, New York, issue of Oct. 4:

"The Protestant Church in the United States has existed upon the unestablished fact that this is a Protestant country. It has clung to the fallacy like a dying man to a straw. It has hoodwinked its members into believing it and has bellowed the statement so loud that many Catholics have accepted it without proof. Were a Catholic elected to-morrow the drowning man, in the person of the Protestant Church, would quickly sink from view. The straw at which he has grasped as an anchor would disappear with him. The remnants of Calvinism, Lutherism, Wesleyan teachings and Episcopalianism would die as their seeds are disintegrating from division, discord and dissension.* * *"

Original copies of both these publications containing the material quoted are in my hands. I present to Governor Smith, Senator Robinson, Mr. Raskob, Mr. Davis and the Smith press these editorial utterances of official Roman Catholic publications which circulate in the homes of Roman Catholic voters, as examples of the most fervid, effective kind of appeal to vote for Smith on purely religious grounds. Furthermore, I leave to the American people to determine from the record what judgment should be pronounced upon men who are almost daily shouting bigotry and intolerance and yet are the recipients of such support on purely religious grounds.

In doing so, I wish to say that I believe there are many liberal-minded, thoroughly Americanized Catholics in this country who will be angered by the use of ecclesiastical organs to promote the wet Tammany cause in this campaign in the sacred name of religion.

METHODIST WORK AT THE MISSISSIPPI STATE COLLEGE FOR WOMEN.

Report of the Work of the Methodist Student League to the Board of Education Oct. 22, 1928.

The increased interest and enthusiasm shown by the students in all the activities of the Methodist Student League at M. S. C. W. with the beginning of the second year of organized work should bring to the Methodists of Mississippi a feeling of sincere gratitude to God for all he has wrought.

Several days before the opening of school, the officers of the Student League came to Columbus to make final plans for the work, and to be on hand to welcome the new students. In co-operation with the Y. W. C. A., the "Welcome Freshmen" committee met all the trains, and Methodist women of Columbus graciously used their cars to assist in taking the girls to the college. Five hundred and sixty-eight Methodist girls have registered this year, and seven others have expressed a preference for our church.

During the summer letters were sent to 200 upperclassmen asking them to adopt a "Little Sister" from the incoming freshman class, and giving them the names of the freshmen so that they might get in touch with these girls before they left home. Early in September a letter was sent to all the new students, welcoming them to Columbus, and urging them to "find their place" in the work of their church. A number of Methodist women of Columbus have agreed to be "sponsor mothers" for the 212 freshmen.

A correlated series of programs has been worked out for Sunday school and Epworth League based on the Apostles' Creed, and these topics are meeting with an enthusiastic response from the students. These programs will last ten weeks, at which time a young people's revival will be held.

The Methodist Student League has a unified budget this year, and all funds paid by the students come into our general treasury. Included in our budget are pledges to the two Methodist churches in Columbus, to the two Sunday schools, Epworth Leagues, to Grenada College Special, to our Mission Special, to our Orphanage, and to the Young People's Missionary Society. Other items in the budget are for recreation, publicity, religious books, postage, stationery, etc. The total amount of our budget will be between $850 and $1,000. Regular and systematic giving by all our Methodist students is our aim.

The department of publicity is, this year, sponsoring a weekly news sheet which is given out each Sunday, and includes announcements, suggested Daily Bible Readings, bits of poetry (some contributed by the students), and brief articles of interest to the students.

Each week the Student League observes a "Friendly Hour," or play hour for the Methodist students and their friends. We helleve we can work together better if we play together more. The Methodist Student League entertained all the freshmen with a party duing the first week of school, and the two Methodist churches entertained with a reception for all the Methodist faculty members and students, on the anniversary of the organization of the Student League.

One hundred and thirty-six students have this year become "Affillate Members" of one of the Columbus churches, and a number of others hold their membership here. Of our students this year, a very large percentage have become actively interested in some phase or phases of our work. Four hundred and fifty-seven have joined the Sunday schools, and a large number attend church who do not come to Sunday school.

One hundred and twenty-five girls have jolned the Epworth Leagues. The Y. W. C. A. vespers, the only religious service of the week conducted by the girls on the campus, immediately precede the League service, and many of our girls attend these meetings. The daily prayer meetings contiue to be a blessing and inspiration to a large number of girls. The average attendance to date is sixty, and this group varies from day to day, so that about 200 attend during the course of the week.

God has graciously answered our prayers and hlessed our efforts. The keen interest of the Methodists of Mississippi in the work at Columbus brings us great joy.

Respectfully submitted,

PAULINE WYNN,
Director of the Religious Activities, Methodist Student League, Columbus, Miss.

TO THE PASTORS OF THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Dear Brethren: We are urging again that you try to hand your reports to the Annual Conference the first day of the Conference, not later than the second day.

If this is done, they can be audited and handed to the statistical secretaries in time to prevent their delay in tabulating and reportlng figures to the Boards.

Let each presiding elder have his man from his district ready the first day to assist in the receiving and auditing the reports as provided in resolutions of last Conference. Journal, pages 63-4.

Be careful to make out reports accurately, and save delay and trouble.

T. B. COTTRELL,
For Auditing Committee.

THE NEW FIFTH STREET METHODIST CHURCH, MERIDIAN, MISS., REV. W. B. JONES, PASTOR

This beautiful new church is now receiving the finishing touches. This church was organized in 1885, since which time it has had many good and effective pastors. J. B. Holland has been superintendent of the Sunday school for twenty-eight years. In connection with this magnificent church is one of the best parsonages in the Mississippi Conference.

WHERE THE MONEY GOES.

(A statement issued by the leaders of the Baton Rouge District in connection with the work of the "Flying Squadron" in securing collections in full.)

When we joined the church, each of us took upon ourselves the obligation to "support its institutions." This promise has to do with more than the interests of the local church. It includes all the institiutions of our great denomination. John Wesley said, "The world is my parish." This ideal has ruled the church in all of its history. The consciousness that we are working together, not simply to build up our local church, but to serve millions of people in every land, has urged us on to vast achievements.

Missions. When you make a contribution to what we call "Conference Collections" a part of your money goes to make possible the missionary program of our church, in order that we may meet our share in the world-wide need.

The Home Fields. A part of our contribution goes into the most needy sections of our own Conference and of our church-wide home mission fields. Many persons in our land would be without the gospel if we did not make it possible for them to receive it.

Education. One of the first things done by our pilgrim fathers was to establish schools—Christian schools—for their children. Our church has always felt this a duty. A part of our contribution to Conference collections goes to make possible Christian education. Think of how much this is needed in this hour of our nation's history. Surely this feature of our program should make an appeal to every one of us.

Conference Claimants. A part of our contribution goes to the support of our faithful old soldiers of the Cross who are worn-out in the Master's service. They are soldiers still, although not able to be any longer on the firing line. They should have our support.

Church Extension. A part of our contribution goes to the providing of houses of worship in places in which they could not otherwise be constructed. The advance of Methodism has been made possible by our splendid system of Church Extension. The Board directing this work is a great credit to the foresight and business judgment of our leaders.

Bible Distribution. A part of our contribution goes to make possible the distribution of the Bible. It helps to support the American Bible Society, one of the most valuable aids to our missionaries in their work. It makes possible the translation of the Bible into more than four hundred languages and dialects, and the distribution of the Word of God in millions of copies to ends of the earth.

Hospitals. A part of our contribution goes to provide Methodist hospitals. What ministry is any more Christ-like than the Christian care for the sick? Surely this should challenge our thoughtful and generous giving.

Think of the wonderful system of organization whereby, when you put your money upon God's altar, it is divided into such manifold ministries. In no other way can you direct your money to accomplish so much good as is represented in the Conference Collections of our churches. When the battle was going against them, a Scottish bugler was commanded to play retreat. He replied: "I cannot play retreat, hut I can sound a charge." Methodism, like the Scottish hugler, has not learned to retreat. Its command is always "Forward!" This is the spirit which should prompt us to give as generously as we can when we are called upon to support the benevolent enterprises of our church.

PLUS AND MINUS.

I remember a statement which I heard the late Dr. W. B. Hinson, of Portland, Ore., make regarding a unique baptismal service which he conducted while pastor of the First Baptist Church of Vancouver, British Columbia. He told us that as he baptized a man over eighty years old he said, "I solemnly baptize you in the name of the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost;" but that when he came to a boy in his teens, he said, "I joyfully baptize you in the name of the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost."

When we asked him the significance of the change of formula, he answered, "The old man had become a Christian minus a life, while the boy had become a Christian plus a life." — Walter S. Ryder.

Some seventeen miles from Houma, La., on one of the wide bayous of that section, floats a little houseboat, which is the newest preaching place of the Rev. A. D. Martin, French Methodist pastor at Terrebonne, La. Mr. Martin comes here to preach to the Indians of this section, who crowd into the little houseboat eager to hear the Word of God explained to them. These Indians speak only French, and are unable to read or write. Even a Sunday school is impossible, as they cannot read the simplest texts; the only way to reach them is through the preaching service.

"The saintliest are always the humblest. Growth in holiness can be measured by the acuteness of the consciousness of remaining sinfulness. The more our prayers for enlightenment are answered the more our deep sinfulness comes into view." — G. H. Knight.

THE RELIGIOUS PRESS—ITS DUTY AND VALUE.

By Don C. Seitz.

In the course of an effort to induce advertisers to make use of the neglected cultural and religious weeklies this response has continually recurred: "They are dying and they have no influence." Is this true? It may be, but somehow the response brought to mind "A Parable from Liebig," translated long ago by Charles Kingsley. I quote from memory his words written for another purpose but applicable in this connection:

The church bells were ringing, the devil sat singing
On the stump of a rotting old tree;
"Oh, faith it grows cold and the creeds they grow old
And the world is nigh ready for me."

The bells kept on ringing, a spirit came singing,
And smiled as he crumbled the tree:
"Yon wood does but perish new seedlings to cherish,
And the world is to live yet for thee."

In arming for an assault on mass advertising employed to promote mass sales for mass business a list of thirty-five cultural and religious weeklies had been prepared. Their massed circulation aggregated the pretty total of 1,350,000 per week. Mass advertising turned up its toes at this showing and kept on spending its money in mass publications. To this end we seem to have come—for the moment.

Changes are made in America by revulsions, not revolutions. One of these is almost due in the matter of mental provender. Great wealth has come to the pockets of five-and-ten-cent head-fillers, serving as handbills for the mass advertiser, just as it came to the makers of the Ledger, the New York Weekly, the Fireside Companion, and the Saturday Night of half a century agone. These publications were largely abhorrent to the serious and were held to deprave the young. They took no advertising and made their millions on circulation at six cents per copy, for which the reader received eight five-column pages and a wealth of thrilling tales.

By interesting contrast the religious and cultural press enjoyed its greatest prosperity and power in their time. These were the golden days for the Christian Union, the Independent, the Christian at Work, the Observer, the Churchman, the Congregationalist, the Gospel Banner, the Star in the West. As the story papers carried no advertising, the "foreign" business came mainly to the religious press. The quantity was not great, but rates were good and the returns profitable.

Does the Religious Press Need a Literary Satan to Combat?

Then came a revulsion in favor of low-priced high-class magazines like McClure's, Munsey's and John Brisben Walker's Cosmopoltan, edited with great ability and satisfying an intellectual revolt against the sob-sheets that had become trite with Sylvanus Cobb, Old Sleuth the Detective, and Laura Jean Libby. They throve enormously, but all too briefly. The story papers vanished, and strangely enough their chief antidote, the religions and cultural press, went into a decline. Whether or not this was because it no longer had a literary Satan to offset I cannot say. The Christian Union vanished in the Outlook, which for the moment shared the success of the monthlies. The Independent became secular. The others receded from their commanding position to become mainly house organs or trade journals. This is not meant to be a reflection; it is merely the statement of a fact. They ceased to print interesting things. "Family" departments disappeared. Fiction of the wholesome type was cut out. The thing that made them good reading for the fireside vanished. So the door was opened for the flood of five-cent "literature" that came along to fertilize soup, cosmetic, and automobiling advertising. These also killed the popular cultural monthlies.

The individual ownership died out. To save the sheets denominational support had to be secured. There was no Henry Ward Beecher or Lawson Valentine behind the Christian Union, no Henry C. Bowen back of the Independent, no Primes to speak in the Observer. The comment need go no further.

The abandonment of their just share in supplying secular interest to their readers was, however, a calamity. It gave a monopoly to the meretricious and put the religious press for the most part on par with the Buddhist prayer wheels used in Thibet, turning wheezily around circulating the everlasting Om-pad-mi-hum. That and the puffs for pastors seeking better pulpits made up the table of contents. This, of course, was in line with the house organ theory. It must chronicle only the doings of the church and its shepherds. That many thousands of subscribers could afford neither time nor money to take other publications became a matter of indifference. The general editorial aim seemed to be to extract every drop of interest out of their publications.

To this may be added the disheartening effects of timidity—of the fear of giving offense—not to the reader; he had been thoroughly forgotten—but to the board. Now I believe that editors are born, not made, despite the numerous schools of journalism—that they must have souls as well as penetrating pens, that they have a duty to perform that was never more obligatory upon them than to-day; and, above all, from the conductors of the religious press.

Another Change by Revulsion Now Due.

The popular weeklies and magazines are in for a revulsion. They have perverted, pictorialized, and red-inked so much paper as to pall, but they have raised up a crop of readers able to absorb something better, who should be reached. Beyond this the church membership of the country has been too long deprived of needed refreshment. The moral and political tone of the country requires it. No one is going to risk millions in providing it; nor is there need for the outlay. The religious newspapers already have a great constituency, many of whom take the papers as a duty; they should be led to do so from desire. Moreover, public morals call for it. This enormous constituency should not be wasted because of a shrinking from dealing in things secular.

The church is our one concentrated moral force. The religious press is the one assured stability in the publication world, the one voice, like that from the pulpit, that must continue to be heard. Why still it or put on the soft pedal? Great evils are not secular. Right living is the core of human happiness; justice its safeguard. If the religious press hesitates to become a crusading force, it has forgotten Christ. He did not fear to drive the money changers from the temple.

By this it is not meant to urge that the religious newspaper should develop into a common scold. It should stand firmly and fearlessly upon sound ground. It should aim to interest its reader in itself by enlarging its views, by entertaining and instructing him; it should be varied and human in its contents. The greatest crop of American humor ever garnered was that culled by Dr. S. Irenaeus Prime, editor of the Observer, who for a generation conducted the now departed Editor's Drawer in Harper's Monthly Magazine. It might be added that the three original Harpers—James, John and Wesley—were Methodists.

A Service Which the Daily Press Cannot Perform.

To sum up, the religious press alone has a ready-made field. Its readers are the backbone of the land. This being so, it has no excuse for being spineless itself. The Protestant church did not make its way in the world by dodging. It braved many dangers. Think of its great voices—Luther, Calvin, Knox, John and Charles Wesley, John Murray, Wilberforce, George Whitefield, James B. Finney, Peter Cartwright! When were their tongues ever stilled in the face of wrongs?

The daily press has done wonders for human progress, but it has become too much relied upon for services it can no longer perform. By force of circumstances it has become a public utility, of convenience and entertainment, musty with tables, radio programs, and movie puffery. It no longer needs to be enterprising to be successful or bold to attract attention. It is not really read. Headlines are glanced at and matters of special moment alone are conned. It is too big to be absorbed, too anticipatory in its news and comments to be relied upon or to be genuinely instructive. Its editors have to spend so much time sending early editions to press that they have no time to think, if thinking were required. At that they are on a par with their readers, who haven't the necessary time to read.

There remains, however, an abundant number of people who want guidance, instruction, and attention. These the religious press already reaches. It should very readily meet their minds and reach more!—Methodist Episcopal Press.

I CAN DO IT MYSELF.

"Come on, Morton, and let's play ball," called Edgar Hendricks on his way home from school.

"Can't this evening," replied Merton Parks promptly. "I have some problems to work for tomorrow that I couldn't get in school."

"What's the difference?" countered Edgar. "So have I. Let them go. Our fathers will help us work them, when they come home this evening. Come on and let's play ball."

"I know dad will help me work them if I ask him," Merton finally decided, "but I feel that I can do it myself, if I only try again and again."

Merton struggled with his problems and finally solved them himself. Edgar played ball and had his father to help him work the same difficult problems. Both boys received a grade of one hundred the next day for their problems.

This method of doing their work continued from week to week during the rest of the school year. Edgar made fun of Merton for spending time on his problems when he might be playing ball with the boys. Both boys were making the same grades on their problems, so Merton had nothing to say in reply.

When the day for the final test or examination came, the teacher put some of the difficult problems on the board.

Edgar scratched his head nervously and said, "Wish my dad were here to help me work these problems."

Merton smiled to himself and said, "This test is hard, but I can do it myself. I've been doing difficult problems like these myself all along."

Edgar failed miserably in the examination, but Merton came through with flying colors. His grade was 100. Edgar had crippled himself by depending upon his father for help with the difficult problems, while Merton had strengthened himself by saying with determination: "I can do it myself."—Youth's World.

ARISE AND WALK.

"Arise and walk"—the One Voice said;
And lo, the sinews shrunk and dry
Loosed, and the cripple leaped on high,
Wondering, and bore aloft his bed.
The Age of Miracle is fled:
Who to the halt to-day shall cry—
"Arise and Walk?"

Yet though the Power to raise the dead
Treads earth no more, we still may try
To smooth the couch where sick men lie,
Whispering—to hopeless heart and head—
"Arise and walk!"

—Austin Dobson.

O love that passeth knowledge, thee I need;
Pour in the heavenly sunshine; fill my heart;
Scatter the cloud, the doubting, and the dread—
The joy unspeakable to me impart.

—H. Bonar.

The Home Circle.

POLLY'S PRESENT.

By L. E. Flack.

It was the close of the school year, and Miss Rollens, the teacher of Room 5, was leaving and would not be back the following autumn.

"If only I could give her a real present," sighed Polly Moll for the twentieth time. "She's the very nicest teacher we've ever had, and I do so want to give her a specially nice gift. All the others are going to, mother. Evelyn Avers has bought the prettiest ivory toilet set, and Thelma is going to get her an old lace collar, and Billy's mother said he could give her a six-volume set of books, and I," she ended a trifle bitterly, "I'm going to give her a twenty-five-cent cotton handkerchief! Oh, mother, sometimes I just hate being poor."

There was a suspicion of tears in Polly's eyes, in spite of the fact that she was 11 years old and in the fifth grade at school. She hastily brushed them away, then continued, "Mother, wouldn't you hate to give an old white handkerchief if it were you?"

Mrs. Moll carefully put down the sewing on which she had been working.

"I dare say I would, at your age, Polly dear," she replied. "Especially if I loved my teacher as much as you love Miss Rollens. Are you sure you can't give her anything else? How much money have you?"

"Thirty cents"—the words came out almost spitefully—"and I've saved and saved—ever since we heard she wasn't coming back. But that's every bit I could collect."

"What would you like to give her, child?"

"Oh"—Polly's eyes grew large—"oh, if I had the money, there's the loveliest snapshot album down at Carter's—two and a half. But"—and the light faded—"oh, there's no use, mumsey, I can't do it."

"No," her mother acquiesced soberly, "no, we can't, Polly. I often wish I could give you more spending money, dear, but sewing doesn't pay very well, and I thank God every night that he gives us enough for comforts and necessities. I am sorry that you can't always do as the other girls do, and it makes me feel bad to deprive you of any little pleasure."

Polly was all contrition immediately.

"Oh, you dear, dear mumsey! What do I care if I can't give as much as the others, when you have to work so hard for the money?" and Polly swept down on the figure in the rocker with an impetuous bear hug. "I'm just a naughty, ungrateful girl to be complaining. And Miss Rollens is so sweet, I know she'll be just as nice as can be about the handkerchief." Despite her efforts, there was a break in her voice. "After all, a handkerchief is a nice, useful present—and—and—"

Mrs. Moll smiled in spite of herself.

"Perhaps we can think of something else you can get," she suggested.

"I don't believe so—for thirty cents," said Polly, but she looked up hopefully as her mother settled back in the rocker, a pre-occupied expression in her eyes.

"You said you would like to give her a snapshot album?" she asked.

Polly nodded.

"Well, of course, we can't afford the nice large one; but I wonder. Why couldn't you buy one of those pretty little, fifteen-cent albums they have at the five-and-ten-cent store?"

"Oh, mother, she'd know I'd only paid—"

"But we wouldn't give it to her empty," Mrs. Moll hastened to say. "Do you still have all those snapshots that were taken on your school hikes last winter?"

"Yes," Polly answered wonderingly.

"Well, fifteen cents for the book, ten cents for some paste, and five cents for one of those white lead pencils," her mother went on calculatingly. "Just thirty cents. How about that, Polly?"

"Why—why, I don't understand."

Mrs. Moll laughed.

"Just this—get all your pictures together, sort them chronologically, and paste them in the album. Under each make a quotation—the date, some little remark. Perhaps you can remember something funny that happened. Didn't you say you have a picture of Thelma when she fell on the ice, and said: 'Where are my feet?' Put that down. Then, where Billy tied his trained goat to the wheelbarrow and took that Christmas box to school. How about 'A Modern Santa Claus'?"

A light was beginning to shine in Polly's eyes.

"Oh, and that picture of me taken at camp when our class was up there last winter. I was hanging to the tree by one hand, and Grace's little dog was underneath, and it looked just as if he had chased me up there. I could call that 'Treed,' couldn't I? And that picture of Miss Rollens and Grace, when their sled turned over. And Evelyn as a goblin at our Hallowe'en party. You know Mr. Avers took several flashlight pictures that evening, and I've got two of each. And there's one of Miss Rollens and all our class."

"Which might be fine for the first page," suggested Mrs. Moll.

"Yes," Polly nodded, "and for the very, very last page I'm going to put one of me."

"And you might write, 'To my beloved teacher, from,' substituting the picture for your name."

"The very thing!" Poly laughed. "Now I must run and get the pictures.

"Just see, mumsey"—a few minutes later—"aren't there a lot?"

"About enough to fill one of those little albums, I should judge. Now, if you like, you may look them over, and put them in the proper order for pasting."

Presently Polly laughed.

"Look at this funny one, mamma, where we're dressed as little Dutch girls in that play, 'The Holland Lass.' I'd almost forgotten all about it. And here's the picture Grace took of us on Memorial Day. I can call that 'All of us—the fifth-grade class'."

Polly worked industriously, and soon the snapshots lay in a neat little pile, and that afternoon, after she had returned from town, she pasted them in a pretty little, brown album.

The last day of school dawned bright and sunny, as June days have a habit of doing, and the teacher's desk in room 5 was piled high with tissue-wrapped parcels. There was an air of excitement evident among the pupils as Miss Rollens called the class to order, distributed the report cards, collected texthooks and set the room in order generally. Then she turned smilingly toward her desk, and the class broke into spontaneous applause.

One by one the teacher opened the packages, and every one exclaimed over their contents. Polly watched with dancing eyes. There were the exquisite ivory toilet set which Evelyn had brought; Billy's beautifully bound volumes; a silk umbrella—ever so many other lovely presents. Finally came Polly's gift.

"Why—why—" Miss Rollens glanced at it a moment. "Come here, everybody. Let's look at this together," she said, and the class circled around her desk as she slowly turned the leaves. There were exclamations and remarks.

"Oh, isn't that the cleverest thing? Look at this picture of Grace. Oh, Miss Rollens, do you remember the time we went on that sleigh-ride? Wasn't it fun? Don't you wish we could go again? Why, it's the very best of all!"

And when Miss Rollens had turned the last page, she put an arm around Polly.

"It's just the sweetest present, Polly dear," she said, and there was such a soft light in her eyes. "I'll always, always keep it, and whenever I look at this little book it will bring back this happy year, and all the good times that we've had together." Then she said something which Polly never forgot. "Always remember, class, it isn't the cost of a present that counts, it's the love that stands behind it." Junior Life.

WHY SYLVA WASN'T HAPPY.

Sylva Morris was a dear, sweet little girl in many ways. Besides that, she was very pretty. So far as money could buy, she had everything a little girl could wish for, and yet Sylva wasn't happy.

Sylva was just as fond of playmates as any little girl, but, for some reason that she herself could not understand, she had very few friends and companions. The few that had come to play with her had seemingly now forsaken her, and she was feeling very lonesome indeed.

"I don't see," she complained one morning to her Aunt Ellen, "why all the children prefer the company of that freckle-faced Betty Blake to me."

"Perhaps," said Aunt Ellen, thoughtfully, "they have a good reason for their preference."

"Well, I'd like to know it," snapped Sylva. "Betty is as homely and freckled as can be, and, besides, that, she hasn't nearly the pretty toys and dollies that I have."

"Freckles," said Aunt Ellen, "do not necessarily make one unattractive; neither does a pretty face always make one lovely. My mother used to say 'pretty is as pretty does.' While it is true that Betty doesn't have many lovely toys such as you have, I notice that she always shares the best of whatever she has with her little companions and playmates."

Sylva's pretty, pink cheeks turned very red at these words from her beloved aunt, and a little pang crossed her heart. She suddenly remembered that she had never permitted her playmates to have her best dolly. She had refused to lend a little companion her roller-skates for even a single round. At another time she had kept back a box of bonbons that her mother had given her expressly to share with her companions, and then when they had gone home, Sylva proceeded to eat it all herself.

"O-oh, auntie," she stammered presently, "do you think it's because I—I'm selfish that I no longer have any playmates?"

"I think that may be the reason, dear," answered Anne Ellen, gently. "You know selfish folks don't make the best sort of friends. But it's not too late to win them back," she added thoughtfully.

For a full five minutes Sylva sat with her chin cupped in her hands without making a reply. Then suddenly she jumped to her feet, and, running to her Aunt Ellen's side, flung her arms about her.

"I'm so glad, auntie, dear," she said sweetly, "that you have helped me to see myself. I'm not going to be selfish with what I have any more, then maybe my little playmates will come back. I'm going to call some of them right now."

Sylva kept her word, and it wasn't long until she was surrounded by friends and companions as she had never been before. When the children learned that the selfish Sylva had changed to a lovable, generous-hearted little companion, they were only too glad to be counted among her friends. Never again had Sylva cause to feel lonesome or unhappy for want of playmates.—Little Folks.

IT'S A POOR JOKE.

All checks and money orders should be made payable to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

Communications pertaining to subscriptions and other business matters should be addressed to the Manager, or to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

The Printed Label on a paper shows the date to which a subscription is paid. It is as good as a written receipt. When renewal is made, if the date is not moved forward after four weeks, notify us, and we will make it right.

Communications intended for the Editor should be directed to him at 512 Camp Street. Correspondents will observe the following rules: 1. Write on only one side of the paper. 2. If you have a typewriter, by all means use it; otherwise use a good quality of black ink. 3. Leave a space of at least two inches at the top of the first page; leave a margin of at least one inch on the left-hand side of the page; do not crowd the words and the lines together. 4. Take special pains to write proper names correctly and legibly. 5. Use letter paper if you can get it—not note paper. No attention will be paid to rolled manuscripts.

CHANGE OF ADDRESS.

It is important that all requests for change of address be made as promptly as possible. No change can be made without request. In writing, give the old address as well as the new.

BUSINESS MANAGER.

THE NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

The North Mississippi Conference is in session this week at Pontotoc, having convened on Wednesday. Rev. J. J. Baird is the Conference host. With the assistance of his committees and the co-operation of his membership and of the good people of the community generally, he is taking care of the Conference in fine shape. The proceedings of the Conference will be reported by Rev. H. P. Lewis, who has performed this service so efficiently for several years. We expect to have a full report of the Conference, including the appointments, in next week's issue.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

More than seven hundred students are working their way through Southern Methodist University this year.

Rev. I. T. Reames, our pastor at Eunice, La., has our thanks for two subscriptions to the Advocate, recently sent in.

Press dispatches last week announced the death of Dr. R. A. Torrey, well known evangelist and religious author, at Asheville, N. C., on Oct. 26.

A feature article, "Elizabeth, La., Workers Have Ideal Boss," written by Rev. H. B. Hines, our pastor at Elizabeth, La., appeared in the Item-Tribune of this city on Oct. 7.

The new church at Gulfport, Miss., is nearing completion, services being held in it last Sunday. This is the church that was organized with fine prospects earlier in the year.

The Parker Memorial congregation, this city, has sold the old parsonage at 734 Nashville Avenue, and bought a more desirable one, just a block from the church, at 1125 Eleonore Street.

The official board of the Parker Memorial Church, New Orleans, at its meeting on Monday night of this week, with all members present, unanimously requested the return of the pastor, Rev. Porter M. Caraway.

Bobby Charles, the infant son of Rev. and Mrs. B. C. Taylor, was baptized at the morning service of the Louisiana Avenue Methodist Church last Sunday, Dr. R. H. Harper, presiding elder, officiating.

A young people's revival, under the auspices of the New Orleans City Epworth League Union, will be held at the First Methodist Church, this city, beginning on Monday evening, Nov. 5, and continuing through Nov. 9. Rev. H. L. Johns, pastor of Carrollton Avenue, will deliver the messages.

Dr. Theodore Copeland, evangelist, is taking a much-needed rest at his home in Dallas, Tex. He will preach at the approaching session of the Kentucky Conference, at Paducah, on invitation of Bishop H. M. DuBose. He will go from that Conference to Appalachia, Va., for a union meeting.

At the fourth quarterly conference of the Arcadia charge, Louisiana Conference, a resolution was unanimously adopted requesting the return of Rev. G. A. Morgan as pastor. A resolution was also adopted expressing appreciation of the presiding elder, Rev. W. D. Kleinschmidt, who is completing his fourth year on the district.

Paine College, at Augusta, Ga., an institution for the education of colored preachers and church workers, supported jointly by the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, began its forty-sixth session recently with an enrollment of 100 in the college department and 237 in the high school.

The Louisiana Conference Board of Missions held a meeting in New Orleans on Tuesday of last week. Among the out-of-town members present were the following: Rev. A. W. Turner, Shreveport; Rev. W. R. Harvell, Hammond; Rev. T. J. Holladay, Ringgold; Mr. R. H. Nelson, Shreveport. Rev. J. G. Snelling is president of the Board.

Protection Against Old Age

Dr. L. D. Coale, one of our general evangelists, paid the Advocate office an appreciated call on Tuesday of last week. He had just completed a series of successful meetings in Florida. Dr. Coale is ready to book meetings in Louisiana and Mississippi for the winter and spring. His address is 1635 North Kingsley Drive, Los Angeles, Calif.

A telegram from Rev. L. W. Cain, presiding elder of the Baton Rouge District, dated Oct. 27: "Fourth quarterly conference for Natalbany charge held to-day. Assessments for salaries and benevolences paid in full, perhaps leading all other charges of the Conference." Brother Royal has done a monumental work on the Natalbany charge.

Rev. J. A. Alford, our pastor at Rayville, La., paid the Advocate office an appreciated call on Friday of last week. He was in the city to attend a meeting of the Memorial Home Board, of which he is a member. He stated that the church at Rayville has acquired property fronting 150 feet on the highway, on which it is planned to erect a new church.

At the recent session of the Tennessee Conference, Dr. C. C. Daniel was received by transfer from the Florida Conference and appointed pastor at McKendree; Dr. O. E. Brown was appointed dean of the School of Religion, Vanderbilt University; Dr. W. F. Tillett was appointed Conference Secretary of Education and professor in the Vanderbilt School of Religion.

In addition to remodeling and redecorating its Sunday school building, the congregation of the Louisiana Avenue Methodist Church, this city, has also redecorated the church auditorium. The opening service in the beautiful auditorium was held last Sunday, the sermon being preached by Dr. R. H. Harper, presiding elder of the New Orleans District. Rev. B. C. Taylor is the pastor.

The editor of the Advocate has greatly enjoyed the work as teacher of the fine women's adult Bible class of the Carrollton Avenue Methodist Church, this city. On the occasion of his last meeting with the class as its teacher last Sunday, he was presented with a beautiful billfold. It is a work of art in leather, and is complete in its arrangements. This class is one of the outstanding classes in the Methodism of New Orleans.

The first service in the newly decorated main auditorium of the First Methodist Church, this city, was held on last Sunday morning. A fine congregation was present, and the pastor, Rev. John Brandon Peters, preached an appropriate and helpful sermon. The music for the occasion was especially good. A collection, amounting to nearly $3,000, was taken at the close of the service. It was a great day for historic First Church.

The following appointments at the recent session of the Virginia Conference will be of interest in Louisiana and Mississippi: Dr. E. K. Means was returned to Court Street Church, Lynchburg; Dr. J. W. Moore, at one time pastor of the First Methodist Church, New Orleans, was appointed to First Church, Charlottesville; Dr. J. S. Peters, father of Rev. John Braudon Peters, pastor of the First Church, New Orleans, was appointed to Grace Church, Newport, News.

Rev. Leon I. McCain, our pastor at Minden, La., recently assisted Rev. E. W. Day, in revival services on the Haughton and Doyline charge. Thirty-three members were added to the church at Haughton. The membership of the Woman's Missionary Society has been doubled there, and a number of people pledged to tithe. The benevolent claims are being collected as never before. Brother Day's people have shown their appreciation of his services by making it possible for him to get a new Chevrolet sedan.

The October number of the Methodist Quarterly Review is the first under the editorship of Dr. William P. King. It is a worthy issue. The retiring editor, Dr. Gilbert T. Rowe, speaks a parting word, and the new editor half-laments giving up the pastorate. His pen has a touch of humor that is altogether refreshing. The table of contents furnishes an appetizing bill of fare. It is interesting to note contributions from two men well known in this part of the church—one by Professor A. H. Shannon, on "A Week of Jury Service," and one by Dr. S. A. Steel on "Moral Government." The Review deserves a much larger circulation than it has. The new editor has set as an objective in a material way the doubling of the present subscription list. We hope he will attain it—and he will if all of us help him as we should.

We take the following from the Grenada Sentinel, found in an editorial concerning the session of the North Mississippi Confereuce: "Grenada particularly will regret that Mr. Lewis and his excellent wife are to move. There is not a finer spirited man in all the church than Rev. E. S. Lewis. * * * Rev. J. H. Holder is closing out his second year as pastor of the Grenada church, and it is taken for granted that he will be returned; to do otherwise would be a great disappointmeut to his congregation as well as to the entire town. * * * It is universally conceded that Dr. J. R. Conutiss will again he made president of Grenada College. There is not an abler man in all the Conference than Dr. Countiss. He has made more than a signal success at the college. * * * Grenada has been glad to number Rev. E. G. Mohler, rural Sunday school supervisor, among her citizens, and it is hoped that he will be returned."

A MAN OF SCIENCE WITH APOSTOLIC ZEAL.

By Fred T. Barnett, Associate Secretary, General Board of Lay Activities.

Much is being said these days about the so-called conflict between science and religion, and it is frankly feared that the immature minds of many of our youth are being confused because of their inability to adjust their Christian faith to the discoveries of modern science. We believe that such confusion could be avoided if our colleges and universities were careful in the selection of men to teach science who were reverent in their approach to truth.

Such a man is Dr. J. M. Sullivau, who is the head of the Department of Chemistry and Geology in Millsaps College, Jackson Miss. A sketch of his life appeared in the August number of the Methodist Layman, and the facts there recited show that not only does Dr. Sullivan hold the M.A. and Ph.D. degree from Vanderbilt University, but that he has done special work in the University of Chicago and other leading institutions. Dr. Sullivan is also a member of the American Chemical Society, the American Association for the Advancement of Science, and the Paleontological Society of America. Dr. Sullivan has recently made extensive investigations in the field of Mississippi geology.

Dr. Sullivan imbibes his love of nature, as well as his love of God, from his godly parents, his father being for many years an honored member of the North Mississippi Conference. During his father's four-year presidency of Central Female College for Women, at Lexington, Mo., young Sullivan got interested in the study of geology through his ohservations of the rocks on the high bluffs along the banks of the Missouri River. His father co-operated with the son in his search for rare specimens of rocks and fossils.

For twenty-seven years Dr. Sullivan has held a professorship in Millsaps College, where he has been an inspiration to hundreds of students who have been members of his classes during that time. He has not confined his work, however, to the classroom, and no man in Mississippi, and perhaps no man in the Scuth, has collected moro material along certain lines of geological research in Mississippi than has Dr. Sullivan. Many of these fossils have been pronounced by the heads of the department of Paleontology in the Nationai Museum at Washington to be of very great value, and some of them constitute a real contribution to geological discovery.

Among these rare specimens may be mentioned an unusually large collection of an extinct whale known as the zeuglodon, which is a characteristic fossil of what is known as the "Jackson Formation." Dr. Sullivan has one of the most complete specimens of this whale that has ever been discovered.

Dr. Sullivan has made a collection of fossil horse teeth found in three localities of Mississippi, one of which is entirely new. This find has been written up in the Journal of the Carnegie Institute.

One of the rarest finds Dr. Sullivan has made comes from East Mississippi in what is known as the "Cretaceous Formation," and is the teeth of an extinct marine animal known as the mososaur, which belongs to a species the exact location of which in the geological scale has not been heretofore definitely settled. An account of this remarkable find appeared in Science Magazine of Nov. 11, 1927.

Dr. Sullivan recently visited a number of the leading educational institutions of the United States in connection with the building of a new science hall at Millsaps College, studying modern laboratory construction and equipment, and consulting with some of the leading chemists of the country with reference to the erection of a building best adapted to the teaching of science.

It would require too much space to summarize the religious activities of this consecrated layman. He has served in the capacity of Sunday school superintendent, member of the board of stewards, church lay leader of Galloway Memorial Church, district lay leader of the Jackson District, and for a number of years has been the honored and efficient Conference Lay Leader of the Mississippi Conference. Dr. Sullivan's excursions into the fields of geology and chemistry have not crowded out the opportunity for him to give much time and thought to the advancement of Christ's kingdom. So earnest and diligent has he been in promoting the activities of laymen in the Mississippi Conference that Dr. J. L. Decell, presiding elder of the Jackson District, recently referred to him as "The Lay Bishop of Mississippi."

In a recent conversation with a friend Dr. Sullivan stated his viewpoint with reference to the relation existing between science and religion as follows:

"The more I investigate and study the views of experts and read the history of scientific progress and investigate for myself, the more fully I am convinced that there is nothing to be lost in the way of appreciation of the truth of religion when brought into association and contrast with the facts and revelations of science. There is no conflict, as I see it, between the truth of science and the truth of religion, because I believe that truth cannot conflict with truth and I believe that there is truth in science and truth in religion, both of which we are after, but the completeness of the revelation of which will not be attained.

"Perhaps we will never fathom all the truth of science, and we will never come to a complete revelation of the truth of religion, which is the mind of God toward his creatures, because of our human limitations.

"The farther I go in the study of both chemistry and geology, the more I understand both the necessity for and the wisdom of God in his creation."

Perhaps the description given of Dr. Sullivan by a lay speaker at a recent meeting in Jackson, Miss., did not fall short of the mark. This speaker referred to him as "a man who is equally at home in discussing the antiquity of the tooth of a whale and the New Testament doctrine of justification by faith; a man who can develop equal enthusiasm in presenting the ancestry of the trilobite and the importance of 100 per cent payment on the benevolences; a man who combines within his own personality the scientific accuracy of a Darwin and the apostolic zeal of a Wesley."

TO EXAMINING COMMITTEES OF ANNUAL CONFERENCES IN MISSISSIPPI AND LOUISIANA.

In view of inquries which have reached me concerning the new Courses of Study which become operative in 1928, I draw attention to the fact that these courses of study are not found in the Discipline of 1926, but are set out in the General Minutes and Year Book for 1927-1928. They will be found on pages 128-432 in the Year Book.

In the death of GEORGE B. HILTON the Methodist church at Star, Miss., lost a good and useful member, and Rankin County a most highly esteemed citizen. Brother Hilton was born March 4, 1848, and died Aug. 31, 1928. He was 80 years, 5 months and 27 days old. This long life was almost all lived in Rankin County. He joined the Methodist church when young, and was a regular contributor to her progress. On my last visit to him he expressed his interest in the church to Brother Applewhite and myself. During the war between the States he served in the Confederate army. He took pride in this, and was always present at the soldier reunions if at all possible. Brother Hilton was married to Miss English. She and her only child died in a few years. On Sept. 7, 1871, he was married to Mrs. Ellen Bell, who was, before her marriage, Miss Barlow. To this union were born nine children, seven of whom still live. Mrs. C. E. Welch and Mrs. C. B. Steen married Baptist ministers; Mrs. M. R. Jones is the wife of our own beloved M. R. Jones, of the Mississippi Conference. Mmes. Geo. Kelley, H. L. Miller, Tom Morgan, and W. D. Wallace are the other daughters; T. M. Hilton, an only son, lives in Texas. A large crowd assembled in Rexford church, Sunday, Sept. 1, in expression of love and appreciation of this quiet and useful life. After a service conducted by his pastor and others, his brother Masons bore his body from the church and planted it in the cemetery near by, to await the resurrection. There is no death to the righteous; what seems so is transition; for "death is swallowed up in victory."

EN ROUTE TO TUNDA.

"All well. En route to Tunda, Oct. 20." This cable from Africa was received at Southern Methodist Mission headquarters at Nashville, Tenn., Oct. 19, from the Foreign Secretaries of the Board of Missions, Miss Esther Case and Dr. O. E. Goddard, now making an inspection of Methodist mission stations in the Belgian Congo.

Miss Case and Dr. Goddard, accompanied by Southern Methodist missionaries assigned to work in the Congo, sailed from Antwerp, Belgium, the latter part of August for Africa, where they attended the great West Africa Missionary Conference held at Leopoldville, Congo Belge, Sept. 16-19. This was the first meeting of the kind ever held in Africa and was attended by representatives of all Protestant denominations carrying on missionary work in the country as well as by outstanding leaders in Africa mission work for Europe and America. At the close of the meeting Dr. Goddard and Miss Case started an inspection tour of the Methodist mission stations.

To make the journey to Tunda, Miss Case and Dr. Goddard will probably have to spend several days "on the path," traveling in hammocks carried by natives. Accompanying them on this journey will be the new missionary workers who have been assigned to Tunda station.

It is expected that these new missionaries will be given a warm reception at Tunda, where the missionary force has been much depleted on account of sickness and resulting furloughs. Recent reports indicate that the station has been manned by only six foreign workers, two men and four women. For some time there has not been an evangelistic missionary at this station, and the work of spreading the gospel among the natives has suffered greatly because of this. The other workers have given all the time they could to evangelistic work, but the need of a trained evangelistic worker has been greatly felt here. The evangelistic man and his wife who will accompany Dr. Goddard and Miss Case to Tunda will fill a great need and be a great help to the work at the station.

It is noted with much satisfaction that the secretaries and new missionaries are in good health in spite of the hardships of the African climate.—Department of Publicity, Board of Missions.

Ledge vs. Boulder Granite

The purpose of a monument is to perpetuate the memory of the dead. An all-important factor, therefore, is its permanence.

Beautiful Winnsboro Granite is a true granite unaffected by the processes that disintegrate rock because of its protection from the elements, due to being deep in the earth in vast ledge formation. It has retained all of the strength and durability accomplished by the union of its beautiful crystals while molten millions of years ago.

Winnsboro Granite

"The Silk of the Trade"

therefore, will last many, many years longer than monuments cut from other granite. Its flawless beauty, stalwart strength, and great durability make it the ideal memorial granite. It possesses wonderful contrasts in shades and shadows. Thus, inscriptions cut on Winnsboro Granite Memorials can be read with greatest ease.

Beware of Boulder Granite.

A boulder is a piece of granite which has become detached from the earth stones, ages ago, and has been left on the surface exposed to the elements. The smooth round edges of boulders show that the stone has begun to disintegrate. Such stone is inferior, having partially lost its vitality, becoming more brittle and tending to crumble though having a fair appearance. It naturally sells at a lower price, but if you get a monument of boulder stone, you have a stone which has already started to rot. It is well to remember, "The sweetness of low prices never equals the bitterness of poor quality."

Typical Granite Boulder.

Be sure that "Winnsboro Granite" is specified in your contract for monuments. Like other high quality materials, there are many inferior substitutes, which resemble this granite on causual examination, but do not possess its lasting qualities and permanent beauty.

Have your monument dealer furnish you with a personal guarantee from the quarries that the monument you purchase is cut in genuine Winnsboro Granite.

The certificate of the quarries is signed by B. H. Heyward, Treasurer and General Manager, whose signature insures genuine Winnsboro Granite. A facsimile of this signature is reproduced below.

MISS DRAKE ARRIVES IN CHINA.

Miss Nell Drake arrived safely at Sungkiang, China, on September 7, after an unusually smooth and pleasant voyage. She received a warm welcome, and is rejoiced to be back at her post. The school, Susan B. Wilson, has opened with an unusually large attendance, under Miss Man, the efficient Chinese principal. Conditions are very satisfactory, and the prospects for the work most encouraging. The opportunities seem greater than ever before.

History was being made in China during July when the Central Council of our church was set up in that country. It will take the place of the China Mission and is a great step forward in the development of a self-governing church in China.

WOMEN AS CITIZENS.

"Bad men are elected by good people who stay away from the polls," is a trite saying, but it is not of men we are thinking but of the Christian women who have not taken seriously their duty as voters.

No group of women should be more steadfast examples of loyalty than the members of the Woman's Missionary Society. Our slogan, "America for Christ," are meaningless words unless translated into patriotic service. This should be a serious moment for every conscientious woman, and a prayer for divine guidance should be the earnest experience of every Christian voter.

There are people who constantly assert that churches and women should keep out of politics, but that is another question. The churches and the women's organizations, both within and without, are becoming convinced that it is a poor type of Christianity which preaches peace and good will on Sunday and the rest of the week lets the poor old world go its way, under conditions that kill body and soul, and makes no effort to change them.

Prohibition is one subject in which women have been intensely interested and in which their steady, united efforts have helped to destroy the saloon and to discourage the use and the manufacture of intoxicating liquor everywhere.

In this year when the election of a president involves so many important questions the members of the Woman's Missionary Society should not only be prayerful, but watchful, striving to be faithful to every duty as good citizens and urging others to do the same. All good citizens, men and women, should have as the basic principle of all political action, the uplift of our nation.—A Contributor.

ZONE MEETING AT CLINTON, LA.

On Sept. 27, 1928, at the Methodist church in Clinton, zone No. 6 held its third meeting of the year. There was a good attendance, for all four of our auxiliaries—St. Francisville, Jackson, Ethel, and Clinton—were represented, and there were visitors from other auxiliaries not in this zone.

Mrs. E. N. Chaney presided, and a good program was rendered. The welcome was given by Mrs. A. P. Innis, and the response by Mrs. B. A. Price, of Ethel.

Reports were made on the Scarritt Fund, the Prayer League, the Baby Division, the Jubilee Program, and histories of the auxiliaries.

Mrs. N. B. Riddle called attention to "Things of Importance."

At noon the meeting adjourned for a lunch, which was served in the auditorium.

At 1:30 the meeting was reopened by the singing of "Jesus Calls Us."

Our president asked, "How many auxiliaries have the Book Shelf?" In this connection, Mrs. Mamie Moody spoke of the great helpfulness of "Spiritual Adventuring." She advised each auxiliary to study it.

Mrs. Wm. Schuhle gave an interesting talk on "Looking Backward, but Thinking Forward." She said that she had learned years ago from Holy Writ that it was not healthy for women to look back.

In the absence of Mrs. Gayden, Mrs. Schuhle led the discussion period. The following topics were used:

"Why Have Zone Meetings?"

"The Woman Who Has Meant Most to Our Auxiliary."

"Missionary People and Places."

"What will you give to Jesus?" was sung by Misses Irma Lee Bowers and Marion Roddy, accompanied by Mrs. W. F. Kline.

Ethel was chosen as the place for the last zone meeting of the year. At this time, a zone president will be elected.

Before the benediction, which was pronounced by Rev. B. D. Watson, Mrs. Chaney, our efficient president, addressed the meeting. She spoke of her appreciation of the wonderful cooperation she had met while zone leader. She stressed individual responsibility in developing the divine spark within us, calling attention to the fact that God gave his Spirit in a potential stage. Its development is the responsibility of the individual. By making application of the principles of Jesus in all the problems of life we may grow individually and help the church to function so that the Spirit of Jesus Christ can permeate the whole life of the church.

Mrs. Chaney urged that we do all we can for this Jubilee year—to make it the Golden Age of Missions. There will be few if any of us left to celebrate the next Jubilee.

ZONE 6, BATON ROUGE DISTRICT.

The women of zone No. 6, Baton Rouge District, held their third quarterly meeting Thursday afternoon, Sept. 27, in Hammond, with their leader, Mrs. C. B. Johnson, presiding.

Theme: "Love for Christ and Self-Denial."

Meeting was called to order by singing, "Saviour, Like a Shepherd, Lead Us."

Scripture lesson was given by Rev. W. R. Harvell, prayer by Rev. W. H. Royal.

Courtesies were then extended to our home and visiting workers and guests, among whom were Miss Ora Hooper, Baton Rouge District rural worker; Mrs. Simmons, Franklinton zone leader; Mrs. L. A. Sims, Voice agent; pastors, Rev. W. R. Harvell, Hammond, and Rev. W. H. Royal, of Natalbany; visitors, Mrs. F. N. Sweeney and Miss Sweeney, from Franklinton.

The life of Laura Haygood was beautifully presented by Mrs. Reynolds, of Hammond.

"Woman's Work in the Church Today," was charmingly discussed by Miss Hooper.

A talk on "Social Recreation for Young People," which was very interesting, was given by Mrs. Simmons.

"Forward Through the Ages" was sung in unison.

A quiz on Year Book and Minutes was conducted by Mrs. Johnson, with responses from all auxiliaries present.

Special music by Miss Lucky, of Springfield, was enjoyed by all.

A playlet entitled, "The Beginning of the Venture," was presented by several members of the Manmound auxiliary.

A violin solo was next on the program, by T. A. Barksdale, accompanied on the piano by his sister, Miss Anna Lotile. This concluded the very interesting program.

A short business session was held. Roll call was responded to by four of the auxiliaries in the zone—Hammond, Ponchatoula, Springfield, and Natalbany. All had good reports. There were forty-two members, two ministers, and nine guests present, besides a number of young people.

An offering was taken, which was sent to the Conference treasurer to apply on rural work.

Natalbany extended an invitation for the November meeting.

"Jesus Shall Reign" was sung, and the benediction was pronounced by Rev. W. H. Royal.

The Hammond auxiliary served tea and sandwiches to all present.

MRS. W. R. KEMP, Secretary.

MISS DAISYE INEZ FERGUSON.

The remains of Miss Daisye Inez Ferguson, missionary of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, who died in Victoria, Brazil, on Aug. 16, were brought to Woodville on Monday evening's train and taken to the Methodist church, where the funeral services were held on the following afternoon at 2 o'clock. The edifice was filled with relatives and friends, among them being representatives of the Methodist Missionary Societies of Natchez, Centreville and Gloster. The services were conducted by the pastor and devoted friend, Rev. G. P. McKeown, who paid a beautiful and fitting tribute to the life and work of this noble young woman, using as his text two quotations which were peculiarly applicable: "She has done what she could," and "Her sun has gone down, but it is yet day."

He was followed by Miss Eliza Perkinson, who recently retired after thirty years' work as missionary to Brazil, where she was associated with Miss Ferguson for about a year. Having greeted her at the dock when she arrived in Rio de Janeiro, it was peculiarly fitting that Miss Perkinson be sent from Council headquarters at Nashville to meet the remains in New Orleans and accompany them here for

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

The reports on the observance of Childhood and Youth Week that have come to my desk are very encouraging, especially the reports from Sherard, Tupelo, and Grenada. The "forward step" taken by the school at Sherard: "Suitable heating for the primary department." The address at the "Parents Meeting" was delivered by Rev. J. E. Stephens. The "Forward step" taken by the Tupelo school: That provision be made for the Cradle Roll group and Beginner Departments. The address at the "Parents' Meeting" was delivered by Dr. C. D. Bulla. The "Forward Steps" accepted by the Grenada school: 1. Improve the church grounds. 2. Suitable equipment for each department. 3. That a library and reading room be provided for pupils and teachers. 4. That substitute teachers be provided, that an effort be made to arouse a personal interest on the part of the teachers. 5. That special attention be given to pre-session work for the benefit of early comers. The address to the parents was given by Dr. Glenn. His subject was "Family Religion." It is evident that Rev. J. H. Holder, the pastor, and Miss Lizzie Horn, superintendent, have a vision of what religious education can accomplish in building strong Christian character. May the Holy Spirit teach and lead on to a full realization of our aims.

We held an institute at Weir, led by Rev. C. A. Northington, District Superintendent, Oct. 21. Prof. Brinson, Prof. Patterson, and Mrs. Doty gave helpful messages to the workers in attendance. The school at Weir was checked and left with a determination to do more and better work. At the evening hour I preached to an excellent congregation at Kosciusko and checked this progressive school. Twenty-two of the officers and teachers were present. Since the school has been in the new building great progress has been made in training the young people to worship. The average attendance has increased, the general interest has grown. Back of the building, back of the progress is the fact that four training schools have been held in Kosciusko. Rev. R. P. Neblett and Mr. B. G. Webb are leading in a notable work in this growing and ambitious little city. They are putting Methodism in the forefront in this part of the Conference.

During the year we have made progress in the number of Cokesbury schools taught in the rural communities, in the number of schools that give missionary instruction and offering, in the observance of Sunday School Day, in Promotion Day, in the observance of Childhood and Youth Week, in training in worship, and in buildings and equipment. Back of all this quiet revolution is our training program for officers and teachers. The hopes of Jesus Christ are to be realized through some process of teaching. The Holy Spirit is the supreme head of all that Jesus would have taught. He will teach you all things. The hope, I might say, the only hope of the country church, the city church, is a sufficient number of men and women who are willing to study, pray, and work until they are equipped to guide childhood in the Christ way of living and to help rescue those older ones who have gone astray. Christian education is the solution of the home problem, the church problem, the financial problem, all problems. In a measure, what I read determines what I think, what I think determines my conduct, my conduct makes character.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

Mr. J. H. Carter, of New Orleans, Eduactional Director of the recent Standard Training School, writes: "The eighth session of the New Orleans Standard Training School was held Oct. 14-19, inclusive. This was one of the most successful sessions, and the spirit was fine throughout. A total of 107 credits were issued, which is equal to any record we had yet made in this respect. Exactly the same number of credits was issued in the session of 1926."

Mrs. F. C. Wren, Elementary Superintendent of the Minden District, writes: "Please send me one-half dozen of the 'Childhood and Youth Week' programs."

During the last ten days the writer has visited in most of the districts in our Conference, counseling with district leaders of Sunday school work.

Wednesday, Oct. 17, we were in Baton Rouge, and had a profitable conference with the presiding elder, Rev. L. W. Cain.

Saturday, Oct. 20, we were in Lake Charles and saw the District Secretary, Mr. A. M. Mayo, and Dr. R. H. Wynn. The local leaders there are making great preparation for the coming of the eighty-third session of our Annual Conference.

Sunday, Oct. 21, we were in Monroe. We visited the new Gordon Avenue Methodist Church. They have a promising Sunday school and church. The attendance at Sunday school was 114. The records at the other Sunday were: Monroe, First Church, 503, and West Monroe, 335. At 3:30 p. m. the fourth session of the Monroe and West Monroe Standard Training School opened, with prospects of a good school.

While in Monroe, had a conference with the presiding elder, Rev. E. C. Gunn, who is very much pleased with the work done by the pastors in his district during 1928. He will report several new Sunday schools organized in his district this year.

Sunday night we were in Ruston, and the pastor, Dr. W. W. Drake, reported Sunday, Oct. 21, had been a great day in his church. Twenty-six new members were received. The campaign for subscriptions for the new church was announced.

Monday, Oct. 22, on my return to Monroe, I had a fine conference with Rev. J. W. Faulk, of Mangham. He will have a great report for Conference this year with the new $10,000 church, and most of it paid for. His three Sunday schools, Mangham, Union, and Little Creek, are doing a fine piece of work.

Alexandria, First Church, has been observing "Childhood and Youth Week." The pastor, Dr. Cleanth Brooks, has had services each day during the week, and plans for a great rally service Sunday night. The Alexandria Sunday school has perhaps the finest Sunday school library in our Conference.

Let us urge all Sunday schools that have observed "Childhood and Youth Week" to send in to our office their report.

Miss Jennie Milton, of Crowley, La., has been elected assistant in the Elementary Department of the General Sunday School Board. Miss Milton is a B.S. and M.A. graduate of Peabody College, her most recent position having been in the Department of English at that institution. Previous to this position, Miss Milton was a kindergarten and primary supervisor of the State Teachers' College at Natchitoches, La. Her experience in religious work covers a wide range, but she is most at home in the field of early childhood.—The Elementary Newsletter.

AN APPRECIATION.

(Resolutions adopted by the fourth quarterly conference, Centenary Church, McComb, Miss., Oct. 24, 1928.)

Whereas, Rev. W. H. Lewis, presiding elder, of the Brookhaven District, is closing out his quadrennium on the district; and,

Whereas, the law of the church provides that an elder can serve only four years on a district; and,

Whereas, the quarterly conference now in session will sever his connection with Centenary Church as presiding elder; therefore, be it resolved:

1. That the Board of Stewards, with the entire membership of the church, extend to him our most cordial appreciation for his wise and brotherly counsel, his judicious leadership, and safe and sane administration.

2. That we commend him to the church into whatever field he may be called, as a competent executive, an able and faithful preacher of the Word.

3. That we shall continue to love and appreciate him, and pray that God's richest blessings may be upon him and his.

4 That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of the quarterly conference, a copy presented to Brother Lewis, and one furnished to the Christian Advocate.

Signed: C. C. Evans, pastor; C. F. Sherman, Treasurer, Committee.

The Holy Communion

THERE is no time in the Christian's life when he comes into closer and more intimate relationship with the Divine than when he sits at the Lord's table. Why not approach its celebration with unalloyed joy; discarding all fears, thinking only of the wonderful privilege?

"The Sanitary" INDIVIDUAL COMMUNION Cups

It is now generally recognized that the Sanitary Individual cup increases the attendance because it removes all fear of uncleanliness, and promotes a deeper reverence in the communicant. The Sanitary Communion Outfit Company offers an improved and satisfactory outfit throughout, including the highly polished beautiful mahogany tray here shown, which eliminates all noise, is lighter and more easily handled than others and is more in keeping with the furniture of the church than a tray of any other material.

NEWS FROM LAKE ARTHUR, LA.

We have just closed a revival meeting at Lake Arthur. The singing was led by H. L. Cochran, of Sherman, Texas, and the pastor himself did the preaching. We had good congregations all through the meeting, and on one of two occasions we had to put extra chairs in the church. There were fifteen additions to the church, ten of whom were children.

Brother Cochran is not only a singer, but choir leader and worker with children and young people. He served our church well and faithfully during the twelve days he was with us.

Our work here is progressing. The congregations have been much better lately, and our stewards are feeling very optimistic over conditions here. We hope to have a good report to make at Conference.

T. F. KING, Pastor.

A BEAUTIFUL FAREWELL SERVICE TO DR. AND MRS. ALLUMS.

On Tuesday night of last week the many friends of Dr. and Mrs. Allums met at the Baptist church to express their love and devotion for these estimable people, their regret at losing them and to wish them God's speed in Shreveport, their new location. Dr. Allums, having come to us from Shreveport, where he was surgeon at the Charity Hospital, now goes back to Shreveport, and will be one of the specialists in surgery at the Tri-State Sanitarium. During his connection with the Elizabeth Hospital, Dr. Allums has done very efficient work in different lines of surgery, establishing an unusual record for successful operations. He has this year been awarded a Fellowship in the American College of Surgeons, and will have this rank conferred upon him at Baltimore while on his stay in the East at this time. He is already on his way to New York, where he will do post-graduate work in the New York Post Gradnate School of Surgery. At the conclusion of this work he will join the staff of Tri-State surgeons in Shreveport. Dr. Allums keeps himself in the front ranks of his profession by taking post graduate work each year in the leading Institutions of advanced surgery.

Mrs. Allums, in her fine character and rare accomplishments, is as charming an asset to a community as her husband, and truly it can be said that Elizabeth's loss is Shreveport's gain.

The farewell service began at 8 o'clock, with Rev. H. B. Hines, pastor of the Methodist church; Rev. H. E. Pettus, pastor of the Baptist Church; Mrs. Mims, of Minden, mother of Mrs. Allums; Mrs. Allums, Dr. Allums, and Mrs. H. B. Hines in the receiving line. The people, after salutation, all registered in an autograph album, which was presented to Mrs. Allums. Then, passing down the aisle, they were served with punch, after which they were seated in the auditorium and, after service, the audience filed into the educational room, where delicious refreshments were served.

The service was opened with song by the congregation, followed by prayer from Rev. H. E. Pettus. An instrumental solo was rendered by Miss Hazel O'Quin, followed with a reading by Miss Helen Finke. The next feature was an address by the Rev. H. E. Pettus. Then, "Beautiful Isle" was rendered as a quartet by Messrs. Null Clark, I. B. Williams, J. E. Bond, and L. L. Burns. An address was then delivered by Rev. H. B. Hines, at the conclusion of which the congregation formed in circles, and, while joining hands, sang, "Blest Be the Tie That Binds." While remaining in circle formation the closing prayer was pronounced by Rev. H. B. Hines.

REPORTER.

SMITH DEFEATED

Do you desire to assist in the overwhelming defeat of the "wet Tammany candidate" for the Presidency, Governor Alfred E. Smith? If so, help to give the voters important facts.

It is desired to send at least four additional communications to each voter. The cost of each separate communication (including printing, folding, addressing and mailing) is approximately three cents. Therefore, for example, the cost of reaching even 200,000 voters in Virginia with four communications would be approximately $25,000, and, in fact, the Smith Democratic Committee of Virginia is asking for $250,000 or $300,000.

The cost of similar work in Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Lousiana, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas and West Virginia will be in proportion to the number of voters in those States.

Send check for largest amount possible to TREASURER ANTI-SMITH DEMOCRATS, BOX 674, RICHMOND, VA., if you want this work done properly and Smith overwhelmingly defeated.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE EPWORTH LEAGUE.

The New League Editor Speaks.

While we (editors always say "we," don't they?) were sitting at our desk doing our best to think up some scheme whereby we might be able to render some service this year to the Epworth Leaguers of the Mississippi Conference, our telephone rang, and it was our president saying that he needed an editor for this column and that I was it. We think that if our president had remembered what a poor showing this column made one time before when we were trying to conduct it, he would have looked further for an editor; but, honestly, we were so glad to have some service to do, we just couldn't get up enough courage to remind him of it.

Mr. Lewis didn't tell us how he wished this column conducted, so that leaves us free to conduct it as we please, at least until he "calls our hand."

We shall expect the co-operation of every Conference and chapter officer in the Conference; we expect quite frequently to have an article from our president; and shall expect news at least each quarter from our district secretaries, both Senior and Epworth Junior Hi League secretaries, Epworth Junior and Hi League superintendents, and any one else that has anything of interest to other Leagues.

We know a lot of Leaguers that have useful information, but like a certain prominent citizen, they seemingly would rather "Go to jail than tell." Now if you have anything that will help the cause, why keep it to yourself?

We will print almost anything you send us, if it is about Epworth League or Epworth Leaguers. We are not in politics, and do not care for "political write-ups" in the church or out; we can all get plenty of that in our daily papers.

Our Conference organization is progressing nicely, according to reports, and our president will probably announce the names of the entire official staff within a few days.

We certainly did wish for all our Leaguers to hear Brother Pim in the Young People's Revival at Main Street Church, Hattiesburg, Oct. 7-14, inclusive. Dr. Smith, having secured Brother Pim's services for his Young People's week, invited all the Epworth Leagues of the city to co-operate with them in these services, and fortunate indeed were those who had the opportunity to engage in these services with the Main Street folk. Brother Pim and Brother Smith were both at their best, Brother Smith leading the singing and Brother Pim doing the preaching. Brother Pim brought some wonderful messages to the young people, and the response was very fine indeed.

A fine feature of the meeting was the part the Leaguers themselves had in the services, one of the Leagues of the city being in charge each night conducting the devotional service of from ten to twenty minutes.

Brother and Mrs. Sutherland came down from Laurel one evening, bringing about twenty of their Leaguers with them. Their presence in the meeting was very much appreciated, not only by Brothers Smith and Pim, but by all the Hattiesburg Leaguers. The meeting closed out Sunday evening with a wonderful consecration service, after a large class of children had been received into the church.

We wish all our Mississippi Leaguers could have heard Brother Pim's sermon on "Bottomless Buckets" (excuses that won't hold water). If you have one, throw it away, for Brother Pim says it will prevent you carrying something else really worth while.

Only a small percentage of our chapters made Africa Special pledges at the assembly. If your chapter has not pledged, write your district secretary, and Mr. Ralph Nall, the Conference treasurer, what your pledge will be. Mr. Nall's address is care Millsaps College, Jackson.

In 5 Million Homes Tonight

A host of babies will enjoy sound sleep tonight. And their parents will have unbroken rest. Castoria is the cause of this contentment in a multitude of homes.

Good old Castoria! Children cry for it. Mothers swear by it. Not a household where there is an infant should ever be without it. A few drops of Castoria quiet Baby in a perfeetly innocent manner. It is natural slumber that follows. Castoria is a purely vegetable product. No opiates. No narcotics. O any kind.

Now you know why trained nurse give Castoria as often as an infant is ailing, or even restless. And why doctors tell mothers it is the first and only home remedy when Baby has constipation, colic, diarrhea, or other upset. It is made for babies, and safe to give babies, and other things are not.

Fletcher's Castoria is "old-fashioned" if you count its fifty years, but it's an old-fashioned mother, nowadays, who worries along without it. Twenty-five million bottles bought last year! Think of the number of mothers who rely on Castoria! All these mothers can't be wrong! To keep a bottle in the house is a precaution you owe your little one.

A GOOD REPORT FROM FRANKLIN, LA.

Dear Advocate: On the fifth Sunday in September we began our revival meeting with Dr. R. H. Harper doing the preaching. We had good congregations, good singing, and the preaching was excellent. I am sure that our church was considerably strengthened as a result of this meeting.

I am winding up my fifth year here, and it may be the last, for all I know. During these five years we have repaired the church and installed a pipe organ. The parsonage has also been repaired and is in good condition. The pastor's salary has been raised from $1,800 to $2,400. Next year the salary will be $2,400, and fuel, water and lights furnished. This is now an excellent appointment, and the preacher who comes to Franklin will be fortunate.

MISSIONARY FACTS.

Three hotels for students are maintained by the Southern Methodist Church in White Russia, the students furnishing their own food, and in return for lodging giving their out-of-school time to the church.

During 1927 the eleven Goodwill plants of the Southern Methodist Church in eleven cities of the South gave employment to 925 needy persons, for which work they were paid $39,993.

Honoring the memory of the late Dr. W. H. Park, for forty-five years a missionary in China, the Chinese of Soochow are raising an endowment fund of $20,000 to care for the poor sick of the city—a cause dear to Dr. Park's heart.

There has not been an American missionary at work among the Koreans of Manchuria since 1923, the Mission being carried on entirely by native workers.

Through the aid of the American Bible Society, the Methodist camp pastor at Parris Island, S. C., the largest Marine training station in the United States, presents to every man leaving for foreign duty, and who desires it, a New Testament.

Approximately 1,200 students are enrolled in the English Language College at Warsaw, Poland, representing nearly every occupation and profession, and affording fine opportunities for making friends for the church.

The nation-wide war on gambling now being waged in Brazil is considered the outgrowth of Protestant work in that country.

Conforming to the Constitution of Mexico, all evangelistic work in that field is now in the hands of native Methodist ministers, who have carried it on with marked success.

Nearly $300,000 was contributed last year for all purposes by native Methodists in foreign fields.

A floating chapel, seating about fifty people, now carries the gospel to towns along rivers and canals of Belgium, where it has been impossible to rent a hall in which to preach.

As part of its sustentation work the Board of Missions pays or supplements the salaries of 142 preachers in charge of weak churches in the far West or in the border States.

Paine College, at Augusta, Ga., Southern Methodism's school for training colored preachers, teachers, and religious workers, enrolls more than 400 students.

Several Belgian Methodist pastors make it a habit to send pamphlets bearing words of comfort to bereaved families in their communities, both Catholic and Protestant, and thus the gospel is spread.

Missionarying by boat is the unique method employed by the Board of Missions for spreading the gospel among the French trapper folk living along the lakes and bayous of southeastern Louisiana.—Bulletin.

the funeral as representative of the missionaries in Brazil and the Woman's Council. Her address was very impressive. Ont of the fullness of her own experience and after a close association she was well able to give an inspiring picture of the happy Christian life and triumphant death of her friend and co-worker.

At the conclusion of the services in the church her body was taken to the cemetery near her late residence. There in a grove of beautiful trees, which mark the resting place of her loved ones gone before, her parents, and three younger brothers, all that was mortal of this sweet spirit was laid to rest after the long journey from a foreign soil. The green pall over the grave was bedecked with exquisite flowers sent not only by friends but also by many missionary societies in this and the neighboring State.

Miss Ferguson, who was the only surviving daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Walter Ferguson, and a member of an old and prominent family of Wilkinson County, had had unusually fine preparation for the work to which in her girlhoood she had consecrated herself. She gradnated from the high school here, then from the Mississippi State College for Women, at Columbus. After this she taught two years, then took a two-year course at Scarritt Bible College in Nashville, Tenn. Having offered herself for foreign service, she was sent to Bennett College, Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, reaching that city in August, 1925. A few months ago, after realizing that she was far from being well, she resigned her work. Early in August she took passage on a Japanese steamship for New Orleans, where she intended to secnre medical treatment before returning to her home. Then after regaining her health she had expected to marry the young man to whom she had been for some time engaged, a civil engineer, whose headquarters are in Montreal, Canada. She had made plans for a simple wedding at the parsonage here, the home of her dear friends, Rev. and Mrs. G. P. McKeown. But her Heavenly Father willed otherwise. After being on board ship only a few days she was taken so seriously ill that she was put ashore at Victoria, Brazil, where she underwent an emergency operation for appendicitis, but peritonitis shortly developed, with fatal results. Her brothers here were notified and they at once cabled for her body to he sent home, but on account of the international complications which naturally arose, her body remained in Victoria for several weeks before the American consul was able to secure its passage.

Thus after a life of only thirty short years Miss Daisye Ferguson has passed to the Great Beyond, there to receive a rich reward. It is difficult to pay a fitting tribnte to the memory of so noble a young woman, one whose character was embellished by the most lovable attributes, and one who had given herself unselfishly and unreservedly to the service of her Master. The beautifying influences of true religions consecration spread over her entire life, which was accordingly a blessing to all who came within its influence. Happy in her religion and in her work, she found such great joy in life that though death has taken her, it cannot mar the inspiring memory of one who during her short span of existence made such an impress for good.

MEMOIRS COMMITTEE, WOODVILLE AUXILIARY OF THE WOMAN'S MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

Best Remedy for Obstinate Cough Made at Home

You'll never know how quickly a stubborn cough or chest cold can be conquered, until you try this famous recipe. It is used in millions of homes, because it gives more prompt, positive relief than anything else. It's no trouble at all to mix and costs but a trifle.

Into a pint bottle, pour 2½ ounces of Pinex; then add plain granulated sugar syrup or strained honey to make a full pint. This saves two-thirds of the money usually spent for cough medicines, and gives you a purer, better remedy. It never spoils, and tastes good—children like it.

You can actually feel its penetrating, soothing action on the inflamed throat membranes. It also promptly looseus the germ-laden phlegm, and at the same time, it is absorbed into the blood, where it acts directly on the bronchial tubes. This three-fold action explains why it brings such quick relief even in severe bronchial coughs and those dreaded coughs that usually follow the "flu".

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine, containing the active agent of creosote, in a refined, palatable form, and known as one of the greatest healing agents for severe coughs, chest colds and bronchial troubles.

Do not accept a substitute for Pinex. It is guaranteed to give prompt relief or money refunded.

OLD FOLKS SAY
WAS RIGHT

The basis of treating sickness has not changed since Dr. Caldwell left Medical College in 1875, nor since he placed on the market the laxative prescription he had used in his practice.

He treated constipation, biliousness, headaches, mental depression, indigestion, sour stomach and other indispositions entirely by means of simple vegetable laxatives, herbs and roots. These are still the basis of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, a combination of senna and other mild herbs, with pepsin.

The simpler the remedy for constipation, the safer for the child and for you. And as you can get results in a mild and safe way by using Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, why take chances with strong drugs?

A bottle will last several months, and all can use it. It is pleasant to the taste, gentle in action, and free from narcotics. Elderly people find it ideal. All drug stores have the generous bottles, or write "Syrup Pepsin," Dept. BB, Monticello, Illinois, for free trial bottle.

HENRY T. CARLEY, D.D., Editor | NEW ORLEANS, LA., THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 8, 1928. | CHAS. O. CHALMERS, Manager.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE, PONTOTOC, MISS., OCT. 31-NOV. 5, 1928.

Reported by Rev. H. P. Lewis.

First Day.

The fifty-ninth session of the North Mississippi Conference convened at Pontotoc, Miss., Oct. 31, at 9 a. m., with Bishop Candler in the chair. The Bishop announced hymn 6 in the New Cokesbury, "O For a Thousand Tongues to Sing," which the Conference sang. Bishop U. V. W. Darlington, Rev. E. S. Lewis, and Rev. C. W. Crisler, of the Mississippi Conference, assisted Bishop Candler in serving the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper. At the conclusion of this service, the Bishop spoke freely and impressively on the significance and meaning of the Sacrament.

"Amazing Grace" was sung.

Dr. J. R. Countiss, the secretary of the last Conference, called the roll of clerical and lay delegates, following which the Conference was organized for business. Dr. Countiss was re-elected as secretary, and upon his nomination H. P. Lewis was chosen assistant secretary, and W. C. Newman, W. L. Robinson, F. H. Coggins and G. O. Clark were named statistical secretaries.

The hours for meeting and adjournment were fixed at 8:30 a.m. and 12 noon.

Changes on General Boards, and Conference Committees were announced by the presiding elders as follows:

Sunday School Board—E. S. Lewis vice J. A. Randolph, deceased.

Missions—W. C. Newman vice E. Nash Broyles.

Education—J. H. McKinnon vice Dabney Lipscomb, resigned.

Church Extension—J. E. Stephens vice W. N. Duncan; H. C. Campbell vice W. F. Lagrone, deceased.

Bible—H. R. McKee vice R. E. Woodfin.

Memoirs—S. L. Pope vice J. M. Bradley.

Christian Literature—V. C. Curtis vice T. H. Lipscomb, deceased.

Lay Activities—N. C. Oaks vice W. F. Lagrone, deceased; Percy Bell vice Waddy West, and B. P. Brooks vice J. M. Forman.

Budget Committee—Seamon Rhea vice Del Longgrear.

Committee on Admission—C. A. Parks vice W. N. Duncan.

Conference Committees.

Public Worship—E. Nash Broyles, J. J. Baird, and W. A. Boone.

Sabbath Observance—H. E. Carter, L. H. Roberts, G. C. Schwartz, W. M. Campbell, G. C. Gregory, J. R. Murff, K. S. L. Cooke.

Orphans' Home—Carroll Varner, W. L. Atkins, T. H. Dorsey, W. B. Baker, W. S. Shipman, S. A. Brown, H. R. McKee.

Spiritual Interests—P. A. Dulin, W. M. McIntosh, W. L. Swett, H. F. Brooks, J. V. Bennett, J. E. Lawhorn, M. L. Childers.

Conference Relations—W. M. Young, W. R. Lott, J. W. Wood, J. T. McCafferty, J. M. Bradley, H. N. McKibben, J. L. Nabors.

District Conference Records—E. C. Driskell, W. P. Bailey, D. R. McDougal, A. R. Beasley, J. O. Dowdle, A. W. Bailey, W. M. Jones.

V. C. Curtis submitted a resolution signed by a number of preachers, requesting that a commission of two preachers and laymen from each district be appointed to study our assessment budget and devise some means that will bring about better conditions towards paying up our assessments. After considerable discussion the resolution was adopted.

Bishop U. V. W. Darlington was introduced, and it was announced that he would preach at the evening hours of the Conference.

The Bishop called question 21, "Are all the preachers blameless in their life and official administration?" and the names of the presiding elders were called and their characters passed, and they made report of the work of their several districts. Salient points in their reports are as follows: Aberdeen District, E. Nash Broyles, presiding elder, 475 admissions on profession and twelve churches built or improved. Columbus District, W. N. Duncan, presiding elder, 425 received on profession, three new churches built, and $40,600 spent on churches and parsonages. Corinth District, E. H. Cunningham, presiding elder, 520 received on profession and five new churches built. Greenville District, L. M. Lipscomb, presiding elder, 350 received on profession, and heroic progress made towards recovery from overflow. Greenwood District, L. P. Wasson, presiding elder, 275 on profession received. Grenada District, E. S. Lewis, presiding elder, 400 received on profession and much better collections than usual. Sardis District, T. M. Bradley, presiding elder, 275 received on profession, new $25,000 church at Olive Branch, nineteen charges paid preachers' salaries.

Dr. W. L. Duren, of St. Mark Church, Atlanta, Ga., an old member of this Conference, was introduced and addressed the Conference, and presented his recent book, a life of Francis Asbury.

Dr. H. H. Sherman, secretary of the General Board of Education, was introduced and addressed the Conference.

The Grenada College bond issue was made the order of the day for 10 a. m. Thursday.

Visiting brethren were introduced, announcements were made, the Conference sang, "Come, Ye That Love the Lord," and was adjourned with the benediction by M. A. Burns.

The Sunday School Board held its anniversary at 3 p. m., at which time the principal address was made by Rev. A. W. Martin, of the General Sunday School Board.

At the evening hour Bishop Darlington brought a great message to a packed house from Luke 11:1-10, on the subject of Prayer.

Second Day.

The Conference opened at 8:30 a. m. Hymn 255, "Close to Thee," was sung, and B. P. Fullilove led in prayer. Bishop Candler read John 5:39-47, and, taking verses 41 and 44 as a basis, talked on the subject of "Receiving Honor from Men or God, Which?"

At the close of his address the Conference sang, "I Need Thee Every Hour."

The roll of absentees from the first day was called, and on motion the calling of the roll was dispensed with for the remaining sessions.

The minutes of the first day were read and approved. Telegrams of greetings were read from L. A. McKeown, who is absent on account of illness, and J. G. Johnson. The secretary was ordered to return suitable replies.

Letters were read from B. P. Jaco and J. H. Brooks. Brother Jaco is in the superannuate relation, living in Texas, and Brother Brooks is a chaplain in the United States Navy.

Dr. T. D. Ellis, secretary of the General Board of Church Extension, was introduced and addressed the Conference.

The matter of issuing bonds for Grenada College endowment was taken up. Judge Percy Bell read the report of the Commission appointed at the last session of the Conference, and spoke to the report. After some questions, the report, authorizing the bond issue, was adopted with only one dissenting vote. An interesting fact was brought out in Judge Bell's talk, that while the proposition was going the rounds of the district conferences last summer, there was only one single vote in the entire Conference registered against it. North Mississippi Methodism by this act establishes Grenada College in the A-grade class of women's colleges. Following the adoption of the report, Dr. Countiss spoke words of appreciation for the support voted the college.

E. S. Lewis made a motion to make the Oxford Methodist Church enterprise the order of the day for Thursday immediately after the reading of the journal, which was adopted.

J. H. Bell, at his own request was granted a location.

The names of the superannuates were called, their characters passed and referred to the Committee on Conference Relations for a continuance in the same relation. Quite a number of these brethren are with us; but we noticed an unusual number were reported absent this year. Two of our preachers have broken in health this year, and their names were referred to the committee for superannuation. They are R. G. A. Carlisle and M. H. Weed. As a token of love and appreciation the brethren took up offerings for these brethren, amounting to $196 for Brother Carlisle and $128 for Brother Weed.

John B. Burns, K. E. Clark, Roy A. Gresham, W. J. Cunningham and Earl B. Ellington were admitted on trial.

A. T. Youngberg, an elder from the Baptist church, was received into the Conference.

Dr. R. H. Harper, the newly elected editor of the New Orleans Christian Advocate, was introduced, and appealed to the Conference to give hearty support to our Conference organ.

J. H. Felts read the report of the Commission appointed at the last Conference to look into the advisability of establishing Methodist headquarters and publishing a Conference paper in Jackson. This commission advised against such action, and their report was adopted.

Rev. John Durrett, head of the Tract Department of the Publishing House, gave some valuable information about this division of our connectional work.

A delightful feature of the day was the introduction of Mrs. W. A. Candler to the Conference. We feel it an honor to have her as a visitor in our midst.

A telegram of sympathy was sent Dr. C. M. Chapman, who is confined in the hospital, sick.

In answer to the question, "Who remain on trial?" K. S. L. Cooke, W. R. Hammontree, W. I. Henley, W. M. Jones, A. T. Law, R. B. Pearson, N. L. Three and G. W. Williams, were passed in character, made their reports, and, having passed the required course of study for the year, were advanced to the Class of the Second Year. B. D. Benson and S. M. Butts were retained in the First Year Class.

After announcements, the doxology was sung, and Brother W. D. Babb pronounced the benediction.

The anniversary service of the Board of Finance was held at 2 p. m., when Dr. Arthur J. Moore, of Birmingham, Ala., gave the principal address.

Bishop Darlington preached at the evening hour.

Third Day.

Conference opened with singing, "Come, Holy Spirit, Heavenly Dove," and was led in prayer by Bro. H. M. Young. Bishop Candler read John 13: 1-17, and using the Scripture as a basis, gave an exposition of the subject of Humility. At the conclusion, the Conference joined in singing, "More Love to Thee, O Christ."

The journal of yesterday's session was read and approved. The Bishop called for the "special order," which was the consideration of a Commission's report on the new Methodist Church project at Oxford to make adequate provision for caring for the religious needs of the Methodist students at the University. R. G. Moore read the report. Dr. C. W. Crisler of the Mississippi Conference led the discussion. After the matter had been discussed pro and con, V. C. Curtis offered a substitute that had been worked out by the Commission on assessments which will bring the matter up a year from now. The substitute was finally adopted.

News reached Bishop Candler of the serious sudden illness of his wife, and he resigned the chair to Bishop Darlington to go to the bedside of his wife in the home of W. A. Boone.

Question 17 was called, "What traveling preachers and what local preachers have been elected deacons?" S. W. Hemphill, L. M. Jones, E. L. Jernigan, C. M. Kinard, having finished the second year's course of study, were advanced to the class of the third year and elected to deacon's orders. W. M. Wright, a deacon, was advanced to the third year class. C. M. Ray at his own request was

TURN NOT AWAY.

Isaiah, Chapter 43, 1 and 7.

By Miss Ellie C. Jamieson.

I created ye, my children,
Breathed in ye my life divine;
In my image I created
My creation, most sublime.

For my honor, for my glory
I ordained thy destiny,
But, as sheep from the Good Shepherd,
Ye hath strayed afar from me.

I have suffered, I have suffered,
On the cross for sin atoned,
With my precious blood redeemed thee,
And reclaimed thee for my own.

I am pleading, pleading, pleading—
Will I still rejected be?
Must I turn away in sorrow
To return no more to thee?

Ahha, Father, Christ my Savior,
With thy vesture dipped in blood,
Holy Spirit, enter, enter,
Abide with me, Oh Living Word.

A PILGRIMAGE TO BUNYAN'S BIRTHPLACE.

By Minna McEhen Meyer.

It was a summer morning when colorful English gardens decked the peaceful countryside. I had come to Bedford, fifty miles north of London, to spend a day among the scenes in which lived the great Christian allegorist, the man of whom Kipling wrote during the recent great war:

"A pedlar from a hovel,
The lowest of the low,
The father of the Novel,
Salvation's first Defoe.
Eight blinded generations
Ere Armageddon came;
He showed us how to meet it,
And Bunyan was his name."

In a little village near Bedford, just three hundred years ago, the child John Bunyan was born. The home to which he came was very humble, the father, a tinker, earning his living by going from house to house to mend kitchen utensils, much as itinerant umbrella-menders ply their trade to-day. With a wish to follow in sequence the important events in the life of the man of whose birth almost the entire world is now taking note, I drove the intervening mile and a half to Elstow, which for twenty-seven years was Bunyan's home. Here on the edge of the village green stands the ancient, cheerless Abbey Church, where on Nov. 30, 1628, the infant John Bunyan was christened, and where when he had grown to manhood he heard from the rector a sermon on Sabbath breaking which aroused his slumbering conscience. On the green not long afterwards, while participating in Sunday sports, the young man believed that the divine voice distinctly spoke to him, saying, "Wilt thou leave thy sins and go to heaven, or have thy sins and go to hell."

From the church I crossed to a narrow village street where the small houses are crowded up to the very curb. It was to one of these cottages that Bunyan took his girl bride, an orphan as poor as himself. Together, he says, they had not "so much household stuff as a dish or a spoon," but the young wife did bring as her inheritance from her pious father two books, prized possessions when books were rare among the poor. Standing in this cottage, it was easy to picture the scene when, after the husband's return from his daily task of mending pots and kettles for the village housewives, the young couple sat and read before the open fire, doubtless with considerable effort because of meager school advantages, "The Practice of Piety," or "The Plain Man's Pathway to Heaven." I could imagine the evenings when Bunyan spoke of his desperate spiritual struggles, which continued over a period of four years. Sometimes he could speak of the help he received, as on the day when he heard some elderly women talking of "the new birth," the work of God in their hearts, and "they spoke as if joy did make them speak."

I remember also that evening by the fire of which Bunyan later said, that while meditating on the passage in Hebrews 2:14, 15, "That through death he might destroy him that hath the power of death, that is the devil, and deliver them that through fear of death were all their lifetime subject to bondage," he was so uplifted that he "was ready to swoon with solid joy and peace."

After many weary months of struggle the desired goal was attained when Bunyan learned to accept God's free grace as revealed in Jesus Christ. Those who, like Bunyan, fare forth on the pathway that leads from life's ordinary acts and opinions toward the attainment of spiritual ideals, who face and persistently fight their way through its difficulties, gain a power that never comes out of a commonplace or a divided life.

Returning to Bedford, I found the "Bunyan Meeting," once the Bedford Parish Church, which, about the time Bunyan moved to the larger town and became a member, voted, under the laws of the Protectorate, to become Congregational. It is now a Union Congregational-Baptist body. Bunyan greatly enjoyed his associations with this church. Later, when he wrote "Pilgrim's Progress," it was the minister, "the holy Mr. Gifford," who suggested the character of Evangelist, and he doubtless had in mind the fellowship with this group of Christians when he wrote of the House Beautiful with Watchful, the porter; to encourage the approach of the halting Christian; sympathetic Discretion to question his purpose in seeking admission, longing to welcome, but knowing that she may have to reject; Piety, Prudence, and Charity to give instruction and exhortation, and finally it was from the House Beautiful that he came with breastplate and shield and sword, prepared to go forth to face the foe.

Beginning his work as a lay preacher, Bunyan sometimes spoke in chapels, sometimes in the homes of friends, and often in the open fields. The trunk of a great, gnarled oak tree near Lower Samsell, fourteen miles from Bedford, was often used as a pulpit for his open-air services. An ardent group followed him. He loved his work, and felt that God had definitely called him to be a preacher of righteousness.

Thus passed several happy years. Then came the Restoration of 1660. Charles II was eager to regain for the crown the ancient royal prerogatives in which the will of the king was above the law of the land. The Act of Uniformity was issued. Bunyan, with many others of like conviction, was warned to stop preaching, but he felt that in so doing he would be untrue to his call. One day at a meeting he was holding in a cottage, he was arrested and sent to prison without bail. The charge read, "For devilishly and perniciously abstaining from going to church to hear divine service, and for being a common upholder of unlawful meetings and conventicles . . . a great disturbance and distraction to the good subjects of his kingdom and contrary to the laws of our sovereign, the king."

Here began a prison term which lasted twelve years, from Bunyan's thirty-second to his forty-fourth year. Being obliged, like all prisoners, to support himself, he made shoe laces, and these were sold in the streets by his blind daughter, Mary. He might have been released if he had promised to keep silent and no longer hold religious meetings. This he would not do, although he suffered the keenest agony in realizing the hardships his wife and children were forced to endure.

There is no description of that old county jail, the site of which was pointed out to me, but Bunyan's imprisonment took place a century before John Howard, a citizen of Bedford, stirred up the civilized world to the need of prison reform. We can imagine that Bedford's jail was dark, crowded, unclean, with no sanitation; but even in such an environment Bunyan's spirit remained unbroken, and his hands and mind were both active. He had with him two books, Fox's "Book of Martyrs" and the Bible. Of these, especially the latter, he gained a very thorough knowledge. He conversed with the other prisoners on religious matters, and became the leader of a group of believers. He wrote his autobiography, to which he gave the title, "Grace Abounding to the Chief of Sinners," and a number of other books. Finally, in 1672, King Charles issued an Indulgence giving liberty to dissenters. Bunyan was released, and was made minister of the Baptist meeting, which position he was glad to hold to his death, notwithstanding the fact that he was invited to larger churches in London.

His days of persecution were not yet over, however. Three years after his release the Indulgence was withdrawn, and Bunyan was again thrown into prison. This time he was confined in the city jail, a small two-story building on the ancient bridge over the Ouse River. This term lasted six months, and it was during this time that most of the first part of "Pilgrim's Progress" was written, a work which bears testimony to his familiarity with the Scriptures. Indeed, it is said of Bunyan that "his knowledge of the Bible was such that he might have been called a living concordance."

The first readers of "Pilgrim's Progress" were strict Puritans, from whose homes plays and novels were strictly excluded, but this book, written with a sympathetic understanding of man's frailties and with true reverence, had for them all the charm and delight of a fairly tale. In other lands, as well as in England, the experiences of the Pilgrim become the topic for sermons and for daily discussions, while the illustrations fill the minds of grown-ups as well as children with fear and delight. As missionaries have gone out into non-Christian lands, this story of Christian, adapted so that it would make its appeal to the peoples of China, of Africa, or of the islands of the sea, has been given a place next to the Bible itself.

As is stated by Dr. William H. Matthews, of the American Tract Society, to whom much credit is due for the present interest in the tercentenary of Bunyan's birth, this great allegory was not the work of an uneducated man, but of a self-educated man. Bunyan's conversion meant an awakened as well as a transformed mind. He became alert to avail himself of his opportunities, to develop his powers, and patiently and conscientiously to use his time and his ability for some worthy purpose. He possessed an insight into character, as is illustrated by his allegorical figures, Mr. Worldly-Wiseman, Talkative and Ignorance, Obstinate and Pliable, Simple, Sloth, and he successfully portrayed a great variety of human types. He found in the common things stimulation for his wonderful imagination. Thus a creek with muddy banks suggested to him the Slough of Despond; the one small hill near Bedford, the Hill of Difficulty; and the ancient stronghold, Doubting Castle.

As the evening train carried me back to London, I thought of the great dreamer, Man's interpretion of the goal and the way to attain it may differ from that of Bunyan's day. We know that the other-worldliness which he emphasized is but one phase of a truly Christian life. But there are still brave souls who fare forth to seek "the everlasting prize," and who discover the Valley of Humiliation and the Hill of Difficulty. For such Bunyan has, as he says in his apology,

"chalked . . . the way he runs
Till he unto the gate of glory comes."

FROM THE PELICAN PINES.

By Rev. S. A. Steel, D.D.

The main trouble with Modernism is its shallowness. It is superficial. It does not go to the bottom. It overlooks Bacon's wise observation that "A little philosophy inclineth man's mind to athelsm, but depth in philisophy bringeth men's minds about to religion." This reflection is suggested by a book sent me by the Henry Holt and Company, publishers, entitled, "A Philosophy of Ideals," by Edgar Sheffield Brightman, Borden Parker Bowne, professor of Philosophy in Boston University. If, this book impresses you as it does me when you read it the first time, you will feel like you are wading in a vast morass, like one of our Louisiana swamps, for some fifty pages. It is a cloudy day and you have to determine the points of the compass by the moss on the trees. When you have put your foot down, you are not sure whether you will put it on firm ground or on quicksand. Here and there you will see a bright yellow, or blue, or scarlet flower springing up from the stagnant looking water, and a heron will go by on slow wing, or a kingfisher will flash by, and perhaps an eagle will scream from the top of a tall cypress. But the farther you go the more you will find yourself being held to your adventure by a subtle intellectual grip. When you reach page one hundred, the sky will begin to clear up. Another hundred pages and you are on firm ground, the sun is shining, and you find yourself at the feet of a master.

You need to start to read this book by glancing at some definitions. You will find them scattered along in the book, but it will help to have them in mind to begin with. What is an Ideal? It is a product of thought and imagination to which any corresponding real existence is not necessarily attributed; but which appears in consciousness as an object worthy of contemplation. I got that from a valuable book called the Dictionary. It is clear and good. What is philosophy? Briefly, it is the science, or knowledge, of first principles. Dr. Brightman finds in Idealism the ultimate explanation of life. Idealism explains and interprets the entire universe, the totality of things and minds, and their relations, as the realization of a system of ideas, or the progressive evolution of an ideal; and that is the philosophy that is bound to win. He doesn't discuss it, because it does not come within the scope of his book to do so; but the logical conclusion of his argument is that this ideal is the thought of a personal God. The book is a powerful antidote to materialism. In this attitude to the problem of life, Dr. Brightman is faithful to the Bowne cult. What an influence that man Bowne wielded on the higher thought of his day! I would like to tell you of a meeting I had with him once, but lack space; for I want to tickle your appetite for Brightman's book on the "Philosophy of Ideals." By the way, if you don't know how to think, don't get it, for it will bore you; but if you do get it, don't stop reading till you get to the two hundredth page anyhow. You know that all our theology has its roots in metaphysics. You didn't know that? Well, no wonder you are "tossed about with every wind of doctrine." Brightman will take you down and show you the substructions of your faith.

Here is the October Quarterly Review. Among other articles it contains a wail from the woods of Arkansas. A [illegible] church [illegible] idiu personality in [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] enough to go [illegible] made it that to get on the [illegible] bourded the Methodist bath wh[illegible] for the Unitarian train. Th[illegible] a definite starting place th[illegible] a definite schedule and [illegible] mitual, the New Jerusalem. The Unitarian starts from anywhere has no [illegible] everywhere. Brother Franklin [illegible] hackneyed charge of lack of liberty to [illegible] do as he individually pleases. That is the doctrine of Bertrand Russell, H. L. Mencken, Clarence Darrow, and their kind. Back to nature, says Russell. So said Rousseau, and went to [illegible] Voltaire. Voltaire threw it in the fire, and made the withering remark that his ancestors may have walked on four legs, but they were so far away that he declined to consider them kin. Then she said the sensible thing, that instead of looking backward, he was looking forward, and wanted to be a superman! No, the Methodist church is not narrow, and imposes no fetters on the freedom of thought. But like every organization under the sun, it has rules and regulations. Every preacher voluntarily agrees to live by them; but if he finds them irksome, all in the world he has to do is to be manly and surrender his credentials. That is the honorable way out of the difficulty, and far better than to kick against the pricks or whine.

Brightman's book on the "Philosophy of Ideals" knocks Bertrand Russell's doctrine of desire as the final authority for conduct into smithereens. This revolt against tradition and definite belief is a disease. Even so radical a writer as Santayana sees the folly of a fluid intellectualism, anchored to nothing. Brightman quotes him as saying: "How then should there be any great heroes, saints, artists, philosophers, or legislators in an age when nobody trusts himself, or feels any confidence in reason, in an age when the word dogmatic is a term of reproach?" Character is built on convictions. Lest ye editor shall say this paper is too tough for his pages, I'll quit; but if he don't print it, I'll know that he paddles about in shallow pools himself.

TRIBUTE TO REV. S. D. HOWARD.

By E. L. Cargill.

It was my privilege to know and to be associated more or less with Brother Howard more than thirty years. I knew him in the early years of his ministry, in the Cumberland Presbyterian Church, as pastor and evangelist. I worked with him in revival meetings before I was an itinerant preacher, and I had him to hold meetings for me after I became a pastor. I think I never knew a more earnest preacher of the gospel, for he was really a gospel preacher. He was fearless, uncompromising with sin, and a lover of men. He felt very keenly the responsibility of the office of the ministry. He loved the great gospel truths, and knew that the gospel was the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth. He spared not himself in preaching of the gospel and working for the salvation of the lost, and the edification of the believers. He was really a soul-winner, for hundreds were converted under his ministry. He joined the Louisiana Conference in December, 1904. He was not only a strong preacher, he was a good pastor. He made many friends in all the charges he served. We have lost a true and valuable man. I shall miss him very keenly at Conference, for he was so brotherly; but I know he is now happy and our loss is his eternal gain.

We sympathize with his dear family in this trying hour as they mourn their loss, and pray that [illegible] discontinued. H. M. McCall, G. B. Love, and E. C. Driskell, having failed to bring up all their studies, were continued in the class of the second year.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE PROCEEDINGS.

Brother E. M. Shaw raised the question if preachers were exempt from observing the rule of our church requiring applicants for admission to abstain from the use of tobacco. Bishop Darlington very earnestly insisted that they were not; but that all who have entered the connection since the law was passed are required upon their honor to abstain.

Question one was called again, and J. M. Stewart's name was presented, and under the two-third rule he was admitted.

Just at this time a report was received from Bishop Candler that his wife was very seriously ill, and the Conference paused in its proceedings for a few moments while earnest prayer was offered to God in her behalf, led by Bishop Darlington.

Under question 15, "Who are the deacons of the year?" the names of G. O. Clark, F. F. Coggins, J. M. Gibson, W. C. McCay, J. C. Wasson, J. N. Humphrey, A. C. Johnson and G. C. Schwartz were called. All made their reports, and were advanced to the class of the fourth year.

J. H. Felts read the report of the special finance committee appointed the first day of the Conference, which was adopted.

Miss Pauline Wynn, in charge of the students' activities work at M. S. C. W., was introduced by J. T. Lewis and spoke briefly of her work.

S. A. Brown read the report of the Hospital Board, which carried with it the election of R. A. Tucker, A. T. McIlwain, J. H. Sherard, D. H. Hall, R. M. Weaver and Mrs. T. M. Clark as trustees from this Conference.

Dr. L. H. Estes addressed the Conference about the work of the Methodist Hospital in Memphis. The report was adopted.

Quite a number of visiting brethren were introduced and announcements were made. A telegram from B. P. Jaco, sending greetings, was read.

The Conference sang the Doxology and R. A. Clark pronounced the benediction.

At 3 p.m. the Mission Board held its anniversary, with Dr. J. W. Perry and Bishop Darlington as speakers. In response to the Bishop's appeal for Europe the congregation contributed $235.

Fourth Day—Morning Session.

Mrs. W. A. Candler's condition had improved sufficiently for the Bishop to resume the chair Saturday morning.

Conference opened with singing "Savior, More Than Life to Me," and was led in prayer by Brother T. H. Porter.

The Bishop read John 15:1-11 and 17:17-21 for a Scripture lesson, and spoke on the subject of Union with Christ, following which we sang a stanza of "Nearer, My God, to Thee."

The journal of yesterday was read and approved.

Question 19 was called, and W. R. Crouch, J. O. Dowdle, W. C. Newman, W. L. Pearson, S. B. Potts, and A. M. West were reported to have finished their course of study and to have met all the requirements, and were elected to elders' orders. W. C. Galceran, Jr., and L. B. Wimberly, not having finished their studies, were retained in the class of the fourth year.

Under Question 17, R. B. Craig was elected to local deacon's orders.

The amendment relative to the General Conference delegation from an Annual Conference was submitted, and carried by a vote of 100 for, and 33 against.

A telegram from J. M. Moose, a member of this Conference and chaplain in the U. S. Army, was read to the Conference.

Under Question 21 resumed, the names of the Aberdeen District preachers were called, their characters were passed, and they made their reports.

H. F. McGee read report No. 1 of the Board of Education, and the Conference heard Dr. D. M. Key, president of Millsaps College. Both in the report of the Board and in Dr. Key's address, high tribute was paid Brother J. E. Stephens for his work in the chair of Religious Education during the past few years in developing Sunday school workers.

Bishop Candler requested Bishop Darlington to resume the chair, that he might return to the bedside of his wife.

The report of the Board of Education was adopted.

H. R. McKee read the reports of the Committee on Orphans' Home, which were adopted. In the adoption of these reports, V. C. Curtis and J. B. Streater were re-elected as trustees of the Home.

A paper was read about releasing certain property of the Home to the City of Jackson for street purposes. Following this, B. F. Lewis, Superintendent of the Home, spoke to the Conference.

Rev. J. A. Martin, of the C. M. E. Church, was given a hearing in behalf of Paine College and the cause of his, the colored, people. The members of the Conference made an offering for his cause of $85.

The members of the class of the second year who had finished their studies were called to the front, given the charge by Bishop Darlington, and, after answering the Disciplinary questions, were unanimously received into full connection. These young preachers are: S. W. Hemphill, J. M. James, E. L. Jernigan, C. M. Kinard, and W. M. Wright.

A motion carried for the Conference to meet at 3 p.m., following which announcements were made, and the morning session closed with the doxology, and benediction by Rev. H. A. Butts, of the Memphis Conference.

Afternoon Session.

Conference opened at 3 p.m., Bishop Darlington in the chair, with singing, "Rock of Ages," and was led in prayer by A. T. McIlwain. One stanza of "Close to Thee" was sung.

The minutes of the morning session were read and approved.

G. C. Schwartz read report of the Committee on Christian Literature, to which J. H. Felts spoke, urging faithful and loyal support of our Conference organ, the New Orleans Christian Advocate. The report was adopted.

S. E. Ashmore read the report of the Epworth League Board, which was adopted.

Question, "Where shall the next session of the Conference be held?" was called. Durant, Starkville, and Corinth made flattering invitations for same. Twenty-four preachers and delegates wanted the Conference at Durant; fifty-one wanted it at Starkville, and eighty-one wanted it at Corinth. So, Corinth will entertain the next Conference.

J. T. Lewis read reports No. 2 and 3 of the Board of Education, which were adopted.

The Benevolence Commission's report was read by A. S. Raper and adopted.

C. L. Oakes read the report of the Budget Commission, which was adopted.

S. L. Pope read the report of the Commission on Evangelism, which carried with its adoption the appointments of J. T. Gullett as Corinth District Evangelist; R. B. Craig as Aberdeen District Evangelist; and W. A. Wilson and J. W. Robertson as Conference Evangelists. Also J. W. Robertson was recommended to the General Board of Evangelism for appointment as a general evangelist.

W. H. Mounger read the report of the Board of Finance. A. T. McIlwain pleaded for the Conference to make a Christmas offering for the cause of Superannuate Endowment, which the report recommended. The report was adopted.

R. H. Furr read the report of the Board of Lay Activities. The report was adopted.

J. G. Houston, of New Albany, was re-elected Conference Lay Leader.

R. G. Lord read the report of the Sunday School Board, which carried with its adoption the appointing of R. H. B. Gladney as Conference Superintendent; E. G. Mohler as Dual Extension Secretary, and R. W. Hammontree as Assistant Extension Secretary. E. M. Sharp, a layman, is also employed in the Corinth District to do Cokesbury and rural extension work.

E. C. Driskell read the report of the Committee on District Conference Records, which was adopted.

The Conference Group Insurance matter was presented to the Conference for information by R. A. Tucker.

J. V. Bennett read the report of the Committee on Spiritual Interests, which was adopted.

Secretary J. R. Countiss read the minutes of the afternoon session, and the Conference adjourned to meet in memorial session Sunday at 3 p.m.

Fifth Day.

Baptist Church—11 a.m., Sermon by Rev. Carroll Varner.

Presbyterian Church—11 a.m., Sermon by Rev. N. J. Golding.

Christian Church—11 a.m., Sermon by Rev. A. Y. Brown.

Union Service—7 p.m., Sermon by Rev. J. M. Bradley.

Sunday Morning.

The Conference met in love feast at 9 o'clock, Brother J. J. Brooks leading the service.

Romans 12 was read as a Scripture lesson. After song and prayer, the elements of bread and water were served.

An hour or more was spent by the brethren in testimony of their love one for the other, and for Christ and the church.

Following the Conference Love Feast, Bishop Candler preached at 11 o'clock, and at the close of the service, ordained to the office of deacon: S. N. Hemphill, C. M. Kinard, E. L. Jernigan, W. M. Wright and R. B. Craig.

At the same hour Bishop Darlington preached at the Baptist Church.

Memorial Session.

Conference convened at 3 p.m., Bishop Candler in the chair.

Hymn 21, "Children of the Heavenly King," was sung, J. T. Lockhart led in prayer.

The Bishop read a Scripture lesson from II Corinthians, 4th and 5th chapters.

Hymn 271, "The Home of the Soul," was sung.

The Bishop called Question 14, "What preachers have died during the year?" J. A. Randolph, whose memoir was read by W. M. McIntosh; T. H. Lipscomb, whose memoir was read by N. G. Augustus, and J. B. Randolph, whose memoir was read by W. M. McIntosh.

Many brethren expressed their love and regard for the memory of these servants God has called himself.

"The Home Over There" was sung.

Bishop Candler paid special tribute to the memory of Chaplain J. A. Randolph.

The report of the Committee on Memoirs was adopted.

The Bishop called W. W. Mitchell, who read the Epistle, and A. T. McIlwain, who read the Gospel, to assist him in ordaining the candidates for elders' orders. The secretary presented the names of the following for these orders: W. R. Crouch, J. O. Dowdle, W. C. Newman, W. L. Pearson, A. M. West, and S. B. Potts, and A. T. Youngberg, an elder from the Baptist Church, who took the vows, but was not ordained again.

The Bishop called E. S. Lewis, and W. N. Duncan to assist in the imposition of hands.

The session closed with the benediction by the Bishop.

Sixth Day.

Conference convened at 8:30 a.m., with singing hymn 87, "I Love to Tell the Story," and was led in prayer by Brother W. D. Babb.

The Bishop read and commented on I Cor. 12:1-20, 31. The Conference sang, "Jesus, I My Cross Have Taken."

The minutes of the memorial service were read and approved.

Resuming the calling of question 21, the name of each preacher was called whose name had not been called. B. G. Whitehurst was granted a location at his own request. T. H. Mills was located. R. E. Woodfin withdrew from the ministry and membership of the Church. The characters of the rest were passed, and each made his report for the year.

The report of the Committee on Conference Relations was heard, and R. G. A. Carlisle and M. H. Weed were added to the list of superannuates.

Bishop Candler called Brother V. C. Curtis to the chair while he conferred with the presiding elders.

T. H. Dorsey, president of the Conference Brotherhood, presented its cause to the Conference and the names of several preachers and laymen were added. The officers of the Brotherhood for the year are: T. H. Dorsey, president; E. S. Lewis, vice president; R. A. Tucker, secretary and treasurer, and W. R. Lott, assistant secretary and treasurer.

Reports were read and adopted from the Board of Education, Board of Missions, Board of Bible Work, Board of Temperance and Social Service, Board of Church Extension, Committee on Sabbath Observance.

At this juncture, the hour of adjournment having arrived and the Bishop and cabinet being still in session, the Conference all but adjourned, when word came that the appointments were ready.

The Conference voted to remain in session till the appointments were read.

The statistical secretaries made their report.

The Bishop resumed the chair.

S. P. Ashmore, from the North Alabama Conference, was transferred to this Conference.

R. P. Neblett read resolutions of thanks for the delightful entertainment furnished the Conference by the people of Pontotoc, which was adopted by a etanding vote.

Mrs. Candler was in attendance on the session of the Conference, having recovered sufficiently from her recent iliness to be back with us, to the delight of all.

The credentials of S. C. Yates were restored to him by a vote of the Conference.

Secretary Countiss read the minutes of the day's session.

The Conference sang, "Blest Be the Tie That Binds," and was led in prayer by Bishop Candler.

Changes in the organization of charges were read by the Bishop, following which the Bishop read the appointments for the coming year.

The Doxology was sung and the Conference adjourned sine die.

CONFERENCE PERSONALS.

J. H. McKinnon, of Ackerman, lay leader for the Columbus District, is a delegate from his section of the Conference.

Dr. Melville Dye, of Clarksdale, son of Rev. T. W. Dye, is among the lay delegates from the delta section of the Conference.

Judge J. G. McGovern, of the Supreme Court of Mississippi, was present and took an active interest in the proceedings.

Mr. J. H. Sherard, of Sherard, Miss., has attended every session of the North Mississippi Conference since 1895.

Rev. R. O. Brown, one of the superannuated preachers, who joined the traveling connection at the sessions of the North Mississippi Conference at Holly Springs in 1889, is in attendance on the Conference.

Mrs. R. M. Short, of Como, District Secretary of the Woman's Missionary Society from the Sardis District, is attending the Conference. She, with her sister-in-law, Mrs. Clemmie Short, is among the pioneers of the woman's work in North Mississippi.

Rev. B. P. Fullilove, one of the superannuated members of the Conference, was admitted on trial in 1886 and ordained an elder at the Conference held at Kosciusko in 1890. He is present at this session and reports his health in first class condition.

The Historical Society held its annual service Tuesday evening when Rev. W. M. Young preached to the delight and edification of all present. Brother Young served a four-year pastorate here during the world war, and is greatly beloved by the people of Pontotoc.

The morning prayer service held a half hour before the opening of the Conference session was attended and enjoyed by a large body of preachers and laymen. There is an inspirational fellowship and spirit in these services that add greatly to the enjoyment of the Conference.

Rev. J. M. Bradley, now serving at Holly Springs, seems very much at home among the preachers and members of the Conference, even if he did spend several years as a member of the St. Louis Conference. He transferred back to North Mississippi two years ago

Dr. R. A. Tucker, who has not had robust health during the year, is in his accustomed place in the Conference room and on the committees and boards, serving well the interests intrusted to him. His friends hope for his complete restoration to health.

Mrs. W. W. Wilburn, of Lexington, the treasurer of the Woman's Missionary Society of the North Mississippi Conference, is noted among the ladies in attendance on the Conference. God bless the good women who have caused the work of the church to go forward in its tasks for the betterment of mankind!

THE PRINCELY POOR.

By F. W. Boreham.

There has always been great confusion in the minds of men as to the relationship in which poverty and wealth stand to happiness. Occasionally it is said: Blessed are the rich; anon somebody contends: Blessed are the poor. And Christ in his first beatitude settled the difficulty for ever and for ever.

1. The world has always shouted: Blessed are the rich! And it is of no use sopping our ears to the impressive testimony that can be advanced in support of that proposition. For surely wealth, properly manipulated, should go far towards the attainment of happiness. And yet results have proved that the affirmation will not stand without some qualification. Many wealthy men have lived lives oppressed by anxiety, unhappiness and unrest. The very investment and security of their wealth has been an intolerable burden to them; and one could mention a long string of well-known names to prove that among such men unhappiness has been common, despair frequent, suicide occasional, and madness not unknown.

2. But then the church, singularly enough, took up the same cry, and proclaimed in effect: Blessed are the rich! For centuries the church sold, for money, her pardons, indulgences, and other spiritual favors; and, if these were blessings, it followed that the wealthiest were in a position to be most blessed. Indeed, one of the earliest factors in the Reformation was the opening of the eyes of the poor to the fact that, since they could not afford to purchase the deliverance of their friends and relatives from purgatory, or even obtain their own personal pardon, the teaching of the church placed the rich on a much more fortunate plane of blessedness than the poor could, in the nature of things, hope to reach. The beatitude of the world: Blessed are the rich! became the beatitude of the church; and the church, by adopting it, stultified herself.

3. Then came the reaction. It set in first of all in the church. Like a pendulum, knowing no means, but always swinging from extreme to extreme, the church suddenly proclaimed: Blessed are the poor! One of the first signs of a change was the rise, so early as the twelfth century, of various orders of Mendicant Friars, among whom none was so famous as Francis d'Assisi, who took a vow of poverty, and lived in a state bordering on raggedness and starvation. So did these bewildered and perplexed friars rush from one pole to the other, and, abandoning their faith in the blessedness of wealth, became converts to the blessedness of poverty. And multitudes followed, obeyed, and almost worshiped them.

4. The world soon adopted the same strange cry. There is a school of political economy that honestly sets itself to decrease the selfishness of the rich, to correct the vices of the poor, and to lead both rich and poor to a fuller appreciation of their mutual obligations the one to the other. But there is a spurious imitation of this high ideal. Taking for its watchword, "Down with everything that's up, and up with everything that's down!" it seeks to foster in one section of the community a burning hatred of the other. And by crying perpetually: Cursed be the rich! it cries by implication: Blessed be the poor!

But with two words Jesus swept away each and all of these mistaken ideas. Blessed, he said, are neither rich nor poor unless they be rich in faith and poor in spirit; whilst with such wealth and such poverty, blessedness may be the portion of either or both. He knew that poverty in spirit might reside as well in a palace as in a hovel; as well beneath a crown as within a pauper's garb. He knew that a bundle of inflamed and virulent pride might be garbed in rags and tatters as well as in ermine robes, and that haughtiness may be seen as often in the cottage as in the castle. An old story is told of visits exchanged between Diogenes, the old cynical philosopher, and Plato, who was as much his superior in intellectual ability as in modesty and in lowliness. The cynic called upon the great thinker, and, finding him pleasantly housed with comfort furniture, stamped upon the beautiful carpets, and exclaimed, "Thus do I trample under foot the pride of Plato." Plato was too good and too great a man to take much notice at the time, but shortly afterwards returned the visit. Finding Diogenes living in ostentatious poverty, he said that he could see the pride of Diogenes peeping through the holes in the carpets! It is possible for the poor to be proud of his poverty; for the religious to be proud of his piety; for the prayerful to be proud of his prayers; for the groveling idolater to be proud of his devoutness; for the fasting to be proud of his fasts; for the giver to be proud of his gifts; for the penitent to be proud of his penitence; for the lowly to be proud of his lowliness. Does not Coleridge say that

> The devil did grin, for his darling sin
> Is the pride that apes humility.

With one word Jesus went down beneath all externals and appearances, beneath all visible wealth and poverty, beneath all outward forms and ceremonies, beneath all our wondrous doings and givings, beneath all looks and professions, beneath all thoughts, and words and deeds, and, probing to the very quick and marrow of our inner, truer, secret selves, he said: Blessed are the poor in spirit, for theirs is the kingdom of heaven!—Australian Christian World.

THE IMMORTAL DREAMER.

By Samuel McCrea Cavert.

If there are "moderns" who have assumed that John Bunyan and "Pilgrim's Progress" are hopelessly out of date, the revival of interest in the man and his work, in view of the three hundredeth anniversary of his birth this month, must come as a surprise. They are being reminded, for example:

That "Pilgrim's Progress" has been translated into one hundred and twenty-four languages and dialectis—more, it is believed, than any other book except the Bible.

That a man like George Bernard Shaw (who could hardly be regarded as biased in favor of a sturdy evangelical!) compares Bunyan's literary merit with Shaskespeare's.

That Bunyan, so far from being exclusively other-worldly, bore vigorous witness against the immortalities of Restoration England and had a genuine concern for social betterment.

That, so far from being a sheer individualist, he dreamt of a united fellowship of Christians, in which all "circumstantials" should be subordinated to the great fundamentals of "faith in Christ and holiness of life."

The truth is that Bunyan's great allegory is one of the books that have a timeless quality because of their rare understanding of the heart of man. "All the places and all the persons and all the adventures that John Bunyan saw in his sleep are all in your heart and in mine. All the cities, all the roads that lead from one city to another, with all the paths and all the by-paths—all the adventures, experiences, endurances, conflicts, overthrows, victories—all are within us."

Our conception of the Christian pilgrimages has enlarged since Bunyan's day, as new areas of Christian responsibility have loomed before us, but his central message is as relevant as ever. For what he was saying, above all, is that man is neither a creature of a moment nor a meaningless machine, but a pilgrim of eternity meant for a spiritual destiny.

On last Palm Sunday, a little group under the guidance of Bishop McInnis, of Jerusalem, went on a "pilgrimage" from Bethany to the Holy City, over the road that humanity's Great Pilgrimage took on the first Palm Sunday. At different stages of the journey, the Bishop read the verses with which Bunyan described the steadfast pilgrim. Those words, illumined by the memory of the Lord of all true pilgrims, may well echo across the centuries as a living message for our own day:

> "Who would true valor see,
> Let him come hither,
> One here will constant be,
> Come wind, come weather;
> There's no discouragement
> Shall make him once relent
> His first avow'd intent
> To be a pilgrim.
> "Whoso beset him round
> With dismal stories,
> Do but themselves confound—
> His strength the more is,
> No lion can him fright,
> He'll with a giant fight,
> But he will have a right
> To be a pilgrim.
>
> "Hobgoblin nor foul fiend,
> Can daunt his spirit;
> He knows he at the end
> Shall life inherit.
> Then fancies fly away;
> He'll fear not what men say;
> He'll labor night and day
> To be a pilgrim."

The Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America is encouraging the churches to utilize some Sunday in November (November, 1628, was the month of John Bunyan's birth) as an occasion for emphasizing the abiding value of his work.

For those who desire to study the man and his message more fully the following books, all of which have appeared during this tercentenary year, will be found of fascinating interest:

"The Life and Writings of John Bunyan." By Harold E. B. Spight. (Harper & Bro.)

"John Bunyan, Pilgrim and Dreamer." (Fleming G. B. Harrison. (Doubleday, Doran.)

"John Bunyan, Pilgrim and Dreamer." (Fleming H. Revell Co.)

"Tinker and Thinker: John Bunyan." By William Hamilton Nelson. (Willett, Clark & Colby.)

"John Bunyan." By Gwilym O. Griffith. (Doubleday, Doran.)

TO HOLD CHRIST FAST.

Listen! It is not hard to hold the Saviour fast. After all, all we need to do is to stay with him. Is there sorrow? He is there. You feel yourself somehow on intimate terms with Jesus Christ when you have been with those who are in deep distress of mind and heart. It has not been difficult for you to keep the atmosphere of his presence in such a place.

Yes, if you would hold him fast, go where sin is, where men battle against evil in their own hearts, where men register against wrong in high places, where they strike out against that which has been established in long practice, but which they have found to be unworthy. There you will find Jesus Christ.

Go with the poor, where they meet the urge of the working day and toil on into the night, where they think of better days for their children, with educational opportunities for sons and daughters! There you will find Jesus Christ.—Daniel Poling.

OUR DESIRES.

Our desires must be lasting, and our prayers frequent, assiduous and continual; not asking for a blessing once, and then leaving it; but daily renewing our suits and exercising our hope and faith and patience and long-suffering and religion and resignation and self-denial, in all the degrees we shall be put to. This circumstance our blessed Saviour taught, saying, that "men ought always to pray and not faint."—Jeremy Taylor.

The Home Circle.

THE REAL PRINCESS.

Rolf and Gretta were visiting their uncle in the cottage by the woods.

"Sometimes the princess passes here," he told them. "Perhaps if you watch, you will see her."

They were at once much excited. They had never seen a princess.

"She will be beautiful," said Gretta.

"She will ride a pony and will be kind to every one," said Rolf.

The very next day their uncle had to ride away on business.

"But we shall not be lonely," they told him. "We shall watch for the princess."

Gretta decided to knit a cape for the princess' doll, and Rolf said he would weave a basket in which to carry it. All the morning their fingers flew and by noontime both cape and basket were finished. Suddenly Gretta cried, "Here she comes!"

Riding on a pony, came a girl about her age. She was very pretty, though the corners of her mouth turned down instead of up; and to Rolf's surprise she struck the pony a sharp blow before she reached them. They stepped forward into the road as she came nearer and began courtesying. She reined in her pony, and Gretta handed her the fine basket on which Rolf had spent so much time; in which was the doll's cape. The princess reached down for the basket and opened it quickly.

"Oh!" she exclaimed with a glance at the wooden doll in Gretta's arms. "My doll wears silk, and I do not care for baskets." She struck the pony again and rode away.

Gretta looked at Rolf, and the hot tears rushed to her eyes.

"Never mind," he said; "she is not a real princess or she would not act in that way. Let's walk in the woods and gather flowers."

Gretta dried her tears, and the two children entered the woods. There were many flowers, and soon they had their hands full. They were about to return when Gretta seized her brother's arm.

"Some one is crying," she said.

Rolf listened. He followed the direction of the sound until he came to a little girl who had caught her foot between the roots of a tree and could not move it.

"Don't cry," he said kindly. "I will help you." With his sharp knife he cut one of the roots away until she could free herself. But she looked so tired that tender-hearted Gretta invited her to the cottage to rest. The little girl was glad to go with them. When they reached the cottage Gretta poured milk and cut bread for her, and then she felt better. Gretta showed her the basket and the doll's cape that she and Rolf had made.

"My doll is made of wood," she said. "But I love her dearly, and you may hold her if you wish."

The little girl did wish; and she tried the cape on the doll several times and admired the basket, until Rolf felt very proud.

"If you would like the basket, you may have it," he said, "and I will make my sister another."

"You may have the cape, too," said Gretta.

The little girl was delighted and hugged Gretta and thanked Rolf over and over again. But at last she said she must go; and before they could think of a way to keep her longer she was gone.

"She is much more like a princess than the other one," said Gretta.

"It isn't being called a princess that makes you one," said Rolf.

They talked for a long time after that about their new friend, and were sorry they had forgotten to ask her name.

"Perhaps we will see her to-morrow," said Rolf. But the next morning a horseman reined in at the door. "The princess wishes you to take luncheon with her to-day," he said.

How disappointed they were! But, since an invitation from a princess is a command, they hastened to get ready. On reaching the place what was their astonishment to see the little girl of the woods come forward to greet them!

"Why," they exclaimed, "I thought— why, how can you be—"

"I am the princess," she smiled. "Perhaps you saw another girl on a pony yesterday. She is the daughter of the head keeper at the palace lodge. When I left in a hurry," she went on, "I saw some one coming for me, and I wanted to surprise you both. Are you glad to be here?"

Gretta's eyes shone. "I have my knitting. I am making another doll's cape," she said.

"My doll seems to be proud of hers," said the princess with a happy laugh. "She has worn it all day. Come, I shall show her to you." And," she added, turning to Rolf, "if ever you weave a basket large enough to hold them, you may have a pair of my rabbits. You might run down to the hutch now and choose them."

On the way home that afternoon Gretta and Rolf agreed that they had never spent a happier day.

"She wasn't like a princess at all," said Gretta. "She was just like any other girl and very sweet and kind."

"That is what makes her a real princess," said Rolf. And Rolf was right.—Irene S. Woodcock, in Youth's Companion.

THE BIRD IN A BASKET.

When Teddy and Alice went to Japan to visit their grandfather, who was a missionary, they were delighted with the beautiful country, its strange customs and the many odd things which they saw for the first time.

A number of times they had seen a little brown man with a wicker basket in his hand pass by the mission. They always said good morning to him, "Ohaio," and he returned their greeting. He carried the basket carefully, and sometimes stopped and talked to the basket, as Alice told her grandfather. They felt very curious to see what was inside.

"There must be something very honorable in it," the little girl laughed. "I wish I could just take a peep."

"The next time he passes and you say 'Ohaio' to him, go close to the basket and repeat it," her grandfather told her. "I think you will find something very interesting in it. It is a secret for you to find out."

When the little brown man passed again with his basket, Alice said "Ohaio" to him, then bent over and said it to the basket. The Jap understood and smiled at her. He removed the lid and the children saw a big bird within. It was a very handsome bird and they tried to ask him if it was a pet. There were only a few words they could understand, that he was going to take it to water, and something about fish.

Alice ran into the house to tell her grandfather.

"It is a big bird, and he is going to take it to the river to give it some fish. It's a beautiful, intelligent bird, and knows what he says to it. It is very tame."

Grandfather told the children that the bird was trained to fish for his master, and he offered to take them down to the river, where the Japanese and bird were going to look for their dinner. Alice and Teddy could not wait, but ran on ahead for fear they might lose a part of the performance.

The man was already in a small boat with the bird in the basket beside him. Grandfather talked to him in his own language and he made a place for them all in the boat. Grandfather said he would row, so that the little brown man might give his whole attention to the bird.

The Jap took the bird from the basket and fastened a ring made of fiber around his throat. He then tied a long thin line to the bird and placed him on the edge of the boat. When they had gotten some distance from shore the big bird watched his master closely for the signal to plunge overboard. Then over he went with a great speed and disappeared beneath the water. He remained so long that Alice feared he might get lost, when she saw him swimming toward the boat. The line was then drawn in and the bird taken on board.

"Look at his throat," Teddy cried. "I know, it is full of fish and he can't swallow them on account of the band around his neck. How does the man get them out?"

The Jap was already kneeling beside the bird. He put his hand around the neck at the place where the band was fastened and began to press upward, thus forcing the bird to open his beak. Out dropped a fish, then another, and he was immediately thrown overboard to catch more.

"I can see the top of his head and neck," Alice cried. "He has gone after a fish. Look. He threw it into the air and caught it again."

Grandfather explained that the bird had caught it by the tail and that it would not pass down his throat in that manner, so he tossed it up and swallowed it head first.

Teddy pulled in the line and the fish, a big one, was forced from his throat. Again and again he went into the river and returned with fish. Then the ring was removed from his throat and he was given two small fish to eat. He swallowed one, but refused the other.

"He isn't hungry," Teddy said. "A big bird three feet high should have a big appetite."

"Did you notice the way the ring was fastened on his neck?" grandfather asked. "It was loose enough to allow very small fish to pass down his throat, but tight enough to hold the large ones in his gullet. He probably had a meal of small fish in the water."

The bird was replaced in his basket and they all left the boat.

"What is the name of the bird?" Teddy asked.

"A cormorant. It was caught when it was quite small and trained to fish by its master. It became very tame and quite fond of him."

"I think I should have several fish for me," Teddy remarked.

"There are certain fishing boats where several cormorants are kept at work. They are joined by a sort of harness with a long, separate line for each bird. By jerking a certain line the owner can recall any one of the number he wants. Moonlight fishing is a great sport as well as profit."

"Is it a very old custom, grandfather?" Alice asked.

"Very old in China as well as Japan," he told them. Junior World.

Willie's Trouble.

Willie, looking very dejected, was on his way home from school when his appearance attracted the attention of a kind-hearted old lady.

"What's troubling you, my little man?" she asked.

"Dyspepsia and rheumatism," replied Willie.

"Why, that's absurd," remarked the old lady. "How can that be?"

"Teacher kept me in after school because I couldn't spell them," was Willie's dismal answer. —Exchange.

Mr. Bacon: "Did you hear those measly roosters crowing this morning early?"

Mrs. Bacon: "Yes, dear."

Mr. Bacon: "I wonder what on earth they want to do that for?"

Mrs. Bacon: "Why, don't you remember, dear, you got up early one morning, and you crowed about it for a week?"—Watchman Examiner.

An old gentleman walked up to a small Negro boy who was sitting on the curb trying to eat an exceedingly large watermelon, but who was not making very much headway.

"Too much watermelon, isn't there, Rastus?" inquired the old man.

"Nossuh, boss," responded the small black boy, "not enough niggah."—Exchange.

Communications pertaining to subscriptions and other business matters should be addressed to the Manager, or to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

The Printed Label on a paper shows the date to which a subscription is paid. It is as good as a written receipt. When renewal is made, if the date is not moved forward after four weeks, notify us, and we will make it right.

Communications intended for the Editor should be directed to him at 512 Camp Street. Correspondents will observe the following rules: 1. Write on only one side of the paper. 2. If you have a typewriter, by all means use it; otherwise use a good quality of black ink. 3. Leave a space of at least two inches at the top of the first page; leave a margin of at least one inch on the left-hand side of the page; do not crowd the words and the lines together. 4. Take special pains to write proper names correctly and legibly. 5. Use letter paper if you can get it—not note paper. No attention will be paid to rolled manuscripts.

CONFERENCE PERSONALS.

elders and officers of the various boards was a supper served them at Chickasaw College by the Board of Stewards and representatives from Oxford, at which time they laid before this representative group the needs of a new church at Oxford.

During the time he was privileged to be at the North Mississippi Conference, the editor of the Advocate was delightfully entertained in the beautiful home of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Boone. Other guests in the home were Bishop and Mrs. W. A. Candler, Rev. J. H. Felts, Dr. D. M. Key, and Dr. R. A. Tucker.

The many friends of our good friend Crismond Galceran, Jr., are rejoiced to see him present at the Conference. He was for a long time quite sick in the Greenville Hospital, and it was at one time feared that he would not be again able to take work; but he is yet among us and bids fair to give many years of active ministerial life to the cause.

Among visiting brethren from other Conferences were noticed W. L. Duren and R. A. Clark, who were former members of this Conference; C. W. Crisler, B. F. Lewis, J. A. Wells, J. L. Sutton, of the Mississippi Conference; H. T. Carley, R. H. Harper and J. G. Snelling, of the Louisiana Conference, and V. W. Hamner and J. T. Self from other Conferences.

Pontotoc Methodism was all dressed up for the Conference. This is the first time it has been entertained at Pontotoc. The church has been enlarged and beautified, a fine annex built, and these loyal people opened hearts and homes to the point of crowding themselves into uncomfortable positions to entertain the Conference. And they did it royally. We shall ever remember the delightful session held at Pontotoc.

Judge Thomas E. Pegram, a loyal layman from the Corinth District, was a delegate to and a faithful attendant on the sessions of the Conference. Judge Pegram is Grand Master of the Masonic Grand Lodge of Mississippi, and Judge on the bench of one of the circuit districts in the civil courts, but is glad to give time and interest to the church and its causes.

Miss Martha DuBerry, pastor's assistant and director of religious education at Tupelo, is a member of the Conference from the Aberdeen District. She is charming the audience at the preaching services with her violin playing. She is a granddaughter of one of the preachers who died soon after the organization of the Conference, Rev. R. A. Neblett. She is the niece of Rev. R. P. Neblett, our pastor at Kosciusko.

Rev. J. J. Brooks, whose name appears at the top of the chronological list of the members of the Conference, and who was a charter member of the Conference when it was formed out of the territory of the Memphis, Mississippi and Alabama Conferences, is present and takes a keen interest in all the proceedings. Brother Brooks and Rev. A. W. Langley, who is not present at this session of the Conference, are the only living preachers present at the 1870 Conference.

Among the older members of the Conference is noted the presence of Gen. F. A. Howell, of Durant, who, with Rev. J. J. Brooks, was present for the organization of the North Mississippi Conference, at Water Valley, in 1870. No one loves the church and the cause any more than Gen. Howell, or is more devoted and gives better attention to the proceedings. He is not only in the Conference room at all the sessions, but is usually on the front seat.

Dr. J. R. Countiss, the genial and efficient secretary of the Conference, is serving for the twenty-fifth year in this capacity. He not only knows how to preach, and run a college, but how to keep the records of the Conference and edit the journal. Since its organization in 1870, the Conference has had only four secretaries—Rev. John Barcroft, who served from 1870 through 1890; Rev. J. S. Oakley, who served from 1890 through 1898; Rev. T. W. Lewis, who served from 1899 through 1902; and Dr. J. R. Countiss was first elected at Holly Springs in 1903 and each year thereafter. This is a remarkable record.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Conference collections in full, was the report at the fourth quarterly conference of the Kentwood, La., charge, held recently. Rev. Wm. Schuhle is the pastor.

Brother Richmond Randle, Memphis, Tenn., in renewing his subscription to the Advocate, writes:

It is possible by this means to create a trust fund which will provide an annual income for yourself, or some loved one during their lifetime, and which will go eventually into a fundamental, world-wide, Christian program.

Protection Against Old Age

"I have been reading the Advocate since I learned to read—in 1877—and want to keep it up."

Brother R. H. Nestler, secretary of the Board of Stewards of the Epworth Methodist Church, this city, informs us that the Board, at its regular monthly meeting on Oct. 26, unanimously commended the work of the pastor, Rev. Guy M. Hicks, and requested that he be reappointed to Epworth for the coming year.

Rev. Leon L. McCain, our pastor at Minden, La., writes: "I have just read the report of the treasurer of the Board of Missions, Louisiana Conference, Brother J. H. Carter. According to his report, we lead the Conference in payments to missionary maintenance and specials. We are not done yet—we have a nice sum still to send in. We are very proud of this record."

Mrs. Sallie Smylie Ferguson, always active in the work of the Mississippi Conference Woman's Missionary Society, passed to her reward at her home in Meridian, Miss., on October 21. The Advocate extends sincere sympathy to the sorrowing family and friends. We have in hand a fuller account of her death and burial, which will appear at an early date.

Millsaps College will celebrate "Home-Coming and Dad's Day" on Nov. 17. A special program of entertainment has been prepared, including a football game between the "Majors" and the Southwestern Louisiana "Bulldogs." An attractive announcement of the day has been sent out by Mr. L. L. Wheeler, president of the student body.

Rev. K. W. Dodson, presiding elder of the Minden District, writes: "I see in the Advocate that Brother Cain claims that Natalbany is the first charge in the State to pay all claims in full, and gives the date on which they reported paid in full as Oct. 27. Hall Summit, in the Minden District, reported everything paid in full on Oct. 14. Rev. P. B. McCullen is pastor at Hall Summit and deserves much credit, because this is the first year in a long time this charge has paid in full."

A note from Rev. J. M. Alford, our pastor at Vivian, La., brings the sad news of the death of his wife's mother, Mrs. E. E. Welland, in Baton Rouge, La., on Sunday, Oct. 28. She was in her eighty-fourth year. She was a member of the Presbyterian Church, had lived a beautiful Christian life, and died in the triumphs of the faith. She is survived by three sons, four daughters, and two sisters. The funeral services were conducted by her pastor, Rev. D. F. Wilkinson, assisted by Rev. B. W. Waltman. The Advocate extends sincere sympathy to the sorrowing loved ones and friends.

After the Advocate had gone to press last week, we received the following note from Brother James Hoffpaulr: "My mother, Mrs. James Ivy Hoffpaulr, widow of Rev. J. I. Hoffpauir, has been very sick, having been in bed for seven long weeks. She is past the Biblical threescore years and ten, but is now showing slight improvement and we are hoping and praying for her recovery. We thought a word in the Advocate might bring some message of comfort and cheer from her friends, especially from the older preachers who know her and will appreciate a notice of her illness. Her address is, Box 14, Indian Bayou, La." We are sure her friends will remember her in their prayers.

Under the auspices of the National Committee on the Cause and Cure of War, a public meeting will be held on Thursday evening, Nov. 17, at eight o'clock, at the Sophie Wright High School, this city, in support of the Paris Pact, the treaty renouncing war as a policy and signed by the Great Powers on Aug. 27, 1928. Addresses will be delivered by Senator Ransdell, on "How to Prevent War," and by Dr. Herman C. Nixon, of Tulane University, on "Europe and Peace." It is also hoped that former Governor John M. Parker will speak. This meeting is a part of the campaign of publicity sponsored by nine national women's organizations. Mrs. W. A. Bechtel is chairman of the local committee of arrangements.

DEATH OF REV. W. E. DICKENS.

Rev. W. E. Dickens, a member of the Mississippi Conference, residing since his superannuation at Daleville, Miss., died at his home on Friday, Nov. 2, and was buried in the cemetery of Andrew Chapel, five miles away. Funeral services, led by Rev. R. W. Ware, Daleville pastor, were held at the Daleville church, with a large crowd attending, among whom were nine of the brethren of the Conference, each of whom participated in some way in the service. Brother Dickens was much beloved by his brethren of the ministry and by the people whom he served as pastor, last among whom were those of the Daleville charge.

It is important that all requests for change of address be made as promptly as possible. No change can be made without request. In writing, give the old address as well as the new.

BUSINESS MANAGER.

WHITWORTH COLLEGE.

It occurred to me that the members of the Mississippi Annual Conference, and indeed all friends of Whitworth College, would be interested to hear of the prosperity of the college.

The session of 1927-28 under the wise and prudent management of the Rev. H. G. Hawkins, the efficient president, was, under the circumstances, perhaps one of the most prosperous and successful sessions of the college for many years. President Hawkins labored under many discouraging conditions for which he was not personally responsible, yet each seeming difficulty yielded to his wise, courageous and executive acumen and became stepping stones which lifted him to higher and greater achievements in the administration of the affairs of the college; so when he resigned from the presidency he turned over to his successor a well organized institution with its face turned toward the sunrise of a new day—a day that gives promise of a new lease on life, a day that gives promise of a brilliant career in the educational world.

The friends of the college are confidently expecting to realize the fulfillment of this promise under the guiding hand of the new president, Rev. G. F. Winfield, D.D. Dr. Winfield comes to the college with the strongest endorsements and most flattering recommendations. He stepped into the arena so well prepared by Brother Hawkins, with the reassurance of confidence and picked up the line of work that had been laid down with a fixed purpose of heart and mind to show himself worthy of such a great trust. He is thoroughly prepared by training, education, and experience to assume the responsibility of leadership of this institution.

The present session opened auspiciously. There is now one of the most completely equipped corps of teachers that the college has ever had to direct the student body that compares most favorably with any of its predecessors.

Being now a member of the Millsaps-Whitworth System, has given the college a new place in the minds of the people. This new relationship has awakened new interest and the people have heard the rally call of the oncoming educational institutions of South Mississippi. The only thing needed to put the college where it rightfully belongs is a sufficient endowment. I would bespeak for Dr. Winfield the hearty co-operation of the members of the Annual Conference, and the combined efforts will be crowned with gratifying results.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE ENTERTAINMENT.

As there no longer seems to be a necessity of examinations on the day preceding Conference, hosts and hostesses will not expect arrival of guests before Tuesday afternoon, unless they are notified otherwise. Please write me, if for special reasons, it is necessary for you to come earlier, and we shall take pleasure in so arranging.

Experience has shown that changes of assignment to homes so often have to be made at a late moment, that cards will not be sent out to the members of Conference. Assignments will be made on arrival at church office as promptly as possible.

No plan is being made for public services on Tuesday evening. The church will be open for committees which desire to meet, and for social fellowship.

Brethren who are planning to come to Conference in their cars are requested to advise me.

A ten-story hotel is in process of erection. Until this is completed our hotels are frequently filled with regular guests, and Conference visitors who desire hotel accommodation are advised to make reservations in advance. Any favor in engaging rooms that we can extend will be gladly given. Rooms at the Majestic and Rigmaiden Hotels range from $1.50 to $3 per day.

We are planning to entertain Conference members in homes, and it will be impossible for us to entertain more than a small number otherwise.

It would be a great favor to us if delegates or preachers who for any reason find it impossible to attend, will notify us so that homes expecting guests will not be disappointed.

Please write the time when you are planning to arrive.

R. H. WYNN.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

Committee on Admissions.

The Committee on Admissions for the Louisiana Annual Conference is requested to meet in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at Lake Charles, La., on Tuesday, November 20, 1928, at 7:30 p.m. Applicants and interested presiding elders please meet with us.

BRISCOE CARTER, Chairman.

Class of the Second Year.

The Class of the Second Year of the Louisiana Conference is requested to meet the committee Tuesday night, Nov. 20, at 7:30, at First Methodist Church, Lake Charles, La.

The members of the committee are also requested to be present.

R. S. WALTON, Chairman.

NOW!

Twin devils—idleness and procrastination—combine to defeat the high purposes of men. It is not so much lack of ability as lack of application that brings failure to the majority of well-meaning human beings. We fritter away our time. We reverse the ancient maxim, "Never put off until to-morrow what you can do to-day," and make it read, "Never do to-day what you can put off until to-morrow."

It is no wonder that the world is constantly clamoring for capable leadership. The highest success is just waiting for the man or woman who will take for his motto the one word "Now" and then proceed in sunshine and in rain, in sickness and in health, in trouble and in prosperity, to live up to this high standard of action.

Hard work will offset many a natural handicap, much lack of native ability. Where a high type of directing intelligence is added to the will to toil, achievement is all the more conspicuous, of course. But it is remarkable what any man of average capacity can accomplish if only he be willing to face the tasks of life with promptness and vigor. Charles Darwin was a sick man during most of his life and could give himself for only a few hours each day to scientific study, but by an amazing persistence and a close and regular application to his problems he worked out his revolutionary theory of evolution. Most of us, however, are ever ready with some excuse to show why just at present we cannot do a certain piece of work, or why the undertaking should be postponed until to-morrow or next week. We are "not feeling well," or we are "tired out;" we are "expecting company," or we are "not in just the right mood;" we lack "inspiration," or it is "too hot" or "too cold." So run the alibis. And so runs the record that spells ultimate disaster.

More tragic, however, than the failure in the field of outer accomplishment is the inner defeat of the soul which follows the habit of idleness and procrastination. These evils literally eat out the spiritual life. They weaken personality. They undermine character. As the drug addict increasingly demands larger doses of his favorite narcotic and under its domination grows continually weaker in his powers of resistance against the deadly iniquity, so the victim of laziness and postponement in the course of the years finds himself inextricably tangled up in a habit that he now has no strength to break.

What is to be done? How can a man or woman who for decades has been following the line of least resistance be saved? How can he live with himself? Generally, he takes refuge in a dream world and in imagination pictures himself as a great hero of achievement. He sees himself toiling "terribly," and enjoying magnificent triumphs. He visualizes the whole world at his feet. In theory, he develops great plans; in the abstract, he works hard; he even sets the date when he intends to cease postponing and actually to get down to business. But it is all a dream—a sop to an outraged conscience. He has evaded reality, and he must pay the price.

But there is a way of deliverance. The remedy is simple. Let the procrastinator walk straight up to his hardest problem, his most distasteful task, now! And let him say "No" to every plausible excuse, until with undeviating persistence he has found a solution, accomplished his work. The glad relief from self-condemnation and the new sense of power that come from such genuine achievement will bring added strength and courage for the duty next in line. Presently, by following daily a program that emphasizes "now" at every turn, the weakling will be transformed into an overcomer, the failure into a success.

Coming immediately to close grips with the task in hand, moreover, will tend to reduce friction and to eliminate many difficulties. We make our work hard by worry. When we play around a problem, meditate upon its sinister aspects, and magnify its intricacies, we soon create a condition of inner panic which unfits us to find a solution. But when, on the other hand, we take hold of a piece of work with both hands and give ourselves boldly to its accomplishment, all the laws of nature seem to combine to help us.

Life is full of difficulties. There are evils on every hand. Troubles abound. Hard work dogs our steps. Only a great motive can bring the permanent strength necessary to overcome these obstacles. We recommend religion. For, after all, there must be something of eternity in the heart if a toiler is to renew his courage every morning and be prepared to work persistently and conscientiously through the heat of the day. The man who has not vital belief in unseen realities will say, "What is the use?" as he faces his task. He may be sustained for a while by his self-respect or by his love for his wife and his children, but in the long run he needs above everything a sense of the presence of God and of the power of an endless life, if he is to reach a high quality of accomplishment.

Now! It is a magic word. The time is short, and we are the sons of God.—Editorial in Zion's Herald.

WE ARE SAVED BY HOPE (ROMANS 8:24).

Hope is a wonderful word. It signifies not a dream born of desire, but a vision of final good inspiring to faith and action. Hope is the power by which the sculptor, unmindful of the fragments flying from his chisel, sees the figure imprisoned in the marble and toils on that others may see it. It is the spirit by which the musician brings from voice or instrument that which has already sung its symphony in his own soul. And hope is the blessedness of a vision which reveals future perfection for man and the world for which Christ died. Hope thus becomes a holy power, fit to be joined with faith and love. The true Christian has a vision, and with the help of the Master struggles to attain.—Floyd Tompkins.

Remember this: Not all the wild,
Huge, untamed elements have force
To reach thee, though the seas were piled
In weltering mountains in thy course!
Only thyself thyself can harm.

The subject of this sketch, BROTHER D. R. NEWTON, was born in Georgetown, S. C., March 18, 1857, and died in his home in Kokomo, Miss., March 4, 1928, as the result of a shot fired by an unknown party. Hearing some one in the store, he went out to investigate, and was shot from within the store, from which he died on the above mentioned date. Brother Newton was a lifelong member of the Methodist church, and was always found ready for every call of God through his church. Brother Newton was married to Miss Mollie Blakely, Feb. 10, 1876, who died many years ago. On Oct. 16, 1889, he was married to Miss Mary E. Tilton, who, with four children, remain to mourn the death of a good husband and father. It was the writer's privilege to enjoy the acquaintance and good fellowship for twenty or more years; we found him always ready to do his bit for the ongoing of the Master's kingdom. I think it could be said of him that no one will be missed in both church and community more than he. Brother Newton was faithful in little things; no call of the church was too small to challenge his best possible service. On the morning of March 5, he was buried from the Methodist church by the writer, assisted by Rev. W. C. M. Baggett.

C. M. CROSSLEY.

The many friends of MISS CARRIE LOUISE LINDSEY were shocked and grieved when they learned that on Thursday, Oct. 18, she had quietly slipped away from them. She had been in unusually good health for some time and no one was prepared for her sudden death. Lula, as she was familiarly called, was born at Louisville, Miss., one of eight children, three of whom are still living—Ransom, an only brother; Mollie, and Mrs. Nannie Simmons. She had spent eight years in Goodman with Mrs. Simmons, and had endeared herself to the whole town. She taught in the Sunday school, and always enjoyed her church privileges. It can be truthfully said that Lula was kind-hearted and thoughtful of others. Her devotion and tender ministries to her mother during her last illness were commented on by all who came into the home. It was always her delight to have her pastor in the home, and she left nothing undone for his comfort and pleasure. The funeral service was held in the home of her sister, Oct. 19, attended by a large number of friends, and her body was laid to rest in the cemetery at Goodman, under a bank of beautiful flowers. Our prayer is that the family, who, for the second time this year, have had the death angel to visit them, may be comforted and sustained by the grace of their Heavenly Father.

Her pastor,

S. A. BROWN.

The subject of this sketch, MRS. SUSANAH BURNHAM, was born Oct. 12, 1851, and departed this life Sept. 8, 1928, at the old home near Johns, Rankin County, Miss. She was the daughter of Uncle Neely and Aunt Caroline Brumfield, who were devout Christians, and staunch members of the Methodist church. Early in life Sister Burnham united with the Methodist church, and remained a true and loyal member until death. After growing up to young womanhood she was fortunate in accepting as her companion and husband that Christian gentleman, William C. Burnham, who preceded her to the glory world some twenty or thirty years, but who still lives in the confidence and affections of the people who knew him best. To this union seven children were born, four sons and three daughters: Luther P., of Jackson, Miss.; C. W., Johns, Miss.; Dr. Hugh, Brandon, Miss., and Emory Burnham, who preceded her a few years ago. The daughters are: Mrs. Ina Collier, Johns, Miss.; Mrs. J. E. Williams, wife of the pastor of the Methodist church, Picayune, Miss., and Mrs. J. W. Patrick, Johns, Miss. Mother Burnham, as she was affectionately called, was of the old type of Christian womanhood. Hers was a simple, childlike faith and trust in God and Christ, her Saviour. She knew God and loved him. Her last years were years of affliction, but through it all she never worried nor complained, but bore it with patience and Christian fortitude, for she, like St. Paul, knew that when this earthly house of her tabernacle dissolved she had a building of God, a house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens. That was her joy and comfort through those thirty years of lonely widowhood. She loved her children and was a mother in the truest sense. She was unselfish in her love and affection because she loved everybody. Her place on earth cannot be filled. We miss her and mourn her departure, but the Lord knew best, and took her home, where she now occupies that beautiful mansion that Jesus went to prepare. On Sunday afternoon, Sept. 9, at 3 o'clock, the funeral service was held in the Methodist church at Johns, in the presence of a great concourse of friends who had met to pay the last tribute of love and respect to a Mother in Israel; after which the body of our dear friend was borne to the cemetery and placed beside her departed husband, there to remain till the resurrection morn. Dear sorrowing ones, she has left you a goodly heritage; be as true to God as she was and there will be a glorious reunion in the sweet by and by.

Her pastor,

T. H. KING.

FROM TRENTON CHARGE.

Dear Dr. Carley: Just a word from Trenton charge. We are in our third year on this charge, and the work is moving along fine. Trenton is a seven-church circuit. When we came to this work we found some of the churches badly in need of repairs. During the three years we have painted four of these churches, recovered three, bought one organ, three gas lamps, and also some work has been done on the parsonage, yet it is in need of other repairs. The churches are free of any indebtedness. There has been an increase in the salary, which has been paid in full each year. We have not paid our Benevolences in full either year, but we are nearing the goal this year.

We have added to the roll in this time one hundred and one on profession of faith and thirty-one by certificate. The membership is more active than when we came on the work and are being led to greater vision in church service and work for the Master.

We have looked after the Superannuate Endowment Fund and the record shows that we have surpassed many of the larger charges and stations in taking care of this most important part of our church budget.

Our fourth quarterly conference has been held and our efficient and most able presiding elder, Rev. H. A. Gatlin, brought us a great message from the second chapter of James, using as a subject the need of a pure and undefiled religion before God. This meeting was well attended, with good reports from all departments of the church.

R. M. GIBSON, P. C.

THE BEST WAY.

By John C. Collins.

For easier tasks I would not pray,
But that my strength from day to day
May grow. This, Lord, is what I ask—
That I may meet each given task.

Nor would I seek an easier road
On which to bear my daily load,
But pray for courage and for skill
To gladly bear it, onward still.

It is not best each sun should rise
Upon serene and cloudless skies,
But this—when shadows quench the light—
The faith that makes my pathway bright.

I would not then deliverance seek
From strain, because my arm was weak,
But bravely ask help of the Lord
To do the duty that is hard.

WORSHIP.

By Ruth Estelle Furbee.

God made my cathedral
Under the stars;
He gave my cathedral
Trees for its spires;
He hewed me an altar
In the depth of a hill
He gave for a hymnal
A rock-bedded rill;
He voiced me a sermon
Of heavenly light
In the beauty around me—
The calmness of night;
And I felt as I knelt
On the velvet-like sod
I had supped of the Spirit
In the Temple of God.

The present Nationalist Government in China has in it an unusual number of Christian men, and many believe that the Christian movement in China has turned the corner and is facing a most hopeful future. The four most influential and important ministeries are headed by Christian men.

The following twelve rules of conduct for the people were drawn up recently by the ministry of the interior and proclaimed to the public:

1. Wipe away all national humiliation.
2. Set and follow a high moral standard.
3. Give up all superstitious beliefs.
4. Use native products.
5. Build and repair roads and highways.
6. Plant more trees.
7. Abstain from drinking, smoking, gambling and other evil habits.
8. Be diligent and thrifty.
9. Take physical exercises.
10. Learn how to read and write.
11. Abolish the custom of foot-binding.
12. Cultivate habits of cleanliness. —Clipping.

Dr. E. Stanley Jones, author of "Christ of the Indian Road" and "Christ at the Round Table," has lately returned from a series of visits to Methodist and Southern Methodist mission stations in South America. In "Christ of the Andean Road," a series of articles now appearing in the Christian Herald, he gives vivid accounts of these visits. He is very enthusiastic about the wonderful beauty and phenomenal material development of these Latin American countries. In them he sees "a field white for the harvest" of Christian missions.

Thanks to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Denison, Texas.—"I think there is no tonic equal to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for nervousness and I have used Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash and the Pilis for Constipation. I can certainly praise your medicines for what they have done for me and I wish you success in the future. I can do any kind of work now and when women ask me what has helped me I recommend your medicines. I will answer any letters I receive asking about them." —Mrs. EMMA GREGG, Route 3, Box 53, Denison, Texas.

ZONE MEETING AT RIPLEY, MISS.

A zone meeting of the Missionary Societies of Tippah County, North Mississippi Conference, was held in the Methodist church at Ripley, Tuesday afternoon, Oct. 9. It proved not only profitable but pleasant for those attending.

The zone leader, Mrs. Fred B. Smith, presided. A beautiful musical program was interspersed by talks on "What the Missionary Society Has Meant to My Church, My Community and to Me," by Miss Etta Murry; and "The Missionary Society Speaks Out Loud," by Mrs. John Finger. Then Mmes. Sam Fryar and E. R. Richey gave, responsively, "Which Woman Are You?" All excuses were answered by Scriptures quoted.

Devotions were led by Mrs. Lee Cox, and prayer by Mrs. E. R. Richey.

After the meeting, sandwiches and ice tea were served, and a delightful social hour enjoyed.

MRS. SAM FRYAR,
Publicity Superintendent.

ZONE 4, MINDEN DISTRICT.

Zone 4 met at Standard, La., on the afternoon of Sept. 12, 1928. Roll call showed the following representation present: Standard, 11; Olla, 6; Rochelle, 16; Selma, 2; Winnfield, 3. Twelve visitors were present.

Mrs. R. E. Smith, of Shreveport, led the devotional, and Rev. Mr. Harris, of Rochelle, offered a prayer. The history of each auxiliary represented was given. Mrs. Woods spoke for Standard, Mrs. Davis for Olla, Mrs. D. W. Kelly for Winnfield, Mrs. Hilburn for Rochelle, Mrs. Montgomery for Selma. The recognition service was not forgotten. Five members present had been members of the Society for twenty years.

Mrs. D. W. Kelly, our District Secretary, gave us an interesting and helpful talk. Then "The Accomplishments of Seven Years" was discussed by the Rochelle Society. Every one present enjoyed the wonderful address given by Mrs. J. B. Pollard, of Monroe. She talked on "The Year of Jubilee" and her trip to the Jubilee Council.

At the close of the meeting, a social hour was enjoyed, while refreshments were served.

MRS. H. GWIN,
Acting Secretary.

ZONE MEETING HELD AT JENA, LA.

On Saturday, Sept. 15, Jena Woman's Missionary Society was hostess at a meeting of zone No. 5, comprising the Woman's Missionary Societies of Selma, Jena, Jonesville, Trout and Good Pine.

The delegates arrived about 11 o'clock, and were greeted at the door of the Nolley Memorial Methodist church by Mrs. C. W. Flowers and Mrs. O. J. Evans, who pinned jubilee badges on each delegate. Every one assembled in the beautifully decorated auditorium of the church for a very impressive quiet hour, conducted by Rev. C. B. Davis, of Arkansas, and Rev. H. W. Cudd, of Jena. The morning services were conducted by a march to Nolley's tomb, where a prayer was held.

The hostess society then invited every one to the basement, where a delicious luncheon was served. The plates were decorated with beautifully engraved cards symbolizing the Jubilee Year.

The afternoon session was opened at 1:15 in the auditorium of the church with a prelude by Mrs. Earle Poe. Then "Forward Through the Ages" was sung by the congregation. A most interesting and inspirational Bible lesson was given by Mrs. Hall, of Selma. Mrs. Bolton Walker, of Jena, then gave a welcome address. Mrs. W. Kennard Pepper, of Trout, responded to Mrs. Walker.

The minutes of the last meeting were read by the secretary. To the roll call a total of seventy responded. "Spiritual Cultivation of the Jubilee," a topic given by Mrs. R. H. Bamburg, of Trout, created much enthusiasm, and was enjoyed by all. Mrs. H. N. Tannehill, of Trout, gave a most enlightening paper on "Truth About Prohibition."

At this time Mr. and Mrs. R. M. Frank, of Jordan, Minn., sang a duet, "Whispering Hope." This was beautifully rendered and enjoyed by all. Rev. A. D. Lemons, of Selma, very ably explained "Why We Need Daily Vacation Bible School." "Plans for Jubilee Student Work" was given by Mrs. Wood, of Good Pine. Mr. Guy Corley sang "The Old Rugged Cross." Rev. R. H. Bamburg, of Trout, talked very intelligently on the problems America is facing to-day in its coming campaign. Miss Hazel Hendrix, of Jena, gave a very interesting discussion on "In This Day for Women, What Should Be Our Attitude Toward Christianizing the World." Miss Carmen Moffett, of Selma, then explained the "Object of Week of Prayer Offering." Closing hymn, "The Year of Jubilee Has Come."

Jena was then given a rising vote of thanks for the hospitality shown.

Jonesville asked for the next zone meeting, and it will be held in Jonesville Saturday, Nov. 3. Benediction by Rev. R. H. Bamburg.

MRS. B. T. GALLAGHER,
Zone Leader.
MRS. W. KENNARD PEPPER,
Secretary.

ZONE MEETING, BROOKHAVEN DISTRICT.

On Oct. 4, Hazlehurst was hotess to the northern zone of the Brookhaven District.

The zone leader, Mrs. J. E. J. Ferguson, called the meeting to order. After the doxology was sung, Mrs. C. W. Crisler conducted the devotional. She based her remarks on the missionary lesson found in the twenty-eighth chapter of Matthew, and stressed the value of a personal touch with the missionaries. A prayer by Mrs. Alford followed.

Sunday School

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

Rev. H. L. Johns, pastor at Carrollton Avenue, is giving special attention to the Young People's problem in his Sunday school. He says: "Will start three classes Sunday, having elected departmental pupil leaders. Have about sixty Young People enrolled, with thirty-nine present last Sunday. One of these groups will be a Teacher-Training class."

Rev. A. K. McLellan, Dual Extension Secretary, has been visiting in the Monroe District recently. Sunday, Oct. 28, he helped to organize a new Sunday school at Sterlington. Rev. David Tarver is pastor at Sterlington. Brother McLellan taught a Cokesbury class while in this district, at Jones, La. This makes the twenty-fifth school he has taught in during this year.

We had several welcomed visitors in our office recently. Dr. A. S. Lutz reports some splendid quarterly conferences on his fourth round, one of his best being on the Glenmora charge, with Rev. S. S. Bogan, pastor. Brother P. O. Lowrey, pastor at Campti, was here Wednesday of this week to meet Rev. Jeff Smith, of Dallas, blind evangelist, who will help him in a revival.

Another welcomed visitor was Rev. J. D. Fomby, pastor at Colfax, who reports a splendid year's work.

President D. B. Raulins, of Mansfield College, is giving a special course on "Worship" this week at the McDonnell Wesley Community House at Houma, La.

Mr. R. H. Nelson, Shreveport District Secretary, sends in an interesting "write-up" of his work as District Secretary of the Shreveport District for the November issue of the Sunday School Outlook.

Miss Lois Hammett, special worker in the French District, was in Alexandria this week to attend a meeting of the Conference staff. She reports a good year's work.

The last Standard Training School for this year was held at Monroe, making a total of seventeen schools this year—four in the Alexandria District, and two each in the Baton Rouge, Lake Charles, Minden, Monroe, New Orleans and Ruston Districts, and one in the Shreveport District.

We note the dates of the Mount Sequoyah and Junaluska Leadership Schools for 1929 are about the same as this year. The first term Leadership School opens on Sunday morning, July 7, instead of the preceding Thursday as in 1928.

Sunday morning, Oct. 28, we visited the Sunday school at First Church, Alexandria, and assisted in the organization of an adult Bible class of pupils under forty. Adults need to be classified and graded, as much as Childhood and Youth. We say "The Law of the Sunday school is the need of the Pupil," and surely the needs of Young Adulthood are different from Later Adulthood. Mr. T. W. Holloman, the superintendent, is working on the problems of the Adults in his Sunday school.

Sunday night, Oct. 28, we had the pleasure of speaking to the Epworth Leaguers of First Church, Alexandria, at a combined service of the Senior and Hi Leagues. Miss Sue Davis is president of the Senior League, and Mr. Charles White, adult superintendent of the Hi League. Our message for the Young People on this occasion was, "The High Cost of Being Somebody."

Dr. W. W. Drake, chairman of the Conference Board, has arranged with the Committee on Public Worship at the Annual Conference to give us Thursday night, Nov. 22, for the anniversary of our Board. The General Board representative will be Dr. F. P. Turner, of Nashville.

C. D. ATKINSON,
Conference Superintendent.

Grand total, $647.35.

We now have 172 Sunday schools participating in Dual-Special, i. e., 172 Sunday schools observing the fourth Sunday in each month as Missionary Sunday. This is a disciplinary requirement, and those of our Sunday school superintendents who wish to be regular law-abiding Methodists and who wish to aid us in training our people to observe the laws of our church will see to it that their school will observe the fourth Sunday as Missionary Sunday. Again, if we are to have a missionary-minded church of to-morrow we must train in missions to-day. And where is a better place to begin than in the Sunday schools? Remember that about one-half of the Dual-Special offerings is put to work within the bounds of our own Conference.

Other Items.

With our share of the Dual-Special offering we have gone into ninety-two communities and held Cokesbury Training Schools. We have enrolled in these schools 2,078 adults and issued 1,174 credits. The leadership training programs set up in these places represent only part of the work done by the workers. Other work as follows: Holding Institutes, working in revivals, checking schools, making surveys, visiting in the homes of the people, preaching, making inspirational talks, speaking in public schools, distributing Christian literature, organizing and reorganizing little Sunday schools. The result (some) of this work: Paved the way for the annual revival, instructed and encouraged the Sunday school workers, revived dying Sunday schools, and in many instances stimulated church and Sunday school work to the extent of new church and Sunday school buildings and Sunday school rooms.

Sunday School Day.

More schools observed Sunday School Day this year than heretofore. The income from Sunday School Day did not come up to Brother Gladney's expectation, but he is gratified to find quite an increase in observing the day over previous years. The educational value in observing Sunday School Day is beyond dispute. There is no better way to place your school before the people along with its aims and purposes and to show what the school is trying to do.

Observe.

We have gone forward in leaps and bounds. Sunday school interest all over our Conference is on the rise. We are doing three times the amount of work previously done. We are enjoying whole-hearted support and co-operation, and best of all sympathetic team work. Our future is bright for better and bigger things.

REPORT OF CHAS. ASSAF FOR THE MONTHS OF AUGUST, SEPTEMBER AND OCTOBER, 1928.

Meridian District.

Aug. 4 to 11—With Rev. E. J. Rutledge, Porterville, Miss. We had a good meeting; during the meeting we had altar prayer; several persons came to the altar for prayer and reconsecration; five people joined the church by profession of faith and baptism at Union church.

Corinth District, in North Mississippi Conference.

Aug. 18 to 25—With Rev. Wade H. Heath, Rienzi, Miss. We had a good meeting at Bethel church; during the services several people came to the altar for prayer and reconsecration; two infants baptized, also five people joined the church by profession of faith and baptism. Also I spoke to the Mississippi zone of the district in Rienzi; after the service we had altar prayer; every one of the women came to the altar and pledged themselves to the Lord and his work with prayer; the subject was, "What is the duty of the Missionary Society in the church?"

Seashore District.

Sept. 2-14—With Rev. L. H. Daniels, Biloxi, Miss. We had a good old-time revival in Epworth Church. During the revival several people reconsecrated their life to the Lord at the altar in prayer; and promised to have family prayer in the home. Forty-seven people joined the church, forty-three of them by profession of faith and baptism. Also we baptized eight infants.

Sept. 28 to Oct. 7—With Rev. W. W. Murray, Coalville, Miss. We had a good revival. During the services we had altar prayer, several people at the altar for prayer and reconsecrated their life to the Lord and to do his work for his church in the community. Twenty-one people joined the church by profession of faith and baptism; also I spoke to the Woman's Missionary Society and reorganized them for the church, and do the work for the Lord in the community.

Brookhaven District.

Oct. 14—With Rev. E. D. Heitchson, Beauregard, Miss. We had two good services; during the services we had altar prayer; several people at the altar for prayer and reconsecration.

Monroe District, Louisiana Conference.

Oct. 19 to 30—I made this visit to Monroe to see our brother, Mr. Mike John, and his family. I found them well and happy in the Lord with their Christian home life; also I visited the rest of the Syrians and spoke with them and encouraged them to the Lord and church. Brother M. S. Monk, preacher in charge, asked me to preach Sunday, at 7:30 p. m. We had a large congregation, with a good service. Several of the Syrians came to the church. After the service we had altar prayer. Several people came to the altar for prayer. I do appreciate the home and the life of our Brother John. He has been a very great man of God to our church since he gave his heart to the Lord and joined the church. I trust the Lord may continue his blessing upon him and family, also on his happy home; may he continue happy in the Lord and in his church work.

Services, 70; joined the church, 78; infants baptized, 10; visiting, several.

I have enjoyed my work for our Lord and our church. I appreciated the opportunity of being with the brethren, pastors and their courtesy to me in the work of our Lord and his church this year. I do also appreciate their co-operation with me and prayer, for which we are all grateful to our Lord for the success of this great year's work. Thanking you for your help and for your prayer, I am,

Sincerely yours,

REV. CHAS. ASSAF,
428 Lynch Street,
Jackson, Miss.

A LOST ART.

"Isaac went out to meditate in the field at the eventide."

Some one has said that thoughts are blossoms of the soul. When we meditate we think. Meditation is not day-dreaming or skygazing; in it the soul reaches its quiet hour, the heart its trysting place, the mind its retreat. Meditation is essential in making of life. One reason so few supremely great men are produced by the city is that cities are noisy and hustling. Life there is compiex and intense; men are caught up in its whirl and miss the chance to meditate.

The country, on the contrary, is preeminently the home of great men and women. Study the biographies of the world's mental and moral giants, and you will find that most of them were reared in the wholesome and bracing atmosphere of the country. They had time for meditation. The silent forces were not shut out of their lives by carking cares and petty temptations and vitiating distractions. They lived next to nature and nature's God. Flowers and birds and brooks and fields spoke to them daily of God, and the forests were his messengers. In all these silent yet eloquent witnesses of divinity they felt

"A presence which disturbed them with the joy
Of elevated thoughts; a sense sublime
Of something far more deeply interfused,
Whose dwelling is the light of setting suns."

Meditation is difficult. It looks easy, but if properly indulged it is hard work. Of course, there is a vast difference between the vapid day-dreaming of a lazy sentimentalist mistakenly called meditation and the pregnant hours spent in meditation by a Wesley, a Luther, a Calvin, a Moody.

In our Western civilization our two weakest points are materialism and lack of meditation, and one is conditioned upon the other. We are so busy making money or making a name or "having a good time" that we find no time left for meditation. Often there is not even time for prayer and Bible reading. We are in too big a hurry. Our life is too fast. We even eat in a hurry. One business man advised his men to loaf in a hurry. We are carrying out the Bible in at least one respect: We spend our years as a tale that is told.

The psalmist tells of a happy man whose delight is in the law of the Lord, and in his law doth he meditate day and night. We forfeit the blessing of God when we refuse to take time to be holy. It takes time to be holy. After long years of self-denial and service, of meditation and prayer, it is possible for us not to be overcome of evil, but to overcome evil with good. But let us not think that the race is run and the prize won in a day or a year of indifferent effort. It is only by continuous spiritual application, concentration, and attention that we lay hold of the white ideal, and meditation is one of the chief agencies in the upward quest.

After we have learned the fine art of meditating, there comes an abundant joy.

"Whom the heart of man shuts out
Sometimes the heart of God takes in
And fences them all round about
With silence 'mid the world's loud din."

—Rev. R. O. Lawton, in Christian Advocate (Nashville.)

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE EPWORTH LEAGUE.

The Meridian City Union Holds a Young People's Revival.

The Young People's revival conducted by the Meridian City Union, Oct. 15-21, was one of the most successful held in our Conference so far this year. Great preparation had been made for this revival, and when Brother Neil, who did the preaching, arrived in Meridian, he found the revival already well under way. Miss Lilybec Phillips, President of the City Union, had appointed a number of committees, all of whom had been diligently working out their plans for the revival. Mrs. Freda Pearson was in charge of the music committee; Miss Louise Davis was pianist, with Mr. Wallace C. Journey leading the singing. Miss Addie B. Greely was in charge of publicity. A great deal of advertising had been done, speeches had been made by the Leaguers in almost every church in the city inviting the young people of other denominations to join with them in the meeting, and printed posters were placed about the city calling attention to the services; and, best of all, prayer meetings had been organized in every League chapter, and for several days Leaguers had been praying for the success of the revival. No wonder Brother Neil found the revival already under way.

Brother Neil, although just out of the hospital, having undergone a rather serious operation, never preached better in his life, according to reports (and that is saying a lot). Brother Neil is a wonderful inspiration to young people, and we are not surprised that the revival was a success.

Some of the subjects discussed were: "The Philosophy of Happiness;" "Jesus and Others;" "Jesus and the Father God;" "Who Is Going to Heaven;" "A Wise Choice," and, "What It Means to be a Christian."

A feature of the meeting was the question box. A box was placed in the church in which any one who desired might place questions for Brother Neil to answer; these were answered at each service just before the sermon. This proved helpful to the young people.

Our informant says: "Brother Neil was wonderful, and I have never seen so clearly the way Christ would have us live, nor had a greater desire to live that way." And such was the testimony of many others whose privilege it was to hear him.

J. H. WEEMS.

FROM THE LOUISIANA FIELD SECRETARY.

Dear Epworth Leaguers: I'm indeed sorry that I failed to write you last week. I had resolved not to omit a single letter, but I broke my resolution. I believe I was in Plain Dealing when I wrote you last. Mr. Pfost took me to Alden Bridget, where I met with the Leaguers of that church and assisted them in changing their Senior League to a Hi League. I was entertained in the home of Mrs. Jeff Rivers. Mr. Rivers took me to Springhill for my next meeting.

Springhill certainly has an unusual group of young people. In this little town our Leaguers claim two ministerial volunteers and a volunteer to the mission fields. We just had a fine meeting with the young people, and I enjoyed the cordial hospitality of Rev. and Mrs. J. E. Selfe.

On Thursday night I attended the Young People's revival in Minden. The Epworth Leaguers were conducting their own services and Miss Aileen Hyslop brought the message at this meeting. After being with Miss Mary Searles and closing my work in Minden District I went to Bossier City to begin a few days' work in Shreveport District. I met with the Bossier City Leaguers Friday evening. Our friend, Kathryn Smith, is their president, and most of you know Mr. Dulaney, their pastor.

Sunday morning I attended services at Mangum Memorial church. In the afternoon the North Caddo Union met at Oil City, with the Leagues of Vivian, Ida, Hosston, and Oil City represented. I stopped at Hosston for the League hour that evening, then went on to Ida for church services. Monday evening the Shreveport City Union Council met at First Church, and we spent a most profitable evening in discussing our plans for City Union work. Tuesday evening the Mangum Memorial Council asked me to meet with them in their regular Council meeting. Wednesday morning I went to Grand Cane, and from there to Mansfield to spend a while with our girls at Mansfield College. I certainly had a delightful stay at the college. I met with our Leaguers at 6 that evening, then attended prayer meeting at the Methodist church. I wish that more of our people might know of the fine work that Rev. D. B. Raulins and his faculty are promoting in Mansfield College.

Thursday evening I met with the Stonewall and Keithville Leaguers at Stonewall, where we closed a delightful devotional hour with fellowship and games. I went to Pelican Friday to be with the Leaguers of the churches under Rev. A. C. Lawton's charge. The young people of Benson and Zion Rest report having splendid Epworth Leagues, and complimented their fine young pastor on his efficient work with them.

I am now in the Ruston District, and at the present time am in Homer with my sister, Mrs. Kendrick. Leaguers, we have only a short time left till Conference. I trust that you are assisting your pastor in every way possible to have a full report. Give him your loyal co-operation and send him to Conference proud of your allegiance to him.

Most sincerely,
Your Field Secretary,
ELIZABETH LANGFORD.

OCTOBER MEETING OF THE J. O. Y. UNION.

On Sunday, Oct. 21, the monthly meeting of the J. O. Y. Union, of Minden District, was held in Haughton, with a large attendance. Devotional was led by Mrs. Volrs, of Haughton, and consisted of several songs, Scripture reading, and prayer by Brother L. 1. McCain, of Minden; reading by little Sunshine Dickson, of Haughton; vocal solo by Donavin Shinn, of Minden; cornet solo by a Haughton Leaguer; and piano solo by a Haughton Leaguer. The Evergreen folks came in late, and rendered a splendid mixed quartet.

Following the devotional, the meeting was turned over to Miss Eris Monzingo, of Springhill, union president, for the business session. Suggestions were asked for names of Leaguers for the four department superintendents for the union. Miss Monzingo announced that these officers would be appointed from the lists secured, before the next meeting of the union. Miss Mary Searles was elected union reporter.

Young People's revivals being the October project, Miss Jennie Searles, Minden chapter president, gave a brief report on the Young People's revival held at Minden. There being no further business, the house adjourned to meet on Nov. 18, at Springfield, following which refreshments were served to the following number: Minden, 30; Haughton, 17; Springhill, 8; Evergreen, 6; Doyline, 2; Sibley, 3; Bethel, 16; total, 82.

MARY SEARLES, Reporter.

There's peace in the household guarded by Castoria. Peaceful sleep for Baby. Uninterrupted rest for Mother. For a few drops of pure Castoria will quiet any fretful infant. Or put the little one back to sleep when there's an upset during the night.

Parents, don't try to do without good old Castoria! It isn't fair to the baby, and it makes things hard for you. You can't give Baby medicine meant for grown-ups—or shouldn't! Castoria is the solution. It is always safe. It always does the work. And although it acts as swiftly as an opiate or a narcotic, it contains neither. Castoria is purely vegetable. Give it whenever there's constipation, colic, diarrhea.

No less than five million modern mothers have come to depend on Castoria, for twenty-five million bottles were bought last year! Get yours today; don't wait for some night when it's needed, and the drugstore is closed!

No Worms in a Healthy Child

All children troubled with Worms have an unhealthy color which indicates poor blood and as a rule, there is more or less stomach disturbance. GROVE'S TASTELESS CHILL TONIC given regularly for two or three weeks will enrich the blood, improve the digestion and act as a General Strengthening Tonic to the whole system. Nature will then throw off or dispel the worms, and the Child will be in perfect health. Pleasant to take. 60c.

A package of Grove's Liver Pills is enclosed with every bottle of GROVE'S TASTELESS CHILL TONIC for those who wish to take a Laxative in connection with the Tonic.

BEWARE THE COUGH FROM COLDS THAT HANG ON

Coughs from colds may lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for coughs from colds and bronchial irritations. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of coughs from colds, bronchitis and minor forms of bronchial irritations, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)

The visitors were welcomed by Mrs. J. H. Garth, representing the hostesses, and Mrs. J. E. J. Ferguson responded. Following a solo by Mrs. Ervin Parker, roll was called. The auxiliaries were represented as follows: Georgetown, 7; Pleasant Valley, 7; Glancy, 4; Brandywine, 3; Gallman, 8; Crystal Springs, 20; Pleasant Ridge, 2; Hazlehurst, 24.

Mrs. Frank Decell, District Secretary, gave a report of her work. She was very optimistic over the work, and feels that all pledges will be paid by the end of the year. She explained the Jubilee Standard of Excellence. Three societies in the zone expect to make the honor roll this year. Mrs. Decell also gave a very interesting report of the Young People's Conference that was held in Brookhaven.

The ministers present, Dr. C. W. Crisler and Rev. Mr. Sharpe, were introduced by the leader and requested to make short addresses.

Following the singing of the Jubilee hymn, Mrs. Ernest Bennett discussed the "Thank Offering of the Golden Annniversary." This offering is to be used for training workers, and should be a gift and not a part of the tithe.

Mrs. C. C. Herlong told how the Hazlehurst auxiliary is using the Book Shelf. "Women and the Kingdom," and "Memories of Scarritt," are used as study books, one member giving a chapter at each mission study class. "The Way of Jesus," and "The Spirit of Adventure" are used for devotional.

and the "Life of Miss Belle Bennett" is passed among the members to read. The Crystal Springs auxiliary passes the books among the members. Each member writes her name in the book when she has read it.

All auxiliaries represented made reports. Splendid work is being done and much progress has been made. A number of Jubilee members were reported.

Following the afternoon devotional; song, "All Hail the Power of Jesus' Name," Scripture reading by Mrs. Smith, and prayer by Rev. Mr. Sharpe, Mrs. L. W. Alford, Conference President, addressed the assembly. Her message, "Woman's Work," gave much information and inspiration. It was indeed a privilege to have her present.

The following officers were elected for the year 1929: Leader, Mrs. P. D. Sigler, and Secretary, Mrs. A. V. Zama.

Appreciation of the Christian leadership of Mrs. J. E. J. Ferguson, retiring leader, expressed by Mrs. Ernest Bennett, was followed by a rising vote from the assembly. Georgetown invited the zone meeting for the first quarter of next year.

During the noon hour, after lunch had been served by the hostesses, the guests were invited to go through the recently completed church and parsonage.

MRS. A. V. ZAMA, Secretary.

A NEW PROTESTANT INFERIORITY COMPLEX.

The Protestant church has been having a wonderful time trying to sell the idea to the country that it is no good.

It has paraded before the newspaper readers the indifference of its membership.

It has adverised a recession in giving.

It has emphasized the fact that it is divided.

It has asserted that it lacks the genius of leadership which distinguished it in the past.

It publishes its coldness of heart and its loss of evangelistic zeal.

Whenever any anti-church movement has needed professional knowledge to help shape its drive against the church it has found some minister ready to assist.

But facts are against the whole idea.

The moral influence of church is felt in every phase of life as never before.

The Protestant churches are building more churches at the present time than ever before.

For the first time in the memory of most of us the ministerial supply is adequate to the demands.

The standard of education in the church schools is better than ever before.

If there seem to be no outstanding preachers, it is because the average quality of pulpit preaching is so high.

It has a more adequate social program than ever before.

Mass evangelism may be passing, but men are being won for Jesus Christ.

Sectarianism is being succeeded by Christian co-operation.

This is not exactly the time to rest, content that we have achieved. Nor is it the time to feel that the cause has lost its potency. Give us a hundred thousand ministers who know that

> We have Christ's own promise
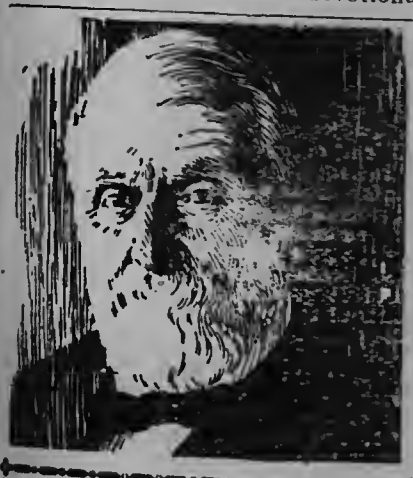
> And that cannot fail, and we will give Protestantism an age of progress unrivaled by any decades gone by.—William H. Leach.



WHAT DR. CALDWELL LEARNED IN 47 YEARS PRACTICE

A physician watched the results of constipation for 47 years, and believed that no matter how careful people are of their health, diet and exercise, constipation will occur from time to time. Of next importance, then, is how to treat it when it comes. Dr. Caldwell always was in favor of getting as close to nature as possible, hence his remedy for constipation, known as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, is a mild vegetable compound. It can not harm the system and is not habit forming. Syrup Pepsin is pleasant-tasting, and youngsters love it.

Dr. Caldwell did not approve of drastic physics and purges. He did not believe they were good for anybody's system. In a practice of 47 years he never saw any reason for their use when Syrup Pepsin will empty the bowels just as promptly.

Do not let a day go by without a bowel movement. Do not sit and hope, but go to the nearest druggist and get one of the generous bottles of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, or write "Syrup Pepsin," Dept. BB, Monticello, Illinois, for free trial bottle.

OUR NEW "PROGRAMS OF WORK."

The General Sunday Schoool Board hopes to release soon the new "Programs of Work" for use as an instrument of guidance in all Sunday school work in Southern Methodism.

The high aim of this instrument is guiding the Sunday school of to-day, which will be the church of to-morrow into: (a) The right kind of knowledge. (b) The right kind of faith. (c) The right kind of Christian character in every member of the future church.

I. It hopes to guide the Sunday school in its curriculum.

Knowledge is life. The quality of life depends on the quality of knowledge. Our first aim is to know God's will. The best material from which to get a knowledge of God's will is the Bible, especially the life of him who said: "It was his meat and drink to do God's will;" and if the Program of Work as a guide leaves the Bible and Christ for its main curriculum materials, it will be the blind leading the blind, and the church of to-morrow will be headed for the ditch. At present we have the greatest editorial staff in the history of our church, and its task is one of life or death.

II. It hopes to guide in the study of the pupil.

We must know the pupil as we know the truth. Modern advancement in public education is due to a knowledge of child psychology, and this program must be a guide in a knowledge of the pupil, as well as a guide in a knowledge to the truth. This involves a training program for each officer and teacher in the school in a course on psychology, if we are to be true shepherds, for the good shepherd "knoweth his sheep."

III. It hopes to guide in uniting the truth and the pupil.

Our task is that of getting the pupils to live out the truth. This program must be a guide in practicing the principles of Jesus. It must suggest programs of activities. We learn to live by living.

IV. It must be a guide in growth as well as a guide in method of instruction.

The child, Jesus, is the best example to guide us in the program of religious education.

This program must be a guide to the parents and teachers to the laws of Christian nurture and guide them in their holy task of growing children as Jesus grew, "in favor with God and Man."

V. It hopes to lead the pupil into the church.

The Sunday school program must include loyalty to the church, not for the sake of the institution, but for the power of the church to promote Christian education, and to be a witness of him who came that "we might have life and that we might have it more abundantly."

VI. It must lead the school into world-wide citizenship.

This program must prepare to lead each pupil to accept the "brotherhood of man" as well as the "Fatherhood of God." The last world war teaches us there is little hope for nations to live in the future, unless they are willing to become world citizens.

VII. Co-operative task.

This holy task we have just outlined as the program of work is a co-operative task. All organizations, General, Conference, and local, exist, to make possible this holy task. The tree is known by its fruit. As the tree has many members, so the school has many organizations to help it. The final test of all programs of life is the kind of living samples we have to exhibit.

We hope the results of this "New Program" will be a church membership "in favor with God and man," and living witnesses of him.

C. D. ATKINSON,
Conference Superintendent.

Minister A. A. Holzwarth Tells "How I Rid My Wife of"

DIABETES

For three years my wife suffered the terrible tortures of this insidious disease and needless to say I suffered plenty of mental torture with her. Almost thru accident I discovered a simple method to overcoming this diabetic menace which was destroying our domestic happiness. I have told hundreds whom I have met in my ministry work about it, and now I have decided to put it in pamphlet form to send to any diabetic who will send me a stamp to cover mailing. Write Rev. A. FROM THE IDA-HOSSTON CHARGE.

Dear Brother Carley: We are approaching the end of the second year on this, the Ida-Hosston charge, and a delightful ministry it has been from the writer's standpoint. This fine people have responded in such a great way that splendid progress has been made along all lines. Every department of the church is functioning. At what was an afternoon appointment, a Sunday school has been organized, and with the assistance of a young man who was converted during the year and has entered the ministry, and a fine layman, this church is having morning services twice each month. A goodly number have joined by profession of faith during the year and are now active workers and helping to bear the church's burdens.

Last year our finances were more than seventy per cent over the preceding year, and we relieved the Mission Board of a $200 appropriation for the present year. The pastor's salary was accordingly raised and is being paid. This, together with the depressing conditions during the early part of the year, made our mission special offering very low; but the indications now are that the Conference collections will be overpaid. The pastor's salary will be practically double the amount paid two years ago.

On the whole, there is a spirit of loyalty on the part of the people to the church and its Lord that this pastor has never seen surpassed. For all this and other things too numerous to mention, we give thanks and take courage.

HENRY T. CARLEY, D.D., Editor NEW ORLEANS, LA., THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 15, 1928. CHAS. O. CHALMERS, Manager.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE PROCEEDINGS.

Reported by Rev. W. B. Jones.

First Day.

The one hundredth and sixteenth session of the Mississippi Conference convened in the Methodist church, in the beautiful little city of Philadelphia, Miss., Wednesday morning, Nov. 7, 1928, Bishop Warren A. Candler presiding. This is the fifth Conference the Bishop has held, and his presidency is always welcomed by the brethren of this Conference. This is the first time the Conference has been held in this progressive and fine community.

Bishop Candler called the Conference to order at 9 o'clock a.m., and announced hymn 146, "Alas! and Did My Savior Bleed," which was heartily sung by the Conference; the Bishop, assisted by H. W. Featherstun, D.D., C. H. Ellis, and T. J. O'Neil, administered the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper. He made a strong and striking address on the history and the significance of the Sacrament, which was reassuring and helpful to the brethren. The Bishop speaks out in no uncertain terms on the great doctrines of the church, such as the atonement, regeneration, consciousness of salvation, and the like. Hymn 279, "Rock of Ages," was sung; and the Bishop led in singing a portion of hymn 291, "There Is a Fountain Filled With Blood."

A. F. Watkins, D.D., the Secretary of the last Conference, called the roll, and one hundred and twenty-eight clerical members answered to their names, and thirty-seven lay delegates responded. The lateness of the train caused a number to be absent on roll call, but they were present during the morning.

A. F. Watkins, D.D., was elected Secretary for the twenty-eighth time; W. B. Jones and S. F. Harkey were elected Assistant Secretaries; C. E. Downer, M. L. McCormick, and J. B. Caln were elected Statistical Secretaries; and V. G. Clifford was elected Railroad Secretary.

The Standing Committees, nominated by the presiding elders, were elected. These committees are: State of the Church, Conference Relations Sabbath Observance, District Conference Records, Memoirs. The Committee on Public Worship is composed of H. A. Gatlin, presiding elder; W. H. Saunders, pastor of the local church; G. W. Mars, and M. H. Turner. One preacher from each district was appointed to make a preliminary audit of the pastors' reports before the reports come into the hands of the Conference Auditing Committee. Those appointed are: Otto Porter, J. B. Holyfield, M. H. McCormick, Jr., T. E. Nicholson, J. F. McClellan, George H. Jones, J. F. Campbell.

Vacancies were filled in the various Quadrennial Boards on nomination of the presiding elders.

Communications were read from H. B. Perritt, a superannuate member of this Conference; from J. M. Smith, general evangelist, and Rolfe Hunt, D.D., pastor at Brandon, Miss., sending greetings, and expressing regret at not being able to be present. Communications were also received from the Publishing House, General Board of Lay Activities, General Board of Church Extension, General Board of Missions, General Board of Education, General Board of Finance, and from the trustees of the Seashore Camp Ground. These were referred, without reading, to their respective Boards and committees of this Conference.

F. L. Wells, D.D., of the Louisiana Conference, was introduced to the Conference by the Bishop, and he addressed the Conference on the subject of the Superannuate Endowment Fund, representing Dr. Todd, the General Secretray, who could not be present.

Question Twenty-one, "Are all the preachers blameless in their life and official administration?" was called, and the names of W. H. Lewis, J. R. Jones, J. L. Decell, H. G. Hawkins, H. A. Gatlin, J. L. Sells, and J. T. Leggett were called; they were passed in examination of character, and made their reports. About 2,500 have been received into the membership of the church on profession of faith during the year. It was announced that Robert Selby, J. W. Brown, and W. E. Dickens had died during the year, and their names were referred to the Committee on Memoirs.

The names of the following were called; they made their reports—those who were present—were passed in examination of character, and their names were referred to the Committee on Conference Relations for the superannuate relation: W. W. Cammack, R. F. Witt, J. T. Nicholson, G. W. Huff, E. D. Phillips, C. T. Nohle, C. H. Ellis, H. B. Perritt, H. W. Featherstun, J. C. Ellis, L. A. Darsey, C. F. Emery, N. B. Harmon, C. C. Griffin, B. H. Rawls, J. B. Stringer, J. H. Foreman, W. W. Graves, J. W. Price, Jas. G. Galloway, R. A. Sibley, J. B. King, M. L. Burton, B. F. Jones, W. G. Forsyth, W. P. George, W. W. Nelson, J. L. Greenway, W. L. Linfield, and D. E. Kelly.

H. W. Van Hook made his report; he was passed in examination of character, and on his request his name was referred to the proper committee for the supernumerary relation. He has been very useful in the Conference as president for a number of years of the Seashore Camp Ground School, and of the Port Gibson College. These brethren all carry with them the prayers and best wishes of their brethren of the Conference. A. A. Sims, who has been on the superannuate list, is again on the effective list.

T. J. O'Neil read a detailed report of the work of D. E. Kelly as a pastor and Conference and general evangelist, written by Brother Kelly, who is unable on account of being sick to he at the seat of Conference. His great work is appreciated, and the Bishop spoke of his work.

The report of the editors of the Conference Journal was read by the Secretary, and referred to the Commission on Budget, with the request for an appropriation of $1,200 for publishing the Journal of this session.

It was announced that L. E. Alford, pastor at Crystal Springs, would preach at 3 o'clock, and that the Sunday School Board would hold its anniversary service to-night at 7:30. Other announcements were made, and the Conference adjourned after singing the doxology, the benediction being pronounced by C. H. Ellis.

Second Day.

The Bishop called the Conference to order at 9 o'clock a.m., and announced hymn 506, "I Need Thee Every Hour," and the brethren joined heartily in singing, after which J. L. Greenway led in prayer. The Bishop read John 5:39-47, and followed with appropriate comment, and led in singing hymn 544, "I Love to Tell the Story."

The roll of absentees at yesterday's session was called, and thirty-four clerical and twenty-four lay delegates responded. It was ordered that the roll be dispensed with after to-day's session.

The minutes of the first day's session were read and approved.

A telegram from W. P. George, a superannuate member of the Conference, who is now living in Tennessee, was read; and a message of love and greeting from C. F. Emery, of Houston, Tex., a member for more than three decades, was read.

Mrs. J. C. Lowry, an alternate delegate, was substituted for W. Hemingway, from the Vicksburg District; and Mrs. G. E. Allen in place of T. T. Winstead, from the Newton District.

Communications from the Epworth League Board and from the Benevolent Association, of Nashville, were referred, without reading, to corresponding Conference Boards. The report of the trustees of Millsaps College was referred to the Board of Education.

A memorial from the Students' Activities Commission of the Mississippi and the North Mississippi Conferences was read, and referred to the Board of Education.

The report of M. L. Burton, Commissioner on the Mississippi Conference Training School, at Montrose, was read by the Secretary, and it was referred to the Board of Education.

The report of the General Hospital Board was received, and Frank W. Brandon, D.D., of the Alabama Conference, was introduced and addressed the Conference on the hospital work.

The last Conference appointed an Editing Committee for the purpose of seeing that superfluous matter be eliminated from the reports of the Boards and Committees. This committee made its report, which was adopted.

The report of the directors of the Seashore Divinity School was read by H. M. Ellis, and referred to the Board of Education.

Rev. John Durrett, of the Tract Department of the Publishing House, was introduced, and he addressed the Conference on the subject of this work, stressing the importance of it.

Reports from the Committee on Religious Instruction in State Institutions, and from the Commission on Standardization of Colleges in Mississippi were referred to the Board of Education. C. W. Crisler read the report of the Commission on Methodist Headquarters and the esfablishing of a Methodist paper in Jackson, reporting the impracticability of such an enterprise at this time, and asked to be discharged.

R. H. Harper, D.D., the newly elected editor of the New Orleans Christian Advocate, was presented by the Bishop, and addressed the Conference. H. T. Carley, D.D., editor for the last ten years, was introduced, and spoke words of commendation of the paper and the new editor. On motion of J. L. Decell the Conference extended Dr. Carley a rising vote of thanks for his able editorship during the last decade. The vote was unanimous.

Under question seventeen, Linus Parker Anders, Murray Cox, Joseph William Laudenslager, Thomas Orien Prewitt, John Henry Morrow, Edwin Doty Snellgrove, Mather Gill Matheny, George Hawkins Jones, and Horace Walter Featherstun Vaughan, having met all requirements, were elected to deacon's orders.

Question Four, "Who else is in the Class of the Second Year?" was called, and the following were called; they were passed in examination of character; but not having stood approved examinations on the Course of Study, remain in the Class of the Second Year: James Brewton Berry, Lonnie Augustus Comfort, Clyde Hubert Gunn. George Hawkins Jones and H. W. F. Vaughan, having been approved in the Class of the First Year in their examinations, on the ground of having the degree of Bachelor of Divinity from Emory University, were advanced to the Class of the Second Year.

The Bishop announced the transfer from the Virginia Conference of Henry Conrad Blackwell, a deacon in the Class of the Second Year. Brother Blackwell is connected with the Religious Education department of Millsaps College.

George Albert Broadus and Lemuel Davis Haughton were admitted on trial.

The Committee on Public Worship announced that M. L. Burton would preach at 3 o'clock, and that Hon. W. H. Watkins, of Jackson, would speak at the anniversary meeting of the Board of Finance at the evening service. Other announcements were made, and the Conference adjourned, after singing hymn 22, "Come, Ye That Love the Lord," the benediction being pronounced by H. Walter Featherstun, D.D.

Third Day.

The Conference was called to order at 9 o'clock by Bishop Candler, who announced hymn 183, "Come, Holy Spirit, Heavenly Dove," which was heartily sung, and the Conference was led in prayer by W. J. Ferguson. The Bishop read a lesson from the thirteenth chapter of the Gospel of Matthew, and made a stirring address on the parable of the sower and the seed and the soil. Hymn 193, "Holy Spirit, Faithful Guide," was sung.

The minutes of the second day's session were read and approved.

A communication from Rev. W. W. Graves, a superannuate member of this Conference, was read.

Report No. 1 of the Board of Education was read. Pending its consideration, the Conference was addressed by Miss Pauline Wynn, Secretary of the Methodist Students' League, Mississippi State College for Women, on the work of the UNIVERSAL BIBLE SUNDAY, DEC. 9.

By George William Brown, General Secretary of the American Bible Society.

The American Bible Society over a period of years has been sponsoring Universal Bible Sunday. Each year a theme has been chosen around which material has been built with the central emphasis upon the Holy Scriptures.

In 1920 the four hundredth anniversary of the landing of the Pilgrims suggested in the observance of Universal Bible Sunday the theme, "In the Name of God, Amen!" In 1925 the four hundredeth anniversary of the publication of William Tyndale's translation of the New Testament into English gave a similarly appropriate setting. While every year does not provide such suggestive anniversaries, a theme is agreed upon annually as a basis upon which to build a program suitable to the occasion. Last year it was "The Bible and the Home." This year it will be "Sowing the Seed." The printed material which is available for this year's celebration compares in an interesting manner with the seed of the sower—the penny portions of Scripture published by the American Bible Society. Our Lord's well-known parable of the sower is the subject around which the material has been gathered.

The observance of Universal Bible Sunday aims to magnify the place which the Sacred Scriptures occupy in the Christian faith. The position of the Bible in every church auditorium is one of prominence. It rests upon a pulpit or lectern discernible from every corner of the building. The pastor takes his text from it in its elevated position, and from its perennial truths he expounds truth. The Bible from its place of vantage is always visible to the congregation. Nothing takes precedence over it.

To individual life the Bible makes a peculiar contribution. It brings solace to the sorrowing, hope to the depressed, peace to the troubled and inspiration to the languid. In the grave crises of life men turn to the Book. Encyclopedias, dictionaries, books of reference, biography, fiction, all serve their purpose, but none can assume the position of the Bible. To the souls of men its message is divine. When the deepest anxiety of the world war was upon us the late President Wilson wrote: "The Bible is the Word of Life. I beg that you will read it and find this out for yourselves. When you have read it you will know that it is the Word of God, because you will have found the key to your own heart, your own happiness and your own duty."

Universal Bible Sunday was conceived and is promoted to emphasize yearly the fundamental position which the Bible occupies in the spiritual life of men and women. Sometimes the importance of the Bible is forgotten, sometimes its value is unrealized, sometimes its message is unknown. Universal Bible Sunday, increasingly observed, prepares the atmosphere and offers the setting for a thoughtful consideration and an earnest reminder of the Bible's primary place in the Christian faith. Just as the Sunday nearest the Fourth of July gives an opportunity for stressing patriotism and the Sunday before Labor Day is an opportune hour for pleading for the introduction of Christian ideallsm in the dealing between capital and labor, and just as Easter Sunday is the day supreme of all the year for strengthening humanity's faith in immortality, so Universal Bible Sunday is the day of days for magifying the great power of the Bible. This is the purpose of Universal Bible Sunday.

"JOHN DID NO MIRACLE . . . BUT . . ." JOHN 10:41.

By Rev. F. B. Hill.

When I announced my text, I saw one in the congregation speak to her neighbor, and was sure she said, "but he did." No, the Bible says he did not.

I find no fault with those who have "hobbies." I read of a man the other day whose hobby was collecting epitaphs. At every town he visited he wended his way to the cemetery to collect epitaphs. I think that this text is John the Baptist's epitaph—"John did no miracle."

It was, of course, quite true. So far as the possession of any exceptional powers of that sort were concerned, there had been nothing remarkable about him. Judged by that staudard, John had been one of the rank and file.

The kind of man who does no miracle is just the kind we are meeting every day. He is the man who never makes us marvel

There are men like Shakespeare who cannot take up a pen without enriching us with miracles of wisdom. There are women like Patti, who, every time they sing, delight us with miracles of song. But the average man is different from that. One can reckon on the thing that he will do. It is the sort of thing that we can do ourselves. Now brilliance may be perilous; but mediocrity also has its perils. One cannot forget that in the Master's story it was the one-talent man who made shipwreck. And so it may help us to consider what the Scripture has to teach about a man who —as we read—never did a miracle.

No sensational endowments had made people gape at him with open-mouthed astonishment. How often one hears it said of persons to-day, "Quite a good fellow . . . but you must never expect a miracle from him." "Yes, quite an average man, but he will never set the Mississippi on fire."

Gipsy Smith heard that said one day of a new minister, and replied, "We do not expect that, but he would make it sizzle if we dropped him in."

It is always interesting to watch the attitude of a congregation towards a new minister and his wife. "Enuf sed." John the Baptist was a new preacher, and we know how he dressed, and the food he ate, and his speech—it is all recorded. Mercifully the people who erect our tombstones and write our epitaphs do their best without a too scrupulous regard for the truth. But probably there will be one thing that might be said about most of us with perfect truth when our work is done:

Sacred to the Memory of

.....

He Did No Miracle.

It may not matter what people say about us when we are not there to hear.

But let us try and find other things to his credit, and enquire how far it is possible to build up a good strong character and useful life without working miracles, or being romantic or sensational.

As a preacher, he says he was a messanger. "There was a man sent from God." "A Voice," a herald, a forerunner, a preparer—this is what every preacher should be, and every Christian. He also was a witness—"the same bear witness." God gave him a special work to do. It was the work of witnessing to Christ, and John filled it in the noblest way. Others dreamed that the Messiah would come in splendor; John witnessed that he was in their midst. We are apt to think that special service is only given to very special people; that great tasks are not for common folk, but for men of wonder-working gifts. And the beautiful lesson of our text is this, that though you may have no power to do a miracle, for you, too, there is a special service—something that only you can do; something that won't be done unless you do it; something the world needs, which you and only you can supply, although not dowered with any gift of miracle.

He was modest—"He was not that light;" his purpose—"that all men might believe;" his message—"Repent, and bring forth fruits for repentance." He was faithful, courageous, bold. One day he called a part of his congregation "vipers," perhaps thinking of a scene he had often witnessed in the wilderness, when the parched brushwood caught fire, and the reptiles rushed from their lair in mad terror. His courage and fidelity cost him his life. The reason we are not beheaded or crucified to-day as preachers is because we are not faithful.

Crowds came to hear him. One day a deputation came from Jerusalem—a priestly deputation, asking him, "Who art thou?" Elijah? No. The Messiah? No. They knew the prophets had said that the Messiah would "sprinkle clean water upon you" and other prophetic utterances concerning the Messiah, but this baptizing business, just what they expected the Messiah would do. "Art thou the Messiah?" "No," said he, "I baptize with water"—mine is only an introductory ceremony. I am only giving you types, and shewing you truth of things—the inward spiritual change has yet to be wrought in the hearts of men—this poor water —this shallow river, I use as indicative of the great fact that man needs an inward change; we are sinners, we must be born again. I baptize with water he will baptize you with the Holy Ghost. He it is who is coming behind me, following me, whose kingdom must increase, while I decrease.

Next day the Baptist saw Jesus coming. it was John, the writer of this gospel, whose fine sense of hearing caught this experience. "Look, there standeth one among you." Blessings are nearer than you expect. God is within whisper reach. "Behold the Lamb of God." What a gospel! You remember he said that; can you remember anything else that he said? Yes, he said something about the winnowing fan, the wheat the chaff, the ax; but never forget that he said, "Behold the Lamb of God that taketh away the sins of the world." Never mind, John; if you did no miracle, you gave us this gospel. Remember that of your preacher some day.

He did no miracle; but what did the Master say of him? "Among them that are born of women there hath not risen a greater than John."

A man may lead a false and rotten life, and yet win the praise of men. The acid test of the successful life is this—does it win the praise of Christ? And the fine thing is, to win that praise one does not need to be wonderful or striking; it is given to those who do no miracle—to those who trust him when everything is dark; to those who keep their faces toward the morning; to those who, through headaches and heartache, quietly and doggedly do their appointed bit; to those who help a brother on the way; to those who look for a city that hath foundations. In this big world there is room and power and victory for the great multitude who do no miracle.

Men heed thee, praise thee not.
The Master praises; what are men?

Now, how far is it possible for us to win the Master's approval and to come into a great estate of honor and joy, without doing anything miraculous? Some of us may think we are living a monotonous life, a profitless sort of life, remarkable for nothing but sameness and insipidity, morning, noon and night coming round and round without our ever doing anything that strikes observers with amazement; always working in the same place; always surrounded with the same races; always tethered to the same short string. We need a word of cheer, some encouragement.

It is possible to be true, to be courageous, to be useful, helpful, yet do no miracle. When did Jesus ever set a man in higher honor in his kingdom simply because he was a worker of miracles? Are you expecting too much of your minister?

"His only righteousness I show,
His saving truth proclaim,
'Tis all my business here below
To cry, behold the Lamb.

"Happy if with my latest breath
I may but gasp his name,
Preach him to all, and cry in death,
Behold, behold the Lamb."

Covet earnestly the best gifts.

A CALL TO METHODISM

For an International Missionary Conference to Meet in Memphis, Tenn., on Jan. 1, 2 and 3, 1929.

The Board of Missions has authorized a conference of persons interested in the promotion of the kingdom of Christ in every land for the consideration of this supreme objective of the church. Important eras of progress have been ushered in by such conclaves; the great meeting at New Orleans virtually began the missionary activity of our laymen, and the gathering of one hundred at Memphis launched the Centenary advance. The present is a time of critical moment for Christian Missions, and the counsel of the whole church should again be summoned to review and evaluate our progress and future duty.

Our message to the unsaved world, at home or abroad, is the same message we have ever preached. The power of the gospel to redeem men and nations is unchanging. The command of our Lord to give his gospel to every creature stands unrepealed and paramount. Our duty to carry Christ to the last individual on earth is to-day what it has always been.

Nevertheless, missionary activity is not the same activity that occupied our energies a generation ago. The spread of culture in non-Christian lands has provided a new environment in which our missionaries must work, and given rise to new problems which they must meet. New churches—virile, consecrated, eager—have risen, and with these have come enlarged opportunities and perplexing problems. As non-Christian religions have broken down, strange and destructive doctrines have pushed in, and the gospel of Christ, triumphant over the one, faces the challenge of the other.

The missionary task in our own beloved land is urgent and bewildering. Fifty millions of our fellow-citizens are not even nominally Christians. The principles of our religion have scarcely begun to permeate our social life. Even heathen peoples reproach us for our sins and draw contrasts between what Christians believe and how Christendom acts. America is still the greatest mission field of the world and must he saved.

Who is equal to such tasks? They can be attempted only by the whole church, united and determined. In the welter and confusion of the world your servants, on whom you have placed the burden of missionary administration, feel the need of your counsel and your prayers. It is time for the sincerest and ablest souls of Methodism to assemble and reconsider the Great Commission of our Lord.

Our need is not wisdom, but power; not organization, but consecration; not plans, but a passion for souls; not money, but sacrifice; not temporal things, but the touch of the living Spirit of God.

Our assembly, therefore, will not deal with policies, plans, and programs, but with our relation to God and our responsibility for our unsaved brethren of every clime. We must revitalize the Great Commission of our Lord in our own hearts and republish it through the church. We must consider and decide whether we are true to God, whether our task is finished, what our future course will be.

Pursuant, therefore, to the action of the Board of Missions of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, I hereby call upon those in whose hearts burns the fire of missionary zeal, and who yearn for the world to crown our Redeemer as Lord of all, to assemble in the Municipal Auditorium at Memphis, Tenn., on the evening of Jan. 1, 1929, and until the evening of Jan. 3 unite with others of like purpose in considering the missionary message and motive for the church.

This gathering wil draw Christians from the ends of the earth and multitudes of our own people will desire to be present. Our facilities will be taxed, and the attendance must be limited to 5,000. I urge all persons to secure early registration through the channels soon to be announced.

In conclusion, I pray divine blessings upon the church and ask your prayers that the objective sought in the Conference here announced may be achieved.

Fraternally yours.

W. G. CRAM,
General Secretary of the Board of Missions.

POETICAL THOUGHTS.

By Mrs. George S. Brown.

"What shall I render unto all the Lord for all his benefits toward me?"—Psalm 116:12.

Which Shall It Be?

"I thought of it once as I sat by myself
And looked at the boxes that stood on the shelf,
One so large, one so small, with a contrast most grim,
A bandbox for me and a mite box for him.

"I paid for my hat and I paid for my gown,
And I paid for the furs that I purchased downtown,
And when I returned it was plain as could be,
A mite box for him and a bandbox for me.

"I tossed in a dime, but it didn't seem right,
I couldn't be proud of that curious sight,
So I took out my check book and tried to be square,
For I wanted my givings to look like my prayer."

I have been thinking of that poem ever since I read it, for it made such an impression upon me that never again can I buy a hat without thinking of the mite box. The comparison in size struck me so forcibly. Of course precious things are often done up in small packages; but these are not often found in mite boxes and it is a well known fact that a hat costs far more than we ever put in our mite boxes.

However, it is not that thought that so much impresses me as the fact that we so gladly and rapturously pay what the milliner charges for the headgear while we so grudgingly put the small amounts in the mite boxes. A great big box for ourselves and such a tiny one for the Master! Given so freely and lavishly for outward adorning, and so grudgingly for what the mite box stands for! Such wealth as God has bestowed upon us, and yet we hear so many say, "Every time we go to meeting it is some collection." A handsome dress for ourselves and not enough in the mite box to buy a gingham for one of the unfortunates! Theatre tickets, opera tickets, hall games, trips night after night to the movies—but just a dime in the mite box to build churches, and send the gospel to the heathen, to feed the hungry and clothe the naked! Dollars squandered on our table for food and not enough in the mite box to feed one starving child! A trip abroad or to the mountains or seashore, and not a dime to send some sick person away for a rest cure! Oh the shame of it! It is a wonder that the Giver of all good gifts bears with us. He gave his life for us; what do we give for him and how do we give it?

RELIGIOUS APPRECIATION.

When Jesus preached his first sermon at Nazareth, things went well until he indicated that God was the God of all mankind, and not the special providence of any particular race or country or mode of religious approach. When he made this point of universalism, the meeting broke up in great confusion, and Jesus was obliged to seek safety by leaving the place. We think of ancient times when each nation or country had its particular deity and believed in the supremacy of its own. The whole world is on more intimate terms today, and a network of communication extends over every habitable place, yet necessary adjustments involved have affected economic rather than religious thinking and feeling. There is, of course, much separatism in many ways, but the change has been far less in religion than anything else.

It would be a healthy thing for our personal Christianity, as well as for the welfare of all non-Christian people, if we could bring ourselves to appreciate what others believe, whose faith is very different from ours. It is by understanding rather than by undermining their beliefs that the highest good will come to them and ourselves. We are a little too satisfied with ourselves. We make more of our convictions than of our consecration to them, and forget that God had people aside from the Christians and the Hebrews. We speak of the idol, fetich, totem pole, prayer wheel, and charm, but not many discern the counterpart of these tucked away quite definitely in the heart of our own satisfaction, under other names.

The fact is, we are insular and provincial to a greater degree than we think, and without the discipline of honest comparison or of sympathetic understanding we merely continue to deceive ourselves. It is not the form of religion but the spirit of life that always has and always will count most. In our formal choices we are so divided that we cannot catalogue the species, but under any form, anywhere, we may recognize the spirit of life as Jesus taught it, and curiously enough men find it in the jungle, in the desert, or on the mountains, in strange countries and on scattered islands, the world over, because somehow God is general and not particular; universal, not local. The only peculiar people God has, or ever has had, are those who honor him by the spirit of their life. Our little systems or requirements will shrink as we enlarge our vision and our heart, but we shall cease to think we can control the Most High, or lead him into captivity to our hard and fast precincts. It will help us to recall a fine phrase often, "God is greater than our heart," and our ideas of religon have never explored his realm.—K. R., in Christian Advocate.

PUSH THROUGH TO GOD!

And where shall we seek to cultivate reverence? We must seek to cultivate it everywhere. Cultivate it in the means of grace. Break through every external thing and make your way to God. Break through all the formalities of prayer, its words, its postures, its customs, and get away home to God! It may be that words and forms will sometimes fail you, and you will find yourself just calling, "God, my God, my God!" Hold on your way; push through to God! Break through the formalities of the sacrament; don't halt at the venerableness of the custom; don't stop at the material bread and wine! Bring out all the reserves of your will and break through the letter and push into the presence of God. At the Lord's Supper let nothing tempt you aside; let all your speech gather in the one word, "Lord, my Lord! my God!" And believe me, nay, believe the promise of God, your senses are thus being exercised to discern, and more and more you will know that your Redeemer liveth, and you will fold your wings in adoring contemplation of his grace and glory.—Rev. J. H. Jowett, D.D.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE PROCEEDINGS.

church among the Methodist students of that school. The report was adopted.

The Joint Commission on the Seashore Camp Ground made its report. Mr. W. A. McKennon, one of the commissioners from the Louisiana Conference, was present and by invitation addressed the Conference. The report was laid on the table to be considered later.

Th following were advanced to the class of the second year, having been passed in character: Henry Lindsey Daniels, Robert Lee Walton, William Chester Baker, and Randolph Saucier. Frank Newell Ladner, Walter Cross, and Wesley Ezell made their reports; they were passed in examination of character and continued in the class of the first year. Wesley Ezell was elected to local deacon's orders.

The Bishop announced that Frank Adams Calhoun, who for the past year has been pastor at Pass Christian, has been transferred to the Tennessee Conference. He was passed in examination of character.

The name of Jay Coburn was called. It was announced that he had died during the year, and his name was referred to the Committee on Memoirs.

Linus Parker Anders, Murray Cox, Joseph William Laudenslager, Thomas Orien Prewitt, John Henry Morrow, and Henry Conrad Blackwell, having fulfilled all conditions, were charged by the Bishop and admitted into full connection. The Bishop delivered a very strong and appropriate address, and led in singing, "O Happy Day that Fixed My Choice."

W. G. Cram, D.D., Secretary of the General Board of Missions, was introduced to the Conference, and it was announced that he would be the chief speaker at the anniversary meeting of the Board of Missions to-night.

The report of the President of Whitworth College was referred without reading to the Board of Education. Report No. 1 of the Hospital Board was read by the Secretary, and on motion was referred to the Commission on Budget.

It was announced that Del Longgrear would preach at 3 o'clock. Other announcements were made, and the Conference joined in singing, "Praise God From Whom All Blessings Flow," after which it adjourned, the benediction being pronounced by J. H. Foreman.

Fourth Day—Morning Session.

The Conference opened at 9 o'clock, Bishop Candler in the chair; the Bishop announced hymn 309, "Amazing Grace! How Sweet the Sound," and M. L. White led in prayer. The Bishop read a lesson from the thirteenth chapter of Matthew, and commented in a helpful way on the parable of the tares and the wheat; and he led in singing hymn 628, "My Heavenly Home is Bright and Fair." The journal of the third day's session was read and approved.

Under question fifteen, John Byers Shearer, George Elmer Allan, Thomas Ernest Nicholson, Marlin Howard McCormack, Jr., Emmett Jackson Rutledge, Charles Assaf, and James William Sells were advanced to the class of the fourth year.

William Beckwith Hollingsworth, John Weems Moore, John Brogan Holyfield, Nicholas Smuts Loftus, Andrew Jackson Boyles, Charles Assaf, and Charles Franklin Nesbit were passed in examination of character and elected to elder's orders.

The Bishop announced the transfer of Charles Franklin Nesbit, a deacon in the class of the fourth year, from the Upper South Carolina Conference.

The Constitutional Amendment handed down by the General Conference referring to the transfer of members of the Annual Conference to other Conferences, delegates-elect to the General Conference, was defeated by a vote of 169 to 4.

A. M. Broadfoot, Treasurer of the Board of Missions, announced that the Board would pay seventy per cent of the appropriations to the Conference missionary appointments.

Dr. J. E. Crawford, of the General Board of Lay Activities, was introduced, and he addressed the Conference.

J. R. Jones, presiding elder of the Hattiesburg District, made a touching address to the Conference and asked for the reference of his name to the Committee on Conference Relations for the Superannuate relation. Brother Jones has been for years a leader in our Conference and it is with regret to the Conference that conditions make this step necessary.

The names of the pastors of the Brookhaven, Hattiesburg and Jackson Districts were called, one by one, by the Bishop, and were passed in examination of character, and they made their reports.

The Bishop announced the transfer of George Freeman Winfield, D.D., from the Texas Conference. Dr. Winfield is Associate President of Whitworth College.

The secretary was requested to convey the respects of the Conference to Dr. Rolfe Hunt, who is absent on account of sickness.

The name of L. A. Comfort was referred to the Committee on Conference Relations for the Supernumerary Relation.

The Committee on Public Worship announced the following appointments for Sunday services: Methodist Church—Love Feast, 9 a.m., led by M. L. White; preaching by Bishop Candler, 11 a.m., followed by the ordination of deacons; Memorial Service, 3 p.m., preaching by T. M. Brownlee, 7:30 p.m., followed by ordination of elders. Baptist Church—Preaching by W. G. Winfield, 11 a.m., preaching by Otto Porter, 7:30 p.m. Presbyterian Church—Preaching by J. A. Smith, 11 a.m., preaching by V. G. Clifford, 7:30 p.m. Colored M. E. Church—Preaching by W. J. Ferguson, 11 a.m.

Fourth Day—Afternoon Session.

The Conference was called to order at 3 o'clock by Bishop Candler, who announced hymn 332, "Close to Thee," and B. F. Jones led in prayer.

The minutes of the morning session were read and approved.

Under Question Twenty-One, the pastors of Meridian, Newton, Seashore and Vicksburg Districts were passed in examination of character and made their reports.

W. D. Davis, Mississippi Conference treasurer, made his report. For the Golden Cross Society the Mississippi Conference contributed the sum of $412.06, this going to the Methodist Hospital at Hattiesburg. For Conference work, $67,402.14 was contributed; and for general work $37,164.43.

The question for the place of the next Annual Conference was taken up. Crawford Street, Vicksburg; Hazlehurst; Yazoo City; and Fifth Street, Meridian, extended cordial invitations. Fifth Street received the highest vote and was declared the meeting place of our next Conference.

Dr. J. N. Culbreth, one of the secretaries of the General Board of Education, was introduced.

The report of the Special Committee on the Seashore Camp Ground property was made, and was adopted.

The Conference joined in singing "Praise God, from Whom All Blessings Flow," and adjourned, the benediction being pronounced by James G. Galloway.

Fifth Day—Memorial Session.

The Conference was called to order by H. W. Featherstun, Chairman of the Committee on Memoirs, in the chair by appointment of Bishop Candler. The Conference joined in singing hymn 583, "Asleep in Jesus, Blessed Sleep," and H. M. Ellis led in prayer. Hymn 584, "I Would Not Live Always," was sung.

Question fourteen, "What preachers have died during the year?" was called, and answered: Robert Selby, J. Wilson Brown, Jay Coburn, and W. E. Dickens.

The memoir of Robert Selby was read by A. F. Watkins; the memoir of W. E. Dickens was read by B. W. Ware; the memoir of Jay Coburn was read by J. L. Sells; the memoir of J. Wilson Brown was delivered orally by H. W. Featherstun.

Loving tribute was paid to the life and memory of these brethren by M. L. Burton, D. P. Yeager, M. M. Black, H. G. Hawkins, H. M. Ellis, J. A. Moore, P. H. Howse, A. S. Oliver, R. A. Allums, L. L. Roberts, W. J. Dawson, J. L. Neill, P. D. Hardin, C. H. Herring, and W. B. Jones.

On motion of A. F. Watkins, M. L. Burton was requested to prepare a memorial of J. Wilson Brown for record in the Journal.

On motion, the report of the Committee on Memoirs was received, and memoirs adopted.

On motion, the Conference adjourned to meet to-morrow morning at 8:30, the benediction being pronounced by W. B. Jones.

Sixth Day.

The Conference was called to order at 8:30 a.m. by Bishop Candler, who announced hymn 208, "I Love Thy Kingdom, Lord," which was sung, and W. W. Moore led in prayer. Hymn 19, "Come, Thou Fount of Every Blessing," was led by the Bishop, and helpful remarks were made by him on the subject of the Church.

The minutes of the fourth day, afternoon session, and the minutes of the fifth day, memorial session, were approved.

Question eighteen, "What traveling preachers and what local preachers have been ordained deacons?" was called, and question twenty, "What traveling preachers and what local preachers have been ordained elders?" was called, and these questions were answered.

Question eight, "Who are re-admitted?" was called, and Charles E. Downer, from the Jackson District, was readmitted.

J. L. Neill addressed the Conference on the importance of subscribing for the Methodist Quarterly Review.

Question ten, "Who are received from other churches as traveling preachers?" was called, and answered. No one.

Question thirteen, "Who are transferred to other Conferences?" was called, and Bishop Candler answered: F. A. Calhoun to the Tennessee Conference.

The report of the Committee on Conference Relations, answering questions twenty-two and twenty-three, was read and adopted.

The report of the Board of Temperance and Social Service was read and adopted.

A. F. Watkins delivered a brief address on the importance of supporting the Near East Relief.

The report of the Board of Finance was read and adopted.

The report of the Treasurer of the Board of Finance was filed for record.

Report No. 1 of the Board of Missions was read by J. L. Neill, and adopted.

Report No. 2 of the Board of Missions was read by J. L. Neill, and adopted.

Report No. 3 of the Board of Missions was read and adopted.

Report No. 4 of the Board of Missions was read and adopted.

Report No. 2 of the Hospital Board was read by the Secretary. Pending its consideration, the Conference was addressed by W. S. F. Tatum; and the report was adopted.

The Bishop retired for a conference with the presiding elders and requested A. F. Watkins to assume the chair.

Substitutions were made in the Sunday School Board and the Board of Missions.

The report of the Quadrennial Committee on Orphans' Home was read. Pending its consideration, the Conference was addressed by B. F. Lewis, Superintendent, and the report was adopted.

Report No. 2 of the Board of Education was read and adopted.

Report No. 3 of the Board of Education was read by O. S. Lewis and adopted.

Report No. 4 of the Board of Education was read. Pending its consideration, the Conference was addressed by Dr. D. M. Key, President of the Millsaps-Whitworth System; V. G. Clifford, Commissioner of Millsaps College and Millsaps-Whitworth System, and Dr. G. F. Winfield, Associate President of Whitworth College. The report was adopted.

The report of the committee on Evangelism was read by M. M. Black, and adopted.

The report of the Commission on Benevolences was read by J. A. Moore, and adopted.

The report of the Committee on Sabbath Observance was read by H. Mellard, and adopted.

The report of the Bible Board was read by W. A. Terry, and adopted.

The Bishop followed this report with some statements and exhortation as to the importance of the American Bible Society and the distribution of the Bible.

The report of the Board of Church Extension was read by W. A. Hays, and adopted.

The report of the Board of Christian Literature was read by W. J. Ferguson, and adopted after a brief address by W. H. Saunders, of the Publishing Committee, on the subject of our Conference Organ.

The report of the Conference Auditors was read by T. B. Cottrell for record.

The report of the Board of Lay Activities was read by J. M. Sullivan, and adopted.

The report of the Committee on the State of the Church was read by H. C. Castles, and adopted.

Question forty-three, "Who is elected Conference Lay Leader?" was called, and answered: J. M. Sullivan.

Report No. 2 of the Sunday School Board was read by W. J. Dawson, and adopted.

The report of the Commission on Budget was read by T. J. O'Neil. Pending its consideration the Conference was addressed by A. F. Watkins, T. J. O'Neil, J. L. Neill, and others. On motion it was ordered that the assessment for Missions be increased $650, and the assessment for publishing the Journal of this Conference be increased $200, above the amount named in the report, and the Commission on Budget instructed to apportion these amounts to the Districts on the same basis as the other assessments, and to readjust the figures of the report accordingly. The amended report was adopted.

The report of the Epworth League Board was read by J. F. Campbell, and adopted.

On motion, the time was extended to complete the business of the Conference.

The report of the Committee on District Conference Records was read, and adopted.

A. F. Watkins, in gracious words, introduced

Mrs. Warren A. Candler, and the Conference gave her a hearty welcome by rising.

The report of the Trustees of the Conference Endowment Fund was filed for record.

A resolution expressing gratification at the presence of Mrs. Candler was read and adopted.

The resolution concerning the development of the Seashore Camp Ground, and appointing representatives, was read and approved.

Questions 24-42 were called, and answered.

Resolutions of thanks were read by T. J. O'Neil, and after remarks of appreciation by Bishop Candler, and by George W. Mars, of the local church, were adopted by a rising vote.

The business of the Conference having been completed, the Conference joined in singing hymn 393, "Am I a Soldier of the Cross?" and prayer was offered by Bishop Candler.

Question Forty-five, "Where are the preachers stationed this year," was called, and the Bishop, after brief remarks, announced the appointments.

"Praise God From Whom All Blessings Flow" was sung, and the Conferenee was adjourned sine die, the benediction being pronounced by Bishop Candler.

ACTION CONCERNING THE SEASHORE CAMP GROUND PROPERTY.

Whereas, the Commission appointed by the last Annual Conference to consider the Seashore Camp Ground property, makes no recommendation in their report, therefore, be it

Resolved, first, That it is the sense of the Mississippi Annual Conference that the property be not sold.

Resolved, second, That the board of trustees be authorized to lease all the property north of the Louisville and Nashville Railroad, or as much as needed, to the city of Biloxi for an airport for a minimum consideration of the State, county and city taxes on property, provided that the contract may be terminated by either party on six months' notice.

Resolved, third, That the trustees continue to use, maintain and develop that part south of the railroad for religious and educational purposes, provided nothing be permitted on the grounds in violation of the discipline and usage of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

M. L. BURTON.
JAMES L. SELLS.
J. L. DECELL.

Whereas, this Conference has passed resolutions declaring against the sale of the Seashore Camp Ground property and for its development; Therefore, be it resolved:

1. That we request the Alabama and Louisiana Conferenees to unite with us in this enterprise of development.

2. That Rev. J. T. Leggett, Rev. C. W. Crisler, L. N. Dantzler, W. S. F. Tatum, and Rev. J. L. Decell, be appointed Commissioners to represent this Conference in negotiation with the Alabama and Louisiana Conferences, and that we request the Commission on Budget to allow $150 for expense of this Commission.

3. That we respectfully request the Alabama and Louisiana Conferences to appoint like Commissioners.

WHAT ARE PASTORAL CALLS WORTH?

By George H. Betts, Professor of Religious Education, Northwestern University.

Some four hundred and sixty-six ministers in Chicago were asked to rank a list of thirteen common enterprises or activities of their own churches in the order of importance as looked upon by the minister himself.

Pastoral calling was put at the head of the list.

This list included the following activities, which are here given from high to low as ranked by the ministers:

1. Pastoral calling by the minister.
2. Providing for the teaching of children in the Sunday school.
3. Preaching.
4. Supporting missions—home and foreign.
5. Maintaining the family altar.
6. Promoting moral and civic reform.
7. Having children attend the church service.
8. Having inspiring music for the church service.
9. Maintaining the prayer meeting.
10. Keeping benevolences up.
11. Promoting good fellowship through church socials, suppers, etc.
12. Maintaining a large circulation of church papers.
13. Conducting special evangelistic campaigns.

The placing of pastoral calling at the head of the minister's duties to his church makes it appear that to the minister this is more important than preaching, or than the religious education of the young, or than any other activity whatever in the church. The layman may be inclined to wonder why this unique emphasis on the pastoral call.

True, the minister is usually a likeable enough man and possessed of sufficient culture and conversational powers so that his call is welcome in our houses. But just what does this call accomplish that gives it so high a rank in the activities of the church?

Three possibilities occur to the writer in seeking an answer to this question: The pastoral call may help (1) the person or family called upon; (2) the pastor; or (3) the organization called the church.

If the pastoral call is to help the person or family called upon, how? If the home is under a burden of sorrow or trouble, the mere expression of sympathy is, of course, a help, just as it would be from any friend. Where normal conditions prevail, does the home feel the pastor's call an honor; does the home gain some accession of prestige through this recognition? Possibly in some cases, yes; in most cases probably no. The pastor is no longer the social and educational leader that he was a century ago. But however this may be, would the minister say that the real value of his call lies in the increased sense of prestige that may come to the home from the visit? Hardly. To validate placing pastoral calling at the head of the minister's duties to his church something more permanent and more basic should result—possibly some spiritual gain to the persons visited. Very well, what does the pastor do or say on his visit to bring about this spiritual result? Pray with the family? This, I believe, is a custom that has largely fallen into disuse. Discuss spiritual questions? Very seldom. Talk about the various activities of the church? Yes, that is the note that it usually struck. Shop talk is easy and may be interesting. It may even serve to bring the individual concerned to the services of the church or lead him to more active participation in its enterprises. This is, of course, a perfectly legitimate outcome of a pastoral call, but note that its incidence is upon the church primarily, and upon the individual only secondarily. It may help to build up or hold congregations; it may secure workers on committees or teachers in the Sunday school; but whether it strengthens the soul of the parishioner is not proved. It seems likely that the value of the pastoral call to the home is in the main indirect rather than direct, as such calls average to-day. If the pastor doubts this, let him think carefully over the topics of conversation which characterized his last half dozen calls.

But perhaps ministers place pastoral calling at the head of the list because of what they themselves get out of the calls. Like any other human being, the pastor needs human fellowship; he needs even to talk shop. The layman may be forgiven for doubting, however, whether the urge to self-improvement or the need for comradeship on the part of the minister is the governing urge in the pastoral calls. If such were the case, would so many pastors reduce the calls they make to statistical tables and take so evident a satisfaction in reporting their number at ministerial Conferences and to church boards? Is it not true that the pastor feels that to make many calls is to "acquire merit" rather than to strengthen his own spirit?

Keeping the Machine Running.

It seems likely that the chief use made of the pastoral call, its main function in the economy of the church, is to keep the wheels of the machine oiled and running smoothly. The church of to-day is rather a complex organization. It has many committees, organizations, programs, what not. There is a machine to run. And some parts of this machine require personal attention.

This is not peculiar to the church alone. A school superintendent remarked that he spent an hour or so every evening after school "dropping in" at the stores of the town. Asked what this was for, he replied: "It helps keep the machine running smoothly." Even statesmen look after their fences. Selling organizations have their "contact men." By calling on the members of his church the pastor can put a drop of oil here, add a stimulus there, buttress a weak place, put salve on a sore spot. And no doubt all this needs doing. At least the organization runs more smoothly, and reports to those higher up are quite certain to show more favorably if such functions are carried out.

But such things can hardly be called important in the spiritual sense except very indirectly. If they make the church as an organization run better—bring in more attendants, increase the offerings, promote good fellowship, then so far so good. These are, however, but the preliminaries to the true functions of the church. For a church is not fulfilling its function merely because the wheels of the organization go round. There must be something in it that defines and motivates the ideal life, something that gets hold of the lives of men and transforms them after a great Pattern. Again we return to the question. Just what does the pastor do in his calling that accomplishes this greater thing?—Western Christian Advocate.

SOME NEW MACMILLAN BOOKS.

The following books have recently come from the press of the Macmillan Company, New York and Dallas:

American Inquisitors. By Walter Lippman. Price, $1.25.

"This book is an examination of the position of the public school teacher in a period of conflict between fundamentalism and modernism in religion and between traditionalism and science in the field of history. It is, in fact, a consideration of the whole problem of public education and its relation to some of our most cherished democratic dogmas."

The Credentials of the Church. By Ozora S. Davis, president of the Chicago Theological Seminary. Price, $1.25.

"Speaking in the name of the church, this work does not scold men from a distance and demand or plead that they come back to it. It pictures the church on its way to where men to-day have gone to live, assures them that it can be of real use to them, and specifies some of the important ways."

Altar Stairs. By Joseph Fort Newton. Price, $1.75.

"A book of worship born of simple faith, free from the abject fear of olden times, rejoicing in the love of God revealed in the glory of the world and in the life of man, and most clearly in the life and face of Jesus." This book is a series of prayers that minister to the devotional life at all seasons and under all conditions.

The Literary Background of the New Testament. By George L. Hurst. Price, $1.50.

"An intelligent understanding of the New Testament depends, therefore, to some extent, upon our appreciation of the influence exercised by these pre-Christian writings upon the composition of the early Christian classics. * * * Here we are concerned with such writings as lay to the hands of Jesus and his early disciples when they began the tremendous enterprise of establishing the Christian movement."

Humanism and Christianity. By Bishop Francis J. McConnell. Price, $1.75.

"Religion has always been chiefly interested in the conservation of what it has found to be humanly worth while. It has been taxed as often with over as with under prudence in this respect. Both the Jewish and the Christian Scriptures, whatever opinion may be held as to some of the ways and means employed, have been notably successful in safeguarding an array of human values still considered indispensable." This book consists of the lectures delivered by Bishop McConnell on the Stephen Greene Foundation at the Newton Theological institution in 1927.

The New Quest. By Rufus M. Jones. Price, $1.75.

"These essays no doubt fall far short of the ideal as interpretations of reality and of fragrance. But they are honest attempts to speak to the conditions of the time. They seek to bolster up no sacred scheme or system. They defend no status quo, nor any pet theory. They reveal the bent and tempre of one of the present-day 'seekers' who feels a real conviction that he is in some degree one of Cromwell's 'happy finders.'"

The Gospel of the Living Jesus. By T. H. Davies. Price, $2.25.

"An attempt is here made to face its challenge and to restate that problem of Jesus and the Gospel in terms of the living issues of his spiritual character as a recreative energy of life and experience. These studies are addressed, not to experts, but to those who realize the very urgent demand in our day for a spiritual faith which is as vital and comprehensive as life itself."

Snowden's Sunday School Lessons for 1929. By James H. Snowden. Price, $1.50.

This is the best help in the study of the International Sunday school lessons that we know anything about.

THE LARGER PRAYER.

At first I prayed for Light:
Could I but see the way,
How gladly, swiftly would I walk
To everlasting day.

And next I prayed for Strength:
That I might read the road
With firm, unfaltering feet and win
The heaven's serene abode.

And then I asked for Faith:
Could I but trust my God,
I'd live enfolded in His peace,
Though foes were all abroad.

But now I pray for Love:
Deep love to God and man,
A living love that will not fail,
However dark his plan.

And Light and Strenth and Faith
Are opening everywhere;
God only waited for me, till
I prayed the larger prayer.

—Mrs. E. D. Cheney, in Exchange.

SLEEP LONG.

Two little beds, and the sun goes down,
Pulling the darkness over the town.
Two little heds, all soft and white,
And one little moon that sails the night.

One little moon and two little beds
For two little sleepy, sleepy heads.
One little bird, head under its wing,
Fast asleep where the branches swing.

One littte bird and two little heads
Pillowed deep down in two white beds.
One little song, "Tick-tock, tick-tock,"
Sung by a sleepy, sleepy clock.

One little clock with one little song,
"Nick-nock, nick-nock," the whole night long.
One little song, and deep in their beds
Two little, dear little, sleeping heads.

"BETSY FINDS THE PENS."

Betsy came up the long lane shaded by old trees. It was evening and the trees took on all kinds of odd shapes and faces. Betsy had been out playing all that evening with Charlotte Cromwell. What a good time she had had!

She pushed open the big door; inside it was dark, but Betsy Madison was not afraid. Closing the old door, she walked to the stairsteps.

"Ginnie, Ginnie, where is mother?" she called; her voice echoed through the silent hall.

"Is dat you, honey? I's been waiting for you," answered a relieved voice, from somewhere.

Presently a fat colored mammy appeared from the back of the hall bringing a lighted lamp.

"Where's mother, Ginnie?" she asked again.

"She done gone ter see a sick friend, Miss Betsy, and won't be back 'til nearly time for supper. Where does you want dis here lamp?" replied Ginnie, with a smile spreading over her coal black face.

"In the library. I wish she were here. I am such a poor hand at writing," she answered, as Ginnie set the lamp on the library table.

Betsy went to her grandfather's desk, took up her tablet and turned to a clean sheet.

"Do you know anything about a composition, Ginnie? I have to write one for school to-morrow," she asked looking up at mammy.

"No, chile, I don't know anything 'bout composins. I must be gitting ter see 'bout yo' supper," Ginnie answered, going out of the room.

Left alone to think, in the big, quiet room, while outside night settled down upon the earth, Betsy picked up her Christmas pen and looked at the blank paper.

"What must I write? I can't think of a thing; if mother were here she could help me. I must have it written before supper, too. Here it is nearly time, and I haven't a word written, or an idea even! Oh, what can I write?" Betsy asked herself.

Laying down her pen she put her head in both hands, to think better, but it did not bring her an idea! Her pen rolled to the edge of the desk and fell, but it did not hit the floor. One of the desk drawers was not shut tightly and the pen fell into it.

"Now, where did you go, Mr. Pen? I think I had an idea coming, and now you have made me lose it. If I could think of something to write," Betsy said, as she stooped to get her pen.

She opened the desk drawer and reached for the pen. In doing so her hand struck against a box. She quickly drew it out. It was a small narrow mahogany box.

"What can be in it?" she asked hreself, as she opened the lid.

When the lid was opened a few gray quills met her curious eyes. Betsy could not remember ever seeing any like them before.

"They are queer looking! I wonder if they are funny to write with," she said, laying them down by her fountain pen. "But this isn't writing my composition. I am so sleepy and tired, I just can't think."

Betsy laid her head down on the desk and closed her weary eyes. Suddenly she heard talking.

"Who are you?" asked her fountain pen.

"We," answered an old voice by her hand, "are old and famous quills."

"Old and famous, eh? What are you famous for?" quizzed the fountain pen.

"For great things," replied the old quill, proudly nodding its head. "For writing great and famous things."

"I have written a great many things, too. Every week I write a three-page composition for my little mistress, also all her letters and names on Betsy's paper at school, every day she attends," replied the little black pen seriously.

"We have written great things, for the United States of America. Not a great many things, but great things," spoke up a second quill.

"What are they?"

"Almost a hundred and fifty years ago the great men of the States, recently freed from England, met to frame the Constitution of the United States. General George Washington was elected President of the convention. Many delegates were there, hut James Madison was chosen to help write it. The work took four long months.

"I am the pen that helped to write the Constitution, in the hand of James Madison, Father of the Constitution," finished the old quill pompously with a wave of its head.

"I," replied the second quill, "am the pen that wrote the signature of the president of the convention, George Washington, 'Father of our Country,' at the end of the famous document," it said with dignity.

"And I wrote Benjamin Franklin's name, who did his noble part," spoke up a third voice.

"We are famous pens and have never received any glory out of it. We have been lost to the eyes of the American public," replied the first gray quill.

"How?" asked the fountain pen.

"At the close of the convention, we three were put in this hox, and have stayed till just a while ago, when this little girl took us out of the box. There were many pens like us, but we got separated from them," answered the third quill, "and here we are. Quality, not quantity, is what counts, young pen."

The old grandfather clock struck seven; Betsy opened her eyes.

"Oh, I must have been asleep. What a great dream I have had, and what a fine composition it will make," she said, as she rubbed her eyes, and looked at the old pens: "thank you, dear quill pens, I will make you famous if I can."

Picking up her own pen she started to write the composition. She had nearly finished when she was called to supper. Writing the last two words, she hurried in, just as her mother opened the front door.

"Mother, I have had the grandest dream, and have written my composition about it! How was Mrs. Davis?" replied Betsy.

"She was much better, dear,' answered her mother.

After supper Betsy read the composition to her mother.

"Splendid, you have found the lost pens, and your composition is true. The pens really are your great-great-grand-uncle's, James Madison.—Southern Churchman.

SHEP'S NIGHT OUTDOORS.

Nobody could understand why Shep, the big collie, refused to be shut in the woodshed that night. He wouldn't go in even for Michael, and he was Michael's dog. The little boy dragged him firmly inside at last and slammed the door. For a few minutes Shep barked steadily—short, indignant barks full of meaning, and then he began to leap up to reach the window. He was going to jump through the pane!

"Better let him out, Michael," said Michael's father. "I don't know what's the matter with him, but it's a warm night and it won't hurt him to sleep out doors."

So Shep stayed outside, and when Michael went to bed he put his head out the upstairs window and saw the old dog lying on the lawn looking away down the road and out across the river with quiet, waiting eyes.

Later that night Michael was awakened in the dark by Shep barking under a back window. He heard a man's voice, and then his father getting out of bed and going downstairs. There was a good deal of talking, which Michael couldn't hear plainly, and then he saw a streak of light slide under the door and play for a moment along the wall. Though he was very drowsy, he knew that his mother had dressed and was going downstairs, too. He wondered what was happening, but he was too sleepy to care; so it was not until morning that he found out.

When he went down to breakfast there was a strange man covered with a quilt lying stretched out on the kitchen sofa, and Shep, with a platter of clean bones beside him, was curled up in his corner by the woodbox. He seemed to have enjoyed something extra in the way of breakfast, and plenty of it.

Michael's mother told him the story. The man on the sofa was a game warden who had been driving, late at night, to his home up the river after a visit to the trapper's camps in the woods out over the hills. It was dark and cloudy; and though he had a flashlight which he played over doubtful spots along the road where his horse picked the way carefully, the batteries in it had grown weak and the light was faint, with a queer dark blur in the center. The rains had been heavy, too, and here and there the frost had been coming out in soft boggy spots. There were a number of bad holes, and now and then he passed a place where a bit of the bank had given way and slipped into the river. The warden was watching, but he could not see clearly, and he reined his horse a little too close to one of these. Suddenly one side of the carriage sank, and horse, wagon, driver, and all toppled over the rim!

"We none of us understand why the man wasn't killed. It seems a miracle," says Michael's mother. "The horse came down on top of him, and he could move just enough to loosen some of her harness and push her off. He could hear both horse and wagon go rolling over and over down the hillside and land on the shore below. All was dark and still after that, till he heard Shep barking. The man whistled and called, and when Shep found his way down close, struggled to his feet, bruised and dizzy, but with no broken bones, and managed to follow the old fellow to the house. Shep barked to us, the man shouted, and your father woke and went downstairs."

It did, indeed, seem a miracle. Michael's father had gone down and brought up the horse and found the wagon. The former was scarcely scratched, and even the wagon would need only a few repairs.

"I need a few repairs, too," said the game warden, coming out of a nap and opening his eyes to look at Michael. "But like the horse and wagon, I came out in pretty good shape—leg a little lame, and will be for mayhe a week; but that's all. I heard your mother tell you that without your collie she doesn't believe I would have reached the house last night, and that's true. He's a fine dog."

Michael knelt down on the rug by Shep, took hold of his shaggy ears, and looked into the dog's wise brown eyes. He thought how stupid he had been last night when he had dragged the old fellow into the shed against his will.

"Shep must have felt something was going to happen," said he. "Wise old dog! I wonder how he knew!"—Greta Gaskin Bidlake, in Christian Register.

Mississippi Conference—Rev. J. T. Leggett. Rev. W. H. Saunders, Rev. J. E. Gray.

North Mississippi Conference—Rev. J. H. Felts, Rev. J. W. Dorman, Rev. L. M. Lipscomb.

DIRECTIONS:

All checks and money orders should be made payable to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

Communications pertaining to subscriptions and other business matters should be addressed to the Manager, or to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

The Printed Label on a paper shows the date to which a subscription is paid. It is as good as a written receipt. When renewal is made, if the date is not moved forward after four weeks, notify us, and we will make it right.

Communications intended for the Editor should be directed to him at 512 Camp Street. Correspondents will observe the following rules: 1. Write on only one side of the paper. 2. If you have a typewriter, by all means use it; otherwise use a good quality of black ink. 3. Leave a space of at least two inches at the top of the first page; leave a margin of at least one inch on the left-hand side of the page; do not crowd the words and the lines together. 4. Take special pains to write proper names correctly and legibly. 5. Use letter paper if you can get it—not note paper. No attention will be paid to rolled manuscripts.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Mrs. Pauline McCoy, of Ethel, La., in renewing her subscription to the Advocate, says: "I hope I shall not miss a single copy."

Dr. N. E. Joyner, Louisiana Conference Secretary of Education, spent several days in New Orleans this week in connection with his work.

Mr. Charles O. Chalmers, Business Maager of the Advocate, was most hospitably entertained in the home of Mr. and Mrs. M. J. Urban during his stay at the Mississippi Conference, Philadelphia, Miss.

The sudden death of Mr. J. S. Sexton, distinguished lawyer and active Methodist of Hazlehurst, Miss., in the Union station at Memphis recently, was a great shock to his many friends. He was a prominent citizen of Mississippi.

The church at Bossier City, La., of which Rev. Don E. Dulany is pastor, was one of the first in the Conference to report all Conference collections in full to the treasurer. Of course, Brother Dulany will carry a good report to Lake Charles.

Colonel I. D. Wall, Baton Rouge, La., in renewing his subscription to the Advocate, says: "I would get more than two dollars' worth out of the paper even if I read only the letters from Dr. S. A. Steel and S. J. Davies."

Rev. John C. Chambers, Mississippi Conference Sunday School Superintendent, writes: "By some unaccountable error the name of Hazlehurst was omitted from the Sunday School Day Honor Roll. The name of C. P. Jones was omitted from the Leadership Training Honor Roll."

Rev. W. L. Linfield, who was granted the superannuate relation at the Mississippi Conference, will make his home with his two daughters in New Orleans. His address is 7411 Maple Street. Brother Linfield has rendered distinguished service for forty-two years to the Conference upon whose honor roll he has now been placed.

The official boards of the Algiers Methodist Church, Felicity Methodist Church, and the Carrollton Avenue Methodist Church, all of this city, have unanimously requested the return of their faithful and efficient pastors, Rev. Martin Hebert, Rev. R. L. Armstrong, and Rev. H. L. Johns, for another year.

Rev. Robert A. Cross, Jr., has completed his thesis on "The History of Methodism in New Orleans," which he is submitting for his divinity degree in the Candler School of Theology, Emory University. Brother Cross worked diligently in accumulating material for this study of the church in this historic city.

The editor of the Advocate was able to spend part of only one day—Thursday—at the Mississippi Conference, but the few hours were very happy ones. The kindness of the brethren was very greatly appreciated. Noonday hospitality was enjoyed in the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Turner, fellow-guests being Dr. J. E. Crawford and Rev. J. L. Sutton. Philadelphia is a city beautiful for location, being set on a hill.

Rev. E. D. Hutchinson, serving the Beauregard charge as pastor, was married on Nov. 2 to Miss Isabel Corona Hollis, the eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. E. Hollis, of Beauregard, Miss. The ceremony was performed by Rev. W. H. Lewis, presiding elder of the Brookhaven District, at the district parsonage in Brookhaven. The Advocate extends all good wishes to the happy young couple. Brother Hutchinson reports a good year on the Beauregard charge.

Mr. Gus C. Kendall, one of the best men that the city of Meridian, Miss., had, prominent and relied upon in all religious and civic affairs, was buried from Central Methodist church at 3 p. m., Sunday, Nov. 4, Dr. A. F. Watkins officiating. The pastors of all denominations in Meridian were honorary pallbrearers, along with others. A large concourse attended, for he was greatly beloved. The Knights of Pythias held a service at the Rose Hill cemetery.

Protection Against Old Age

Rev. G. A. Morgan reports a delightful year as pastor at Arcadia, La., with a good report in prospect for the Annual Conference next week. One of the special features of Brother Morgan's work this year has been a "back-to-the-family-pew" movement. As a result of this movement, every member of quite a number of families attends church regularly. In recognition of their faithfulness and loyalty, Brother Morgan has designed an appropriate placard, which is given to the homes maintaining a one hundred per cent church attendance record. We are sure Brother Morgan would be glad to send a sample of the placard to other pastors who might be interested in a similar movement.

CHANGE OF ADDRESS.

It is important that all requests for change of address be made as promptly as possible. No change can be made without request. In writing, give the old address as well as the new.

BUSINESS MANAGER.

ADDITIONAL REPORT FROM LOUISIANA CONFERENCE MISSIONARY TREASURER.

Since my report to the Advocate on Oct. 25 of the payments on Missionary Maintenance and Specials to me as Conference treasurer, I have been advised by J. F. Rawls, the general treasurer, of the following amounts received by him since June 1:

First Church, New Orleans	$ 83.50
First Church, Shreveport	625.00
Park Avenue, Shreveport	102.91

This increases the totals for the Shreveport and the New Orleans Districts, and increases the Conference total by the amount of $811.41, bringing the total received for the Mission Special to $20,116.25. The district standing is as follows:

Alexandria District	$ 1,173.90
Baton Rouge District	2,027.62
Lake Charles District	1,529.67
Minden District	2,706.39
Monroe District	2,727.84
New Orleans District	3,433.98
Ruston District	2,377.05
Shreveport District	4,139.80
Total	$20,116.25

HOW READEST THOU?

By Bishop Warren A. Candler.

The lesson which Jesus taught in the Parable of the Sower is embodied in his exhortation, "Take Heed How Ye Hear." The Parable shows that the Sower was without blame in his diligent and generous sowing, that the seed was sound and good, but that only one-fourth of the area upon which the seed fell brought forth fruit. The trouble was in the soils, and that trouble arose from the different receptions given to the seed by the soils. In other words, the way men heard the truth explained its failure or success upon their hearts.

In the days of the Master's life in the flesh, truth was imparted more by speech to the ear than otherwise. There were no printed papers, or books, and the manuscripts or rolls among the Hebrew people were not accessible to most of them. It was, therefore, all-important that they should hear the truth with care and meditate on it seriously.

In our day the case is quite different. Through the printed page are propagated ideas both true and false, as they are not spoken by word of mouth. It is important, therefore, that reading be done with discrimination. Much that is published through papers, magazines, and books is unworthy of attention, and not a little is positively pernicious and hurtful.

A criticism of American conditions, customs, and habits has been published recently under the caption, "The Perils of Literacy." It is written by a Russian woman, and like most European criticisms of things American it is not altogether fair or just.

But we will do well to consider the criticism seriously; for it contains matter of value, notwithstanding its lack of balance and judgment.

The point of the article is that with the abundant literacy of our people their mental strength is deteriorating and sound thinking prevented. A few paragraphs will reveal the general trend of this criticism. It reads as follows:

"I came to America with the firm belief that the more newspapers, magazines and books there are in a country, the more intelligent its people are. Having heard about your many newspapers and—wonder of wonders!—a free library in every larger town, I expected the masses here to be far more intelligent than in Russia.

"The truth is, as I see it now, that an average American is no more intelligent than an average Russian. Perhaps, even, in matters requiring independent thinking, in philosophy and religion, he is less intelligent. And I believe that it is because Americans read too much.

"Americans have more ideas than they possibly could have arrived at independently. Newspapers see to that. Brains, like gums, shrink and degenerate from too much predigested food. Not being called on to work for a long time, they refuse to function."

Going further, the writer says of Americans that "they are over-educated but not intelligent;" and then it is added "too much education is in this case a dangerous thing. It would be worth while to keep in mind not only the blessings but also the perils of literacy."

Undoubtedly there are "perils of literacy," because the ability to read opens the way to injurious and dangerous reading as well as worthless reading. Sir Francis Bacon said, "Reading maketh a full man;" but it is proper to inquire of what a reading man is full. He may fill himself with trash and clog his mental digestion with folly. In truth, very many people do thus fill themselves with foul stuff.

After months of trial a man was convicted in Los Angeles of murdering and mutilating a little girl in the most horrible fashion; and it was found that while in the high school he was a brilliant student and devoured all manner of demoralizing papers and books. He read of outlaws until he made heroes of them. He brooded on lawlessness till his soul became devoted to lawlessness. All the noblest sentiments that ought to characterize youth were excluded from his mind and the most vicious notions filled the space thus emptied in intellect.

As is usual in such cases, some thought to extenuate his dreadful offense by claiming he was insane; but post mortem examination following his execution showed no signs of disorder in his brain. He was not insane, but his reading had made him insensible to all that was good and responsive to all that was evil.

It is quite possible that too many of our people read newspapers only and rarely read books of any sort. Others read a few books, but the volumes they pursue are sensational. Most of them read for "thrills" and not for thought.

It is interesting, but not comforting, to observe how different members of a family read the daily paper. The case may be stated without much divergence from the facts when we say the father reads the reports of markets and trade; the mother reads the society page, and the daughter does likewise; the sons read the pages reporting games and sports; and the younger children pore over the comic sheets. The great matters that concern the welfare of mankind are passed over by all the members of the household; or, if read at all, they are read in haste and comparative indifference.

It is especially to be regretted that students in educational institutions, where it is supposed they are becoming literate, devote so much attention to reports of ball games and the like. This reading has been most hurtful to students and harmful to the work of serious education. It has begotten a mania which has injured both minds and morals.

In a recent issue of a great religious weekly published in New York the editor says with reference to this matter:

"'Are we sport mad?' The question is worth asking, and it is not asked by narrow-minded Puritans who frown on all healthy athletics, but by presidents of colleges and universities who are beginning to wonder how long the thing can go on without seriously lowering the real purpose of all healthy sport. Many institutions of learning seem to put more value on a winning football team than the possession of first-class scholars to head their departments of instruction. But after all, the expense and excitement that go with college athletics are not so serious as the standard set up of a false and superficial heroism. The names of the players are spread over the front pages of the great dailies, and their prowess is set forth in almost epic prose, as if the making of a touchdown or the kicking of a field goal were the ultimate end of education. To many thoughtful educators it seems as if the extreme limit had been reached in school athletics."

Young men who daily fall under this mania for games are likely to become utterly disqualified for anything more serious. When sport is made business, all serious business is likely to be treated as mere sport.

The reading of the Bible is not as general as it was in former days. A great many publications are made concerning the Scriptures which old and young alike handle; but the Bible itself is neglected.

Now, the English Bible is one of the finest pieces of style in all English literature; and if no other reason obtained for reading it, the cultivation of a good style would be sufficient to impel all to read it with constant and continuous care. But this is the least controlling reason for the reading of the Scriptures. The Bible is the source of the noblest inspiration for life; and when it is neglected the moral nature is thereby greatly impoverished. It ought to have high place in all our schemes of education. Even Thomas H. Huxley, the skeptic, perceived this and said, "There must be a moral substratum to a child's education to make it valuable, and there is no other source from which this can be obtained at all comparable with the Bible." Such being the case, the study of the Bible should be a compulsory course in all the institutions for higher learning.

Parents should supervise the reading of the children and youth in their homes. The young mind is no more capable of selecting its reading than it is qualified to go to a drug store and pick the drugs to cure its sickness. Some will say that such parental supervision of the reading of children and youth would be an improper interference with the freedom of their offspring. This is the merest nonsense. Parents provide the food and raiment for the bodies of their children, and it is quite as important to supply and select reading for their minds.

It is not necessary to have a great number of books in a home, but it is quite necessary that all the books supplied a family should be pure and wholesome. There are enough good books in existence to make wholly unnecessary the reading of one trivial or bad book. Indeed, in view of the abundance of good reading there is no time in even the longest life to indulge injurious and useless reading.

Generally speaking, the best reading is found in some of the oldest books. What the world keeps longest in the matter of books is likely to be best. Most books that are published do not live so much as one year after their publication. Mankind tastes them and throws them aside as insipid and useless. The books that survive through the centuries surely have a quality by which their enduring excellency is manifested.

Homer and Plato among the Greeks; Virgil and Seneca among the Romans; Dante among the Italians; Shakespeare, Milton, Bunyan and Bacon among the English, are writers whose works will never pass away. Among American authors many might be mentioned whose writings will live forever.

To read and inwardly digest the volumes of these celebrated authors will occupy most of the time that the average man can give to reading. Why should he neglect them and devour current trash?

A question, therefore, for all of us are the words which head this article, "How Readest Thou?" What we read and how we read will give color to our thinking and direction to our lives.

FRITZ KREISLER, THE FAMOUS VIOLINIST, ON CHRISTIAN STEWARDSHIP.

"I was born with music in my system. I knew musical scores instinctively before I knew my ABC's. It was a gift of Providence. I did not acquire it. So I do not even deserve thanks for the music.

"Music is too sacred to be sold. And the outrageous prices the musical celebrities charge today truly is a crime against society.

"I never look upon the money I earn as my own. It is public money. It is only a fund entrusted to my care for proper disbursement.

"I am constantly endeavoring to reduce my needs to the minimum. I feel morally guilty in ordering a costly meal, for it deprives some one else of a slice of bread—some child, perhaps, of a bottle of milk. My beloved wife feels exactly the same way about these things as I do. You know what I eat; you know what I wear. In all these years of my so-called success in music, we have not built a home for ourselves. Between it and us stand all the homeless in the world!"—Foreign Missions Conference of North America.

RESOLUTIONS.

Whereas, it has pleased our Heavenly Father to remove from the Wesley Bible class MR. M. S. TERRY, a true and faithful member, and one who was always a regular attendant when possible. He gave to his church his loyalty, attendance to its services, support to its institutions and prayer for the success of its work. Those who knew Mr. Terry best, appreciated him most, for the genuineness of his friendship, the range of his ideals and the strength of his character.

Resolved that:

The Wesley Bible class and Sunday school have lost one of their best friends, who was always ready to help those who needed help most. We feel that God's loving care not only followed him through life, but through his sad affliction.

That we extend our heartfelt sympathy to Mrs. Terry and Helen in the loss of a good husband, a devoted father and a true Christian, for his last thoughts were for his family and church.

That a copy of these resolutions be sent Mrs. Terry and to the New Orleans Christian Advocate, also to the Panola and Tate County papers.

WESLEY BIBLE CLASS.

MRS. SALLIE SMYLIE FERGUSON

Mrs. Sallie Smylie Ferguson was stricken Saturday morning, Oct. 20, 1928, at her home in Meridian, Miss., and soon sank into an unconsciousness which continued until her death at 6 p. m., the following Tuesday. She is survived by one sister, Miss Eva Smylie, and three brothers: Rev. Jim J. Smylie, of Houston, Tex.; Will S. Smylie, of Meridian, Miss., and Clarence Smylie, also of Meridian. Rev. W. S. Shipman, of Drew, Miss., member of the North Mississippi Conference, brother-in-law of Mrs. Ferguson, and his daughter, Mrs. Cooper, were present during the illness and at the funeral.

Mrs. Ferguson always, and especially during her younger years, was active and prominent in the woman's missionary work of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, having for a prolonged period served as District Secretary and as Conference Corresponding Secretary. With few exceptions she had attended all the sessions of the Mississippi Conference and of the Woman's Missionary Conference for the past forty years, and had already made plans to attend the coming Mississippi Conference session, and also a quarterly conference to be held at Daleville, Oct. 24 (day of her funeral), where she had expected to meet her friend, Miss Bettie Hughes, ex-missionary to China.

The Meridian Star of Oct. 25, gave the following short account of the funeral:

"Funeral services for Mrs. Sallie Smylie Ferguson were held Wednesday at 3:30 p. m. from Central Methodist Church, Dr. A. F. Watkins officiating, assisted by Rev. H. G. Hawkins, Rev. W. B. Jones, and Dr. A. A. Little.

"The choir of the church rendered 'Asleep in Jesus,' 'The Home of the Soul,' and 'Abide With Me.' Mrs. J. D. Tucker, organist.

"Beautiful tributes to the consecrated life of the deceased were given by the ministers, who spoke of the influence of such a person.

"Dr. Watkins, Rev. W. B. Jones and Rev. H. G. Hawkins, all sons of Methodist ministers, recalled the fact that the father of the deceased, the late Rev. J. J. Smyle, was a member of the fraternity of Methodist itinerants at the same time that the fathers of these men were, and their earliest recollection of Mrs. Ferguson was when, as a young woman, she was engaged in the activities of the church.

"Interment followed in Rose Hill cemetery, and the exceptionally lovely floral designs completely covered the grave."

"HIM THAT GIVES AND HIM THAT TAKES."

Do you remember when you were in school and you had to learn that long quotation about "The quality of mercy is not strained?" Well, you remember it goes on to say, "It blesseth him that gives and him that takes." If I were a preacher, I'd pretend that line was in the Bible and I'd preach a sermon on "him that gives." Mostly we forget about him that gives. We are concerned about getting the money for him that takes. The Epworth League Mission Special does a lot for the takers. It sends missionaries to Africa; it helps train Negro youth at Paine College; it finds its way out to the frontier in Arizona; it helps provide League literature for Leaguers in other lands, and does many other interesting and helpful things. It certainly blesses him that takes.

Even in this far-off land of Egypt there is a wide demand for products of the Willys-Overland Company. This picture shows a Whippet Four Roadster in front of the recently unveiled statue. "The Awakening of Egypt," at Cairo.

But the poor him that gives is often overlooked. Sometimes he is entirely forgotten because it is much easier to sell tickets to a play or have a rummage sale than it is to get "him" to give at all. So he doesn't get blessed a bit.

Then sometimes we just forget poor him. We get the old stand-bys together and they give the amount our League has pledged—what more could one ask? Lots more! For all those poor hims who didn't give are not getting blessed at all—and how they need it!

One of the importaut missions of the Epworth League is to train its members in the right habits of giving. That means that they should get the habit of giving regularly, generously, intelligently, and to such causes as will enlarge their interest and broaden their sympathies.

How can you do this? By getting every member of your League into the habit of giving regularly to the Epworth League Special. Be sure that your League knows what the Special is and where the money goes and what it does. This is more trouble than just "raising our pledge." But it is also worth infinitely more.

There are several things which will help you. The Central Office (still at 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn.), will send you free leaflets on "The Epworth League Around the World," which tells where the Mission Special money goes and what it does. Just tell us how many of these you can use.

Then the September Epworth Era had in it an Epworth League play called, "All Wet," which not only tells where the money goes but how you can get your Leaguers to want to give. A few extra copies of the play have been printed, and we will send single copies free of charge as long as they last. Better ask for it quickly though! The play is quite simple and can be put on at your regular League devotional meeting if you like, though it would be well to invite the rest of the church so they can see what the League is doing.

Don't neglect poor "him that gives" (or doesn't give) any longer. He needs the blessing he'll get out of giving. It is for his sake we have taken as our slogan, "A paid pledge from the last Leaguer in the last League."

Start in to-day to reach the last Leaguer in your League.

"There are no songs comparable to the songs of Zion; no orations equal to those of the prophets; no politics like those the Scriptures teach."—John Milton.

FROM THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE PRESIDENT.

My Dear Co-Workers: During the past month or six weeks, the members of the Auxiliary Commission on Re-Evaluation have been studying our organization to see what we can do to bring it to a higher standing.

When you have finished your study, please fill out the questionnaire and return it to the District Secretary. Then the secretary shall forward her report to the Conference Re-Evaluation Commission.

The auxiliary reports sent by the District Secretary to the Conference Commission should be tabulated and forwarded by them with recommendations to Mrs. B. W. Lipscomb, Lambuth Building, Nashville, not later than Jan. 1, 1929.

The following women will compose the Re-Evaluation Conference Commission, Mississippi Conference: Chairman, Mrs. E. H. Galloway, 304 North Congress Street, Jackson, Miss.; Mrs. D. W. Bufkin, Mrs. C. L. Nugent, Mrs. J. W. Morley, Mrs. B. F. Lewis, Mrs. Sam Ewing, Mrs. Spragins, Mrs. Brownlee.

Let us give this commission our hearty co-operation.

Yours for service,

MRS. L. W. ALFORD.

QUESTIONNAIRE ON STANDARD OF EXCELLENCE.

1. Can a donation sent to the Orphanage or Flat Rock School be counted on Standard of Excellence?

Answer. No, only gifts sent to ministers, missionaries and to those Institutions fostered by Council can be counted.

2. Is the lending of Mission study books "Missionary Cultivation of New Societies?"

Answer. No, missionary cultivation means going into unorganized communities, putting on a missionary program, creating a missionary interest, distributing missionary literature and if possible organizing a missionary society. It also means playing the "Big Sister" to a new and weak auxiliary.

3. Does the Missionary Society receive credit for every "Voice" subscription that comes to the church?

Answer. No. An auxiliary may only count the subscriptions taken by the auxiliary members.

4. If a mother and daughter, both belonging to the society, take the "Voice" jointly, is it counted as two subcriptions?

Answer. No. it is listed as one subscription, but both mother and daughter may be counted as taking it; but this counting does not hold good when neighboring women take the "Voice" together.

5. In the item, "Fifty per cent attendance on monthly meetings," what meetings are included?

Answer. The business and social meetings.

6. Does an auxiliary have to have any certain membership increase?

Answer. No, but an auxiliary must have a net increase, in order to attain the membership count on the Standard.

7. Can the District Secretary represent an auxiliary at the Annual Conference?

Answer. There is no law to prohibit, but the District Secretary represents her entire constituency and not any individual society. Such a procedure would seem to be more of a money-saving device than a desire to have the society worthily represented.

8. If the members of an auxiliary agree to pray at home and make an offering, have they observed the Week of Prayer?

Answer. They have not. An auxiliary must come together, put on the programs sent out by Council, pray together and make an offering in order to count this item on the Standard.

9. If a group of missionary women hold meetings with and for Negro women, is this listed as "Missionary Cultivation?"

Answer. No, it comes under "Inter-Racial Work."

10. Does the auxiliary treasurer separate the Conference Expense Fund from the dues?

Answer. No, this should he done by the Conference Treasurer. It is not the prerogative of the auxiliary treasurer.—Official.

ZONE 2, MERIDIAN DISTRICT.

Zone No. 2, of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Meridian District, met in Enterprise, Tuesday, Oct. 16, in the home of Mrs. J. E. Williams. Mrs. A. S. Mason, of Quitman, presided and conducted the following program: Devotionals, Mrs. Risher, Pachutn; address of welcome, Mrs. Price, Enterprise; "our Jubilee offering," Mrs. Joe Jenkins, Stonewall; "Are We Christlike Toward Childhood and Youth?" Mrs. Horne, Quitman; Bible study—How? Why? Books? Mrs. Watkins, Quitmau; "Are We Christlike In Our Friendships?" Mrs. Gunn, Pachuta; Mission study—best plan—Books to be studied during October, Mrs. Weems, Shubuta; general discusslon.

Two beautiful vocal solos were rendered hy Miss Dorothy Buckley and Mrs. Wm. Estes. The hymn, "Forward Through the Ages," was sung.

Following the program, new officers for the coming year were elected: Mrs. A. S. Mason, of Quitman, zone chairman; Mrs. Wm. Estes, of Enterprise, zone secretary.

The attendance was the best on record. Present from Shubuta, 4; Quitman, 9; Stonewall, 5; Pachuta, 5; Enterprise, 20; and two visitors. The meeting was invited to Pachuta for the first session of the new year.

Following the program and business was a most delightful social hour, informally bringing together the ladies of the various societies in an intimately pleasant way. Delicious refreshments were served. For the charm and enjoyment of this hour we are indebted to the hospitality of Mrs. Williams.

ZONE MEETING, HICKORY, MISS.

A meeting of zone 4, Newton District, was held in the Hickory Methodist church, Sept. 20. Mrs. A. S. Oliver, zone leader, was in the chair.

Rev. R. H. Clegg, of Union, led the devotional. His subject was, "Woman, the first missionary from the tomb."

Mrs. Mattie Mae Norman, in a few well chosen words, welcomed the meeting to Hickory. The meeting was well attended: Sixteen present from Union, 12 from Decatur, 10 visitors from various places, and a full attendance from Hickory auxiliary.

A pleasing number was a vocal solo hy Mrs. Edd Majure, of Union.

"Why Have a Zone Meeting?" by Mrs. Adams, of Hickory, was very interesting and helpful to all.

"Spiritual Adventures," was given by Mrs. Hopkins. She also reminded us to send our boxes to the Wesley House.

Splendid Recipe To Stop A Cough That "Hangs On"

The best cough remedy that money could buy, can easily be made at home. It saves money and gives you the most reliable, quick-acting medicine you ever used. The way it takes hold of stubborn coughs and chest colds, giving immediate relief, is astonishing.

Any druggist can supply you with 2½ ounces of Pinex. Pour this into a pint bottle, and fill up with plain granulated sugar syrup or strained honey. It's no trouble at all to mix, and when you once use it, you will never be without it. Keeps perfectly and tastes good—children really like it.

It is surprising how quickly this home-made remedy loosens the germ-laden phlegm, and soothes and heals the inflamed membranes. At the same time, it is absorbed into the blood, where it acts directly on the bronchial tubes, and helps the system throw off the whole trouble. Even those severe coughs which usually follow the "flu", are promptly ended.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway Pine, containing the active agent of creosote, in a refined, palatable form. Nothing known in medicine is more helpful in cases of severe coughs, chest colds and bronchial troubles.

Do not accept a substitute for Pinex. It is guaranteed to give prompt relief or money refunded.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

The Conference Board meeting was an enthusiastic and happy meeting. Twelve out of the fourteen members were present, and one of those absent sent in an excuse. It was, I feel sure, weather conditions that kept this one away.

The Board was of one mind and heart. There was one motive, to go forward. There was no dissenting voice from this. There was a feeling that the time was demanding a more serious facing the task. The need far outstrips the Board's resources. The budget was adopted, $18,634. This is a big budget, and it is a great task.

The anniversary program was well received. Miss Alford made a fine impression upon the audience in her introduction to the Conference. The audience received her most kindly.

Mr. Hull is growing in favor with the leaders of the Conference. The Board was delighted with his work, and feels that he needs a whole-hearted backing on the part of all the workers.

The plans for the coming year are far-reaching and certainly look to the future. All of these will be published in the next issue of the "News Letter." We trust you will read this carefully.

The reports from "Childhood and Youth Week" are coming in slowly. We trust that these reports will be sent in rapidly. We need these reports to make out our reports.

If by any means you have not held the week, can't you hold the week even now and report your work? It is a most helpful work and it will bring life and strength to your workers.

Pray for the workers and the work.

JOHN C. CHAMBERS,
Conference Superintendent.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

The Conference year of 1928 is a matter of history, the record has been made. We place a period at the end of the sentence and begin where we paused for a moment. We are grateful for the fine fellowship of the workers and for their hearty co-operation in our common task. Our sole aim is to help our workers to a clearer understanding of the work committed to us and to a closer walk with God. The same men are in the field as last year, Gladney, Mohler, Sharp, and Hammontree. The long battle line has moved forward and we are in a position to achieve greater victories than heretofore. There are two items that we should concentrate upon, the increase in membership and the training of officers and teachers. There is a large number of boys and girls in every community we are neglecting. Let us determine to bring them under the direct influence of the Sunday school. The Cokesbury Record System is designed to help those who are in the school reach those who are on the outside. The careful use of this record system will create interest and thus tone up the work of the entire school. Some one should be appointed to supervise the outside. His task is to use the machinery of the school to accomplish this aim. The outside is larger than the inside in some communities. The task of this supervisor is to train the people to attend the sessions of the Sunday school and the preaching services. The supervisor of the outside has a task large enough to challenge the biggest man in the church. When we get them we must give them something that will feed them. This calls for a Supervisor of Training. Point VII in the Program of Work gives an outline of what is required of this supervisor. The first step is to have every officer and teacher read an approved book, preferably a book pertaining to the work the officer or teacher is doing. Two things to do: bring them in; give them something when they come; increase the membership, do better teaching. Write me for any help you may need.

Important notice: All money should be sent to the Sunday School Board, Grenada, Miss. Make checks payable to Sunday School Board, not to any person. The money will be receipted for by Rev. E. G. Mohler. This is the order of the Conference Sunday School Board. Let all treasurers observe this order. It will not be changed so long as the present Board is in charge. Indicate on the remittance what the money is for, this will help keep the accounts straight. In addition to this order, address the office at Grenada for any help you may need.

Another item of importance: Let us settle the place and date for the District Standard Training School as early as possible. This should be done by the first of December. As your Conference Superintendent, I am required to have dates and places settled six months previous to the time of holding these schools. The date for the Conference Standard Training School is June 17-22. Any school wanting two courses taught during the winter will do well to confer with me early in the year. An early beginning means success.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

Rev. John C. Chambers, Jackson, Miss., Conference Superintendent of Sunday School Work, writes: "The wife of Rev. D. W. Poole, of your Conference, comes to you from my Conference. She was Miss Sells, daughter of our presiding elder, Rev. J. L. Sells, Gulfport, Miss. She is a graduate of Whitworth College and of Scarritt College. She is approved to teach 'Adolescent Recreation.' This unit counts for Intermediate, Senior and Young People. She is a good teacher. She taught for me, giving fine satisfaction."

Mrs. Marion S. Monks, Monroe, is the first Elementary District Superintendent to send in report on "Childhood and Youth Week."

Dr. Monk writes about his recent Training School: "This was the fifth session of the Training School for Monroe. There were about sixty in regular attendance, with thirty-six credits given. The enrollment was composed entirely of workers from Monroe and West Monroe. So confident are we of the good these schools bring to our own workers that we are now ready for another."

October report from the Training Section shows interesting items: Diploma issued to Rev. Claude K. Smith, of Pineville; Blue Seal to Mrs. D. W. Poole, of Choudrant, and Gold Seal to Mrs. J. T. Wood, of Winnfield. Total number of credits issued for October is 145.

Last Sunday your writer, in company with the presiding elder, visited Alco, in the Alexandria District. This place, with Kurthwood, has been one of the most pleasant charges in this district. The present pastor is Rev. L. E. Crooks. In the past this charge has always met its financial obligations "in full." We enjoyed hospitality in the homes of Mr. Thaxton and Mr. Perry. The Sunday school at Alco is small in attendance, having about fifty, but does a high type of work.

The past week has been "The Week of Prayer" in the Missionary Society at First Church, Alexandria. Your writer was asked to take part on the program one afternoon. During the service, we could not but think of the leadership the Louisiana women have had in the past in their work of Home and Foreign Missions: Mrs. F. A. Lyons, New Orleans; Mrs. E. R. Kennedy, Lafayette; Mrs. W. W. Carre, Sr., New Orleans; Mrs. C. F. Niebergall, New Orleans, and Mrs. A. P. Holt, of Crowley. The leadership of to-day are booked to hold a Council meeting in Alexandria on Thursday, Nov 15, with Mrs. W. H. Spinks as president.

Oakdale is in the midst of a Young People's revival. Mr. Charles N. White, State president of the Epworth League and district secretary of Sunday school work in the Alexandria District, led the service last night, using for his Scripture the fifty-first Psalm for his Bible message. The attendance and interest are reported good.

The pastor, Rev. I. W. Flowers, was recommended for admission on trial at the approaching Annual Conference at Lake Charles.

We were present at the recent fourth quarterly conference at First Church, Alexandria. There was a resolution passed offering their new educational building to the Conference Sunday School Board for its annual Statewide Conferences.

Alexandria being in the heart of Louisiana may be the logical place for the leadership, Conference, district and local, to meet annually.

C. D. ATKINSON,
Conference Superintendent.

HAUGHTON-DOYLINE CHARGE.

Dear Dr. Carley: Before the year closes, please let me say a few words, giving the facts very briefly concerning my work.

We were graciously received when we came on the work, both at Haughton and Doyline. We put the Advocate in over twenty homes. We raised our missionary quota in full in Haughton. We organized prayer meetings at Doyline. These services have been well attended. We had our revival in Haughton, which began June 10, running ten days. We had twenty accessions to the church. The pastor was assisted by Rev. L. I. McCain, of Minden. Our next revival was at Doyline, and the pastor was assisted by Rev. H. W. Cudd, of Jena. We had five accessions to the church. On the closing day, Aug. 29, the church was dedicated, Brother Cudd preaching the dedicatory sermon. We took pledges that night for Conference collections, and have had no trouble collecting them.

We just closed a Cokesbury Training School, in which fifteen units were issued.

In many respects this has been a great year; and, may I say it, has been done through prayer, perseverance, and the splendid co-operation of both churches. The pastor and people are proud of what has been done, and we determined when we came on the work to make it the best year. The pastor has been paid in full, and will have a good report on Conference benevolences and Superannuate Endowment Fund.

Our slogan is, "Watch us grow!"

No, I don't want to move.

SHUBUTA METHODIST CHURCH—A HISTORY.

The fourth session of the Mississippi Conference met at William Foster's, in Adams County, Miss., Oct. 10, 1816. There appears in the list of appointments made at that Conference, Chickasawhay circuit, with Elijab Gentry as preacher in charge. Tbis was the first appearance of the Chickasawhay circuit, which, according to the historian of that period, originally extended very nearly a distance equal to the length of the stream under its various names.

The territory in which Shubuta is located was within the bounds of this circuit, but just how early there was preaching in this vicinity by the circuit riders of that early period we have no means of knowing. Tbe Chickasawhay circuit first appeared in the Mississippi District, but tbe next year appears in the Alabama District, with Edward Harper as preacher in charge.

The Shubuta Methodist church, according to the best information available, was probably organized in the year 1857 or 1858, by the Rev. Samuel Jones, a locai preacher, wbose grandson of the same name is a member of the Shubuta Methodist church at this time.

The first page of the Church Register has tbis title inscribed on it: "Register of members in Shubuta Methodist Episcopai Cburch, Clarke circuit, Mobile Conference, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South." Just when the Mobile Conference came into existence, or when it became the Alabama Conference, I do not know, for the eason that I have been unable to fin. any bit of history that would throw light on the matter.

The first name appearing on tbis regiser is that of William T. Anderson. The date or manner of his connection with the church is not given, but tbe date of bis removai by certificate is given as Juiy 27, 1867. On tbe first page recording the membership of tbe church appear the names of four local preachers: Elisha M. Gilmore, George M. Gilmore, Samuel Jones, and William Cooper. Cooper was a deacon; the others seem not to have been ordained at this time. The earliest dated name enrolled is that of Talitha Boyakin, who was received by letter July 17, 1867, from Bear Creek, wherever that was. Tbe next earliest entry is that of J. R. Sbarman, who was received on profession of faitb July 25, 1867. The tbird earliest entry is the name of T. A. Ledyard, who was received by baptism in September, 1867, and wbo is still with us at the age of 83 years, highly respected and honored by all wbo know him, and wbo for forty-one years was superintendent of the Sunday school.

Opposite the name of Miss M. A. Heard is the entry that she was married Dec. 25, 1867, to Dr. West. Tbis, I presume, was the Rev. T. S. West, late of the Mississippi Conference. Truly a Christmas present.

At the session of the Mississippi Conference held at Crystal Springs, Dec. 14-20, 1870, there appears in tbe list of appointments for 1871, the Meridian District, William B. Hines, presiding elder, and Clarke circuit, William J. Seale, pastor. For some cause there was a change of pastors during the year, as appears from the minutes of church conference held during this year. The church conference held May 8, was held by Wm. J. Seale, and the one held on Sept. 17, was presided over by P. H. Napier. P. H. Napier was preacher in charge for 1872.

In the minutes of the Conference held at Brandon, Miss., Dec. 11-17, 1872, there appears in the appoinments made at this Conference for 1873, Sbubuta Mission, with James M. Gann, preacher in charge. This is the first time that Shubuta appears as the head of an appointment. James M. Gann served two years, 1873 and 1874. T. S. West was pastor for 1875, and the register shows that he was pastor for 1878, while for the years 1876 and 1877 the records do not show wbo was pastor, but as Dr. West was pastor for 1875 and 1878, it is more than probable that he was pastor for the years 1876 and 1877, thus compieting a four-year pastorate. From 1879 to the present, the chronological record of pastors is compietc, and is as follows: 1879, Jas. M. Weems; 1880-81, J. J. Smylie; 1882-83-84-85, W. D. Dominick; 1886, E. F. Edgar; 1887-88, Lyman Carley; 1889-90-91-92, J. P. Drake; 1893-94-95-96, D. P. Bradford; 1897-98, J. T. Nicholson; 1899-1900-1901, A. T. Bell; 1902-03-04, G. A. Guice; 1905-06-07-08, H. L. Norton; 1909, James M. Weems; 1910-11-12-13, B. F. Jones; 1914, W. M. Sullivan; 1915-16, O. S. Lewis; 1917-18, L. E. Aiford; 1919-20-21-22, W. H. Huntley; 1923-24, W. A. Terry; 1925, John D. Ellis; 1926-27-28, the writer of this paper.

The first quarterly conference, 1871, probably March 13, tbe church had on roli 102 members enroiled according to sex as follows: females, 60, and males, 42. Not only did men and women sit apart at church during services, but their names were recorded on separate rolls. At the church conference held Sept. 17, 1871, tbe stewards' financial report is as follows: assessed for the support of the ministry, $250 made at the first quarterly conference May 8, and reported as paid to date, presiding elder, $34.50, preacber in charge, $64.75, leaving a balance of $150.75. At the church conference, Nov. 18, 1871, C. L. Watson, Sunday school superintendent, reported for the Sunday school the average attendance since May as 95 pupils and 14 teachers, with a totai enrollment of 109. He reported that the Sunday schooi had been much hindered because of the sickly season through which they had just passed, but that tbe attendance was improving and he hoped that before very long they would realize their expectations. Just wbat they expected, we are not told. The present enrollment and attendance is not much better than it was fifty-one years ago.

At the church conference of Sept. 17, 1871, a committee of three, consisting of C. L. Watson, J. W. Avera, and I. L. Pickens, were appointed to investigate certain charges against five members of the church who were charged with certain violations. This committee reported back to the church conference Nov. 18, 1871, as follows: "We have talked with Brothers C. S. and M. in regard to the charges against them, and they have acknowledged that their walk in some instances has not been as devoted as it sbould have been, and that they appeared penitent and asked the church to look over their sbortcomings." Brother L. had been charged with meddling with or dealing in counterfeit money. He stated tbat he was only trying to act as detective and catch the guilty parties. That he refused to receive from the express company the package of bad money sent him. Brother C. was charged with having money in a saloon and with profane swearing. In reply to the first cbarge he said that he had no money in any saloon, and that he had only loaned his son money to carry on his business (whicb I presume was saloon business). As to the charge of profanity the committee couid find no proof, any further than that he confessed to having called some one a d— rascai, but that he did not consider that cursing, but if tbe church so considered it he was sorry and would not do so any more. There are records of other investigating committees concerning charges of misconduct among tbe members of the church. The church was stricter in the enforcement of disciplines in those days than she is to-day.

It is interesting to note the disposition of many of the members of those days. Over against a great many of the names is written the word, "dropped," as showing how tbey got out of the cburch. What became of them? It is to be boped that their names were not dropped from the rolls of the Book of Life.

The records show that a number were expeiled from the church. The Metbodist church has been a great feeder of otber denominations. If she had retained all in her membersbip wbo have been converted under her ministry and at her aitars, her membership to-day would be much larger tban it is. Over against the names of a goodly number is the entry, "joined the Baptist church." Over against tbe names of that large and increasing number who have gone the way of ali the earth, the word "dead" or "died" shows how they left the church and closes tbe record of the best and most faitbfui. Against most of tbese names, "dead," or "died," is tbe oniy word entered. We would like to know if all died "in the faith," looking for the "city whose builder and maker is God." Over against some of these names is written, "died in tbe faith." In this phrase is revealed the purpose of the church—to guide unto tbat life which is eternai.

Shubuta Metbodist chnrcb has had a splendid history. My wish for her is that she may have a greater future. Fidelity and faitb in God on the part of her present membership will bring to her a more glorious day.

W. J. DAWSON.

FROM THE FIELD SECRETARY, LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

Dear Epworth Leaguers: I'm glad to report that I have spent a busy but profitable week in Ruston District. Last Sunday night I met with the Athens Leaguers at their League hour and remained for church hour, where the services were given over to the Sunday school for the presentation of a very attractive play well rendered by those taking part. The Athens congregation seems delighted with its new pastor, Rev. Mr. Henley, just coming to them from the Missouri Conference. Because of inclement weather I was unable to meet with the Lisbon Leaguers Monday night. On Tuesday night I had an unusually fine group of Leaguers present at our Haynesville meeting. Most of those present were from the Hi League, where Mrs. Joe Bivelle, their councilor, is doing a wonderful work. After the business and devotional hour we were invited to the social hall in the basement of the church, where we were greeted with the loveliest of Halloween sights. We enjoyed a happy hour of games, followed by a delicious salad course, served to about forty young people. Wednesday night I went to Summerfield and held a meeting with the Leaguers there that night. Though a small community this League is doing a splendid work. Mrs. D. S. Allgood is their counselor. I was sorry that I could not meet with the Farmerville young people Thursday night. Since that date was canceled I spent Thursday at my home in Joneshoro. Friday night I met with the Hi and Senior Leaguers at the Ruston Orphanage at 6:30, and was delighted to find a large group of sixty Hi Leaguers and twenty-nine Senior Leaguers. They report the very best development in their work, and deserve much credit for the splendid way in which they carry on their program. At 7:30 I met with the Ruston Leaguers and was pleased to find that they have improved greatly in their work under the presidency of Mr. Floyd James. Our District Secretary, Miss Beth Murphy, was present with us at these meetings. Saturday evening I went to Simshoro to meet with a new Hi League there. The Antioch Leaguers were also present. We had a large attendance, and though both Leagues represented are practically new they are doing splendidly. The Antioch Leaguers reported all pledges paid in full and money in the bank toward their Assembly fund. Brother McVey also reported a Hi League at Vienna, another of his charges. The Hilly Senior League is also on his charge and is keeping pace with the others. On Sunday morning I attended church in Arcadia and went from there to Gibsland with the Aracdia Leaguers to attend a union meeting. The Ruston District Secretary is redivlding the district into unions so that every League will he in one of the three unions. Sunday evening I took charge of the devotional services at the Gibsland League, where I found a splendid group of Leaguers. I enjoyed hearing Brother C. E. McLean at evening services. Monday Brother McLean took me to Bryceland, where I remained over night and met with another new League in that district. The Bryceland and Bear Creek Leaguers met together, and both organizations impressed me as anxious to do big things as Epworth Leaguers. The Bear Creek Leaguers, from a rural community and in a League less than a year old, report pledges paid in full and over $50 in the bank, drawing interest, to be used for Mansfield delegates next summer. Isn't that a fine record?

I'm sure you will agree with me that this has been a full week and will be glad to know that I am now spending several days at home and will then work Monroe District before Conference.

It is not yet too late to plan for your Mission study classes. These classes should be held at this time of the year if possible. I am glad to hear of the large number being held, but am listening out for still more reports on other classes. The October Era gave you the list of approved books which you should use in selecting your book for study.

Epworth Leaguers who knew and loved our Leaguers, Misses Alta and Evelyn McBride, of Bastrop, are grieved to hear of the death of their father a few weeks ago. Such a beloved character will he missed by all who knew him. We extend our sympathy to the family in their hour of sorrow.

As the pastors of the Louisiana Conference go to their Annual Conference in only a few days the Leaguers of this State are with them in thought and prayer as they report their past endeavors and strive to make plans for a new, richer and happier year of Christian service for their Master. We Leaguers appreciate the interest taken in our growth by our preachers, and I as Field Secretary especially appreciate many kind courtesies shown me in each district from time to time.

Your co-worker in his service,
ELIZABETH LANGFORD,
Field Secretary.

SAME PRESCRIPTION HE WROTE IN 1892

When Dr. Caldwell started to practice medicine, back in 1875, the needs for a laxative were not as great as today. People lived normal lives, ate plain, wholesome food, and got plenty of fresh air. But even that early there were drastic physics and purges for the relief of constipation which Dr. Caldwell did not believe were good for human beings.

The prescription for constipation that he used early in his practice, and which he put in drug stores in 1892 under the name of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, is a liquid vegetable remedy, intended for women, children and elderly people, and they need just such a mild, safe bowel stimulant.

This prescription has proven its worth and is now the largest selling liquid laxative. It has won the confidence of people who needed it to get relief from headaches, biliousness, flatulence, indigestion, loss of appetite and sleep, bad breath, dyspepsia, colds, fevers. At your druggist, or write "Syrup Pepsin," Dept. BB, Monticello, Illinois, for free trial bottle.

A LETTER FROM MISS MERLE E. WHITMAN.

Mansfield, La., Oct. 29, 1928.

To the Epworth Leaguers of Louisiana Conference: By the kindness of the editor of the Christian Advocate, I wish to say "thank you" to the Epworth Leaguers of Louisiana Conference for the Mansfield College scholarship awarded me from the fund set aside for that purpose, and which you voted at the Mansfield Assembly this year to use at this session. The Executive Committee conferred this honor and privilege on me, which will, I trust, enable me to go further in service for my Master, and for you. I feel so undeserving of this trust that you have given me, but I do so earnestly pray that I might in some way repay your kindness and show you how greatly appreciative I feel.

The work here is very interesting, and to me it seems the beginning of a new life—a life of beautiful, closer fellowship with our great friend, Jesus, and of working with him, as the great Master, King.

The faculty is a splendid body of well-trained, cultured teachers, whose first interests are for the students' welfare, and are a great help to us in many ways, even outside the classrooms. The student body is a wonderful group of girls. We seem to be just a large family by our oneness of spirit and purpose. We have prayer groups each night in our rooms from 9 o'clock to 9:30, which reminds me so much of our assemblies, and which also proves a great strength. Our studying seems easier after this communion with the Father. The other school activities, Y. W. C. A., literary societies and such, engage us in numbers of pleasant, interesting events, and keep us very busy.

In closing, I will say that I cannot adequately express my appreciation, but ask that you remember me in your prayers, that I might do my best while here and continue in his blessed service. Remember also that I am praying for all the Leaguers of the State, that your efforts may find reward in great achivement in carrying out your splendid Epworth League program.

Most humbly yours,
MERLE E. WHITMAN.

A THREE DAYS' COUGH IS YOUR DANGER SIGNAL

Coughs from colds may lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for coughs from colds and bronchial irritations. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of coughs from colds, bronchitis and minor forms of bronchial irritations, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

A pageant, "Changing from a Ladies' Aid to a Missionary Society," was presented by Union auxiliary.

After an intermission, during which a delicious plate lunch was served by the Hickory ladies, we reassembled, and Mrs. W. V. Horton gave the history of Union Missionary Society.

"Stewardship" was ably discussed by Mrs. L. Q. C. Williams, of Union.

Next was a vocal solo by Mrs. Sam Coleman, with Miss Mabel Guinn at the piano.

The Decatur High School girls then presented a playlette on "Tithing." Following this, Rev. R. H. Clegg, of Union, and Rev. A. S. Oliver, of Decatur, each made a very helpful talk on tithing.

An interesting feature was a solo by little four-year-old Terry Carleton, of Decatur, with Mrs. Montgomery Carleton, mother of little Terry, at the piano.

Union auxiliary asked that the next zone meeting be held with them, the date to be announced later. We were then dismissed with prayer by Mrs. L. Q. C. Williams.

MRS. W. W. HESTER, Secretary.

ZONE 5, VICKSBURG DISTRICT.

The third meeting of zone 5, Vicksburg District, was held in Washington, Miss., Oct. 18, with forty members and five visitors present. Mrs. George McNeil, zone leader, presided.

Rev. J. B. Cain led the devotional. Drawing his lessons from the first Psalm, he gave a beautiful missionary talk.

Mrs. Raiph McNeil's words of hearty welcome were responded to by Mrs. Kaiser, of Natchez.

Mrs. J. B. Cain, of Fayette, clearly explained "Why Every Woman in the Methodist Church Should be a Member of the Missionary Society."

Mrs. Greer, of Natchez, gave an interesting revlew of our Mission study book, "Women and the Kingdom," outlining the history of missionary work for the past fifty years and estimating the vast amount of work yet to be done.

Mmes, Healy and Simmons sang a beautiful duet, "Far Away He Saw Me."

A helpful and interesting paper on "Why We Should Have a Mission Study Class" was given by Mrs. Dennis, of Mizpah.

Mrs. Fore gave a report on the Re-Evaluation Committee of the Missionary Council, and Mrs. McKeown supplemented it.

At noon all enjoyed a social hour and a bountiful dinner provided by the Washington ladies.

Brother McKeown conducted the devotions, which opened the afternoon session.

A memorial service was held for our missinoary, Daisy Mae Ferguson. Mrs. Cammack, Mrs. McKeown, Mrs. Trimble and Brother McKeown paid beautiful and touching tributes to the memory of this rare and lovely character.

Mrs. Trimble revlewed and read extracts from another study book, "Memoirs of Scarritt."

On request, Mmes, Healy and Simmons gave us another beautiful duet.

Mrs. Kennison, of Fayette, talked on the Week of Prayer and the thank offering.

The feature of the afternoon session was a talk by our loved and gifted District Secretary, Mrs. McKeown. She gave a general outline of our work for the year, and urged that we make a great effort to get all our Methodist women into the Missionary Society during this Jubilee year. She spoke with appreciation of the presence of Mrs. Janie Drake Cooper, editor of our Woman's Page in the Advocate, and urged the auxliiaries to send reports to Mrs. Cooper.

For the coming year Mrs. T. M. Ford, of Lorman, was elected zone leader, and Mrs. T. F. Fore, of Natchez, zone secretary.

A rising vote of thanks was extended to Washington for their generous hospitality.

Natchez extended an invitation for the first zone meeting of the coming year.

Benediction was pronounced by Brother McKeown.

MRS. ALICE HARRIGILL,
Acting Secretary.

RESOLUTIONS ADOPTED

By the Methodist Preachers of the Shreveport District, Shreveport, La., Nov. 5, 1928, Upon the Completion of his Quadrennium as Presiding Elder of the Shreveport District by Rev. W. W. Holmes, D.D.

Inasmuch as the constitutional law of our church limits a presiding elder's tenure on the same district to four successive years;

And inasmuch as our beloved presiding elder, Rev. W. W. Holmes, D.D., is closing his fourth consecutive year as presiding elder of the Shreveport District;

And inasmuch as the statutory limitation will terminate his leadership as our presiding elder at the coming Annual Conference, which will convene Nov. 21, at Lake Charles;

Be it resolved:

1. That we are thankful to God that, through these years, we have enjoyed the enrichment of his fellowship. We have not come into contact with him, as fellow-ministers, but to be made better men and ministers.

2. That his ministry in our pulpits has been, always, of a high order, revealing the mind of Christ. His clear thinking, couched in the phrases of forceful speech, has been instructive, encouraging, comforting and inspiring. To our own ministry he has been a strong and constructive ally.

3. That we gratefully recognize the progress of the Shreveport District under his leadership. His alert mind has been quick to see the avenues of possible advancement, and as an administrator he has been highly efficient in leading forward through those avenues opening into larger opportunities. Under his guidance churches have been built, revival work has prospered, congregations have been strengthened, Sunday schools have had remarkable growth, splendid institutions of social service have been launched, and a sense of pride and responsibility has been developed among us with respect to the great programs of the church at large. Perhaps never in the history of the district has there been so close an approach unto a perfect financial report of all claims as under the ministry of Dr. Holmes.

4. That we sincerely appreciate the love and sympathy of his brotherly spirit. Eager to be helpful, willing to labor, ready to share our burdens, we have found him to be a man easy to approach and always responsive in our difficulties or needs.

5. That the embodiment of all the aforesaid qualities makes of Dr. Holmes an ideal minister of Christ, and that they especially fit him as a district leader.

6. That we have found him ably assisted in all his labors by a noble and gentle wife, whose love for the church has made her to share her gifts with all churches and members of the Shreveport District.

7. That our love and prayers shall follow Dr. and Mrs. Holmes and their children as they take up their faithful labors in a new field to which they will be appointed at the coming Conference.

Signed:

ROBERT E. GOODRICH,
Acting Chairman.
DON E. DULANEY,
Secretary.

BATON ROUGE BUSINESS COLLEGE NOTES.

The Baton Rouge Business College is fortunate in being able to secure Dr. Bean, Dean of Psychology of the Louisiana State University, to conduct a series of lectures on Business Psychology. This gift from the faculty was made with the idea in mind that it would make of the students more efficient business men and women.

Mr. J. F. Paton, who holds his master's degree in Business Administration from the University of Texas, is now at the head of the commercial department of the Business College. Already some of the young men who have finished their bookkeeping course are taking advanced work in higher accounting with him.

A few months ago a department for public work was added for the benefit of the advanced students. This work consists of doing mimeographing, multigraphing, typing, letter writing and directing envelopes. It is not only very helpful to the students in their training, but often they pick up nice little sums that help them with their expenses. By far, the largest single order they have ever had came from Governor Long's office, when he sent over 50,000 envelopes to be directed and filled with circulars advocating the Good Roads Tax, to be voted on Nov. 6. The students thought they were getting into politics and helping a good measure along; and my! how they did enjoy spending the money.

WHAT IS NECESSARY?

I take it that if you want to understand a person, the first essential is that you should love him. It is only love that sees into the deeps and reads the story in the light of God. There is a proverb which says that love is blind. If that were true, then God would have no eyes. Love is not blind. It has the keenest sight. It can read the smallest print without assistance. And we call it blind because the things we see and, seeing, can detect no beauty in, are to the eyes of love transfigured, like a window that reflects the sunset.—G. H. Morrison.

The fruit of the spirit is love; what kind of love? Every kind of love. Be truer to your friends, love with a wider and more catholic sympathy; be merciful and helpful to all who are in need. Joy! What kind of joy? Every kind of joy. The merriment that maketh glad like a medicine; the soberer joy of maturer life in active living; and, most sacred of all, the joy that illuminates sorrow and gives us a song in our night.—Lyman Abbott.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

ONE THING HE KNEW—AND HE TOLD IT.

The healing of the man born blind is one of the most interesting and most significant incidents related in connection with the ministry of Jesus. Certain facts stand out clearly. The man was born blind—there is no doubt about that. Some of the neighbors bore testimony to that fact, though others contradicted them; but his parents gave unequivocal testimony—"We know that this is our son, and that he was born blind." The man was healed of his blindness. The neighbors asked him, "How were thine eyes opened?" his parents recognized the fact that he had gained his sight, and he himself declared that he could see. The Pharisees were sticklers for the ceremonial law; the neighbors were troubled about a question of identity; his parents were afraid to express an opinion; but the man himself declared: "One thing I know, that, whereas I was blind, now I see."

Jesus Christ had done something for this man; the man knew it, and he was willing to bear testimony to the fact.

Has Jesus Christ ceased to work wonders in the world? Certainly not. He is still opening blind eyes, still causing the deaf to hear, still raising the dead to life. The neighbors, too, are still arguing, and the Pharisees are quibbling; and some parents are still afraid to take sides. What is needed? That those who have been healed should stand up before the whole world and bear a sure word of testimony to the saving power of Jesus. In the face of uncertainty and doubt and fear, there is needed the positive declaration, "Whereas I was blind, now I see." If Jesus Christ has done anything for us, we surely ought to know it—and we surely ought to tell it. Hearsay testimony is not worth any more in the popular ear than it is in the courts of the land. Direct evidence alone is unassailable and convincing. "I was sick and he cured me," is the doctor's best recommendation. "I was lost and he saved me," is the best credential Christ can receive.

When men and women all over the land begin to tell others the story of Jesus and his love and of his power to save—not from hearsay, but from actual experience—there will be a revival of religion, a re-empowering of the church, a revitalizing of spiritual forces that will sweep millions of souls into the Kingdom of God.

A man cannot tell an experience unless he has had one.

THE NEAR EAST RELIEF.

On Wednesday of last week we received the following night letter from Bishop James Cannon, Jr., sent from New York City: "Have just been in consultation with Near East Relief and National Golden Rule Committee, and feel led to urge strongly that you lend all possible co-operation through your columns to this last Golden Rule appeal in behalf of the orphaned children of the Near East. This will bring to a worthy consummation a history-making philanthropy and prepare the way, we hope, for possibly more important and far-reaching expressions of Christian brotherhood as, in the future, International Golden Rule Sunday is observed on behalf of equally destitute, needy, and under-privileged children in other portions of the world, including our own fields of China, Mexico, South America, Africa, and other areas. I do trust we can secure one hundred per cent observance throughout the South on Dec. 2."

The cause of these helpless orphans of the Near East has long been on the heart of Christendom, and the appeal in their behalf will, we are sure, again meet with the generous response that it has elicited in the past. The contribution to the life of the Near East that these rescued orphans will make will be worth infinitely more than the money that was spent in saving them from starvation and death.

THANKSGIVING PROCLAMATION.

"The season again approaches when it has been the custom for generations to set apart a day of Thanksgiving for the blessings which the Giver of all good and perfect gifts has bestowed upon us during the year. It is most becoming that we should do this, for the goodness and mercy of God which has followed us through the year deserve our grateful recognition and acknowledgment.

"Through His divine favor peace and tranquillity have reigned throughout the land. He has protected our country as a whole against pestilence and disaster, and has directed us in the way of national prosperity. Our fields have been abundantly productive; our industries have flourished; our commerce has increased; wages have been lucrative and contentment has followed the undisturbed pursuit of honest toil.

"As we have prospered in material things, so have we also grown and expanded in things spiritual. Through divine inspiration we have enlarged our charities and our missions; we have been imbued with high ideals which have operated for the benefit of the world and the promotion of the brotherhood of man through peace and good-will.

"Wherefore, I, Calvin Coolidge, President of the United States, do hereby set apart Thursday, the 29th day of November next, as a day of general thanksgiving and prayer, and I recommend that on that day the people shall cease from their daily work and in their homes and in their accustomed places of worship devoutly give thanks to the Almighty for the many and great blessings they have received, and seek His guidance that they may deserve a continuance of His favor.

"In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused to be affixed the great seal of the United States.

"Done at the city of Washington, this 23rd day of October, in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and twenty-eight, and of the independence of the United States, the one hundred and fifty-third.

"CALVIN COOLIDGE.

"By the President:

"FRANK B. KELLOGG,
"Secretary of State."

A PERSONAL WORD—FAREWELL.

As has been previously announced, my connection with the Advocate as editor will cease at the close of the session of the Louisiana Conference, and the editorial management will be placed in the capable hands of Dr. R. H. Harper.

I have spent ten of the best years of my life as editor of the Advocate. For me, these years have been busy, and oftentimes strenuous, ones; but, withal, they have been happy ones. I came to the Advocate in the closing months of the Great War, in the midst of a strain such as the world had never felt before. Then came the Armistice, with a resulting relaxation and reaction from the war strain that produced, if possible, an even more trying period of readjustment and rehabilitation. Throughout that trying period, I served my country, my church, and my God to the best of my ability in the responsible position in which I was placed.

Following the war period, the church entered upon one of the greatest eras of development and expansion in its history. The great Centenary Movement for Missions was enterprised; that was followed by the Christian Education Movement; that, in turn, was followed by the Special Effort in behalf of Superannuate Endowment. Along with it all, the regular activities of the church were carried forward. The New Orleans Christian Advocate gave itself unstintedly to the promotion of all these special causes, as well as to all the interests of the church.

The discussion concerning Unification is recent enough to be still in the minds of most of

JESUS WILL SAVE.

Rescue the perishing,
Care for the dying,
Snatch them in pity from sin and the grave:
Weep o'er the erring one,
Lift up the falleu,
Tell them of Jesus the mighty to save.
Rescue the perishing,
Care for the dying;
Jesus is merciful,
Jesus will save.

Though they are slighting him,
Still he is waiting,
Waiting the penitent child to receive:
Plead with them earnestly,
Plead with them gently:
He will forgive if they only believe.

Down in the human heart,
Crushed by the tempter,
Feelings lie buried that grace can restore:
Touched by a loving heart,
Wakened by kindness,
Chords that were broken will vibrate once more.

—Fannie J. Crosby.

WE WILL SWIM.

By Bruce S. Wright, D.D.

"The waters were to the ankles . . . the knees . . . the loins . . . waters to swim in."—From Ezekiel's vision.

Religion is only ankle deep to a multitude of people. We have all met the man who, with pompous and benevolent air, praises the church. We hear him, in his loud voice, declare: "The church is a great institution to the community. We are proud of our churches. No one would want to bring up his children in a community devoid of churches. Yes, we must support the church for the sake of our own good name." But his support ends with his boast. He never attends. He never prays. His religion is only ankle deep. Revival meetings are often criticized because there are so many people who hold up their hands, who come forward, who kneel at the altar or sign a card, and that is the end of it. And we are told how few of those who make a start under such circumstances hold out. But is that the fault of the method, or the people? It matters little how one begins the Christian life; it matters much how he holds out. To hold out he must wade more than ankle deep into the stream. Judas never waded very far into the stream of his religious life, it was only ankle deep with him.

There are others whose religious experience is illustrated by the man who waded out until he was knee-deep in the stream. They are a little more interested, a little more concerned, a little more consclentious. One does not get much out of life who wades into it only knee-deep. "Get into the game," one hears on every hand on the gymnasium floor or athletic field. Athletic contests are not won by those who get into the game only knee-deep. "How did you like the book?" one asks of another regarding a well-proved, generally-accepted good book. "Oh, I didn't care much for it." "You read it?" "No, I started it, read a chapter or two, didn't care for it, so stopped." One cannot get much out of a book who wades into it only knee-deep. In one's work he must get into it more than knee-deep, or it is neither a success nor a pleasure. The knee-deeper is a foregone failure in religion.

"More love to thee, O Christ,
More love to thee!"

must be the prayer of the one who discovers that he is satisfied with a knee-deep religious experience.

But now the waters become deeper. They are up to the waist. There are those who wade waist deep into the stream of life. How often do we say, "I want my child to have a better education than I had." That is, he wants his child to go waist deep, at least, into education. He had the three R's—Readin', Ritin', and Rithmetic—but he purposes that his child shall have more than that. Having more than that the chauces are that he will get more out of life. The great bulk of people do not go more than waist deep into citizenship. They keep the laws, pay their taxes; ordinarily they register and vote. We ought to be thankful that the majority of people are fairly good citizens. The same is true of the church. The great bulk of the membership of the church get waist deep into their religious life. They come to worship with a fair degree of regularity; they pay something into the Lord's treasury; they are interested, in a general sort of fashion, in the progress of Christ's kingdom in the world. But there is something better.

And so we see these men in Ezekiel's vision wading right out into the stream until the water is deep enough for swimming. They get the most out of life who get the deepest into life. One's returns are commensurate with his efforts and interest. If one wades into the stream of his work only ankle-deep, he will receive ankle-deep returns. If he continues in knee-deep, he will obtain ankle-deep returns. If he keeps on until he is waist deep the returns will measure waist deep. If he goes right on until the waters are deep enough for swimming, his experience and returns will be deep and full. I do not mean solely financial returns. They have their place, but their consideration is secondary. I mean that one does not get much satisfaction out of his work, whatever it is, unless he gets into it where the tide is deep and full. Religion was for years a prosaic, mechanical, all-but-useless thing to Wilfred Grenfell because he was in it only ankle deep. He confessed as much. Then one day in London, under the guidance of D. L. Moody, "the worker in souls," he saw the stream of spiritual experience and Christlike service flowing full and deep, and he waded out to the center of the current, and he has been swimming ever since. It is the same with all of us. Our religion means little or nothing until we plunge into its full tide. Saul Kane would never have found "The Everlasting Mercy" had he played about ankle-deep in the stream. Swimming it he was cleansed.

"E'er since by faith I saw the stream."

Let us swim!—The Advocate.

SAFETY SIGNALS.

By Rev. S. J. Davies.

All great truths, all movements for the things worthwhile, we are told, are projections of some great personality. Yesterday I was called upon to pay a tribute to the life and memory of a friend. We had known one another in the halcyon days of youth, and meeting again in after years were glad to renew a friendship of mutual regard. A quiet, reticent, modest man, the world at large knew but little of him. Kindliness and consideration for others, characterized by friendly favors to the needy, deeds of love and service, were the law of his living. The grief and intense sorrow at his passing on the part of those who comprised his immediate family were so intense that these moved other hearts to deepest sympathy. Only a friend, a husband, a father, a brother, only a man! Yet one of God's children, a son of light, an heir of immortality, had been borne to the far land where the everlasting summer sun of the Father's presence lights all things with glory unspeakable and splendor ineffable. There are harvest days on earth, seasons when the rich fruitage of field and orchard is gathered. My friend was ready for that larger garnering, that knows naught of autumnal days, nor springtime sowings. Of him it can be said in the words of an elder day: "He was a Christian and a gentleman—God rest his soul." His life was not a projection on the larger plans, but he lived honestly, uprightly, usefully where he found himself by God's grace in this world, and I feel sure his reward is with him.

* * *

Election day, Armistice day—these days have kept us all busy, working, planning, rejoicing, mourning. Well, I believe the world is still fairly safe for Democracy, and the South could not stay solid, for it was not sufficiently liquid to freeze in the molds of partisan politics. Yes, the South is still solid—on prohibition, and by God's grace, however we vote, let's stay together on that. Andrew Jackson, father, patron saint, grand sachem, and undisputed chieftain of the Democraitc party, threatened to hang Calhoun and his followers because they stood for nullification, and would have done so had these worthies not withdrawn from their position. This is only history. Morover, according to Noah Webster, who defines words for a goodly portion of English-speaking people, the primary principle of this old Southern Solid Democratic party is "a strict construction of the Constitution." See the International for yourself. And so after abont a half century of arguing, pleading, and praying, we put that noted Eighteenth Amendment in this great State paper, and nailed it down to stay there. An amendment generally carries the main question, according to good parliamentary law, and a good part of the old Solid South Democracy just riveted the thing in there once more. I am not losing any sleep, nor have I lost any religion as to the results of this election, for I still hold that this country, of which the South, old, new, or solid, is no small part, is still under the shield and guidance of Him who loveth and ruleth all things small and great.

THE HERITAGE OF THE PARSONAGE.

By Ralph N. J. Brown, Genesee Wesleyan Seminary, Lima, New York.

"One-third of the sons of preachers remain obscure; one-third achieve mediocre success; the other third rule the world." Astounding statement though that may be, it appeared in one of our foremost magazines, and was proven true. The names of Woodrow Wilson, Charles Evans Hughes, Tennyson, Emerson, and many others were given as examples of the success of ministers' sons, and as I read the names of those truly great men, the thought came to me that I, too, was a preacher's son. There are reasons to account for the failure of some ministers' sons; there is proof enough why some achieve mediocre success, and after all it is not very astounding that some of our number attain the heights of success. We have privileges and opportunities which are not enjoyed by any other group of people.

My earliest recollections are of a Methodist parsonage. It was not unlike many of the ministers' homes on the itinerant charges. Though it was big and cold, my parents were becoming accustomed to that sort of thing and were not greatly alarmed by the small matter of a cold house in which to live. At that time the faithful president of the Ladies' Aid Society was a supreme being in my small life. On her frail shoulders rested the responsibility of raising the pastor's salary, and if Mrs. Donation-Getter could not raise the money, our clothes and shoes were a dream.

The Advantage of Poverty.

Some one has said that poverty is an advantage to the young man starting out in life. It is not by chance or accident that the minister's son gets such a good start on that point; it is from necessity, and he has no choice about it. From the first, he knows that "flowery beds of ease" are not for him, and that he will have to work for all that he ever receives. Such a thing as an inheritance is never thought of, and no one in the youuger generation of the preacher's family is laboring under the delusion that some one will make life's tasks easy for him.

If the minister's son ever has to make frequent changes in later years, he gets his experience in his youth. Many ministers have the moviug game down to a science. They know in just which corner of a box to put the sixth volume of the encyclopedia, and how every chair rested in the moving van when the last move was made. Yet this change of surroundings is a distinct advantage to the ones who start their lives in the parsonage. Going from community to community, the minister's son has the opportunity to make new friendships and acqualutances. In later year he has not only friends in one town, but friends in many towns, and he has a breadth of knowledge of the different conditions in which many groups of people live.

As long as I can remember, the official board has been a topic of discussion in our family circle. Mr. Reactionary has a prominent seat in every church board, and is always very willing to throw his pail of cold water on any progressivo movement. All too well do we know Mr. and Mrs. Fizzle-Out, who become greatly enthused with each new minister. Soon their ardor dies; the new pastor has the audacity to say something in the sermon which offends Mrs. Fizzle-Out, and old First Church will be without Ezra Fizzle-Out's weekly contribution until the next new preacher arrives.

Ripples on the Surface.

Along about the middle of the first year in the new pastorate, Mr. Big-Wow will arrive from some other church and community. He tentatively seems to assume the leadership of the entire church, and particularly shines in the Sunday school department. Then one bright and fair Sunday morning the minister mentions something that strikes Mr. Big-Wow right between the eyes, and in less than a week later he has played the fade-out act and is heard from nevermore. Yet the church goes on just the same, for Mr. and Mrs. Steady, Mr. aud Mrs. Stand-By, and good old Mr. Big-Payer occupy their pews Sunday after Sunday, and are rarely moved by the little ripples caused by the Fizzle-Outs and Big-Wows.

Sometimes I wonder if some of the laymen ever happened to think that the younger generation in the parsonage might be very much like their own children. Their children may go anywhere and do about as they please, and no criticism is cast upon them. Let the minister's children do likewise, and an eruption occurs immediately. Mrs. Busybody will remark, "Our pastor's family are the most worldly people I ever did see!" However, there is some gain in being brought up in this atmosphere. It would seem that any preacher's son would be so accustomed to criticism that he could face the world without ever losing a wink of sleep worrying about what other people think of him.

To no other group in the world come some of the experiences enjoyed in the pastor's family. Weddings are a never-ending source of pleasure to some of the family, but not often to the preacher's son. It is almost impossible to guess the number of people who have had the happy thought that it would be fine to have the minister's son be ring-bearer at the ceremony. Years ago, when I came into the house and saw my white suit laid out ready to be put on, I well knew that a wedding was to be solemnized in the near future. Then for a few years I enjoyed the utmost freedom from serving in any capacity in the marriage service, but now the trouble has begun again since I am eligible as a witness or have to serve as best man. There should be no reason why any preacher's son should stumble over those familiar words, "With this ring I thee wed, and with all my worldly goods I thee endow;" yet only recently one of my school chums asked me if I had ever seen any one married!

Training for Life.

The minister's son ought to he a good salesman. Almost every person selling something in the community comes first to the parsonage. As the son of the minister enters the home it is not unusual for him to hear the smooth, suave tones of the salesman repeating that age-old sentence, "Well, doctor, if you feel you cannot purchase this wonderful set of books, would you kindly give us your endorsement of them?"

And thus the preacher's son goes out into the world with a heritage unlike that possessed by any other young man. His experiences have been instructive and beneficial, and he goes into the world to give it his best. The power of faith has been emhpasized in the atmosphere of the home, and assurances of great things are taught to those who would believe. The preacher's son is brought face to face with the fact that the Lord is on the side of the one who steadfastly believes and goes steadily on. Of the sons of preachers who have reached the heights of success and have become a part of the great group of Who's Who, few have neglected to give credit to their early training and environment.—Methodist Episcopal Press.

REPORT OF NAVY CHAPLAIN

U. S. S. Raleigh,
Cartagena, Spain, Oct. 24, 1928.

Rev. W. H. Lewis, Brookhaven, Miss.

Dear Brother Lewis: Again I shall miss the session of the Mississippi Conference with much regret. I shall not attempt to make a detailed report of my work during the year, but merely wish to assure you that I am endeavoring to be a good pastor to the five hundred young men who are attached to my ship.

This circuit of the sea requires quite a little travel, but fortunately not on horseback with saddle-bags. Since my last letter to you I have traveled over thirty thousand miles on the sea. I have held divine services on board my ship in the harbors of the following places: Hampton Roads, Va.; Baltimore, Md.; Yorktown, Va.; Charleston, S. C.; New York; Boston; Corinto, Nicaragua; Guantanamo, Cuba; Kingston, Jamaica; Gonaives, Haiti; Balboa, Canal Zone; San Diego, Calif.; Honolulu; Newport, R. I.; Funchal, Island of Madeira; Gibraltar; Cartagena, Spain. In most of these places I have held services in churches by request of the various pastors. If you will do me the honor of accepting my circuit as a part of your district, I think the Brookhaven District will easily lead the Conference in the amount of territory covered.

I am glad to report that the young men of the navy are always responsive to the story of the Christ. The beauty of his teachings, the consistency of his life, his superb character, and his princely manhood appeal to men more than anything I know.

May I be remembered to my brethren of the Conference.

With very best regards,
Your brother,

W. N. THOMAS,
Chaplain, U. S. Navy.

WEEK OF PRAYER FOR THE CHURCHES, SUNDAY, JAN. 6, TO SATURDAY, JAN. 12, 1929.

To the Churches of Christ in America:

The Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America joins with the World's Evangelical Alliance of Great Britain in inviting all the churches and followers of Christ to unite in a "Universal Week of Prayer" at the opening of the new year. The devotional program here presented will not only be circulated through all English-speaking lands, but will be translated for use in over fifty countries.

Our scientists are telling us that however great may be the undiscovered forces of nature, the undiscovered power of prayer is even greater. They unite with our Christian poet in saying, "More things are wrought in prayer than this world dreams of," and that "the whole round world is every way bound by gold chains about the feet of God." If these things are so, it is evident that the most important thing in the life of the church is that she should give herself to prayer.

The prophets were surely right when they said the people perish for lack of vision. Israel lost its sense of proportion, secondary things were exalted to a place of primary importance, and God gave them meagerness of soul. Is this not true to-day? "While thy servant was busy here and there" might he said of many Christians, who, while maintaining all the outward activities of a Christian life, have nevertheless lost their vision, lost their first love, and consequently lost the divine fire and power of service. Meagerness of soul shows itself in an activity that crowds out the quiet hour, and in a service that loses the controlling sense of the abiding presence of Christ.

The mountaintops were ever to our Lord the place of vision. In the solitude of the mountains of Galilee he met the Father. He lived there "alone and apart" in that deep communion from which sprang his life of sacrificial service. He never despaired of humanity, because his face was ever toward his Father. His vision of the coming kingdom corrected the influence of a material and critical world.

Nineteen hundred and twenty-nine may begin on the Mount for us if we can at times and seasons withdraw from our activities and come apart to meet with God. The year will open with a new vision if we give God time and wait for the unveiling of his presence in our lives. But our vision is conditioned by our obedience to the heavenly vision; let us therefore wait in "stillness of soul" before him.

Christ came down from the Mount to meet unbelief and misunderstanding, to face bigoted opposition, and the hatred of evil men. He came into the valley clothed with power. "They that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength; they shall mount up with wings as eagles; they shall run, and not be weary; they shall walk, and not faint."

We are called this New Year to learn afresh the source of power for service. Jesus said: "Ye shall receive power . . . tarry ye." The Holy Spirit is waiting, if we will have it so, to equip us for all the year may hold for us of life and service. His power is adequate to every need we face, and the challenge of the hour is for a Pentecostal blessing that will open the way to a world-wide spiritual revival. We ask you, therefore, to join with us in this great Universal Week of Prayer for a blessing upon ourselves and upon the whole world.

Faithfully and fraternally yours,
WILLIAM HORACE DAY, Chairman;
CHARLES L. GOODELL,
Executive Secretary.
Commission on Evangelism and Life Service.

THY MARKS, O SON OF GOD.

How beauteous were the marks divine,
That in thy meekness used to shine,
That lit thy lonely pathway, trod
In wondrous love, O Son of God!

O who like thee, so mild, so bright,
Thou Son of man, thou Light of Light?
O who like thee did ever go
So patient, through a world of woe?

O who like thee so humbly bore
The scorn, the scoffs of men, before?
So meek, so lowly, yet so high,
So glorious in humility?

—Arthur Cleveland Coxe.

TO THE PASTORS OF MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Dear Brethren: Some of you failed to send me a list of your missionary committee, and I will appreciate it if you will do this yet. If you were changed to another appointment at the Conference, I will appreciate your giving me the names and post office addresses of the members, indicating the chairman and the Voice agent. Please do this, as the pastor succeeding you will in all probability not have this information at hand, and it is very important that I have this. I will appreciate it and also thank you to comply with this request. Please remember to send the names of the entire committee, with their post office address.

I would be glad to have you mail this list to me at 501 Doctors' Building, Nashville, Tenn.; however, if you forget this address, mail it to Meridian and it will be forwarded to me here.

Thanking you for this and assuring you of my appreciation of your co-operation for the last year, and anticipating with a great deal of pleasure your co-operation for the coming year, I am,

Yours very sincerely,

W. D. HAWKINS, Missionary Secretary.

TO THE FRIENDS OF THE MISSISSIPPI ORPHANAGE OF MISSISSIPPI.

During Thanksgiving week, free cars will be run for all the orphanages of the city of Jackson on practically all of the railroads of the State.

We are hoping this notice, which has already been published in detail in our little paper, "Our Home," which will have reached 5,000 of our friends before this notice comes from the press, will stimulate interest in these cars.

We would earnestly request our pastors and friends throughout the State to make announcement of these cars and request some one in their charges to represent our Orphanges in the proper shipment of donations to this Home.

Any and everything that goes to maintain a home fits in nicely in an orphanage. We would be glad if every box or package intended for us would be distinctly marked, "Methodist Orphanage," giving the name of some party to whom a receipt may be sent in case of necessity. Depot agents, having received instructions from the railroad, will be glad to give you detailed information as requested.

Asking co-operation in making these cars a great success and help for the Orphanage, I am,

Yours sincerely,

B. F. LEWIS, Superintendent.

AN APPRECIATION.

This being the end of the present official service of Dr. J. L. Decell as presiding elder of the Jackson District of the Mississippi Conference, this fourth quarterly conference of the Madison-Pocahontas charge does hereby express its keen regret at the termination of our official church relations.

We state earnestly and sincerely that he has rendered in the past four years distinguished service to the church along all lines.

Under his wise and brilliant leadership all of the work of the church in this district has prospered and made substantial progress.

He has those qualities of mind and heart that make men love him and trust him. He will worthily wear any honor that the church may bestow upon him—even though it may be the highest in her gift.

Therefore, we express to him our confidence, our admiration, our respect and our love, and give him our abiding good wishes.

Signed: James Simrall, J. N. Coker, W. H. Lane, S. D. Persell, H. C. Montgomery, J. A. Bennett, C. L. Ray, A. G. Bennett, I. R. Clark.

WAS IT RELIGIOUS PREJUDICE?

By Rev. Rolfe Hunt, D.D.

We should get away from the passions and misrepresentations of the recent unusual political campaign and return to sober reason.

We lose rather than gain, however, if in passing we fail to get clearer conceptions of truth.

Much has been said about the "religious prejudice, bigotry and intolerance" of Protestant people. The intention of this was to elect a candidate, but it had a holy air.

As for myself and multitudes of my acquaintances, I know that other considerations outweighed church affiliation. But as to those who opposed a candidate for the presidency because he was a Roman Catholic, were they actuated by religious prejudice and religious intolerance? So far as my knowledge extends, people were less concerned about what church a candidate belonged to than they were about divided allegiance. Men are not opposed for office merely because they are Methodists or Baptists, or Presbyterians or Unitarians or Quakers, or not because of religious creeds of Catholics; but many feared the allegiance with a foreign hierarchy with autocratic, un-American ideals of political rather than religious nature.

This fear of divided allegiance was naturally aggravated by the poltical history and avowed ideals and aspirations of the Roman Catholic Church, and by its activities and methods in the recent campaign. Our people know that Roman Catholicism claims to be the only church in the world and has no tolerance whatever for other religious bodies. A man on the streets who struts as the only man in existence cannot expect the same regard as one who recognizes the manhood of his neighbors. Extreme bigotry reacts unfavorably upon the most moderate and enlightened minds. Our people also knew that while Protestants were being denounced for opposing a candidate, Catholics themselves, in high official position, were declaring in official periodicals that Catholics were "feverishly" praying for the success of Governor Smith; that Protestantism would go down with its sinking straw; that one morning, perhaps in the early months of Smith's presidency, Catholics would awake to find themselves supreme in America, etc., etc. There was natural reaction against the unfairness in the effort to make it appear that Protestants were more intolerant than Catholics and that Protestants were active while Catholics were taking no part in politics.

My observations lead me to the conclusion that Roman Catholic officials are mainly responsible, by their own religious pretensions extraordinary and by their methods of procedure, for most of what religious intolerance that exists against their church, and that most of the feeling against a Catholic in the White House grows out of the fear of the Catholic's divided allegiance, an allegiance to an extraordinary foreign hierarchy in Rome, the seat of popes and Mussolinis.

We need to keep our thinking straight, and it is to be hoped that Catholicism may become as reasonable as some of its excellent individuals.

Brandon, Miss.

THE PROBLEMS OF LIFE.

How many and utterly perplexing are the problems that confront us in this strange and wonderful human life of ours! Any man who thinks about life at all will find himself compelled to ask a hundred questions about it for which he cannot possibly find an answer. And as we grow in years, and presumably in wisdom, too, our unanswered questionings seem to increase in number rather than diminish. And sometimes the complaint is forced from us that it is all too puzzling and unintelligible and difficult.

And yet what a poor life it would be if you and I could understand it all and search to the bottom of every question that could be asked about it! That we can not is surely matter for satisfaction rather than complaint, for the life that could have complete elucidation in the light of our poor human understanding and brief experience would be a very poor and trivial thing indeed. That life has problems, strange and puzzling and persistent and beyond the limit of our highest skill, tells us of its greatness and glory more than of anything else.

For we must hold to it with all the faith that is in us that even the most perplexing problem that life has to offer is possible of solution and may be reduced to understandable and rational terms. Life isn't a muddle, a throwing together of strange and unintelligible things, of tragedy and comedy and pathos, out of which no final and fundamental meaning can be made. And that in the midst of all our inability to understand its perplexities or explain away its mysteries we inevitably and irresistibly keep trying so to do gives us partly our proof that explanation and a clearing up of all that is dark and difficult and distressing lies somewhere.

And does not some of the ground of our assurance in immortality lies just here? I have a thousand question that I would ask about life, and I keep on asking them as irresistibly as I keep on breathing, even though no answers come, and I cannot believe that I shall be mocked in my questionings forever. Would it not seem indeed a reasonable thing that I might pass from this one into another life where there would be time and scope and better light to enable me to find my way through the problems of life that have so puzzled me here whether I would or would not? And what a prospect that opens up for any future life to which I might come, that I might spend its uncounted years entering into the meaning and mystery of life and coming to know the fullness of the thought and purpose of God! Surely that would be life indeed, and would fully justify the granting to me of that strange and troublesome and wonderful gift of wanting to know.—New Outlook.

HAST THOU WANDERED? RETURN.

O child, hast thou fallen? Arise, and go, with childlike trust, to thy Father, like the prodigal son, and humbly say, with heart and mouth, "Father, I have sinned against heaven, and before thee, and am no more worthy to be called thy son; make me as one of thy hired servants." And what will thy heavenly Father do but what that father did in the parable? Assuredly he will not change his essence, which is love, for the sake of thy misdoings. Is it not his own precious treasure, and a small thing with him to forgive thee thy trespasses, if thou believe in him? For his hand is not shortened that it cannot make thee fit to be saved.—John Tauler.

PRAISE TO GOD.

From all that dwell below the skies,
Let the Creator's praise arise;
Let the Redeemer's name be sung,
Through every land, by every tongue

Eternal are thy mercies, Lord;
Eternal truth attends thy word:
Thy praise shall sound from shore to shore,
Till suns shall rise and set no more.

—Isaac Watts.

PUT ON THY STRENGTH—AND BEAUTY.

By Rev. John A. MacSporran.

"As an eagle stirreth up her nest, fluttereth over her young, spreadeth abroad her wings, taketh them, beareth them on her wings" . . . —Deuteronomy 32:11.

Let us imagine that we see a precipice with a ledge jutting out over it, some hundreds of feet up above the plain beneath. On the ledge is an eagle's nest with two young eaglets in it. For some weeks the brood is watched and tended with great care and love in their high nest in peace and without a dream of danger. They sleep and are fed, and then sleep on till they are hungry again. The time draws near, however, when the young eaglets should begin to use their wings, and this they stubbornly refuse to do. The parent birds flutter high over their nest and try to coax them out and up into the sky. But their offspring refuse. They come to the edge of the nest, and look over and survey the world beneath, and refuse to try. Then one day the resolution of the mother bird is taken. She soars high into the heavens and emits a piercing cry, swoops down upon the nest and strikes it with apparent fierceness and anger with her wings. The twigs and the feathers are sent flying, and the young eaglets are sprawling and screaming in the air. Then she flies beside them, and she flies under them, and she makes them do their best. When they are too exhausted to fly she will swoop underneath, and lift them up on her broad back, and rest them and comfort them, and then throw them off again. This is repeated time and again until the eaglets know they have wings, and what their wings are for, and they are at home in the heavens.

That is what we need, to put on our strength. That is what God gives it to us for. That is what he is seeking for every one of us.

Most of us have been in the nest too long. We are just nestlings. Don't you know what a comfortable, cozy nest you can have in your home or in your school or in your church? It seems to me that America, with our prosperity in these days, has gone in for the mass production of feathers, so there will be an ample abundance for every one to feather his nest. We are just supplying down and all these upholstered pieces, and making it so soft and so cozy that we are all remaining in the nest, while really we are not meant to make that our home. The religion of the Lord Jesus Christ is a high adventure. It is not for nestlings. It is for those who by the power of God and the Spirit of God are prepared to take their plunge at the voice of God, knowing that he is with them, and calls to them, and comforts them, and in their exhaustion swoops under them, and underneath them are the everlasting wings. That is what we want, strength to rise with our load, and soar into the heavens, and live above all the littlenesses and jealousies and meannesses and the trivial ambitions of the groundlings.

There is a wonderful little poem by a Canadian poet. Maggie was an unattractive girl, with a wide mouth, and warts. Until you discover the secret of her real beauty, her inner beauty, she is pitiful, and then the poet cries out in his last line: "O, if God had only made her inside out!"

But I think really, my friends, that our disappointment is greater when we find only the beautiful exterior, everything so perfect on the outside, and we then cry: "O, if God had only made her outside in!"

That is the thing I am speaking for, for that is the only thing that brings beauty, to put on the beautiful garments of Christian sympathy and understanding. There is nothing so distinguished, so charming, so irresistible in its appeal as sheer, old-fashioned, real Christian goodness. When it is the real thing, there is nothing so appealing in the world as just being good, having sympathy, and having a sense of humor.

I attended a luncheon in New York a while ago, and sat near the guest of honor, Charles Augustus Lindbergh. He is the best dressed young man in the world to-day. He is wearing a mantle or coat of many colors that the whole world has woven out of their affection and admiration and joy, and has put on him. There were thousands of us there, and thousands more outside trying to get a glimpse of him. I was looking at the garment he was wearing, a garment in which there were woven modesty, and humility, and quiet dignity, and self-reliance. It was most appealing. It was something that happened almost as a miracle.

I saw that that garment of his certainly had a history. It was not the gift of a doting father who made his millions and could afford to buy the best. It was not the inheritance of a proud social position carefully built up through generations of privilege. It was not the lucky reward of genius or fortune. That coat of honor was homespun. That boy was loved and cared for and given the best advantage his parents could afford. But he was not forced into a conventional mold. He wasn't petted and coddled. He wasn't infected with the deadly virus of a false ambition. He wasn't coaxed and bribed into becoming a popular play-boy. He was given the priceless advantages of a Spartan training, and was encouraged to be himself at his best.

Be yourselves! Give Christ a chance in your life to develop your own spirit, your own taste, your own loyalty, your own differentiation! There is no routine, there is no standard way of doing it. Listen to God's voice! Awake, put on your strength, put on your beautiful garments, so that you shall appear at your best in honor of your Saviour and Lord!—Record of Christian Work.

SAVING SOULS.

In other days we have heard it said that justification by faith was the article of a standing or failing church. The experience is, but the mere statement of a doctrine or its proclamation in preaching even sincerely fervent may not be.

Doctrines and even experiences do not necessarily maintain the church. It is the impartation of the experience that extends the kingdom. Experiences will wane and doctrines will be forgotten when they are not continually revitalized in teaching and sharing with others.

We have little or no doctrinal preaching to-day, and seldom do we hear any statement of religious experience or its exposition in preaching.

One might think listening to the average sermon that he was at a book club, a public forum or discussion group. Sermons, addresses, lectures and talks without number may be heard in every town and city, but witnesses to sins forgiven by the people and calls to repentance by the preachers are not frequently heard.

The meager increase in church membership in all denominations with some communions reporting a decrease is an occasion of alarm.

Elegant modern church houses with many attractive features in their services and splendid organizations to carry forward an institutional program are in all towns and cities, but the prophet's call to repentance and the heralding of the good tidings of salvation are not heard.

Saving souls is the old way in which men once spoke. It is not euphemistic to some church folk, but it is the power of God unto salvation of men and the joy of angels.

We should regret to think our ministry knows not the joy or has lost the passion of calling men to repentance. If the fault be with the ministry, let every one fall on his knees in penitent prayer, seeking pardon and the restoration of the joy of salvation.

We believe there is serious fault in the church. When strong preaching calling men and women to repentance comes from the pulpit, the Holy Spirit makes no discrimination between those who hear, he carries the message to every heart. If men and women in the church resist his convictions and quench the Holy Spirit, the preacher's efforts are in vain.

There is very serious fault here. Our fathers in their soul-saving efforts were profoundly convinced "that judgment began at the house of God." Our Lord Jesus had that conviction and he began his ministry by preaching repentance and cleansing the temple.

Would we have a revival? Let us not begin by making a program, developing an organization, or calling outside help. All these are agencies that may be used, but all at their best may be broken reeds on which we lean and their noise but sounding brass and tinkling cymbals.

Our first fault is an unwillingness to take time to prepare ourselves for soul-saving. We have conferences and schools of instruction and tell others how to interview the individual and tell him he must be "sold on religion" if he would "sell religion" to others.

Saving souls is not a matter of salesmanship. It does not partake of that method or spirit. Modest souls with stammering tongues imperfectly speaking have often been Christ's most effectual witnesses. John Wesley protested to his mother against the use of men lacking in scholastic training and unordained as preachers. Her reply was, "they have saved souls." What joys have come to uneducated Salvation Army workers in saving souls!

The organizations of modern times have been shackles and our many artificialities have paralyzed speech. God's amazing grace is best articulated and exemplified when the redeemed singing joyously exclaims, "He saved a wretch like me."

Religion has been made easy by saying to those without, "Come and join the church." When we said that, we weakened our appeal and lowered the standard of Christian living and service.

We must start all over again. We must begin by talking to those within the church as well as those without about their sins, the Holy Spirit's conviction, repentance, confession of sin, seeking forgiveness, finding God and the witness of the Holy Spirit.

Just what all these blessed states of grace and steps in the way of salvation from sin mean, one is tempted to say perhaps all ministers do not know. May God forgive us in our ignorance and sin as blind leaders of the blind.

Redeemed with the precious blood of the Lamb our salvation is at great cost. Effectual skill in tenderness of love saving souls is at no less cost.

The signs of an apostle are in this sacrificial service, and the seal of its power is in saving sinners from the error of their ways.—Editorial in St. Louis Christian Advocate.

TO PRAY, YES AND TO WATCH.

When you say, "Lead us not into temptation," you must in good earnest mean to avoid in your daily conduct those temptations which you have already suffered from. When you say, "Deliver us from evil," you must mean to struggle against that evil in your hearts, which you are conscious of, and which you pray to be forgiven. To watch and pray are surely in our power, and by these means we are certain of getting strength. You feel your weakness; you fear to be overcome by temptation: then keep out of the way of it. This is watching. Avoid society which is likely to mislead you; flee from the very shadow of evil; you cannot be too careful; better be a little too strict than a little too easy—it is the safer side. Abstain from reading books which are dangerous to you. Turn from bad thoughts when they arise.—J. H. Newman.

HELP ME TO BELIEVE.

O my God, my Father! hear,
And help me to believe;
Weak and weary I draw near;
Thy child, O God, receive.
I so oft have gone astray;
To the perfect Guide I flee;
Thou wilt turn me not away,
Thy love is pledged to me.
—Hymns of the Spirit.

ECHO.

You always know what an echo will do;
Whatever you say, it sends back to you.
If you speak gently with voice low and sweet,
The echo your words and tone will repeat.
If your words are cross, and your voice is shrill,
The answering voice sounds crosser still.
Send a pleasant call with might and main,
You will hear a happy shout again.
When we are happy and cheery and bright,
The world around us is sure to go right.
We must be careful of voice and of word,
For they come back, as life's echo is heard.

"GOD IS EVERYWHERE."

Bobby came through the living-room where mother was sewing buttons on little sister's shoes.

"Mother, please come upstairs with me to get my marbles," he said.

Mother looked up in surprise as she answered, "Why, Bobby! Why do you want mother to go with you? They are in your box by the door—just where you left them."

"But, mother"—and Bobby looked in the fire and seemed reluctant to finish his sentence—"it's dark upstairs, mother."

"Yes, but you can reach the button, son; and, besides, you know where to find the marbles without even a light, don't you?" asked mother.

Bobby did not answer for a moment; he continued to look into the fire and his foot moved restlessly back and forth on the rug. Mother held her needle closer to the light and slipped the thread through; then as she reached for another button, she looked across at Bobby. "Well, little son?" she interrogated gently; but Bobby did not see the tenderness in her eyes.

"I'm afraid, mother! I'm afraid of the big dark!" came Bobby's answer. It was out at last, and his face flushed a little as he faced her.

"Then mother will go with you," she said quietly; and, taking his hand, she led him up the steps. As they reached the nursery door she put out her hand to press the electric button, but Bobby cried out, "Here they are; I can get them without the light," and he stooped over the box where his playthings were kept.

"There is nothing to hurt my little boy," replied mother. "There is nothing to be afraid of. Are you afraid now, Bobby?"

Bobby pressed her hand lovingly as he answered, "No, mother; I'm not afraid when you are here," and his face brightened and he jingled his marbles up and down in the bag.

The next day was Sunday—a warm, sunshiny Sunday morning. The birds were singing happily when Bobby waked up, and when, a little later, he set out for Sunday school, he felt as happy as the little birds. He kissed mother good-by and waved to baby sister; then he slipped his hand in daddy's and they started off.

There were many little boys and girls at Sunday school, and they sat in a row, on chairs made just for little boys and girls. After they had sung the Sunshine Song and dropped their pennies into the box to send across the sea to the little children who did not know about Jesus, it was time to say catechism. Miss Mary opened the catechism and asked, "Where is God?" Then she pointed to the line in their own catechism and taught them to say, "God is everywhere."

That was a short and easy one to remember; and soon she began to tell them the lesson story. But Bobby was not listening. He sat very still; his little pink catechism held fast in his sunburned hands, and his eyes looking far away.

"God is everywhere—God is everywhere." The sentence was saying itself over and over in his mind. "I just wonder if He is everywhere," he thought. "I'd like to know for sure. Maybe He was upstairs all the time and I didn't know it. God is everywhere."

That night mother missed Bobby. She looked in the dining-room and the hall and in the living-room, and when she did not find him she began to call, "Bobby, Bobby!"

"Yes, mother," came Bobby's voice from upstairs; and, as she went up, he came to the nursery door to meet her.

"Mother, God's up here," he said. "I'm not afraid in the big dark now. God is everywhere."—Western Christian Advocate.

THE STORY OF A DONKEY.

By Caroline Kellogg.

John had one habit. He would cry, long and loud, when things did not go to suit him. It distressed father and mother, for John was four years old, and they wanted him to be a man and not a cry-baby. They had talked to him many times, but still John cried.

One day something went wrong, and John began to cry. Aunt Helen went over to John's blackboard and picked up a piece of chalk. John saw her through his tears, but went on crying.

"Once," Aunt Helen began, "there was a boy whose name began with a J."

John heard her, but he only cried louder.

"Sometimes," Aunt Helen said, "he smiled; sometimes he looked cross; and some other times he opened his mouth wide and cried loud, like a baby, even though he was four years old."

John was not crying now. He was standing close beside Aunt Helen, watching her, but Aunt Helen didn't turn round to look at him. She just went on talking.

"This boy's name begins with a J, but it wasn't John. Oh, no! His name was Joey. Joey lived in the country, where they had horses, and cows, and pigs, and chickens, and almost everything except ponies; and Joey did wish he had a pony!

"One day a man came to Joey's home with something to sell. 'Oh, father!' Joey said, 'it is a pony.' It did look a bit like a pony, but it was not one. It was a dear little gray shaggy donkey, with long, floppy ears, and the kindest eyes you ever saw.

"'He's four years old,' the man said.

"'Does he cry?' Joey's father asked.

"The man looked puzzled, first at Joey's father, and then at Joey. 'Oh!' he said, and then he laughed. 'I don't think he knows how, but I guess he could learn.'

"'Oh, but we don't want him to learn, do we, Joey?' asked Joey's father, and Joey said, 'No, sir.'

"'Well,' the man said, 'if he doesn't ever hear anybody cry, maybe he won't learn how.'

"Joey's father bought the donkey, and Joey was so happy he felt as if he would never, never cry again.

"In a few days he and the donkey were very good friends. The donkey's name was Jerry. Every morning Jerry would come to the side door and wait for Joey to come out and ride him and play with him.

"But one morning something went wrong at breakfast, and Joey cried. He cried loud, and he didn't want to stop; but all at once he heard a noise. It was louder than his crying, and it was out of doors. Joey had to stop crying and listen

"'E-aw! E-aw-aw!' he heard.

"Joey's father got up from the breakfast table and looked out of the door.

"'Oh, dear; oh, dear!' he said. 'It's Jerry. Now he's learned to cry! A crying boy and a crying donkey—that's too much! We can't keep them both. We have to keep the boy, so we'll have to get rid of the donkey.'

"'Oh, father, father! please don't,' Joey begged, and he was starting to cry again, but remembered just in time. 'Truly father, I won't be a crying boy and then we can keep Jerry, can't we? And, father, maybe if I don't cry any more Jerry won't either.'

"Father promised to give them a trial, and Joey really did try not to be a cry-baby any more, and when you try real hard you can always do a thing, can't you, John?"

But John only answered, "Please tell me that again, Auntie."—Herald and Presbyter.

DAVID AND THE RABBIT.

By Steward Wykoff.

David went to the door when the door-bell rang.

"Do you want something?" asked a gruff, kindly-faced mountaineer. "I've brought it down especially for you."

David nodded.

He could scarcely restrain his curiosity as the mountaineer took from his wagon a small box. David looked through the strips nailed over the top. Inside was a very small rabbit, not more than three or four weeks old.

"And this is for me?" asked David excitedly.

"It's yours, if you want it. I caught it wild up in the mountains especially for you."

"Oh, thank you, thank you. I've always wanted a rabbit," said David, in great rapture.

David spent a day building a pen for the rabbit. He was very careful to see that he fixed it so that the little animal couldn't burrow out and make his escape. The rabbit grew fast, and in another month was attaining the full vigor of young rabbithood. David was very proud, feeding and watering it every day.

But when the rabbit was half grown, a change came over it. It ate less and less. The choice plantain and alfalfa leaves that David gave it were left untouched. Choice grains, bran, and bread it treated the same way. It never seemed to drink any more. It became thinner and thinner, more and more listless. And David grew sadder and sadder. If this kept up, the rabbit could not live much longer. David thought and thought. Finally, he made his decision.

"It must be," he said to himself. "It would be different if this were a tame rabbit. But to take a wild one, used to the freedom of the mountains and the fields, and expect it to be happy, and grow, and thrive in a pen four feet square is asking too much even of Mother Nature. How would I feel if I were shut up in a room, never allowed out, and gazed at nearly all the time? Guess I'd feel about the same way, and lose my appetite and grow thin."

These thoughts came to David just before he fell asleep one night. The next morning he arose, put the listless rabbit in a box, and went up to the edge of the mountain. There he set it free. He could not help thinking of a poem he had read not long before, one by James Whitcomb Riley, his favorite poet, called "Good-by, Jim, Take Care of Yourself." As the rabbit scampered joyously away among the trees, David whistled to it, and called, "Good-by, bunny! Take care o' yourself."—Our Dumb Animals.

WHAT MEANS IT?

What does following Christ mean? . . . Christ loved the truth and lived up to it. So must we. . . . He found his delight in duty. His meat and drink was to do his Father's will. So must we delight in duty, not as with a whip on our backs, but with a song in our hearts. He stooped toward all men with a hospitable heart. He knew the meaning of self-denial; he knew the meaning of sacrifice. So must we. . . . To follow Christ means sacrifice; without there is no fertility in the Christian life. We were both born and born again for that. He is King, and the whole end of our Christian faith is to follow him.—D. L. Ritchie.

HE IS NEAR!

We may not climb the heavenly steeps
To bring the Lord Christ down.
In vain we search the lowest deeps,
For him no depths can drown.

O Lord and Master of us all,
Whate'er our name or sign.
We own thy sway, we hear thy call,
We test our lives by thine!

Editorial

A PERSONAL WORD—FAREWELL.

the readers of the Advocate. I think the files of the Advocate will bear me out in the statement that I was fair in my editorial attitude toward both sides of the controversy.

At the beginning of the most trying political situation that has arisen during my lifetime, I announced an editorial policy difficult to carry out, but one that I am still fully persuaded was for the best interests of the church and the Kingdom of God.

It is not likely that there will be another ten years into which will be crowded so many difficult, perplexing, and trying situations as the past ten years have held. If it should be so, however, we have a great God, upon whom we may rely for strength and guidance.

During these ten years I have shirked no duty, and evaded no responsibility. As to mistakes, I have made plenty of them; but they were of the head and not of the heart. As true to my convictions as I knew how to be, I have never written one word that I thought would wound a friend or that would be personally offensive to an opponent. I have never thought of the Advocate as a personal or partisan organ, but always as an agency of the church for the establishment, extension, and maintenance of the Kingdom of God upon earth. Tender personal friendships have remained unbroken through irreconcilable differences of opinion.

I cannot find words to express my deep appreciation of the many kindnesses that have been shown me by the readers of the Advocate, both known and unknown. Many a hard place has been made easy by a kind word, and many a heartache has been cured by a gentle "God bless you." The aroma of these flowers along the way will last through the years.

And now I say, "Farewell." With the utmost cheerfulness and good will I turn the work over to other hands, with hearty commendation of the new editor and an earnest plea for the adequate support of the Advocate. In the words of Little Tim, "God bless us every one."

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

The new church at Gulfport, Miss., was opened with preaching services last Sunday, Rev. M. L. Burton doing the preaching.

Rev. Lester M. James writes that he has been given a most cordial welcome at Cockrum, Miss., and that he is delighted with the charge to which he has been assigned.

Rev. and Mrs. George H. Jones, of the Mississippi Conference, announce the birth of a son, George Hawkins, Jr., at Meridian, Miss., on Wednesday, Nov. 14. Blessings upon the young man!

The annual union Thanksgiving service of the Southern Methodist churches in New Orleans will be held at First Church at 11 o'clock on Thanksgiving morning. Dr. R. H. Harper will preach the sermon.

Rev. W. M. Sullivan, who was appointed financial agent of the Mississippi Methodist Orphans' Home at the recent session of the Mississippi Conference, requests us to say that his address for the present will be Box 51, Bay St. Louis, Miss.

Your Gift Will Purchase An Income---

Annuity Bonds of the Board of Missions produce an attractive income. The income is at the highest rate consistent with safe investment and, as a rule, higher than the average commercial investment of equal security.

Annuity Bonds of the Board of Missions not only provide to the purchaser an income that will not shrink, but they bless others in that they make it possible for the missionary to interpret to humanity the love and mercies of God in healing the sick, in clothing the naked, in feeding the hungry, and in teaching and preaching the Gospel to all people and to all nations.

Annuity Bonds of the Board of Missions will be issued in exchange for cash, bonds, stocks, lands, and partial cash payments made monthly.

---That Will Not Shrink

At the recent opening of the Texas Conference, Bishop Sam R. Hay announced on the opening day the appointment of the presiding elders for the new Conference year. So far as we know, this had never been done before in any Conference.

We notice in the list of appointments of the recent session of the North Alabama Conference that Dr. W. G. Henry was appointed presiding elder of the Huntsville District. Dr. Henry has been professor of Religious Education in Emory University.

Rev. H. C. Murphy writes from Eros, La.: "On Friday, Nov. 9, we buried Brother J. A. Hughes, one of our oldest members. He was in his eighty-fourth year. He died in the faith." The Advocate extends sincere sympathy to the sorrowing loved ones and friends.

Saturday, Nov. 17, was observed as the first "Home-coming Day" at Millsaps College. A large number of alumni, former students, and parents of students was in attendance, and an interesting program was enjoyed. In the afternoon, the Millsaps football team won a game from Louisiana Normal College.

From the Grant Parish Enterprise: "Brother Fomby filled his regular appointment, the last of the Conference year, on last Sunday, after which a business session was held. The presiding elder attended. Montgomery citizens are hoping that Brother Fomby will be 'sentenced' to another year with them."

Rev. R. G. A. Carlisle, who was granted the superannuate relation at the recent session of the North Mississippi Conference, will make his home at Ackerman, Miss. In writing to ask that the address of his Advocate be changed, he says: "I think we shall like our new home, but it seems odd not to be in the ministry."

The new preachers in Meridian, Miss., filled their appointments last Sunday, all of them receiving a cordial welcome, according to reports in the Meridian Star. The new preachers are: Rev. B. L. Sutherland, at Central; Rev. H. J. Moore, at Poplar Springs; Rev. C. P. Jones, at East End; Rev. G. G. Yeager, at Seventh Avenue.

At the recent session of the Texas Conference, Dr. S. H. Werlein, transferred from the Pacific Conference, was appointed associate preacher at Bering Memorial Church, Houston, Rev. W. H. Wallace, pastor. In a recent number of the Houston Post-Dispatch, Dr. Werlein has a thought-provoking article on the subject of Christian unity.

The Christ Episcopal Church, Vicksburg, Miss., celebrated its one hundredth anniversary recently. One of the beautiful features in connection with the event was the presentation of congratulatory resolutions adopted by the Crawford Street Methodist Church, suitably engrossed, and presented by a committee. What a beautiful thing it is for brethren to dwell together in peace!

The Advocate office had an appreciated call from Dr. and Mrs. George E. Scrimger on Monday of this week. Dr. Scrimger is a member of the Illinois Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and was recently placed on the superannuate roll. His wife was Miss Emma Tracy, daughter of Thomas G. Tracy, who was at one time superintendent of the mint at New Orleans, and was later connected with the Item. They were married in New Orleans more than forty years ago. They are visiting friends in the South.

At the first meeting of the board of stewards of the West Point Methodist Church, West Point, Miss., the following were elected officers for the new year: B. L. Smith, Jr., chairman; E. C. Cochran, vice chairman; L. J. Howard, secretary; A. B. Cottrell, treasurer. Sunday, Nov. 18, was set as the date to make the every-member canvass for pledges to the budget. District stewards of the Columbus District will meet at West Point at 1:30 p. m., Nov. 26. Rev. W. N. Duncan is the presiding elder. Some notable records were made during the past Sunday school year at West Point, Miss. Miss Ethel Hines has not missed being present and on time for sixteen years; Mrs. B. M. Howorth has a record of continuous attendance for fourteen years; Miss Lucile Belk, Miss Mable Blanche Howorth and Mr. Roy Snider had a record of twelve years.

CREATORS OF THE BEAUTIFUL.

By Bruce S. Wright, D.D.

"God hath made everything beautiful in his time."—Ecclesiastes 3:11.

We scarcely need to be told this. We already know that God has made everything beautiful. But we do need to be reminded of it. This is a beautiful world in which we live. The seasons are given us, lest we forget. June, among all the months, is most eloquent in her tetsimony that this is a beautiful world. The historic city of Winchester, Va., holds every year an Apple Blossom Festival. People come from all over the State to attend the festival. Why, every orchard has a blossom festival. Every trco in every orchard, every blossom on every trec chants the song: God hath made everything beautiful in his time. The clouds are beautiful. William Blake said of the feathery cirrus clouds: "They look as if the angels had gone to worship and left their plumes lying there." The world of created nature, however viewed, through the telescope or microscope or with the naked eye, leads one to exclaim, "How beautiful!"

But there is a higher beauty than the beauty of the world of nature; that is the bcauty of character. How beautiful upon the mountains are the feet of him that bringeth gool tidings. Here the prophet is speaking not of the mountain hut of the man who climbs tlic mountain. His feet are beautiful, his face is heautiful, hecause his character is beautiful, because he is the bearer of a beautiful message. The most beautiful thing in Genesis is not the Genesis picture of created nature, order emerging from chaos, mountains taking form, seas spread out before the enraptured eye, dawn and sun, night and moon and stars—all that is beautiful. But the most beautiful thing in Genesis is the portrait of a character, Abrabam, the friend of God. Is not this true of the entire Bible? If you were asked to epitomize the Bible how would you do it? Would you cali to mind some hit of created nature, Mount Sinai, or thc Sea of Galilee, or the Jordan River, or a Palestine lily, and say, "That is the Bible epitomized?" No, you would point to a character, the central, beautiful character, Christ, and you would say, "He is the Bible epitomized."

"He's the lily of the valley,
The bright and morning star."

Man, too, is a creator. But man can make things ugly as well as beautiful. Just as man can do much to mar or make more lovely the pristine beauties of nature, so he can do much to mar or make more beautiful human character and human life. Religion, one of the most beautiful things God has given us, is marred or made more beautiful by our attitude toward it. How ugly men have often made religion! We flave only to turn the pages of history to discover this. What persecutions, imprisonments, brandings, chains, burnings, scarlet letters, have been imposed in the name of religion! One of the most beautiful institutions in history is the Christian church. Yct man, by his actions, has sometimes made it ugly. Controversy, jealousy, strife, envy, backbiting, have no place in the Christian church, but now and then tbey come, and when they come they only succeed in making ugly the beautiful thing God has given us. Men look upon death as ugly. They surround it with uniovely thougbts and bestow upon it ugly names. But God, through Christ, says that death is not ugly, deatb is beautiful. He walked with God, and he was not, for God took him, is the Father's beautiful picture of death.

God, who has made everything beautiful in his time, asks us to look for the beautiful, to cultivate the beautiful. In one of the earlier chapters of "Les Miserahles," Victor Hugo tells how the good bishop was upbraided because fully one-fourth of his garden was given over to the cultivation of flowers "It would he much better," she said, "to grow lettuce rather than bouquets." "Ah, madame," replied the bishop, "the beautiful is as useful as it is beautiful." Have you ever gone through the poorer portions of a great city and noted the change wrought in the aspect of an entire neighborhood by a little garden of gay flowers, growing, it may be, hard by a broken fence; or by a single box of flowers in a window, or on a fire escape? The same thing is true in life. The atmosphere of a whole church has been changed by a single beautiful soul within that church. The tone of an entire shop has been made different hy the spirit of a noble man who worked there. To see Phillips Brooks walk along a Boston street made the day, if it was dark and gloomy, hright and sunny.

Making life beautiful ratber than ugly is what God asks us to do. Strive to give Beauty to ashes, the oil of joy for mourning, the garment of praise for the spirit of heaviness. Let us join hands with our Heavenly Father, in order that, working together with soil and souls, we may be creators of the beautiful!—Tbe Advocate.

SEASHORE DISTRICT—FIRST ROUND OF QUARTERLY CONFERENCES.

(The list of the first round of quarterly conferences of the Seashore District, Rev. J. L. Selis, presiding elder, was received after the pages containing the regular announcements were locked in the forms. We give here the first part of the list. —Editor.)

WHAT A MISSIONARY SEES IN AFRICA.

By the Rev. Walter B. Williams, Liberia, Africa.

Travelers, visitors to Africa's shores, especially along the Ivory and Gold Coasts, are struck by the sight of mighty walls of sacks of cocoa and coffee, and with the valuable woods from Africa's forests, waiting to be shipped abroad. Penetrating inland, they are struck with the game, mines of copper and diamonds, ivory tusks; the dense jungles and mighty rivers, lakes and waterfalls. And as likely as not, they get real thrills at the sight of some of Africa's magnificent cities.

The missionaries have eyes like other people and a like capacity of appreciation of all that natural Africa unfolds; hut everything fades into comparative insignificance when compared with the richness of Africa's human cargoes, the teeming masses of her children found everywhere one moves. These are the real thrillers to us who labor for the uphuilding of Christ's kingdom on this vast continent. They are a never-ceasing source of pleasure and happiness and surprise to us all the time, this rich supply of huoyant, youthful life to he found in each African village and township, at river sides and crossings.

Africa, the Princé Charming.

Africa, God's richest material gift to humanity! Africa, the Prince Charming among the nations of the earth for its natural wealth! But covering its surface like a mighty ocean is the mass of unregulated and ignorant young African life, Africa's supreme wealth of hrain and brawn and spirit, calling for special help and training. Here are her richest mines of cheerful hearts and precious souls, waiting for God's messengers to come down into the lowest depth, in the Christ's name of friendship and love, and hring out the priceless jewels for his diadem.

Here are vast rivers of spiritual life, misdirected and undirected, waiting for the teacher in the name of tbe Lord who shall train them to flow in the proper channels, enriching and beautifying throughout their whole course until they lose themselves in the great ocean of God's love and eternal being. Human waters, asparkle with the smiles of Africa's children, aflood with their tears; heaving with their sobs of pain and fear, surging with their youthful vigor, glooming with their passions and dimpling with their smiles; sounding out, not the Lorclei song whose strains drive men to madness and to death, but tbe Macedonian cry, "Come over and help us."

"Big Game."

Africa's "big game!" Not her elephants with their ivory tusks, nor her lions and leopards with magnificent skins, to bo shot with the foreigners' guns to adorn the strangers' houses, but her young life, to be hunted down, caught and brought into that captivity to Christ which is the truest liberty and the highest happiness of man. Hunted, not with foreigners' guns, hut with all the weapons of heart, soul, mind and strength at the command of teachers and pastors of sound education, loving heart, filled with the spirit of that greatest of all Teachers and Lovers of little children. No wonder the God-inspired man or woman dreams dreams at the sight of the rich resources to be worked on and the rich harvest to be reaped in Africa's young life, waiting, waiting.

Here it is, waiting like a mighty Niagara to be harnessed so that its migbty power shall not be wasted but shall be enabled to give back to Africa spiritual warmth and light and wealth. Here it is, a cataract, an ocean of latent friendliness and richest humor, ready to be out-poured upon the outside world.

This young life of Africa has vast possibilities if trained to become a powerful factor in the universe. One day when I was chatting with President King, then Secretary of the Treasury of Liberia, he said very earnestly to me: "Mr. Williams, we can always find some place to get financial help in time of need. But we cannot find good young men to fill offices in the government. If we change one man, the next may be more inefficient and less capable. We need, badly, men."

Africa, rich in exports! Copper, diamonds, ivory, mahogany and other valuable woods, cocoa and coffee, oils and fiber, Firestone rubber from Liberia—these are some of her commercial wealth. These are the lure and objective that make white men from every land willing to endure and toil, suffer and die, to attain them.

Who will come over to Africa, lured by the richer exports of Africa's children, Africa's youth, Africa's mighty army of the young, to he secured, not for personal gain nor for one nation's wealth, but for the Master's satisfaction of heart and for the kingdom of God? These people, a multitude, offering imperishable and invaluable exports of righteousness, helpfulness, love, purity, peace, joy and eternal life, its nerve-center, the rich crimson flow of its life-blood, is its young folk. No nation is rich without them. Here they are, and here they wait.

RESOLUTIONS.

Whereas, the soul and visible form of our beloved friend and co-worker, MISS CORA McCLELLAN, has passed from our earthly vision; be it resolved by the Woman's Missionary Society:

1. That this society has lost a noble worker, one who has given a long life of devoted service to her Lord and Master. Even in time of pain and weakness she was ever anxious and sympathetic in the work.

2. That we have lost a personal friend, who was always interested in our lives, and proved inspiring. She was true, loyal, cheerful, sincere and lovable. We shall always cherish her memory.

3. She had keen insight and interest in foreign missionary work. A niece of hers is doing work for the Master in far away Japan, and this added intimate sympathy and zeal to her endeavors.

4. We extend to her bereaved family our heartfelt sympathy in the loss of a dear sister and aunt, who meant so much to their lives.

We pray that the God she loved, and whom they worship, will comfort and bestow upon them that "peace that passeth understanding."

5. "When we asunder part,
It gives us inward pain;
But we shall still be joined in heart,
And hope to meet again."

6. A copy of these resolutions shall be sent to her sister, Mrs. Chas. Coltharp, of Tallulah; to the Madison Journal; to the New Orleans Christian Advocate, and spread upon the minutes of the Woman's Missionary Society. Signed:

MRS. J. R. LINTON,
MRS. H. W. RICKEY,
MRS. A. M. HEBERT.

IN MEMORIAM.

June 14, 1928, marked the passing of one of God's noblemen, JOSEPH TURNER TILMAN, who lived a consistent Christian life for 56 years.

He was the center of a large circle of devoted friends, and his influence widened far and embraced many who grieve at his passing, and whose tears mingle with those of his loving wife and children in this time of trial. Mr. Tilman was born in Lauderdale County, West Tennessee, Jan. 19, 1859. He was the youngest son of William Turner Tilman and Polly Ann Voss. He lost his mother in early childhood, and, with five brothers and two sisters, his father had a hard struggle, especially on account of the Civil War; but a dear old aunt assisted the father in the care of his motherless children.

He began his education at the age of seven years with a Webster's Blue Back Speller, his last school being McTyeire Institute, McKenzie, Tenn. Dr. E. B. Chappell was president. Mr. Tilman was the first convert in what is now old Melville church; at that time this church was one of the best on that large circuit. He was a regular attendant at this church for over 50 years, and secretary of the Sunday school for 20 years, and very active in all lines of the church work. He was the most loyal man to his pastor the writer of this sketch has ever known, and he would make any sacrifice rather than fail to meet the obligations he assumed for his beloved church or its pastor. He was happy in his Christian life, always jolly, and a glance at his face showed that he kept, "The Joy Bells Ringing in His Heart." He was married to Miss Laura Josephine Sims, daughter of Dr. John Sims, in 1884. Five sons and three daughters came to bless this Christian home, all of whom were dedicated to God in baptism in infancy.

The family lived on a rich Tennessee farm for a number of years, after which he engaged in the mercantile business. In 1907 he came with his family to Bossier City, La., where he at once took up his church work, along with his business, doing all he could in assisting the little struggling band of Methodists, organizing a Sunday school, and lending a helping hand wherever needed. In 1917 his beloved companion was taken from the home, and, as he expressed it, this came as the greatest trial of his life. At this time he was engaged in the furniture business in Shreveport, La., though still taking an active part in the work of his church in Bossier City, always planning and looking forward to the time when this little congregation would be comfortably housed in their own building. He lived to see this accomplished.

In 1920 Mr. Tilman was married to Miss Elizabeth Lamb Hill of Livingston, Texas, daughter of Judge James E. Hill, again making his home in Bossier City. In December, 1927, they moved out on the Mansfield-Shreveport highway, where they had a little bome, anticipating many more qulet, happy years, where they would be at home to their friends and loved ones. This home was dedicated to God in a beautiful service by their pastor, Rev. Don E. Dulaney, and his wife.

It was the great desire of this good man to have a part in the building of a modern brick church in Bossier City, where God's people could worship in joy and gladness. This desire was not fulfilled, for God had other plans for Mr. Tilman, but his hands have left the task for others to finish.

His parting message to his children was typical of the man. It was his hope that they would get as much joy and happiness out of the Christian life as he had.

If ever any one got real joy and happiness out of his service to God and his fellowman, Mr. Tilman did. He kept open house to his friends and was always ready to help in any good cause. The town and community have lost a good citizen, the church a loyal and devoted worker and the family a loving companion and counsellor, whose place it will be hard to fill. But, dear bereaved ones, he isn't lost to you. The beautiful life he lived should be an inspiration to each of you to follow in his footsteps. He has left you an heritage of which you can well be proud, he just "did the best he could" as he often expressed it.

His friends and business associates should strive to emulate the example he left them. This writer is proud to have had the honor of calling him friend. His words of encouragement at a time when courage was at a low ebb will ever be a cherished memory. Would there were language sufficient to express the sympathy felt for his heart-broken wife and his children, but only the God he delighted to serve can make the sunshine for you again. Then look up through your tears and know you will join him again some day on that Beautiful Shore. We know the world has been made better for his having lived, and "Some time when all life's lessons have been learned and sun and stars forever more have set, we shall see how all God's plans were right, and how what seemed reproof was love most true, and shall clearly know and understaud; God knew the best."

JUST ONE OF HIS FRIENDS.

MRS. MINNIE JONES MACK, wife of W. H. Mack, was born Aug. 28, 1867, and died on Sept. 22, 1928. She was a devout Christian. She joined the church when a child at Pine Grove, in St. Helena Parish, at which church she was laid to rest by the side of her loving husband, who preceded her 14 months. She was married to W. H. Mack on Feb. 3, 1890. Of this union there were 9 children—6 boys: U. A., Fulton, Floyd, and Paul, of Beaumont, Tex.; Herbert, of DeQuincy, La.; and Earl, of Pine Grove, La.; 3 daughters—Mrs. Clarence Graham, of Denham Springs, Tex.; Mrs. Laura Tuney, Jackson, La., and Mrs. Joyce Watts, of Bayou Barban, La. Sister Mack was a sweet-spirited Christian, a loving and dutiful companion to her husband, a self-sacrificing mother to her children and delightful neighbor with many friends. May God's abiding grace be the stay and comfort of the loved ones left behind. We miss her, but we know where to find her.

FROM EUNICE, LA.

Dear Dr. Carley: As I am near the end of my second year as pastor of the Eunice charge, I wish to state a few facts concerning same. There are within the bounds of this pastor's charge some as fine spirits as can be found anywhere in our great church. They have done wonderfully well in many ways, being alive to the interests of the kingdom. If their number could be multiplied ten or more, they would turn "these ends of the earth upside down" for God. But the burden is too great to be carried by the few who are under it, and the charge must have assistance to accomplish that which ought to be done. We are in a beautiful town, of some 4,000, which is building constantly; we have good church property, and are well located; but need a strong man, and financial help, or surrender the field to others, which is unthinkable. Our Missionary Society has raised this year upwards of $600, while our Sunday schools have raised nearly $300. The work is fairly well organized, and if we had means, might do some things worth while. Our Sunday schools rased $100 for the Orphanage. The people have been exceedingly kind to us, and we love them very much. Pray for our continued success.

ATTENTION, YOUNG PEOPLE!

Harvest Day Program.

The time for the Harvest Day program is the December meeting of the society. A special program has been prepared which may be ordered from Literature Headquarters, 706 Church St., Nashville, Tenn. It is hoped that this Harvest Day program will be used merely as a suggestive program and that the program committee of each society will arrange its own program. The Harvest Day meeting serves as a time when the fruits of the year are gathered in full and brought into the storehouse. All financial obligations that have been assumed for the year should be met. Reports of the five goals of the Jubilee year should be given and time allowed for the members to say just what the Jubilee year has meant to them. The members who have been received into the society this year should be honored in a special way and should receive their Jubilee membership cards at this meeting.—Y. P. Bulletin.

Jubilee Membership Cards.

Jubilee membership cards for young people who joined the Young People's Missionary Society during the Jubilee year, 1928, will be available the first of November. These cards should be presented to the Jubilee members at the December meeting of the society. The President of each society should send in an early order for as many cards as there are Jubilee members. The cards may be ordered free of charge from Literature Headquarters, 706 Church St., Nashville, Tenn.—Y. P. Bulletin.

YOUTH'S PLACE IN LIFE.

Bishop Leete, in the Western Christian Advocate, offers some very impressive facts in the following story of youth's place in life. The Bishop says:

"Over eighty per cent of all Christian people took their stand for the Christian life before they were eighteen years of age.

"As a youth you stand at the beginning of things. Yours is the great privilege of choice. Only choose well.

"Hannibal, at the age of nine, swore on the altar of sacrifice eternal enmity to Rome, and this determined his future career.

"Mendelssohn made his public appearance as a pianist when he was ten.

"Joan of Arc was but twelve years of age when her first vision came to her, and she heard the call summoning her to deliver France.

"Alexander the Great was a thirteen-year-old pupil when as a student under Aristotle he awoke to the most powerful ambitions.

"Spedding regards the most important year in Bacon's life to have been the fifteenth, when he began a new method of studying nature.

"The East Indian Company sent Warren Hastings out as a writer in their service when he was but seventeen years old.

"Sir William Blackstone began the study of law in his eighteenth year. In his farewell to the muse he salutes his chosen program thus:

"'Then welcome business, welcome strife,
Welcome the cares and thorns of life,
The visage wan, the purblind sight,
The toil by day, the lamp by night,
The tedious forms, the solemn prate,
The pert dispute, the dull debate,
The drowsy bench, the babbling hall,
For thee, fair Justice, welcome all.'

"At nineteen Dr. C. H. Spurgeon was called to New York Street Chapel, Southwark, and was in a very short time the most popular preacher in his day.

"Make much of the privileges of youth. The to-morrow has vistas of supreme delight or crags and rocks of dark and dismal despair.

"The happy future is dependent on the keeping of God's laws, in close fellowship with godly people, and in living an open-hearted, devoted Christian life."

ZONE 2, MINDEN DISTRICT.

The first meeting with the new leader, Mrs. A. E. Woodward, of Ringgold, in Zone No. 2, was held at the Methodist parsonage in Sibley, La., Wednesday, Oct. 31, 1928. The societies represented were Ringgold, Sibley, and Minden. About 30 members were present.

The meeting opened with song and a prayer offered by the leader. After this, Mrs. E. B. Gillon made a most inspirational and helpful talk on the subject of "Consecration." A vocal solo, "His Yoke is Easy," was rendered by Mrs. G. O. Thomas.

A round table discussion on "How to Enlist Women of our Church in the Missionary Work" was ably led by Mrs. Boyett, of Sibley. Mrs. Perritt, of Minden, made a splendid talk about "Our Jubilee Year." Impromptu talks were made by the Rev. L. I. McCain, of Minden, on the "Family Altar" and Rev. C. F. Sheppard, of Sibley, on "Sacrifices."

During the business session Mrs. C. J. Frye, of Ringgold, was elected secretary. It was agreed that a banner be purchased and given to the society with the largest percentage of members present at future zone meetings. The next zone meeting is to be held in Minden, Jan. 25, 1929.

The refreshments served at noon were brought by members of all the societies represented. The Methodist ladies of Sibley assisted their pastor's wife, Mrs. Sheppard, in serving hot coffee and chocolate with this lunch.

In the afternoon, a plea was made by the leader for more sacrificial giving during the week of prayer. Each member was urged to make a sacrificial gift to the Lord's work, to make a record of these gifts and discuss them at the next zone meeting.

The meeting was a great spiritual blessing to all. Many left with a realization that God's Spirit had filled their hearts with love to Him and with a new desire to work for the Master.

Mesdames D. L. Blake, of Minden, W. C. Talton, of Sibley, and R. W. Lawson, of Ringgold, were appointed to help prepare programs.

ZONE 4, ALEXANDRIA DISTRICT.

The Woman's Missionary Society of Oakdale was hostess to Glenmora, Elizabeth, and Hineston auxiliaries, zone 4, Alexandria District, for the third quarterly meeting, October 25.

The different auxiliaries comprising the zone were represented as follows: Glenmora, 16; Elizabeth, 11; Hineston, 4; Oakdale, 23; visitors, 41. Total, 58.

The morning session was opened with song, and Scripture lesson by Mrs. Terry, of Hineston, and prayer by Mrs. W. A. Poinboeuf, of Elizabeth.

The meeting was called to order by Mrs. T. E. Brown, of Oakdale, zone leader. She welcomed the visitors, and introduced the District Secretary, Mrs. Overton Grant, of Boyce, La. Mrs. Grant's talk was in keeping with the line of work and duties of our missionary officers and members. She appealed to the women to do their utmost to bring up all phases of the work in an effort to make this Jubilee year a banner year.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

Dr. Fitzgerald S. Parker sends us this message for the Young People of our Conference:

"As a member of the congregation of the Louisiana Avenue Methodist Church, under the pastorate of the Rev. Dr. Werlein, I acquired an appreciation of Christian work for young people that remains with the passing of many years.

"In the beginning of my ministry at the Carrollton Avenue Church, a Young People's Society was organized, which had much of the character of an Epworth League. Later I became the president of the Louisiana State Society of Christian Endeavor, and when, in 1890, the church organized the connectional Epworth League, I devoted such efforts as I could to the advancement of our church's Young People's Society.

"Having been in the connectional work of the Epworth League in Nashville for twenty-four years, I have had opportunities to watch the work of our young people grow to its present magnificent dimensions. Meanwhile, the work of the Sunday school has gone on in its direction to the achievement of a magnificent system and an inclusive program. Even when I came to Nashville from Louisiana, the Sunday School Department here consisted of an editor, and assistant editor, a Superintendent of Training and one stenographer. As it is now, I am unable just off-hand even to estimate how many editors, secretaries, superintendents of departments, heads of bureaus, stenographers and business men are kept under high pressure in preparing literature and curricular material and in promoting the movement. I do not know that we have anywhere anything like an equal evidence of God's blessing upon our church.

"It has been received under conditions on the part of the church of faith, vision, prayer and work. Under the same conditions there are yet things undreamed of for us."

Mrs. Ben F. McClure, Jr., District Elementary Superintendent of the Ruston District, writes: "I want to report the observance of Childhood and Youth Week in our church here in Ruston. I really feel that some good will come of the work done by the teachers and officers during this week. A larger per cent of homes was visited than heretofore, and we can see the difference in our department (Beginners) already. The officers of other departments report a similar feeling.

"On Sunday night following the visitation week a 'Stockholder's Meeting" of all interested in Sunday work was held at the regular service hour. Different officers were on the program and gave interesting talks as well as instructive talks concerning the Sunday school, carrying out the idea of the Sunday school as a 'Company' and reporting of stockholders, capital, dividends, etc.

"The forward step adopted as an outcome of this week is the plan for the organization of a Parent-Teacher organization. The leader of this work has not been definitely decided upon."

We have before us program of the dedication of the new building for Religious Education and Worship of St. John's Methodist Church, St. Louis, Mo. Rev. Ivan Lee Holt is the pastor, and Rev. R. L. Duckworth, Director of Religious Education. Dr. T. G. Soares, professor of Religious Education in the University of Chicago, and Bishop W. F. McMurray were among the speakers at the dedication occasion. We congratulate all parties concerned on their new $200,000 building.

Mr. W. A. McKennon, Superintendent of First Church Sunday school, Shreveport, writes: "Enclosed is a check from the Four Square Bible class for $50, which is their offering to the First Methodist Church for Sunday School Day offering. We have already sent you our check for $250, and this additional $50 makes a total of $300 from First Church."

Rev. C. C. Wier, pastor at Winnfield, says: "Just a short note to compliment you on the last issue of the Outlook. It is surely very neat. I believe it is your nicest issue."

Conference exhibits at Lake Charles will be under the supervision of our Extension Secretary, Rev. A. K. McLellan. We hope all Conference delegates and others will visit the exhibit room.

Sunday, Nov. 11, we visited the Pineville Sunday school and church. The pastor, Rev. Claude K. Smith, is winding up his sixth year. Their Sunday school enrollment to-day is 193, with only 60 reported six years ago. The increase in property assets has been from $6,000 to about $30,000.

On Tuesday, Nov. 13, we visited in what is known as the "Center Point Community," some fifteen miles from Alexandria, on the new gravel road to Marksville. This community is the birthplace of Rev. John Paul, formerly professor in Asbury College. I saw the large tabernacle built by him some years ago for annual revival meetings. His work and influence still abide in this community.

C. D. ATKINSON,
Conference Superintendent.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

The Sunday School Board had a fine reception at the Annual Conference. The brethren were most kind in their attitude. The program the night of the anniversary went off well, and many compliments were passed. Dr. Bowen gave us a great address, and it struck fire in the hearts of the folks and made a lasting impression. There was some real thinking and some real seeking for more light. This was a most happy experience for us.

Out of the fourteen members of the Sunday School Board, twelve were present and took part in the meeting. The other two members had their excuses present. This was fine. The Conference meeting to one side of the territory, we thought perhaps there would not be a full attendance. We are proud of the Conference Sunday School Board. We really think they deserve the commendation of the Conference for their interest and faithfulness.

The reports of the workers showed an increase over last year in the amount of work done and the types of work. The income from Sunday School Day was a disappointment; but as other causes suffered the same, we are glad to share in the common experience, hoping that a better day will come for all. We were glad to see so many of the smaller Sunday schools on the Honor Roll and to realize they were seeking to measure up to all that was asked of them. We were glad also to get many nice contributions which were more than the mere requirement.

The outstanding piece of work was the training work. This gave us joy. We reached the goal set; not quite in the Cokesbury work, but to my mind we did something better here—we reached forty-two communities which had never before had any training work. This going into new fields is where we are to get the largest and most abiding gains.

The surveying of the counties is, too, bringing out many items which will cause men and women to think and be serious about the work. We hope to be able to have a number of counties surveyed each year and thus finally have the Conference where we can tell at a glance the entire story.

The work planned for this year is in advance of anything yet attempted, and we are anxious to get the items before the workers. We are trusting to have our District Worker's Conferences before Christmas, but cannot at this time tell.

Pray for the work and the workers.

JOHN C. CHAMBERS.

If it is worth anything to you in your work, drop me a card saying what you think of it. Enclosed with the Guide is a leaflet of value to the superintendent.

Two things we should unite upon in the beginning of the year: increase the membership of the school and have every officer and teacher read a book pertaining to the work they are expected to do. Let our slogan be, "Get them and give them something when they come." The Cokesbury Record Books are designed to help make the school grow regularly. Appoint some one to supervise the membership campaign and some one to supervise the training of officers and teachers.

COLDS MAY DEVELOP INTO PNEUMONIA

Coughs from colds may lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for coughs from colds and bronchial irritations. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of coughs from colds, bronchitis and minor forms of bronchial irritations, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)

How Doctors Treat Colds and the Flu

To break up a cold over night or to cut short an attack of grippe, influenza, sore throat or tonsilitis, physicians and druggists are now recommending Calotabs, the purified and refined calomel compound tablet that gives you the effects of calomel and salts combined, without the unpleasant effects of either.

One or two Calotabs at bed-time with a swallow of water—that's all. No salts, no nausea nor the slightest interference with your eating, work or pleasure. Next morning your cold has vanished, your system is thoroughly purified and you are feeling fine with a hearty appetite for breakfast. Eat what you please—no danger.

Get a family package, containing full directions, only 35 cents. At any drug store.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE EPWORTH LEAGUE NEWS.

Miss Bertha Nall, Conference Superintendent of Epworth Hi Leagues, advises that the following Epworth Junior Hi League district secretaries have been appointed: Brookhaven District, not yet appointed; Hattiesburg District, Miss Carmen Galloway, Eiiisviiie; Jackson District, Miss Lera Beiie Lewis, care Kennington's, Jackson; Meridian District, Miss Alpha Matheny, R. F. D., Meridian; Newton District, Miss Ina B. Anderson, Laurel; Seashore District, Miss Eiizabeth Stapleton, Gulfport; Vicksburg District, Mrs. T. M. Ford, Lorman.

Miss Nail wishes to urge ali Hi Leagues to send at once the names of ail chapter officers, including the Hi League counseior, to your respective district seretaries and to herseif. This is very important and should be attended to immediately. Miss Nall is anxious to get in personal touch with every Hi League; this wiil heip both you and the Conference officers very much.

So far, the Conference cabinet hasn't iocated a person for this very important office in the Brookhaven District, but that office wiii no doubt be fiiied in the near future. But Miss Nali asks that the Leaguers in her department in that district write to her direct so that she might be in touch with them.

Miss Berta says: "Our Conference cabinet has secured for us these splendid secretaries, and aren't we proud of them? Now, iet's all get together under the direction of our Great Leader, and work together to make this year our Epworth Hi Leagues take a big, big, step forward."

Miss Nali's address is Petal, Miss. Write her there.

Some very interesting things are shown in the quarteriy reports coming from our mission field in the African Congo. We note in one station at Minga, where we have two workers, Miss Fiora Foreman, nurse, and Miss Janet Miller, physician, the report shows a totai of 3,007 patients treated, with eighty-two in the hospital at the end of the quarter. There were only two deaths in that hospitai for the entire quarter, one a case of sieeping sickness which was gotten hoid of too iate for the doctor to give any reiief; the other, the report reads, was a boy with "elephantiasis feet." We don't know what kind of feet that is, but we don't want any, ours are big enough. There are many other things carried in these reports that we wish our Leaguers could read, things that are reaiiy startiing when one realizes that these doctors and nurses are also preachers and teachers. The reports of evangelist and industriai departments are equaiiy good; and it is hard for us in Christian America to think of an average attendance on Sunday church services of 570 when the church membership for that station is oniy 226. Another station, at Tunda (this station has no teacher) has a total membership in church of ninety-two, yet they have average church attendance of 334, Sunday school, 274, and daiiy prayer service, 182.

Our workers there are, besides doctors, nurses and preachers, house buiiders, and they teii us of building houses with brick that they had to burn themseives, with mahogany doors and woodwork. Wouldn't it be fine now to have a house with mahogany doors, floors, and window frames, with mahogany furniture? But I suspect it wouid not be so fine to get if we had to fashion all the lumber by hand as they do. Leaguers, doesn't it reaiiy make you want to do more for our workers there when you realize that they can do so much with the very iittie we send them? How about your African Speciai piedge? Has your chapter made a iiberai one, and are you going to see that it is paid?

Our Conference measures up weii on per capita giving as compared with the other Conferences, yet we gave oniy about 41 cents per member last year; we ought to doubie that this year.

DR. CALDWELL'S THREE RULES

Dr. Caidweil watched the results of constipation for 47 years, and beiieved that no matter how careful peopie are of their health, diet and exercise, constipation will occur from time to time. Of next importance, then, is how to treat it when it comes. Dr. Caidweil always was in favor of getting as close to nature as possibie, hence his remedy for constipation is a miid vegetable compound. It can not harm the most delicate system and is not habit forming.

The Doctor never did approve of drastic physics and purges. He did not believe they were good for human beings to put into their system. Use Syrup Pepsin for yourseif and members of the famiiy in constipation, biiiousness, sour and crampy stomach, bad breath, no appetite, headaches, and to break up fevers and colds. Get a bottle today, at any drugstore and observe these three ruies of heaith: Keep the head cool, the feet warm, the bowels open. For a free trial bottle, just write "Syrup Pepsin," Dept. BB, Monticeiio, Illinois.

COMMENDATION OF PASTOR.

Dear Dr. Carley: I think if we would practice handing a few more bouquets to the deserving ones iiving, instead of of waiting until after they have left us, we would make our appreciations better known and more people stimuiated to do even better work, so I am bound to hand our pastor, Brother Day, a few bouquets.

This has been the best year we have ever had in Doyline. He has built up this place from a $1,300 to a $1,700 work. The church has been paid out and dedicated this year; aiso, another oid debt has been paid. Now we have a nice new church, free of debts, and our pastor paid up for the year.

Brother Day has gone out in the country and oii fieids and preached the gospel. He is a deserving man and shouid be highly commended as a pastor. He is leaving Tuesday for Conference, and we are trusting he might be sent back to Doyline to give us another good year.

HOUSEWORK IS EASY FOR HEALTHY WOMEN

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Gave These Women Strength

MRS. ROSA SWICEGOOD
R. 1, Woodleaf, N. C.

Woodleaf, N. C.—"I was nervous and suffered most of the time and sometimes I would have to go to bed. My sister told me she was in the same condition and how Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had helped her. After taking the first bottle I found I was stronger than I was before. Now I have taken three bottles, I can do my housework and most every other kind of work that I want to do. I will recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to anyone. I will answer all mail received asking about the Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. Rosa Swicegood, R. 1, Woodleaf, N. C.

Benefited Beyond Expression

Jacksonville, Fla.—"I read an advertisement of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and have been taking it now for four years and find it a wonderful medicine for weak, run-down women. I do my own housework and work in an office besides and I would get cross and irritable and too sick to work. I have benefited beyond expression by the Vegetable Compound and will gladly answer letters from anyone who is suffering and needs help."—Mrs. Rose Morris, 2140 Walnut St., Jacksonville, Florida.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

A vocal solo, "Holy City," by Rev. Ira W. Flowers, was especially enjoyed.

"The Mite Box," a Jubilee Thanksgiving, was given by Mrs. Huthnance, of Oakdale.

Scripture lesson by Mrs. Blevins, of Glenmora, on the home life of Mary and Martha, stressed the effect of Martha's neglect to cultivate the spiritual side of life and called attention to the fact that many of us are going through life as did Martha.

Rev. S. S. Bogan, of Glenmora, gave an interesting talk showing the progress of woman's work and what it means to the church.

At the noon hour, a delicious plate luncheon was served.

Mrs. Ferguson, of Glenmora, presided over the afternoon session. Devotional was led by Mrs. Poinboeuf, of Elizabeth. Following this, Mrs. Bryan, of Alexandria, in an impromptu talk, took up the main thought of Mrs. Poinboeuf's talk—"Christ In Us"—and brought out further glimpses of real Christian living.

A beautiful and impressive pageant, "Women of the Bible," was given by the ladies of Oakdale auxiliary.

Reports from Presidents of the different auxiliaries were interesting.

A playlet entitled, "Dismissing the Missionary Society," was presented by members of the Glenmora auxiliary.

Life of Mrs. McDonald in the Mexican Mission field, also her work in the home field, was presented by Glenmora ladies.

The histories of settlement houses of Nashville, Tenn., Atlanta, Ga., Dallas, Texas, and St. Louis, Mo., were given by four members from Glenmora.

A vocal duet by Mrs. Crowder and Miss Petz was beautifully rendered. At the suggestion of Mrs. W. A. Poinboeuf, a rising vote of thanks was tendered the members of the Oakdale auxiliary for their royal entertainment.

The meeting was closed with prayer by Mrs. Overton Grant, District Secretary.

FIRST REPORT OF JUBILEE WEEK OF PRAYER.

The Woman's Missionary Society of Mt. Olive, Miss., observed the Jubilee Week of Prayer with interesting programs. The period of worship was a most helpful part of the services.

The leader for the first day was Mrs. E. L. Calhoun. The countries of China, Korea, and Japan were discussed in a most interesting manner.

The leader for the second day was Mrs. W. A. Holloway. This program consisted of discussions of the needs of Belgium, Poland, Czechoslovakia, Latin America, America, Brazil, and Mexico.

The leader for the third day was Mrs. S. A. Head. The work in Africa, and the homeland was presented in a most impressive manner.

At the conclusion of the program the Jubilee offering was taken, the amount being $42.05. Some members were absent, and we feel that more will be added to this amount when their offering is sent in.

Mrs. E. L. Calhoun presented an interesting "Contest of Mission Fields," which was enjoyed during the social hour. Refreshments were served by Mrs. E. D. Worthy, Mrs. E. L. Calhoun, and Mrs. W. D. Lowry.

There were seventeen ladies preseut at this meeting. The members feel that the Jubilee Week of Prayer has been a power for good in our Society, and that greater services will be rendered because of the observance of it during the year of Jubilee.

In 5 MILLION HOMES TONIGHT

A host of babies will enjoy sound sleep tonight. And their parents will have unbroken rest. Castoria is the cause of this contentment in a multitude of homes.

Good old Castoria! Children cry for it. Mothers swear by it. Not a household where there is an infant should ever be without it. A few drops of Castoria quiet Baby in a perfectly innocent manner. It is natural slumber that follows. Castoria is a purely vegetable product. No opiates. No narcotics of any kind.

Now you know why trained nurses give Castoria as often as an infant is ailing, or even restless. And why doctors tell mothers it is the first and only home remedy when Baby has constipation, colic, diarrhea, or other upset. It is made for babies, and safe to give babies, and other things are not.

Fletcher's Castoria is "old-fashioned" if you count its fifty years, but it's an old-fashioned mother, nowadays, who worries along without it. Twenty-five million bottles bought last year! Think of the number of mothers who rely on Castoria! All these mothers can't be wrong! To keep a bottle in the house is a precaution you owe your little one.

ROBERT H. HARPER, D.D., Editor NEW ORLEANS, LA., THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 29, 1928. CHAS. O. CHALMERS, Manager.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

First Day.

The eighty-third session of the Louisiana Conference convened in the beautiful new First Methodist Church, Lake Charles, La., at nine o'clock on Wednesday morning, Nov. 21. Bishop Candler announced and the Conference sang the hymn, "O, For a Thousand Tongues to Sing," after which the Bishop led in prayer. The Bishop then read and commented on the account of the conversion of Zaccheus.

After roll call, the organization of the Conference was compieted by the election of R. H. Harper as secretary, with J. F. Foster and J. C. Rousseaux as assistant secretaries, and R. W. Vaughan as statistical secretary, with H. W. Cudd, R. L. Clayton and H. B. Hines as assistants. On motion, a representative was appointed from each district to audit the reports of the pastors before they were handed to the statistical secretary. The hours of meeting and adjourning were fixed at 9 a.m. and 12 m. The usual Conference committees were appointed on nomination of the presiding elders.

Various communications were referred to appropriate boards and committees.

Dr. W. H. Nelson, editor of the Pacific Methodist Advocate, a native of Louisiana, was presented to the Conference and he spoke concerning his new book on "John Bunyan—Tinker and Thinker." The Bishop commended the book in high terms.

Dr. George S. Sexton, president of Centenary College, read his report and, at his request, was granted leave of absence for the remainder of the Conference. His report brought out the fact that 560 students are enrolled for the fall session and that there are nineteen ministerial students in attendance. Dr. Sexton also brought out the fact that an enthusiastic campaign is now under way in Shreveport to raise $500,000 for endowment and additional buildings, and that the Rotary Club has already piedged $100,000 to this fund and that additional piedges of more than $100,000 have been made. It was in order that he might be present during the campaign that he asked for leave of absence from the Conference.

The pastors of various local churches were presented to the Conference. Rev. Sam Yancey, superintendent of the Western Methodist Assembly, Mount Sequoyah, Ark., was presented, and he addressed the Conference concerning this great institution.

The names of all the presiding elders were called, their characters passed, and they made their reports as follows: A. S. Lutz, Alexandria District; L. W. Cain, Baton Rouge District; W. L. Doss, Jr., Lake Charles District; K. W. Dodson, Minden District; Elmer C. Gunn, Monroe District; R. H. Harper, New Orleans District; W. D. Kleinschmidt, Ruston District; W. W. Holmes, Shreveport District. These reports showed that more than 2000 members have been added to the church on profession of faith during the year.

The names of the following superaunuated preachers were called, their characters were passed, and those present made their reports: G. D. Anders, D. C. Barr, A. E. Barrett, J. O. Bennett, H. J. Boltz, A. J. Coburn, B. T. Crews, W. F. Henderson, Sr., S. J. Davies, S. S. Holladay, H. W. May, J. F. Patterson, Robert Randle, J. T. Sawyer, J. G. Sloane, S. A. Steel, F. N. Sweeney, T. J. Warlick, G. P. White.

On motion of their respective presiding elders, the names of H. W. Bowman, C. H. Mayo, P. H. Fontaine, J. S. Rutledge, and S. L. Riggs were referred to the Committee on Conference Relations for the superannuate relation, and the name of A. L. Harper was referred for the supernumerary relation.

S. J. Davies offered his resignation as a member of the Board of Christian Literature, and, on motion, A. M. Shaw was elected to fill the vacancy.

A telegram of greeting was read from the Louisiana State Baptist Convention, and the secretary was instructed to make suitable reply. The secretary was also instructed to send a message of greeting to the Presbyterian Synod, now in session in Shreveport.

It was announced that Dr. S. A. Steel would preach at three o'clock p. m., and that the Board of Lay Activities would observe its anniversary at 7:30 p. m., the principal address to be delivered by Dr. Robert E. Goodrich. Other announcements were made, the hymn, "Come, Ye that Love the Lord," was sung, and the Conference was adjourned with the benediction pronounced by S. S. Holladay.

SECOND DAY.

The Conference convened at 9 o'clock a.m., Bishop Candler in the chair. The Bishop led in singing that great hymn, "Jesus, the Name High Over All," and R. W. Tucker led in prayer. The Bishop read a Scripture lesson from Luke 15, and spoke on the subject, "The Joy of Saving the Lost." At the conclusion of his address, which was one of the greatest discourses the Bishop has delivered before the Louisiana Conference, the hymn, "I Love To Tell the Story," was sung.

The roll call of absentees from the opening session was called, and, on motion, further calling of the roll was dispensed with. The minutes of the previous day's session were read and approved.

On motion of W. W. Holmes, a message of greeting was sent to the absent superannuates.

A telegram from Rev. J. T. McVey was read, stating that he was prevented from attending the Conference by an automobile accident.

An invitation, signed by the Chamber of Commerce and by the city officials of Mansfield, La., to hold the next session of the Conference in Mansfield, was read.

On motion, the report of the Board of Education concerning the Conference Educational Bond Issue was made the order of the day for ten o'clock Saturday morning.

The report of the Orphanage Board was read and adopted.

The Bishop announced the transfer of Rev. J. E. Henley, an elder, from the Southwest Missouri Conference.

The following preachers were elected to deacons' orders and advanced in their class standing: R. L. Clayton, J. D. Fomby, J. T. Harris. It was announced that E. W. Day, already in orders, was advanced in class standing. J. J. Rasmussen and F. P. Moss were continued in the class of the second year. A. A. McKnight was discontinued at his own request. It was announced that J. M. Norris had gone to the Orient as a missionary. He was continued in the class of the second year.

A telegram of greeting from the Presbyterian Synod in response to the one sent by the Conference, was read.

Ira W. Flowers, J. E. Hearn, A. D. Lemons, and B. F. Roberts were admitted to the Conference on trial, J. E. Hearn being admitted under the two-thirds rule. H. W. Brown, applying for admission under the same rule, was not admitted, but authority was given to employ him as a supply.

The following were advanced to the class of the second year: J. P. Bonnecarrere, E. C. Dufresne, S. S. Holladay, Jr., G. A. La Grange, A. M. Martin, W. D. Poole, R. H. Stapies, David Tarver, C. B. White, A. C. Lawton, R. A. Cross, Jr. J. M. Johnson was discontinued.

The following were graduated from the course of study and elected to elders' orders: J. B. Grambling, L. R. Nease. H. B. Hines, already an elder, was graduated from the course of study. C. W. Lahey and B. W. Waltman were continued in the class of the fourth year.

Rev. C. C. Neal, of the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church, was presented to the Conference and he made a speech in behalf of Paine and Haygood Colleges. Following his address, a collection was taken for the benefit of these schools.

Rev. H. K. Faulk, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, was received into the membership of the Louisiana Conference.

Dr. O. F. Sensabaugh, Commissioner of the School of Theology of Southern Methodist University, was presented and he addressed the Conference concerning his work. Bishop Candler exhorted on the subject of ministerial training.

On nomination, H. W. Ledbetter was put on the Committee on Admissions to fill a vacancy.

It was announced that Dr. R. E. Smith would preach at three o'clock p. m., and that the Sunday School Board would observe its anniversary at 7:30 p. m., the principal address to be delivered by Dr. F. P. Turner. Bishop Candler announced that he would receive the class into full connection at eleven o'clock on Friday. Other announcements were made and the Conference adjourned with the doxology and the benediction, pronounced by Dr. F. S. Parker.

THIRD DAY.

With Bishop Candler in the chair, the third day's proceedings began with the hymn, "I Need Thee Every Hour." Rev. Wm. Schuhle led in prayer, after which the hymn, "Nearer, My God, to Thee," was sung. Bishop Candler then read a Scripture lesson from Matthew 25, and gave an exposition of the lesson. The hymn, "The Home Over There," was sung.

The minutes of yesterday's session were read and approved.

Bishop W. N. Ainsworth, recently returned from the Orient, was presented to the Conference.

Report No. 1 of the Board of Education, relating to the Seashore Camp Ground property and recommending the appointment of T. L. James, W. A. McKennon, and A. S. Lutz as commissioners with full power to sell the Louisiana Conference's interest in the property, was presented. Rev. J. T. Leggett, a member of the Mississippi Conference, officially designated by his Conference to represent its position, was given the privileges of the floor, and he addressed the Conference in behalf of the maintenance of the Seashore Camp Ground property by the church. The report of the Board was further discussed by W. A. McKennon, F. S. Parker, E. C. Gunn, R. H. Harper, C. C. Miller, N. E. Joyner, R. W. Tucker, P. O. Lowrey, H. T. Cariey, Leon Picone, H. W. Ledbetter, Briscoe Carter, H. W. Rickey, W. L. Doss, Jr., and ohers. The vote was then taken and the report was adopted by a vote of 104 to 58. The discussion of the report consumed most of the time of the morning session.

The following preachers, having met all the disciplinary requirements, were called to the chancel, addressed by the Bishop, and admitted into full connection in the Conference by a unanimous vote: R. L. Clayton, J. T. Harris, J. D. Fomby, E. W. Day.

Dr. R. M. Allen, Associate Secretary of the General Board of Church Extension, and Rev. J. W. Mills, presiding elder of the Beaumont District, Texas Conference, were presented to the Conference.

On motion, H. K. Faulk and C. B. Powell were added to the Orphanage Board to fill vacancies.

Announcement was made that Dr. W. W Drake would preach at three o'clock p.m., and that Bishop W. N. Ainsworth would be the principal speaker at the anniversary of the Board of Missions at 7:30 o'clock. A meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society was announced for 2:30 o'clock at the Presbyterian church.

An invitaton from the Chamber of Commerce of Lake Charles to the members and visitors for an automobile ride over the city at 4:30 o'clock, was announced, with the promise of having pointed out to them the largest rice mill in the world, the magnificent new deep water harbor, and other interesting features of this beautiful city.

The hymn, "Am I a Soldier of the Cross?" was sung, and the Conference stood adjourned with the benediction pronounced by Bishop Ainsworth.

FOURTH DAY—Morning Session.

Conference convened at nine o'clock, with Bishop Candler in the chair. After singing and prayer, led by Dr. A. S. Lutz, and another hymn, the Bishop read and commented on Matt. 20:1-16. The Conference then sang the hymn, "More Love to Thee, O Christ."

The minutes of the previous session were read and approved.

T. D. Lipscomb and A. R. Hoffpauir were re-

POETICAL THOUGHTS.

By Mrs. George S. Brown.

"A talebearer revealeth secrets, but he that is of a faithful spirit concealeth the matter."—Proverbs 11:13.

A Good Rule.

"If you are tempted to reveal
A tale some one to you has told
About another, make it pass,
Before you speak, three gates of gold.

"Three narrow gates—first, 'Is it true?'
Then, 'Is it needful?" In your mind
Give truthful answer, and the next
Is last, and narrowest, 'Is it kind?'
"And if to reach your lips at last
It passes through these gateways three,
Then you may tell the tale, nor fear
What the result of speech may be."

—Selected.

I guess one of the besetting sins of folks is to repeat things they have heard. They do not, as a rule, mean to be unkind, or to make trouble. It is just a desire to be interesting, to have some news to tell, to be the center of a little excitement; but down in our hearts we know it is not Christlike, and if we let the tale we are about to reveal pass the three golden gates, it would never be told. So often the gossip is prefaced with, "I don't know how true it is, but I have heard;" "They tell me" (the identity of the mysterious "they" seldom being revealed); "I don't believe it, but I understand," and then the story goes on and on, never stopping until the tiny snowball is as big as a mountain, and though it started out clean and spotless, it has been mixed, as it grew, with dirt and mud until the original is lost.

The next golden gate we are sure it could never pass, for we know it is not needful. Even if true, it is not necessary that others know about it; and if we keep silent tongues, the whole thing may die out.

And then the narrowest gate, "Is it kind?" Why, of course it is not kind to repeat anything that would hurt or harm another, not even to our dearest, most confidential friend. As we search our own hearts, I fear few of us would not recall something we repeated that were better left unknown. If we kept our hearts and minds filled with pure, sweet, wholesome things, we would not be dependent upon gossip to make us entertaining; so let's resolve to think, before we repeat what we hear, of the three golden gates—"Is it true? Is it needful? Is it kind?"

THE MINISTER'S GOAL.

(The substance of an address to the ministers of Atlanta by Bishop W. F. McDowell, of the Methodist Episcopal Church.)

I am always thinking of the kind of minister that I wish to be. I have not yet attained the ideal and I do not know any minister who has, but it is important that one should not lose his ideals. On the contrary, he must always keep striving for the goal.

Some years ago I called upon a distinguished professor in Rochester, New York. In the course of the conversation the name of a minister friend was called. "What happened to him?" I asked. "Twenty years ago he was one of the most promising men that I knew." The reply was, "He caught up with his own horizon and consequently there was nothing more for him."

Let me begin with a bit of personal experience. About forty years ago I was a semi-student of theology in an Eastern university. One day the dean said to me, "Have you met Bashford?" When I replied in the negative he said, "You must meet him. I shall introduce you to him." Some time after that I did meet him and there then began a friendship that did not end until his death—aye, that has not ended yet, though he is in one part of the universe and I in another. Our friendship did not end when he went to China and it has not ended now that he has gone to heaven. The conditions have changed, but the friendship abides.

We saw much of each other. Both of us were full of the ambitions and plans that are proper for young ministers. One of the discouraging things about the older men is that they are likely to lose their ambitions. Some times the older ministers adjure me to deal faithfully with the younger men. That is important but I am also troubled about the older men—the men who have overtaken their horizons and are just wearing out shoe leather. I am going to tell you some of the things that we talked about in those days.

We agreed that such ministry as it would be given us to perform must be exercised in the forty years that lay just ahead of us. It would not be exercised in the forty years that lay behind nor in the forty years that lay beyond the first forty years. After that forty years we should either be dead or retired. We agreed that it would be worthless to speculate about the kind of ministry that would have been proper for the preceding forty years or the succeeding forty years. We did not live in the former and we would not live in the latter, except as might be able to project ourselves into those coming years through some lives that we had influenced. If we were to have any efficient ministry, it must be in the period in which we were to live. Both of us knew men who were living in the past and preaching there, and men who were living in the future in the conceited imagination that they were ahead of their times. They were putting their gospel into a situation that had not arrived and would not arrive in their day. That kind of ministry was not prophetic nor apostolic. The essence of a prophetic ministry is that it shall be timely. The element that gives permanency to one's ministry is its timeliness.

We agreed that we must exercise our ministry in the atmosphere of our own day—political, educational, social, philosophic, national and international. We should try as best we could to penetrate to the core, base, heart of our own day. As we looked ahead, we sought to fathom the times to which we must preach that we might be able to interpret the gospel of Christ to that people and that time.

What do we mean by the gospel of Christ? It seemed to us then and it seems to me now that there are many useful things attached to the gospel that are not a part of the gospel; secondary things but not essential. There were true statements about Jesus but they were not necessary either to His life, His teaching, or His ministry. A preacher could do a lot of useful things that were not necessarily primary. What we wished to do was to stand as near the center of things with Christ as it was possible for a man to reach. The circumference may be broad but there is only one Center. Both of us wished to stand there. "Jesus Christ, the same yesterday, today and forever" is not a statement to be announced, but a truth to be taken account of. Jesus Christ keeps on being the same kind of being that He has always been. That is the meaning of the text. It would be a great catastrophe to have to waken morning by morning and wonder whether Christ is the same kind of person that he was yesterday. This does not mean that he is static, but consistent. He eternally persists without change of moral character.

As we looked ahead the best that we were able, we believed that in the forty years lying ahead there would be new problems. We could foresee the development of the labor and capital situation. There would develop a condition that had never existed in that form before—the rise of great labor unions, great trusts. We had not thought of entering the class of capitalists and we never contemplated joiniug a labor union. But we were trying to find out how we could put across the gospel —I know there is a more elegant way of saying it than that—in that kind of atmosphere. We could foresee in the educational world that scientific questions would have to be met; that the doctrine of evolution would probably occupy the center of the stage, as it has. It was evident to both of us that we should have to put the gospel over in an atmosphere of that kind if we put it over at all. We would have to deal with the intellectual atmosphere that would exist, not some other.

As we conceived it, it was not necessary to adopt a gospel of evolution or a gospel against evolution; it was not necessary to adopt a gospel of higher criticism, or against criticism. It was not to be by a gospel either for or against either of these that men were to be saved.

I wish that I could take those representatives of both classes as regard evolution and sew them up in a bag and let them evolve together. I wish that I might sew up in a bag the apostles of higher criticism and anti-higher criticism and let them work it out for themselves, though I guess they would wear out the bag.

Neither evolution nor anti-evolution, neither higher criticism, nor anti-higher criticism, constitute for any age a gospel by which they can be saved. There can be salvation in no other way except through the gospel of Jesus Christ. That gospel must be put across. It is a great task so to interpret the glorious gospel of the blessed God to the age in which we live that it shall make its appeal to all alike; to interpret it in such way, with such spiritual devotion, with such understanding of him that we shall be able to win men from all shades of belief and not alienate any of them from him.

There would also be other questions—international, inter-racial, etc. These are questions particularly for the younger among you, though I would not overlook the older. There are different ways in which to grow old. One may just go ahead traveling toward death, or he may face life with the springs of the mornings on his brow and in his heart.

As we look at it this morning, have we preached the gospel to the age in which we live? We are grateful for all the gracious things that have come to us because of the church, but we have to confess that nowhere has the kingdom of Christ come. Many fine things can be said about Atlanta. I echo what Billy Sunday said about Atlanta being the most religious city in the country. But is Atlanta Christian? There is much good in the churches, but how nearly would Atlanta be considered Christian when judged by the standards of Christ? It is far from being a Christian city nor is it likely that it will be soon.

There are some new things that we must face.

1. Temperance. Conditions here have changed much. The old sermons at this point are now out of date. If we put over the gospel in reference to temperance, we shall have to develop a new set of sermons.

2. Race relations. There is here a new atmosphere that never existed in the days of our fathers. There are two ways to look at the race question. One way is a small, near, immediate way—how can whites and blacks live together? If we can not solve that in the spirit of Christ, what shall we do in the great racial questions of the world? "If thou hast run with the footmen and they have wearied thee, how canst thou contend with horses? and if in the land of peace wherein thou trustest they wearied thee, then how wilt thou do in the swelling of Jordan?" We have got to interpret this gospel in a period in which yellow men and black men and brown men and red men and white men are brought into contact with each other. These races have got to dwell together in the earth and if their impact is not made in the spirit of good will they will, in their hostility to each other, sweep civilization from the face of the earth. The Chinese question is not a mere matter of concessions, of whether a man shall be tried by the courts of his own nation or by the Chinese. It is far larger than that. Here is a great movement among one-fourth of the race, a change in their thinking, in their aspirations, a new development of their life. In other words, we must apply this gospel in a racial contact not dreamed of by our fathers. Dr. Young J. Allen and all of the missionaries of his day had a noble but small conception of what the gospel ought to do. Then we hoped to evangelize and teach as many Chinese as possible. But now we have to learn how to live on terms of good will with them in a world grown very small. There is no use to abuse them, no use to talk of how unreasonable they are. Most of all, we must not say that if this is their attitude toward the gospel we shall just withdraw and leave them to themselves. No, we must interpret the gospel with reference to race relations in world relations. This question has quit being small and has become almost unbelievably large.

3. International relations. Pretty soon in my city I shall begin to hear the farewell address of the father of his country read again. When I first went to live in Washington I used to hear a rumbling down the Potomac every time that passage about entangling alliances was read. I did not know what it was. But every time that passage was read with false emphasis, I would hear it. Later I discovered what it was. Every time that passage was read with false emphasis, Washington would roll over in his grave. He has nearly worked out of his grave by now. There must be a new interpretation of international relations. Entangling alliances must no longer be the keynote of our relations. We must project our world relations on the basis of the spirit of Christ, making our contacts helpful and our relations unselfish.

A minister by a misinterpretation may help to block this relation. Let us remember that the gospel of Christ is not an American institution. We are not to seek to Americanize the world, but to Christianize it.

This new application of the gospel must come chiefly to young ministers. It is a great call, but difficult. How I envy their opportunity! I had a sad birthday not long since. As I looked out and saw what is going on, saw how Christ is going to change these things, thought how unworthily I had wrought, how I wished that I might have a new chance.

There is no use to shut our eyes and say, "Glory to God. Everything will work out all right, anyway." That is a blind fatalism that is not justified in relation to Christianity. There is no group or class or nation that is yet Christian. There are many nice people, but there is not a single saved nation or saving nation.

To put the gospel across in a world that has grown as small as this one has is not a small matter.

Bishop Bradley said to me not long since that there was another phase to this question. The problems that stare us in the face have to be worked out where they are.

There is the new question of comparative religions. This has arisen in a new way, as Christianity has come in contact more intimately with other religions. This has to be worked out. We have assumed that Christianity is the final religion and I believe that it is. But Christianity is coming now for the first time in a large way face to face with Mohammedanism, Buddhism, Confucianism. In India Christianity is facing this question. Hinduism has a way of extinguishing other religions by absorbing them. This is going on now with some forms of Christianity. In Japan, Buddhists are singing, "Buddha, lover of my soul," and singing it to the old tune. This question has to be worked out where it is. It is not in the United States but it is in India, China and other fields. We must so interpret Christianity as to give it supremacy over the millions now in the grip of these other religions.

We do not confront some of the questions that face these mission fields. We do not face the philosophic atheism that confronts Europe. But we do face the problem of spiritualizing the powerful material civilization that has been developed in America. Ours is not the problem of comparative religions, not of atheism, but it is of overwhelming material emphasis.

We can not meet these questions by emphasizing one phase of Christianity alone. We must not encounter them with a palsied, weak religion. We must bring to it the best thinking and the highest spirituality. It will take this to lift America.

We can not go to China with a weak Christianity. We can not go to India with a weak Christianity. We shall be just as powerless with a weak Christianity as though we were not there.

We must face these conditions, not in fear and weakness, but with highheartedness. Christ has not grown wearied nor has he been outgrown. Let us make much of Christ; make much of the living spirit. Then all things near and far shall feel the touch of the redemption of God, of the salvation of the world from sin. Then shall we present every man perfect in Christ Jesus. Then shall the nations become the kingdoms of our God and of his Christ.

It is a desperately serious thing to be a minister. I wonder that any man can take it complacently. It is desperate for Christ that he must depend upon people such as we. It is desperate for us that we must face this responsibility. It is desperate for the people that they have to depend upon us.—Wesleyan Christian Advocate.

HENRY BIDLEMAN BASCOM.

By Bishop H. M. DuBose.

An address delivered at the unveiling of the monument to Bishop Bascom, at Louisville, Ky., October 14, 1928.

When God and nature seek to recreate the divine image in humanity respect is had to heredity, habitat, and environment. Blood, soil, and atmosphere have relativity to life. Whence, where, and wherein are tremendous interrogatives in appraising the soul and mentality of life. A landscape, a well-horizoned sky, a river, or a bit of sea in perpetual vision in collusion with healthy atavism have made the prophetic beginnings of many a life and placed it in the way of a continuous ongoing toward truth and greatness in human effort.

Henry Bidleman Bascom, renowned as preacher, educator, chaplain to Congress, and Methodist bishop, was born to frugal fortune and to rustic and uneventful infancy, childhood, and boyhood on the banks of the romantic east branch of the Delaware River near the junction of the two streams in Delaware County, N. Y., on May 27, 1796.

In his irregularly kept diary Bascom gives a pleasing sketch of the terrane washed by the Delaware, beside which stood his childhood home, a log structure of primitive design and appointments. The shores of the stream were flanked and hastioned by huge rocks and bold cliffs, beyond which the native woods tangled themselves into a contortion of brakes and wolds. In the freedom of these forest shades and solitudes the days of the farmer lad were largely spent in fellowship with their bird life and intoxicated with the breath of their summer and autumn foliage. The friendly river, rolling but a few paces from the door of the farmhouse, also became a center and source of interest and a ministrant to his springing sensibilities and deepening emotions. The many-colored pebbles that paved the shoreline and the low-tide shoals of the stream were gathered, matched and came to speak to the glowing brain of the boy, not the speech of science, but the speech of a creative mystery transcending the terms and catagories of science.

Sporting and bathing in the clear eddies and launching mimic rafts into the hurrying middle currents of the friendly river furnished healthy recreation and stimulated the sense of adventure and enterprise. So passed the years that brought the farmer boy into serious but none too affluent opportunities for study and school day work. These opportunities found him with a vigorous body, red blood, and a brain alert to every insinuation and approach of knowledge. In view of his limited scholastic training, his school attendance having ended with the close of his twelfth year, the grasp of his mentality and the diversity of his learning at thirty are a miracle of the Methodist itinerancy, which under its rugged curricula has tutored and finished a multitude of scholars during the hundred and fifty years since its beginning.

Bishop Bascom was descended from Huguenot ancestors and inherited from his Gallic forbears the religious instincts, as also the love of intellectual freedom, which characterized the earliest of the reformers. It was the Pilgrim and Huguenot zeal for religion which, crossing with the wild virginity of the American hinterland, produced what we now know as American Protestantism and the unconquerable American fealty to the ideals of the Reformation, creating the finest type of civilization the world has ever known. No more nearly perfect example of this spiritual Americanism has appeared in our history than in the wilderness nourished personality of Henry Bidleman Bascom. He seemed to absorb learning through his pores and to inhale with his vital breath the passion of eloquence and the prowess of spiritual being.

Bascom's school day experiences began when he was between five and six years of age. During the two and a half years succeeding he was under several teachers and made but indifferent progress; but at eight years of age he became the beneficiary of a kinsman, Henry Bidleman, and was placed in a school at Easton, Pa., where he remained until his twelfth year. During this period he made marked progress and laid the mental foundation of his future distinguished career.

When he was thirteen years of age or thereabouts the family removed to Little Valley, in the western part of New York, where his real life struggle began, the always small fortune of the family having suffered distressing diminution. He worked with his father on the farm and planned for himself an early career in which appeared no ideal beyond that of being an artizan or a subaltern. His powers had not yet been tried, and, unlike the youthful Joseph, he had not the stars of heaven and the sheaves of the wheat field to presage his greatness.

While the Bascom family was abiding in Little Valley the region was visited by a Methodist exhorter, and under his preaching young Bascom was converted. A year later in Western Pennsylvania he united with the church. The limits of Little Valley were confined within the reaches of what was at this time described as a veritable wilderness. In this sequestration the soul of the future bishop might have atrophied or reverted to type had not a simple good providence come to him. A lay preacher by the name of Gilmore, who preached through the scattered communities of the region and built aqueducts for the pioneer settlers, invited the wilderness nurseling to accompany him, act as exhorter in his meetings, and learn the trade of an aqueduct builder. This opened to him a new world of promise and opportunity. Soon after this the family removed to Kentucky and settled for a time near Maysville, but later crossed the river into the State of Ohio. The Ohio Conference which met in Chillicothe in September, 1812, had resulted from the action admitted to the traveling connection. J. W. Sudduth and O. W. Spinks were admitted on trial. Daniel X. Lagrone was received as a deacon in the class of the third year from the Methodist Episcopal Church. He is in the junior class at Centenary College.

The order of the day having arrived, Report No. 2 of the Board of Education was taken up for consideration. The report recommended the fixing of the educational assessment at $40,000, an increase of $29,000 over the present assessment, in order to guarantee the payment of the interest on the Conference Educational Bonds. After discussion, the report was unanimously adopted.

The report of the Committee on Conference Relations, granting the relations asked for by those referred to it, was read and adopted.

Dr. C. C. Jarrell, General Secretary of the Hospital Board, was presented to the Conference, and he spoke concerning his work.

G. H. Corry and Leon Picone were granted locations at their own request.

Question 21, "Are all the preachers blameless in their life and official administration?" was resumed, and a considerable number of preachers made their reports and their characters were passed.

An afternoon session of the Conference was ordered for three o'clock. The Bishop appointed Dr. F. N. Parker to preside at the afternoon session.

A report of the group insurance committee was made, and W. W. Drake, H. L. Johns, and J. T. Harris were appointed a committee to handle the matter during the year for the Conference.

A resolution by the Conference, confirming action of the Legal Conference in clearing title of church property in Lake Charles, was adopted.

Announcements were made, and the Conference adjourned with the benediction pronounced by H. N. Harrison.

Afternoon Session.

Conference convened at three o'clock, with Dr. F. N. Parker in the chair. R. H. Wynn led in prayer. The minutes of the morning session were read and approved.

Reports were adopted as follows: Board of Lay Activities; Treasurer of the Woman's Missionary Society; Legal Conference; District Conference Records; Board of Finance; Bible Board; Committee on Memorial Home; Board of Temperance and Social Reform; Committee on Sabbath Observance; Hospital Board; Board of Christian Literature; Sunday School Board. Under reports of their respective Boards, T. W. Holloman was elected Conference Lay Leader; J. G. Snelling was recommended for appointment as Conference Missionary Secretary; A. W. Turner was recommended for appointment as Legislative Director of the Louisiana Legislative Prohibition League; W. W. Drake, S. J. Davies, and J. G. Snelling, Publishing Committee of the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

The selection of the place for holding the next session of the Conference was taken up. Mansfield and Lafayette were placed in nomination. Lafayette was chosen.

The reports of the Orphanage Board, the Board of Church Extension, and the Committee on Prison Reform were read and adopted.

President D. B. Raulins, of Mansfield College, addressed the Conference concerning his work.

R. H. Wynn called attention to the beautiful flowers in the church and expressed appreciation to those who were furnishing them.

On motion, the Conference adjourned to meet in Memorial Session at three o'clock Sunday afternoon, the benediction being pronounced by H. T. Carley.

Fifth Day—Sunday.

The Conference love feast was held at nine o'clock Sunday morning, with Rev. B. T. Crews, one of the honored superannuate members of the Conference presiding. This was a gracious occasion of spiritual refreshing.

At eleven o'clock Bishop Candler preached a great sermon to a congregation that filled all available space in the auditorium. After the sermon, the Bishop ordained R. L. Clayton and J. T. Harris as deacons.

At three o'clock in the afternoon the Conference met in Memorial Session, Dr. W. Winans Drake presiding by appointment of the Bishop. It was reported that Rev. S. D. Howard, a beloved member of the Conference, Mrs. S. S. Holladay and Mrs. J. T. Sawyer, wives of preachers, had died during the year. The Committee on Memoirs made its report in memory of the deceased, various members of the Conference paid tender tribute to their lives, and the report of the Committee was adopted. On motion, the Conference adjourned to meet at 8:30 o'clock Monday morning.

At 7:30 o'clock p.m. Dr. F. N. Parker preached to a great congregation. After the sermon, Bishop Candler ordained J. B. Grambling and L. R. Nease as elders. H. K. Faulk, coming as an elder from the Methodist Episcopal Church, assumed the vows without the re-imposition of hands.

Sixth Day—Monday.

Conference convened at 8:30 o'clock Monday morning, Dr. W. Winans Drake in the chair by appointment of the Bishop. J. B. Williams led in prayer. The minutes of the Saturday afternoon session and of the Memorial session were read and approved.

On motion of A. W. Turner, Dr. F. S. Parker was requested to prepare a memoir of the late Dr. H. B. Carre, professor in Vanderbilt University and formerly a member of the Louisiana Conference, for insertion in the Conference Journal.

Report No. 3 of the Board of Education was read, amended as to item concerning the Western Methodist Assembly, and adopted.

The representative of the insurance company made a statement about the matter of group insurance.

On motion, a Conference advisory committee for the Western Methodist Assembly was appointed, as follows: W. W. Drake, W. R. Harvell, R. E. Goodrich, R. L. Armstrong, S. M. McReynolds. This committee submitted a report, which was adopted.

The Commission on Budget made its report, which was adopted. The total assessment for Conference Work is $85,200, and for General Work, $51,565.

The report of the Epworth League Board was read and adopted.

The Bishop reported the ordinations of the day before.

The Constitutional Amendment providing that a delegate to the General Conference must be a member, at the time of the General Conference, of the Annual Conference which elected him, was submitted by the Bishop. After discussion the vote resulted: For, 31; against, 108, and the amendment was not approved.

The report of the Conference Treasurer was referred, without reading, for record.

The Bishop announced the following transfers from the Conference: J. M. Norris to the Korea Conference; A. D. Lemons to the North Texas Conference; S. J. Starkey to the Southwest Missouri Conference.

Question 21, "Are all the preachers blameless in their life and official administration?" was resumed. The names of those not previously called were called, those present made their reports, and their characters were passed.

W. R. Harvell suggested that a love offering be made for Rev. S. L. Riggs, superannuated at this session of the Conference, who is ill. The offering amounted to $203.

The Statistical Secretary, R. W. Vaughan, read the Statistical report. The membership of the church is 58,809, an increase of 1,143 over last year.

The report of the trustees of the New Orleans Methodist Depository was presented and ordered to record.

The report of the Board of Missions was read and adopted.

Announcement was made by W. W. Drake that Guy M. Hicks had been appointed Conference director of publicity for the Conference on Religious Education, to be held at Lake Junaluska, N. C., in July, 1929.

By common consent, a collection was taken for the benefit of the janitor of the church, who rendered such efficient service throughout the sessions.

A resolution of thanks for hospitality and courtesies was unanimously adopted by a rising vote.

On behalf of the preachers of the Minden District, Rev. George Fox presented to Rev. K. W. Dodson, who has just completed four years of service as presiding elder on the district, a token of their esteem. Brother Dodson made appropriate response.

The minutes of the morning session were read and approved, "Am I a Soldier of the Cross?" was sung, Bishop Candler led in prayer, the appointments were read, and the Conference adjourned sine die, with the doxology and the benediction pronounced by Bishop Candler.

CONFERENCE PERSONALS.

Several of the brethren were called away from the Conference to officate at funerals and on account of illness.

Dr. Jno. F. Foster and Rev. J. C Rousseaux are able assistants to the capable secretary of the Conference, Dr. R. H. Harper.

Dr. R H. Wynn is a great Conference host. He and his committees had everything arranged for the comfort and convenience of the guests.

The Conference adjourned Monday morning barely in time for the preachers going south to catch the train. In fact, quite a number of them were unable to make the connection.

Dr. F. M Freeman, formerly of the Louisiana Conference, hut now pastor at Texarkana, Ark., was a welcome visitor to the Conference. Dr. Freeman has many friends in Louisiana.

Dr. W. H Neison, editor of the Pacific Methodist Advocate, a native of Louisiana, received a hearty greeting from his old friends—and he made many new ones.

The meals served in the dining hall of the church were hountiful and appetizing. The committee of ladies in charge did their work to the complete satisfaction of all concerned.

The singing of the Negro male quartet at the Epworth League anniversary on Saturady evening was greatly enjoyed. The quartet was composed of members of a local Negro church.

Lake Charles is a beautiful city. It has many paved streets, attractive homes, and a most hospitable people. The automobile ride given hy the Chamber of Commerce was greatly enjoyed.

The weather was perfect throughout the Conference. The unbounded hospitality of the good people of Lake Charles, combined with the ideal weather, made the Conference delightful in every way

The Conference learned with sorrow of tho death of the father of Rev. Guy M. Hicks, our pastor at Epworth, New Orleans, which kept Brother Hicks from attending. The Conference sent a message of sympathy to Brother Hicks

The retiring editor of the Advocate was most graciously entertained in the lovely home of Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Huffman. Mrs. Huffman is the daughter of the late Dr. I. W. Cooper, of the Mississippi Conference. She is, as he was, the friend of the preachers and a lover of the church.

Mr. Charles O. Chalmers, Business Manager of the Advocate, was delightfully entertained in the hospitable home of Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Eaves during the Conference. Mr. Eaves is a member of the official board of the First Methodist Church, where the Conference was held.

The statistical secretaries are certainly entitled to the thanks of the Confsrence for their faithful work. The nature of their work requires that they miss most of the early sessions of the Conference. The statistical staff is composed of Revs. R. W. Vaughan, H. W. Cudd, R. L Clayton, and H. B. Hines.

It was with sadness that the Confsrence granted the superannuate relation to Revs. H. W. Bowman, C. H. Mayo, P. H. Fontaine, J. S. Rutledge, and S. L. Riggs. All these brethren have served the church faithfully. Rev. A. L. Harper was granted the supernumerary relation. It is hoped that a year's rest will completely restore him to health.

THANKSGIVING THOUGHTS.

This is the most beautiful period of the year; beautiful in its fullest sense, for it represents a fullness, a richness, which no other period can—for at this time we give thanks to our God, who has so graciously watched over and brought us to see the close of autumn, which represents in life the sweetness and joys of a rich life given to the upilfting of our fellowman and the service of Christ our Savior.

We might compare infancy to the spring of the year, youth to the summer, manhood to autumn, and old age to winter.

In the spring time we sow, in the summer time we cultivate, in autumn we harvest, and in winter we enjoy the fruits of our labor. If we have been faithful to use the opportunities and have not abused the privileges God has given us and have improved them, as we were ushered from one period to the other; living close to him, keeping our hand upon him while he kept his eye upon us, then we can enter into the harvest time and give thanks for the many blessings that have been bestowed upon us, and pass on to the hoary winter of life feeling content and secure, for we have improved the moments of life, sown well, cultivated diligently, and now garnering the fruits of an upright life, and have no fear when the sun of life begins to drive his chariot down the western slope of life; and we can view the sunset in all its beauty and splendor as it begins to sink into the evening shades, and can sing that beautiful song, "The End of a Perfect Day"—Life.

Let those who are just entering into the summer of life be careful of their associates, and when tempted hy worldly amusements, stop and ask themselves, "What would Jesus do?"

So live that you would be a joy to your parents, a credit to your church, and glorify your Father who is in heaven.

If we would be happy, we must be spiritually minded—we must lean upon the everlasting arm of God, and give thanks for the many blessings which we enjoy, to him whose eye is ever upon us.

Let us he patient, gentle, loving, kind and ever ready to help the downfallen, cheer the faint and succor the sick; and when the silver cord of life is severed, the immortality bursts forth from its mortal cage and takes wings and soars up, passing worlds and systems of worlds, suns and planets, and sits beside the "Great White Throne," there to enjoy the fruits of a well spent life. The angel bands will surround you and sing, "All Hail the Power of Jesus' Name; let angels prostrate fall; bring forth the royal diadem and crown you one of them."

Let us give thanks for God's mercy—give thanks for his saving power.

J. B. TULLIS.

THE GOODS.

You've got to have the goods, my boy.
If you would finish strong;
A bluff may work for a little while,
But not for very long;
A line of talk all hy itself
Will seldom see you through;
You've got to have the goods, my boy,
And nothing else will do.

The fight is pretty stiff, my boy,
I'd call it rather tough,
And all along the route are wrecks,
Of those who tried to bluff.
They couldn't hack their lines of talk,
To meet the final test,
You've got to have the goods, my boy,
And that's no idle jest.

—Bide Dudley, in Exchange.

HENRY BIDLEMAN BASCOM.

of the General Conference in dividing the old Western Conference into two bodies. To this Conference young Bascom, now sixteen years of age and a licensed exhorter, was a visitor, having at the cost of prodigious manual labor secured the means of buying a horse and otherwise equipping himself for the journey. His object was not at this time to enter the Conference, but only to learn and appraise as far as he might the greatness of the calling he so ardently desired to espouse. The president of the Conference was the venerable Bishop Asbury. From the bearing and personality of this apostolic man he received at this time impressions that distinctly shaped and determined his later career. Especially as touching Asbury's conservative view of slavery as it was being dealt with by the church, so different from his former radical view, as also touching the more apparent matters of Methodist administration, he answered with instant and steadfast conviction. In these matters the Methodism of the South found in him one of its most brilliant and dependable leaders.

In February, 1813, he was licensed to preach, and in the autumn following, being well advanced in his seventeenth year, he was received as a probationer into the Ohio Conference. The three years succeeding found him traveling circuits in the midland of Ohio and the mountain reaches of Western Virginia under conditions of labor and evangelistic returns characteristic of the field and time. Only one thing differentiated him from the men, young and old, of his fellowship, and that was his amazing eloquence and his power of acquiring and using knowledge. The future orator and ecclesiastic was manifested in the rustic circuit rider.

In appearance young Bascom was unusually handsome and impressive, and his manners were refined and punctillous. His dress also, while it materially differed in nothing from the style of the day, became an offense to the older itinerants. These things, with his ornateness of public speech, seemed to be out of harmony with the spirit of the pioneer ministry and provoked such opposition to him as led to his being denied admission into full connection in the Conference until the end of his third year of trial.

In October, 1813, he was transferred to the Tennessee Conference and stationed at Danville, Ky. Two years were spent on this work, and in 1819 he was stationed at Louisville, where he was continued for two years. It was about this time that he met that remarkable man, Henry Clay, and the two formed a close friendship which lasted to the end of Bascom's life. The statesman and the preacher were mutually attracted and each was accepted as matchless in the eloquence of his own realm.

At the session of the Tennessee Conference held at Hopkinsville in September, 1820, the Kentucky Conference was formed, and Bascom fell into that jurisdiction. At the end of the year 1822 he was transferred to the Ohio Conference. In 1823 he was stationed at Stubenville, but was scarcely settled in the pastorate when he received notice that through the advocacy of his great friend Henry Clay he had been elected chaplain to Congress. His services in this distinguished station were not a source of great satisfaction to him, and he passed through its tenure in somewhat mechanical fashion. During the summer, autumn, and winter following the adjournment of Congress he preached in the cities of Baltimore, Philadelphia, and New York and at many camp meetings and other assemblies in a continuous triumph of evangelistic power and to the admiration of countless multitudes. At Annapolis he preached before the national Congress, the heads of the army, and the venerable Marquis de la Fayette, who was there as a guest of the nation.

In 1825 he was stationed at Pittsburgh. From this time forward to the end of his life his years were crowded with incessant and abundant labors and such as counted in the history of the church. For a time he was missionary secretary in the Pittsburgh Conference, in the discharge of the duties of which office he traveled over wide areas, thrilling the cities of the land with the eloquence of his pulpit deliverances. For some time he served as agent of the African Colonization Society, whose efforts resulted in the establishment of the republic of Liberia. After this he was called into the educational field and organized and became president of Madison College, so called for the then incumbent president of the United States. Later he was made professor in Augusta College, and still later, having transferred to the Kentucky Conference, he became president of the Transylvania University, at Lexington, where he rendered his crowning service as a Christian educator.

As Dr. Bascom he was sent as a delegate from the Kentucky Conference to the General Conference for the quadrennial sittings of 1832, 1836, 1840, and 1844. At the last named session fell out the memorable debates on slavery and the nature of the episcopacy which led to the separation of the church into two jurisdictions. In these debates Dr. Bascom took a leading and determinative part and was the author of the historic protest and other documents upon which the plan of separation was finally settled. He took a no less important part in the proceedings of the Louisville Convention of 1845, which formally and finally settled the separation and created the connection since known as the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. At the first General Conference of the Southern Church held at Petersburg, Va., Dr. Bascom was elected to edit the newly established Quarterly Review of the church. This fairly was the beginning of the distinctive literature of the Methodism of the South, which reached a climax in the editorial work of Albert Taylor Bledsoe, between the years of 1870-77. Discussional periodical writing in America has known no exhibit which quite reaches the level of this remarkable output.

At the General Conference of 1850, the body having decided to elect but one bishop, on the second ballot Dr. Bascom was declared elected and was duly consecrated at the hands of Soule and his colleagues. But the honors and preferences thus accorded him by his brethren were not long to be enjoyed in the earthly house. Having held in September of the year the session of the St. Louis Conference, he returned to Louisville, suffering from a long-endured and incurable malady and expired in the presence of his family and sorrowing friends at about the hour of seven o'clock on Sunday morning, September 8, 1850. On Tuesday, the 10th, his body was laid to rest in the soil consecrated by the memorial we now dedicate to his deathless name.—The Christian Advocate.

NEW SCRIPTURES FOR THE BLIND.

The American Bible Society is publishing for the blind the first interpoint edition of the Standard Revised Version of the Old Testament in Revised Braille, Grade one and one-half. There will be fifteen volumes in the new standard size, 11x11 inches. The Scriptures will be supplied at 50 cents a volume, the lowest price ever offered. This has been made possible through the use of new methods of embossing and binding.

The American Bible Society is also supplying its present edition of the Small Volume of Scripture Passages, designated by the blind as their Pocket Bible, at 25 cents a copy instead of 50 cents as formerly. The Society continues to supply volumes of Scripture for the blind in other editions and systems at $1 a volume.

Scriptures for the blind are supplied by the American Bible Society at considerably less than cost, and these prices will obtain so long as the Society's appropriation for this phase of its work will enable it to meet the difference between the cost and sale price. Further information may be obtained from the American Bible Society, Bible House, Astor Place, New York City.—American Bible Society Bulletin.

ARGUING WITH TRAGEDY.

By Halford E. Luccock.

"When they reached the disciples they saw a large crowd around them, and some scribes arguing with them."—Mark 9:14 (Moffatt).

That was all the scribes could think of doing in the presence of a heartbreaking suffering—argue about it! Coming down from the mount of transfiguration, Jesus finds the epileptic boy in the midst of a distressing seizure. The scribes are waging hot argument with Jesus' disciples. The disciples, helplessly enough, were at least trying to do something to relieve him. The scribes were merely disputing with them, rushing eagerly from secondly to thirdly and fourthly.

That heartless argument of the scribes represents a permanent liability of humanity confronted by acute need—the danger of approaching it from the angle of a theory, of being lost in arid speculation when the demand is for sympathy and help. Emerson records a biting picture of a professional mind, more interested in analysis and speculation than in cure. "How is the patient today?" he once asked the village physician of Concord, concerning the minister, Doctor Ripley, lying at death's door. "It's the most correct apoplexy I ever saw," replied the physician. "Face and hands livid; breathing sonorous, and all the symptoms perfect." And he rubbed his hands with delight!

Correct apoplexy! Fine comfort for the patient and his family!

Argument has been a persistent reaction to tragedy. In the presence of some monstrous social evil decades of argument and fiery rebuttal have been engaged in as to whether the State or Federal Government should regulate it. What matter that the tragedy went on unchecked as long as the argument was engrossing? It has been the same with war. Men have even gone out to non-Christian lands and, in the very presence of appalling miseries, have allowed much of their energies to be dissipated in theological and ecclesiastical pitched battles.

There is only one Christian response to suffering—well expressed by Shakespeare's heroine Miranda: "Oh! I have suffered with those that I saw suffer." When that Christlike identification with need is made, there is no heart, mind or breath left for disputation. The cure for heartless argument has been perfectly pictured, strangely enough, by the author of the most terribly pessimistic poems in the English language, James Thompson, author of "The City of Dreadful Night." Thus he describes a walk in London:

"And I wandered about the city, the vast metropolis, which was become a vast necropolis ... desolate indeed I was, although ever and anon, here and there, in wan, haggard faces, in wrinkled brows, in thin compressed lips, in drooping frames, in tremulous gestures, in glassy, hopeless eyes, I detected tokens of brotherhood, I recognized my brethren in the great Freemasonry of Sorrow."

Jesus was the founder of that greatest of all fraternal orders, the Freemasonry of Sorrow.

THE ORIGIN OF CHEESES.

The cheesemites ask how the cheese got there
And warmly debated the matter;
The orthodox said that it came from the air,
The heretic said from the platter.

They argued it long, and they argued it strong.
And I hear they are arguing now,
But of all the brave spirits that lived in that cheese
Not one of them thought of a cow!

BABY'S PLAYTHINGS.

Ten cunning little playthings
He never is without—
His little wiggle-waggle toes
That carry him about.

They look so soft and pinky,
And good enough to eat.
How lucky that the little toes
Are fastened to his feet!

Ten little pinky playthings
He cannot eat or lose,
Except when nursey hides them
In little socks and shoes.

HOW JOHNNY WAS CURED.

Johnny was a great boaster. If he heard a playmate tell of something he had done, no matter what it was, Johnny would give a snort, and exclaim:

"Pooh! That's nothing! Who couldn't do that?"

One evening the family sat around the fire in the sitting room. Father was reading, grandma and mother were sewing, Alice and Joe were studying their lessons, when Johnny came strutting in. He took a chair by the table and began reading "Robinson Crusoe."

Presently Joe, who was younger than Johnny, went up to his brother, saying: "Look at my drawing, I did it to-day in school. Isn't it good?"

"Pooh! Call that good! You ought to see the one I drew! It beats yours all hollow!"

Joe was rather crestfallen, and little Alice, who had a sympathetic heart, pitied her brother, and going to Joe, asked him to let her see his drawing.

"I wish I could do as well as you, Joe," she said, hoping to revive her brother's drooping spirits.

"Pooh!" sneered Johnny, "you needn't try to draw; for girls can't make even a straight line."

It was not long before Mr. Boaster left the room for a few moments. When he came back, everything seemed to be going on as when he left. Father was reading, grandma and mother were sewing, and Joe and Alice were busy with their lessons.

"At last I have finished my hem," remarked grandma, folding the napkin she had been hemming so industriously.

"Pooh!" said mother, contemptuously, "that is nothing. I have done two while you are doing one!"

The children looked up quickly; for who would have believed she would have spoken so? It was not like her to do so.

Grandma picked up another napkin and began hemming it, but said nothing.

"Father, look at my examples, please. I have done every one of them and have not made a single mistake," said Alice, crossing the room to where her father was sitting before the open grate fire.

"Pooh, that's nothing," replied her father, not even taking her paper to look at it. "You ought to see the way I used to do examples when I was your age!"

Poor little Alice was greatly astonished to hear such a discouraging and boastful remark from her generally kind father, and she was about to turn away when he drew her near to him and whispered something in her ear which brought the smiles to her face.

For a few minutes no one said anything and work went on as before. Johnny was greatly engrossed in the history of Crusoe's adventure, and the other children continued their studies.

"My flowers look so well! I believe that the geraniums are going to bloom again," remarked mother.

"Pooh! They are not half so thrifty as those I used to raise. Why, I had flowers all winter long, and you have had only a few blossoms in the whole winter," said grandma, contemptuously.

"What is the matter with everybody?" thought Johnny. He had never known them to be in such a humor as they were that evening.

When father remarked presently that he had stepped into the grocer's and been weighed that afternoon, and that he "tipped the beam" at 168 pounds, and that was doing "pretty well" for him, mother said crossly:

"Pooh! You call that doing pretty well? Old Mr. Benson weighs 225 pounds, and no one ever heard him bragging of it."

Everybody laughed. Father shouted. It was such a surprise and grandma got up and left the room to keep from choking with laughter.

"Father," said Johnny, "what are you all laughing about? Is it at me?"

"Well, we are not exactly laughing at you. We thought we would try your way of boasting of our accomplishments and see how you thought it sounded; but mother spoiled the game before we had finished it."

Johnny looked rather sheepish the rest of the evening. He wondered if he was as disagreeable as the older folk that evening when he boasted of what he could do or had done, and he resolved to break himself of the habit.—Our Morning Globe.

HOW GOOD IT TASTED.

"I touched the goal first!" cried Carrie. The rest came running up one by one, all of them just as hot and tired as Carrie.

"I wish I had a drink," said Clara.

"So do I," said Rob.

"I think I saw a drinking fountain down at the end of this path," said mamma. "Suppose we all go and look for it?"

In a few minutes the children were drinking to their hearts' content, giving the first drink to Bennie and Baby May.

"Isn't it good!" said Carrie. "It just seemed as if I couldn't wait another minute, my throat was all so dried up, and now I am ready to play again."

"Yes, indeed, water is one of our best friends," said mamma. "What would we do without it?"

"We'd have to drink lemonade," said Clara.

"But how could we make lemonade without water?" asked Rob, laughing.

"Well, then, we could drink milk," said Clara.

"But cows would not give milk very long if they did not have nice, fresh water to drink," said mamma.

"And the grass would dry up so they wouldn't have anything to eat," Rob said.

Mamma smiled. "Yes, that is true, Rob. Everything would dry up pretty soon without the rain and the dew which God sends so lovingly. One year when I was a girl, we lived in a part of the country where there was never very much water, and that year especially the wells and cisterns became dry all around us. We had to get all our water from a river five miles away, and it was brought in barrels, so you see it did not taste very fresh when we got it. And we had to be careful to use as little as we could for cooking and housekeeping and everything. How glad we were when the rains came!"

"I'm glad we have plenty of water right at home," said Carrie, and all the children thought the same.—Apples of Gold.

THE IMP OF DISCOURAGEMENT.

This splendid little story, which is quoted from an old clipping of unknown origin, points its moral so plainly that there is nothing we need to say to simplify the lesson it teaches:

In the Street of Life, walking in the darkness of the shadows, hungry old Satan was out hunting with his dogs, the little imps of human weakness. A man came walking down the street. Satan said to the little imp, scowling with a bitter face: "Go, get him for me!"

Quickly the little imp crossed the street, silently and lightly hopped to the man's shoulder. In his ear he whispered, "You are discouraged."

"No," said the man, "I am not discouraged."

"You are discouraged!"

This time the man replied, "I do not think I am."

Louder and more decidedly the little imp repeated, "I tell you, you are discouraged."

The man dropped his head and murmured: "Well, I suppose I am."

The imp, darting back to Satan, said proudly: "I've got him; he is discouraged."

Another man passed. Again old Satan said: "Get him for me!"

The proud little demon of discouragement repeated tactics. The first time he said, "You are discouraged," the man replied emphatically, "No!" The second time the man replied, "I tell you I am not discouraged!" The third time he said, "You lie! I am not discouraged!" And he walked down the street, his head erect, going toward the light.

The imp of discouragement returned to his master, crestfallen. "I couldn't get him," he retorted. "Three times I told him he was discouraged. The third time he called me a liar, and that discouraged me!"—Exchange.

THE TEN SERVANTS.

There was once a king who had a little daughter whom he loved very much. He wanted to make her a beautiful and wise princess, so he sent her to a country where she was to pass through many schools and learn lessons that would fit her for her father's home. This kind father did not send his daughter alone. He gave her ten servants to wait upon her and care for her.

Two of these servants were to show her all the beautiful and useful things that she would meet in her absence; and when she got homesick they were to tell it to father, and he would hear and comfort her.

Two more were to help the little girl to hear sweet music and sounds that would tell her about what she saw and bid her always remember her father's love.

Two more were to carry her wherever she went; and poor indeed would she have been without the little servants.

Another told her all she wanted to say to those around her, and sang songs of praise to her father, the king.

Two of them helped her to do everything to make herself and others happy.

But the last servant was seen only by her father and herself. This last servant always told his little mistress to love her father dearly, and not want to guide the other servants to do what would displease him.

Sometimes the princess would say to herself, "Father is not here, and I will do what I please;" then, in spite of this servant's pleading, she sought to guide the others into forbidden paths, and thus brought upon herself trouble and pain.

At last the loving father gave a command to each one of his daughter's servants, calling them by name as he spoke. The names and commands were these:

Little Eyes, look up to God;
Little Ears, hear His word;
Little Feet, walk His ways;
Little Mouth, sing His praise;
Little Hands, do His will;
Little Heart, love Him still.

—Buds of Hope.

GOD IS GOOD.

And, all day, I sent prayer like incense up
To God the strong, God the beneficent,
God ever mindful in all strife and straits
Who, for our own good, makes the need extreme,
Till at the last he puts forth might and saves.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. Waldo W. Moore sends a telegram reading as follows: "Osyka, Miss., has a remarkable Missionary Society—every member tithes." That is remarkable indeed—and very fine.

Rev. E. M. Shaw writes from Iuka, Miss.: "We are in our new home at Iuka, and a good one it is. Our reception was full of genuine Christian fellowship and hospitality. We preached twice to good congregations Sunday, despite the rain. We are happy to have so fine a people to serve."

Southern Methodist University announces the gift of two $200 scholarships for the benefit of students of its school of Theology, both coming from the Texas Conference recently held in Houston. The donors of the scholarships are Bishop S. R. Hay, bishop of the Conference, and the S. M. U. Ex-students' Association of the Conference.

Rev. R. B. Craig, district evangelist of the Aberdeen District, North Mississippi Conference, writes: "Can the Spirit of God move in the winter as well as in the summer? Plan to hold your revival the first of the year. I would like to hold at least four meetings within the bounds of the Aberdeen District during January and February." Brother Craig's address is Houston, Miss.

A news item in the Clarion-Ledger, Jackson, Miss., from Harrisville, Miss., reads: "The people of this section of the State, including all denominations, are profoundly grieved at the transfer of Rev. Geo. G. Yeager from the Harrisville-Braxton charge to a station church at Meridian. He is an exceptionally strong preacher, pastor, and a man of high intellectual attainments. He is universally loved."

The First Methodist Church, Brookhaven, Miss., gave a "turkey dinner" in honor of the new presiding elder, Dr. J. L. Decell; the new pastor, Dr. A. F. Watkins; the other Methodist pastors of the city; the Board of Stewards, and the Junior Board of Stewards on Tuesday evening, Nov. 27. The new officers of the Board of Stewards are: President, S. E. Moreton; vice president, A. B. Furlow; secretary, K. W. Bridges; treasurer, W. D. Davis.

Rev. E. S. Lewis, Corinth, Miss., writes, under date of Nov 18: "We had our first service this morning. Had a magnificent congregation. A most cordial reception has been given us on every hand. The outlook for the year is most encouraging. We have a fine people here, every department of the church being well organized. Rev. A. T. McIlwain did an excellent work here for the past two years and could have remained as pastor indefinitely. The decks have been cleared and we are ready for action."

On last Sunday, Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Cohen celebrated the forty-second anniversary of their wedding. For 42 years Mr. and Mrs. Cohen have been actively identified with every interest of the Carrollton Avenue Methodist Church, this city, giving liberally of their money, time, and talents for the promotion of its work. As a token of esteem, the Men's Bible class of the church presented them with beautiful flowers, which act was expressive of the high esteem in which this fine couple is held throughout the church. The present pastor of Carrollton Avenue, Rev. H. L. Johns, and all the former pastors of the church joined in sending a telegram of greeting from Lake Charles, where the Annual Conference was in session.

Your Gift Will Purchase An Income---

Annuity Bonds of the Board of Missions produce an attractive income. The income is at the highest rate consistent with safe investment and, as a rule, higher than the average commercial investment of equal security.

Annuity Bonds of the Board of Missions not only provide to the purchaser an income that will not shrink, but they bless others in that they make it possible for the missionary to interpret to humanity the love and mercies of God in healing the sick, in clothing the naked, in feeding the hungry, and in teaching and preaching the Gospel to all people and to all nations.

Annuity Bonds of the Board of Missions will be issued in exchange for cash, bonds, stocks, lands, and partial cash payments made monthly.

THE BELLS OF THE KINGDOM.

By Albert D. Knapp.

Ever sweeter to me ring the bells of the Kingdom. Often in the walking moments of the morning I hear them as far-away music; and I lie still in my bed to listen, and tell God how beautiful it is. Every now and then through the day, brief lulls in the jargon and jostle of the street, I hear their ringing—the symphony of eternity amidst the voices of time. I hear it as God bidding me not to lay up treasure upon earth, lest, when He comes, He finds me playing wanton with the true riches.

Sometimes, when the day's rush of work would allure me from quiet and content, I take down my New Testament—mentor in hours of temptation—and read again: Let not your heart be troubled. A little while, and I will come. Or I read in the vision of the last enraptured seer: Behold he cometh with clouds, and eye shall see him. I close the book and look out on the troubled world, the wild and noisy world, the blind and heedless world, saying to myself: "It has been so from the beginning, and for how many ages is it yet to be?"

But the bells ring on, now far away, now nearer, and I know I love the music of them—its comforting, ravishing sweetness.

All absorbed in the vision, faith again ascendant, I see Him coming. Troops of angels go before Him; troops follow after; thousands hover over Him; thousands under the sapphire pavement of His throne. I wait attent for the sound of trumpet and clanging horns. The vision dims and passes, and He is not here; but the bells ring on, nor lose any of their sweetness, nor my faith its high hope.

In the mists of the morning, in the evening fog and dew, no glittering pageantry, but quietly and without observation, He cometh. In every gentle word, in kindly thoughts and deeds, in brave, strong souls, in all true manliness and womanly purity, He is coming; and every eye shall behold Him.

Ring on, sweet bells! And sing, O angels of Bethlehem: Peace and good will toward men. I will open my heart to His coming; I will hasten it, loving His world more fervently, finding unspeakable joy in comforting sad hearts, making weak hands strong, and helping blind eyes to see beauty and goodness everywhere.

And the bells ring on, and will; and the music grows ever sweeter and sweeter; while I pray without ceasing, Father, Thy Kingdom come!—Selected.

THE WIDOW WHO WON.

By Luther E. Lovejoy.

In our World Service office was an interesting young man, commonly known as "Pat." He is quiet and undemonstrative, somewhat sarcastic, and does not invite familiarity. I had labored under the misapprehension that he was a sort of temperamental Ishmael, "ag'in' the government," whatever that might be. Accordingly I had inferred that he would naturally be critical of whatever the rest of us were doing, and probably particularly unfriendly to stewardship. What was my surprise, therefore, when we happened to be alone in the office, to have him say to me: "I am very much interested in Christian stewardship and in the work of your department. I have had some stewardship experiences of a quite intimate sort."

Concealing my surprise, I said: "I am very glad to know that. Tell me of your experiences."

"One bleak December day in 1889," said Pat, "we laid my father to rest in a little cemetery in Central Ohio. My mother was left a widow with five little children. The oldest, Frank, was sixteen; I was three, and between us were two more boys and a little girl. The relatives gathered about, after the funeral, and wondered what poor Aunt Nan was going to do now to keep her little brood together and keep them from starvation. 'Why, I'm going to the farm,' she said, 'and bring my children up as a Christian family.'" (It appears that the father had been a Methodist preacher, who had somehow acquired a little farm, but unstocked and without money.)

The relatives protested, but the mother stood firm, and three or four days after the funeral the little party sorrowfully took the train for the little farm. The neighbors came, with sympathy and condolences, and said to the mother: "Now, let us help you. Frank's a husky boy; we'll take him and hire him out for $16 or $20 a month and his board, and you take care of the other children, the best you can. But don't try to run the farm."

"No," said the mother again, "I must keep my children together, bring them up right, and educate them, and this winter Frank must go to college."

"Go to college!" Was the woman wild?

So the neighbors went away, saying among themselves: "Of course Mrs. Mac is a perfectly good Christian, but a plain fool. Anybody can see that."

The struggle began. In the winter term Frank went away to Ohio Wesleyan University. His mother helped him all she could, and he did all he could to help himself. Times were hard. There was little money to be had. The mother was obliged more than once to horrow money of her neighbors, and at that time the interest rate was 8 per cent, and often 10 and 12 per cent.

The struggle went on. By and hy another son was sent to college, and at last Pat himself. Three, at least, of the hoys went to Ohio Wesleyan, and graduated, and then to Boston University and graduated. It was there I first met Frank. Three sons became Methodist ministers, one a Christian business man, and the daughter a minister's wife. Some record for one family, and a poor widow!

"That's a remarkable story," I said. "But what's all this got to do with stewardship? Of course your mother was actually practicing the very highest form of stewardship, hut—"

"O," said Pat, "of course mother always paid her tenth. And it wasn't any skimped tenth, either. It was a tenth of her gross receipts. You tell us that the tithe is a tenth of the net income, and that's right; but mother took the first tenth out of all she raised—eggs, hutter, chickens, grain, apples, potatoes—without figuring the cost of production, and laid it up for the Lord—no lame ducks or dead calves for the Lord's portion. He always got the hest."

"You know," Pat continued, with the glimmer of a reminiscent smile, "whenever I think of the tithe I can smell coffee. Mother used to put her tithe money in an old coffee can, away up on the shelf, and our church and Sunday school money always smelt like coffee."

"Well, hy and hy, in that prosperous farming community, they had to build a new church, and here again mother practiced her ten-per-cent habit—she furnished a tenth of the whole cost of that church. But it was a good investment. For out of that little country church have come seventeen Methodist ministers, including mother's three, and even the stingy Methodist brother who collected the fourteen cents compound interest at last got grace enough to send his own sons to college to prepare for Christian service."

"But, of course," I hear some level-headed, practical, "feet-on-the-ground" hrother object, "all this was hardly rational, fit only for old-fashioned Christians, in a crude and bucolic period of history. This mother was douhtless a good, humhle, simple-minded, country woman, and her lamblike sons probably grew up to he plodding, unprogressive, obscure Methodist preachers!"

Well, maybe; let's see.

It is no mark of genius to doubt or to sneer, nor are all humhle, trustful disciples simpletons. Her practical wisdom was so ahundant that she became the oracle of her community, the Solomon to whom the neighbors came with their disputes and troubles, an unofficial judge, a Deborah in this present-day Israel. She became, in the hest sense, the "leading memher" of her church. She kept up with the times and with her college sons. She was elected and served as a memher of the Methodist General Conference. Her name is Nancy J. McConnell, and this youngest son is the Rev. Charles M. McConnell, professor in Boston University, and her eldest son is Bishop Francis J. McConnell, whose character and ahilities would adorn the record of the church in any century, and whose career renders lustrous the healthy, sacrificial, and full-orbed stewardship of a nohle mother.

In ten thousand Methodist homes to-day such stewardship is thriving and bearing fruit.—Central Christian Advocate.

AMERICA'S GIFT TO ANCIENT LANDS.

By John R. Voris, Associate General Secretary, Near East Relief.

I stood on the balcony of the American House at Jebail, Syria. Jebail is the seaport town called Gebal in the Book of Kings. It was to this town that the cedars of Lebanon were brought from the mountains to the Mediterranean to he floated as rafts down the coast of Haifa, and from there taken overland to the Holy City to build the Temple of Solomon. It was here that the Egyptians and later the Romans found a port of entry, and it was here that they left notable monuments now heing uncovered hy the French.

Below me where the soft waters of the Mediterranean lapped against the shores, I could see the dim outline of slender columns of an ancient Roman temple, recently uncovered by the excavators, and could fancy, at least, that I could see a great sarcophagus in which the earlier Egyptians had huried one of their leaders. In my mind's eye I could see the great cedars of Lebanon drawn on rough wheels hy a multtude of dark-skinned servants, cedars that would go to build a temple of the Lord. Raising my eyes, I saw outlined against the sky above to my right a great castle built by crusaders in the twelfth century.

I found myself awed by the march of history. I was conscious of being on ground trodden hy the kings of old. Alexander the Great had been here, Philip of Macedon, and Napoleon. In imagination one could review civilization as it marched past. Each conqueror had left his monument in marhle or stone.

Earlier in the day I had heen talking with some of the older boy leaders of the American orphanage center and their teachers, and now I thought of the monument America was erecting there, not a monument of hrick or stone, hut one measured in terms of human life. In the building near me seven hundred hoys were sleeping. Fine, healthy and alert youngsters they were. I had seen them all at their work, at their meals, in the sea enjoying their morning plunge, and also in the church service. All these boys owed their lives to America's gifts of food and shelter and care. And I said to myself: "We're not leaving a crusader's castle or a Solomon's Temple or Roman monument or even an Egyptian sarcophagus; not even a shrine or church. We have invested our money in childhood."

Here we are leaving the kind of a monument that the earlier civilization would have scorned. Just children! Even to-day childhood has hut little place in these Eastern lands. Parents love their offsprings, to he sure. But children are valued only as potential adults, not as children. Civilization is huilt for adults. The result is that there is a complete lack of child care movements. Money, if spent, is expended upon shrines and great churches built of lasting materials, but not for education or care of children. Now comes the richest nation on the globe, and it leaves only children, strong, sturdy, trained children to he sure, hut only children. A strange spectacle!

And so I turned to my couch with a feeling of content, for I knew that we had not only huilded unselfishly, but we are leaving a trained leadership among youth and a new ideal for all childhood.

We have brought to the land of him who said, "Suffer the little children to come unto me," a demonstration of the meaning of that message.

THE CHALLENGE.

Ever since Vera Schofield came home from college her pastor had been waiting for her. He knew that things—the deep and vital things of life—had changed for her. She had come from college with a splendid body and a keen mind, hut she had not come hack to the old faith. Knowing her well, he was sure that she would come and tell him—she was too honest not to.

One afternoon she came. There was pain in the clear, gray eyes, hut no flinching. She went straight to the mark.

"I'm going to hurt you, I know, Dr. McGregor. I've come to tell you that I don't feel ahout things—about God and Christianity—as I used to. Sometimes I wish that I could, hut the old helief seems so small heside the universe that science reveals."

"You mean through hiology?"

The girl's face hrightened. She had not expected him to understand.

"That's it!" she cried. "Biology explains everything so. And that's sure, not imagining. You can see it through your microscope—the evolution of—everything!"

"Except one thing. Did you ever see spirit under your microscope?"

"Why—no," the girl answered. "Of course not."

"Yet you don't deny that you aro spirit, do you—that the real you is not in flesh or nerves, or brain, but only uses them?"

"Of course!"

"And the times when you wish you could keep the old helief have been times when there was some spiritual demand?"

"When—Kathleen's baby died," Vera answered, with a catch in her voice.

"Exactly. And, child, you are only beginning life. The need will grow greater and greater. Now I have a charge against you. You have not been honest with God."

"Not honest!" the girl cried indignantly.

"Not honest," he repeated. "When you were studying chemistry, for example, you had to examine some haking powder, let us say, for alum; you couldn't see it or taste it. What did you do?"

"I tested for it."

"Exactly. You acted as if the alum were there and applied the test. Well, you have no right to say that God is not until you have applied the test. His Son gave it. 'God is a spirit, and they that worship him must worship him in spirit and in truth.' How much time have you given to seeking for God in life?"

Vera was silent.

"Unless you will do that each day—praying and using your Bihle and keeping at the problem until you have solved it—you are less fair to God than you have heen to your hiology or your mathematics."

Vera rose. "Thank you," she said. "I accept the challenge."—Youth's Companion.

FIRST DOUBT, THEN DISCOURAGEMENT.

Discouragement is an inclination to give up all attempts after the devout life, in consequence of the difficulties by which it is heset, and our already numerous failures in it. We lose heart; and partly in ill-temper, partly in real douht of our own ahility to persevere, we first grow querulous and peevish with God, and then relax in our efforts to mortify ourselves and to please him. It is a sort of shadow of despair, and will lead us into numherless venial sins the first half-hour we give way to it.—F. W. Faber.

Hope is the warp through which the shutties of the Christian's life shouid pass. We can fill these shuttles with the threads of discontent and impatience, and weave a cloud so thick and dark that the face of our dear Lord is hidden from us, or we can fill them with the threads of praise and thanksgiving, and weave a cloud through which that Face is always plainly visible. Which is the better way?—Selected.

DEATH OF MRS. C. L. DICKERSON.

The sudden death of Mrs. C. L. Dickerson, on November 2, brought grief and sorrow to the little community of Shrock (Attala County), and to all who knew her. She had made Shrock her home for twenty-four years, having moved here from Kosciusko, where she was well known and loved.

She truly lived her life for others, never failing to grasp every opportunity to help those in need, and to comfort and encourage those in trouble and sorrow. Her ideas for the higher and nobler things were felt by all who came in contact with her. She was president of the Shrock Missionary Society for ten years and a most active member of the Methodist Church. Her influence in our community will help us to carry on, but the place she filled among us will ever be vacant.

She leaves a husband and four children—Dr. Blanche Colton Williams of Hunter College, New York; Professor Wirt A. Williams of State Teachers College, Cleveland, Miss.; Dr. Sidney Williams of Pittsburg, Pa., and Mrs. Joe Shrock of Shrock, and a host of kindred. Our hearts go out in love and sympathy to these loved ones.

Funeral services were held at the home by her pastor, Rev. A. W. Bailey. She was laid to rest in the Kosciusko Cemetery. The love and esteem that was held for her was made manifest by the lovely and numerous floral offerings.

ONE WHO LOVED HER.

THE SWEETEST SOUND.

I might have sung great songs to-day—
My soul was in the muse's sway,
And yet, somehow I lost my song;
My hands were busy all day long.

I bound a hurt and throbbing finger,
And dried the tears that tried to linger.
I buttered bread, and baked a cake;
I kissed two sleepy eyes awake.

My song is gone—but in my heart
Is music that can ne'er depart.
The world will never hear its note—
Its sweet srains did not leave my throat;

But resting softly in their beds
I see three tousled little heads,
And, sweeter sound than any other,
Come whispered words: "I love you, mother!"

RESOLUTIONS OF APPRECIATION.

Whereas, in accordance with the rules of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, our pastor, Rev. M. L. White, will be sent to other fields of labor, having served here full four years:

Therefore, be it resolved:

1. That the members of this congregation take this menas to express their appreciation of his loyalty to the church, and his untiring efforts in behalf of Christianity in this community.

2. That this congregation pray God's richest blessings on him and his good wife wherever they may go.

3. That these resolutions be spread on the minutes of the fourth quarterly conference, and a copy be sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

Signed: Official and lay members, Lake, Miss., by

THOS. H. VANCE,
Recording Secretary.

RESOLUTIONS OF APPRECIATION.

Jackson, Miss., Oct. 30, 1928.

To the Fourth Quarterly Conference of Capitol Street Methodist Church, Assembled.

Whereas, our beloved pastor, Rev. T. M. Brownlee, has served us in the cause of Christ and his church, faithfully, earnestiy, loyaliy, and untiringly, for the past two years; and,

Whereas, he has endeared himself to us by his kindly, patient, and sympathetic devotion to all, his kindness and brotherly love for those who were sick and in distress, or sorrow; and,

Whereas, the Conference year is now closing and he goes to the Annual Conference to meet at Philadelphia, Miss., beginning Nov. 7;

Therefore, be it resolved, That we, the members of the fourth quarterly conference of Capitol Street Methodist Church, do hereby express to Brother Brownlee our affectionate iove, high esteem, and full appreciation of him, both as a man, and our spiritual advisor.

Be it further resolved, That we earnestly hope and pray that the Annual Conference may see both the wisdom and great benefit that will be derived by returning him to us for the next year; and,

Be it further resoived, That if it be the will of God and the plan of the Conference that he be returned to us, that we do hereby piedge ourselves, jointly and separately, to give him the very best that is in us, moraliy, mentaliy, and spiritually, to faithfully support him and to uphold him in his every effort to advance Christ and the church.

Be it further resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be delivered to Rev. J. Lloyd Deceli, presiding eider, for transmitting to the Bishop, and a copy be spread upon the minutes of the Board, that a copy be sent to the New Orieans Christian Advocate, and aiso a copy be given to him as a token of our love and esteem.

G. M. LESTER, Secretary.

METHODIST EDUCATIONAL TOURS.

Many Methodists entertain a worthy desire to see the places and peoples studied about in the colieges and universities, churches, Sunday schools, Epworth Leagues, Missionary Societies, pastors' schools, summer conferences and the church periodicais.

A study of the history of civiziiation, reiigion and philosophy, fine and iiberal arts and sciences, is largely to be credited for this noble desire to enrich the minds and imaginations of those desiring actual contact with these historic piaces and countries.

The emphasis being piaced on religious education through the various educationai interests is causing a zeal among many members for further information concerning the religious history and environment of such men as Luther, Wesley, Knox, Caivin, and our early writers, Scott, Wordsworth, Cariysie and others.

With the endorsement of the Executive Committee of the General Board of Education, the Transportation Bureau is making plans to provide information concerning an appeaiing form of educational travel to Europe during the summer of 1929. The pian is to be known as the "Methodist Educationai Tours." The exact date and cost of the tours will be avaiiable soon.

These tours will inciude England, Scotland, Belgium, Switzerland, and France, and will require about thirty-five days from New York back to New York at a cost of approximately five hundred dollars.

An extension of fifteen days into Itaiy, at a small additional cost, will be arranged for those who desire it.

The executive secretary of our Steamship and Railroad Transportation Bureau will provide the travel service without cost to those interested.

A communication addressed to Rev. W. M. Cassetty, Jr., Executive Secretary of the Transportation Bureau, P. O. Box 26, 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn., will receive a prompt reply containing the required information for those who may desire it.

The Transportation Bureau was suggested nine years ago by Mr. Cassetty, who assisted in the organization. It has rendered a distinct service to the church. Mr. Cassetty has been its secretary from the beginning and is provided with the necessary facts not only concerning the above mentioned Tours, but the Bureau having the agencies of steamship and touring companies, he can provide free information regarding travel to any part of the world.

NOTES.

The address of Mrs. T. B. Cottrell, Corresponding Secretary of W. M. S., of the Mississippi Conference, has been changed from Meridian to Forest, Miss.

Mrs. B. F. Lewis, Mississippi Conferencs Historian, reports that many auxiliaries have not sent her their histories. She urges that this matter be attended to at an early date. She is gathering from these histories some very interesting data heretofore unknown. One item concerns the age of some of our auxiliaries. From the report from Washington, Mississippi, she finds that Mrs. Caroline Thayer, Principal of Elizabeth Academy, organized the Washington Auxiliary in 1826—one hundred and two years ago. Mrs. Lewis regrets that she did not have this report before Miss Howell wrote her book as this would have put the Woman's Missionary Society of the Mississippi Conference far ahead in the matter of early societies. Other auxiliaries may be withholding information of importance to Mrs. Lewis. So please see to it that the history of your auxiliary is sent to Mrs. Lewis at once.

A PIONEER PROMOTED.

From Pickens, Mississippi, comes the news of the death of Mrs. Minnie Suber McCool, who had been a member of that auxiliary for forty-six years past. Her going is a loss to the town as well as to the auxiliary.

The Publicity Superintendent at Okolona, Mississippi, writes of an "all day" meeting held there on the eighth of November. During the day a free will offering of $30 was made by these consecrated women. They were challenged to further effort by a talk from the pastor of the local Baptist church. Rev. Mr. Riley. He told them that to meet a church debt the members of his congregation had put themselves on their honor to tithe during October. The result was $499 for the church treasury. Why not tithe? Is there any reason against it except selfishness?

ATTENTION YOUNG PEOPLE!

Young People, your Council pledge for 1928 is $51,925.95. You have already paid $28,688.11 of the amount. This leaves $23,537.84 for you to pay this last quarter. This sounds like a large sum doesn't it, but it really isn't when it is divided among thirty-eight conferences. Last year your pledge of $53,042.87 was overpaid. But you did not pay quite all of it by yourselves for the adults in a few conferences helped their young people. This year at the special request of your Council Superintendent you shall not be assisted by the adults. This is your trust, your obligation, and you must either meet or fail to meet your pledge yourselves. Study the financial report below carefully. See how much your conference lacks of paying its pledge. Find out if every member of your society has contributed to the budget this year. If your society has raised money over and above its total budget do not use it for local work but send it to the conference treasurer and ask that it be applied on the Council pledge. By just a little extra effort your pledge can be met. We are expecting our largest gifts this Jubilee year. We are counting on you, young people!—Young People's Bulletin.

A BUSY BEE.

The Gloster Auxiliary, taking lessons of her little neighbor, the busy bee and improving each shining hour, has produced record accomplishments in the past eight weeks.

Beginning the last Monday in September, we put on, through five consecutive weekly meetings, the Jubilee mission study book "Women and the Kingdom." Mrs. B. M. Hunt, as leader, added her own magnetic enthusiasm and compelling charm to Miss Howell's wonderful array of absorbing facts and living history, and so gave the class a glowing season of inspiration and enrichment. The attendance averaged 100 per cent.

Our Bible leader, Mrs. Priest, is soon to give a like series on "Spiritual Adventuring." The other three books of the "Bookshelf" are passing around in a reading circle. So we are drawing abundant wealth from the treasure-trove of Jubilee literature!

Following this study feast, the supply and local work claimed attention, and we gladly poured enthusiastic energy into the packing of two boxes aggregating $140 and two rummage sales netting $48.

Then, with the coming of Thanksgiving month, we have drunk deeply at the fountain of refreshment in the Week of Prayer services. To make this a memorable time we employed a new feature—we met in homes for these three afternoons, and the devotional season was followed each day by a program of entertainment and concluded with a cheery social hour. The result proved delightfully satisfactory and the attendance most gratifying.

Sunday morning, at the 11 o'clock hour, we entertained a generous congregation with the public program, amplified somewhat into a Jubilee Pageant, presented by children, Epworth Juniors, Young People and Adults. The Week of Prayer offering, all departments, totals $50—one gleaming round dollar for each of our golden years.

And now our faces are set to one more big accomplishment in this epochal year—100 per cent for the Missionary Voice..

Let the Creator's praise arise."

ZONE MEETING AT REEVES CHAPEL, JACKSON DISTRICT.

On October 24th, Reeves Chapel was hostess to Zone No. 3, Jackson District. Mrs. John Bush, chairman, called the meeting to order and conducted the devotional from Mark, 14 chapter. Prayer was offered by Rev. F. L. Applewhite, of Bolton. The roll call found twenty-four present, including three visitors. Clinton was not represented. Mrs. Hagman, of Holly Bluff, was introduced and gave us an excellent talk on "Our Task." Mrs. Bush read a letter from Mrs. Cottrell, reminding us of our pledge, our dues, and history of our auxiliary. After singing, the morning session was dismissed by prayer by Rev. J. O. Ware, of Edwards. The hostesses invited us to a delicious dinner, served under the oaks. The afternoon session was opened at 1:15 o'clock by singing, followed by a prayer by Mrs. Hackler, of Edwards. Mrs. Gaddis, of Bolton,

Is a Prescription for Colds, Grippe, Flu, Dengue, Bilious Fever and Malaria.

It is the most speedy remedy known.

OLD FOLKS SAY DR. CALDWELL WAS RIGHT

The basis of treating sickness has not changed since Dr. Caldwell left Medical College in 1875, nor since he placed on the market the laxative prescription he had used in his practice.

He treated constipation, biliousness, headaches, mental depression, indigestion, sour stomach and other indispositions entirely by means of simple vegetable laxatives, herbs and roots. These are still the basis of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, a combination of senna and other mild herbs, with pepsin.

The simpler the remedy for constipation, the safer for the child and for you. And as you can get results in a mild and safe way by using Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, why take chances with strong drugs?

A bottle will last several months, and all can use it. It is pleasant to the taste, gentle in action, and free from narcotics. Elderly people find it ideal. All drug stores have the generous bottles, or write "Syrup Pepsin," Dept. BB, Monticello, Illinois, for free trial bottle.

Home-Made, but Ends Bad Cough In a Hurry

To end a stubborn cough quickly, it is important to soothe and heal the inflamed membranes, get rid of the germs and also to aid the system inwardly to help throw off the trouble.

For these purposes, here is a home-made medicine, far better than anything you could buy at 3 times the cost. From any druggist, get 2½ ounces of Pinex. Put this into a pint bottle, and add plain granulated sugar syrup or strained honey to fill up the pint. This takes but a moment, and makes a remedy so effective that you will never do without, once you have used it. Keeps perfectly, and children like it.

This simple remedy does three necessary things. It loosens the germ-laden phlegm and soothes away the inflammation. At the same time it is absorbed into the blood, where it acts directly on the bronchial tubes. This explains why it brings such quick relief, even in obstinate bronchial coughs and "flu" coughs.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway Pine, containing the active agent of creosote, in a refined, palatable form, and known as one of the greatest healing agents for severe coughs, chest colds and bronchial troubles.

Do not accept a substitute for Pinex. It is guaranteed to give prompt relief or money refunded.

Malaria in the Blood

GROVE'S TASTELESS CHILL TONIC destroys the malarial germs in the blood and removes the impurities. It restores Energy and Vitality by creating new healthy blood and fortifies the system against Chills. You can feel its Strengthening, Invigorating Effect. It brings Color to the Cheeks and Improves the Appetite. Pleasant to take. 60c.

A package of Grove's Liver Pills is enclosed with every bottle of GROVE'S TASTELESS CHILL TONIC for those who wish to take a Laxative in connection with the Tonic.

BEWARE THE COUGH FROM COLDS THAT HANG ON

Coughs from colds may lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for coughs from colds and bronchial irritations. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of coughs from colds, bronchitis and minor forms of bronchial irritations, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)

CREOMULSION

FOR THE COUGH FROM COLDS THAT HANG ON

Sunday School

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

By Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

The Conference Workers' Council held a meeting at Grenada, Nov. 20, to check up on what has been accomplished and to set goals for 1929. The Council was of one mind, that we go forward by faith on our knees. First, we are to work for at least ten per cent increase in the membership of our schools. Second, we are to hold seven Standard Training Schools, one in each district, one Conference School at Grenada, June 17-22, in the eight schools to issue 500 units. Seven non-standard schools, 100 units, twenty-five classes, 200 units, individual units, 200. Cokesbury schools and classes, 150, 1500 units. Membership Campaign in 50 schools, Evangelistic Campaign, 50 schools, all classes organized into Wesley Bible Classes in 50 schools, Childhood and Youth Week observed in 50 schools, Sunday School Day observed in 210 schools with an offering of $300 in each district, Missionary Day in 210 schools with an offering of $900 in each district, charge and district institutes to be held in each district as a means of reaching these goals.

The following men were nominated by the presiding elders to act as District Superintendents: C. A. Parks, W. R. Lott, H. P. Lewis, A. T. McIlwain, F. H. McGee, J. E. Stephens, and R. G. Lord. They were assigned the following as a minmum task: two institutes. two membership campaigns, two evangelistic campaigns, two classes taught, two schools to observe missionary day, two Sunday School Days, two schools to organize Wesley Bible classes, two to observe Childhood and Youth Week.

Take Notice. If you want a school of any kind or a class taught in your charge you will do well to put in your application before the holidays. It takes time to prepare for any kind of school. Those who have not completed the work for the Gold Seal should let me know the course you lack that it may be included in one of the schools.

The past year Sunday School Day was observed as follows: Aberdeen District, 26 schools, offering, $163; Columbus District, 18 schools, offering, $187; Corinth District, 27 schools, offering, $176; Greenwood District, 27 schools, offering, $237; Greenville District, 23 schools, offering, $294; Grenada District, 18 schools, offering, $186; Sardis Dstrict, 26 schools, offering, $170. Clarksdale made an offering of $70, Grenada, $50; every school on the Carrollton charge observed the day; so did every school on the Swiftown charge, the Byhalia charge, and the Evansville charge; 165 schools observed the day and we are expecting 210 schools to take part the comng year.

We held an institute for the two churches in Water Valley. These two charges propose to take the Program of Work and go down the line until every point is covered. Rev. C. L. Oakes and his wife enrolled to study the Organization and Administration of the Sunday School. The two churches propose to have a Standard school held some time in the near future.

Our plan to finance these schools is to have the churches that mean to take part in these schools to observe Training Day and on that day raise the amount needed. If you know of a better way, there is nothing to hinder you from using your own method. Use some method, however. After a certain point, the more you help people, the less good you do them. Have them pay their way and they will like it better.

When you remit your missionary money, address as follows: Sunday School Board, Grenada, Miss. Also make all checks payable to SUNDAY SCHOOL BOARD. Do this and you will help keep things straight.

Mother!

Child's Best Laxative is "California Fig Syrup"

Hurry Mother! A teaspoonful of "California Fig Syrup" now will thoroughly clean the little bowels and in a few hours you have a well, playful child again. Even if cross, feverish, bilious, constipated or full of cold, children love its pleasant taste.

Tell your druggist you want only the genuine "California Fig Syrup" which has directions for babies and children of all ages printed on bottle. Mother, you must say "California." Refuse any imitation.

Two BOOKS for YOU and Your FRIENDS This CHRISTMAS

For YOU because they will delight you as they have delighted thousands of readers this year.

For YOUR FRIENDS because you will speak about them to your friends when you read them.

For YOU and YOUR FRIENDS because "helpful devotional books are rather scarce," and these will help your friends as they will help you.

"These volumes have been a delight to me as I have gone through them," comments Eugene B. Hawk, of Fort Worth. "I shall speak of both volumes this week in the paper published here at First Church."

Walking with God

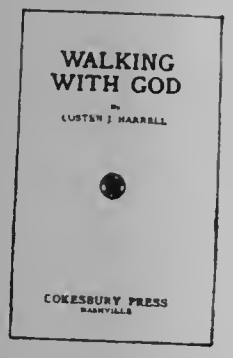
By Costen J. Harrell

We wish we could lay before you the thousands of lines of praise received from the press and readers themselves about this book. The best we can do is to reproduce a few lines:

"I think the studies by Harrell are a distinct contribution to devotional life," writes Eugene B. Hawk. "Wherever you dip into them you find something good," comments the Record of Christian Work. "Ask people to buy it with the idea of reading a chapter each morning," suggests Robert L. Russell. And part of the Theological Monthly Review reads: "The brief interpretation of Scripture passages given in this book are examples of how new interests can be aroused in old truths."

"Messages from the Church bulletin that are brief, to the point, and vital. . . . The subjects are very suggestive."—The Congregationalist.

"Excellent for devotional reading, and good for the basis of many an illustration and Scriptural talk."—The United Presbyterian.



Other comments: "A devotional volume of high order, rings true, and will also be valuable to those who are called upon to give short talks upon any religious subject." . . . "We gladly commend this book for either public or private devotions.

PRICE $1.00
Gift style and binding

"It is really very hard to read either one of these books and not use them in the next sermon," writes R. S. Truesdale, of Lincolnton, N. C. "They are great."

"Both these books are very high type and suggestive."—R. L. Russell.

The House of Happiness

By Bruce S. Wright

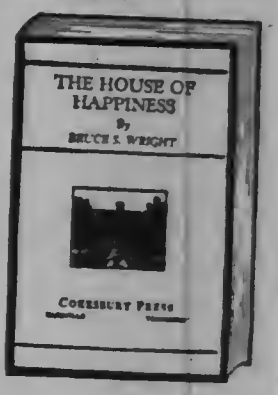
Enthusiastic letters and press comments would fill several pages if we were to reproduce them. Here are a few:

"I purchased this book and am very pleased with it," writes Dr. Fred R. Chenault, of Richmond, Va. "Written in a captivating style, it strikingly reminds us of the studies of F. W. Boreham, the noted Australian essayist," comments the Baltimore Southern Methodist. "This book would be a great contribution to any home. It would save thousands of couples from the divorce courts," declares Eugene B. Hawk. "These are remarkably fresh messages about the house of our own body, of home, Church and world, our faith and God," states the Presbyterian Banner.

"Helpful discussions and a fine presentation of what will lead anyone who builds his life after God's plan into the 'house of happiness.' "—The Baptist.

"A home builder and home mender this book is destined to be, both from the fact that the author has been both."—Evangelical Messenger.

Other comments: "Many a refreshing message is contained herein." . . . "Very helpful and inspirational are the studies in this book." . . . "This is a charming title, and the book is just as charming as the title indicates." . . . "The book is beautifully printed."



PRICE $1.50

Both these books---contents and bindings---make splendid gifts!

FROM YOUR FIELD SECRETARY.

Dear Epworth Leaguers: I'm afraid I'm in a bad fix, because, for the first time, I've forgotten when and where I wrote my last letter to you. Of course, it's because I failed to write last week and I travel so fast that I cannot recall the time of writing my last letter.

After spending a few days at home trying to catch up with my correspond ence, I went first to Eros to meet with the Leaguers there for the first time. We had such a splendid group of young people present and enjoyed a happy hour together.

I spent a very profitable week in Monroe District, assisting our fine District Secretary, Miss Helen Hunt, of West Monroe, and Mr. W. I. McDuffy of Rayville. On Sunday, Nov. 11th, I attended Union services at the Baptist church in Rayville, and in the afternoon went to Chase, La., with Mr. McDuff. We met with the Leaguers of Gilbert at their League hour. On Tuesday evening I was delighted with the fine Leaguers I found at Stealington. With the help of Miss Winnie Riggs of Monroe their pastor, Rev. David Tarner, has succeeded in organizing a fine Epworth League, and their enthusiasm promises to develop the best of Leaguers.

I went to Jones Wednesday night where I met with another new group of Leaguers. Although Jones is a small community, the interest manifested in League work was very encouraging. Since I was unabie to meet with the Leaguers of Lake Providence, I remained in Monroe Monday night. Friday I went to Talluiah and on to Waterproof to assist another one of our fine new Leagues. Brother Smart is fortunate in having a splendid group of young people who are very anxious to follow the leadership of their president, Mr. Clifton Watson, who comes to us from the Mississippi Conference.

The Monroe District Leagues held a meeting in Rayville Sunday afternoon. Leagues from Bastrop, Gilbert, Monroe First Church, Gordon Avenue Church, Monroe, West Monroe and Rayville were all present. Monroe District is trying to keep up with the other Districts in its interest and growth and a bright year of League work is before us.

After the District meeting I returned to Monroe and attended Devotional Services with the Norris Epworth Leagues at Gordon Avenue Church of Monroe. This is a new League in the District but it is certainly manifesting interest and growth.

Leagues who count Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Cayard among their friends will be pleased to know that a new Leaguer has arrived in their family and has been christened Donald Edgar.

Miss Beth Murphy of Arcadia, Ruston District Secretary has improved greatly with the second issue of her monthly 'The Tattler' which she sends out to the Leaguers of her District. The Field Secretary is thinking of employing her as chief editor.

Just about the time I feel that my weekly letter in the Advocate is becoming tiresome to my readers I receive an answer from one who reads my column and I feel that I never want to omit a copy. Mrs. A. W. Turner of Shreveport answered me this week with a sure enough love letter that I appreciated so very much.

Conference is convening now and I am having just the finest time with all these preachers and other friends. At the close of their year's work I'm glad that I can thank them for their loving co-operation and untiring efforts in serving our young people so loyally.

Leaguerly,
ELIZABETH LANGFORD,
Field Secretary.

FROM RUSTON DISTRICT SECRETARY.

Dear Epworth Leaguers:

The Leaguers in Ruston District have been honored to have our Field Worker in our District, visiting the different chapters and giving out new inspiration. We feel that now we can accomplish more work, and are better able to continue on through the rest of the League year. Though she did not get to visit all the chapters as scheduled, we hope that on her next visit she can cover the entire district, for we need her so much, both for information and enthusiasm.

The Arcadia Epworth League carried on a very successful Young People's Revival in October. They were fortunate to secure the services of Rev. Jas. B. Grambling, our Assembly Dean, who delivered a wonderful message each of the five nights which reached the heart of every one who attended. A novel feature of this revival was the contest which was put on to increase attendance. Due to this fact there was a full house every night. Out-of-town Leaguers from Simsboro, Antioch, Bear Creek, Bryceland, Bienville, Minden, Mt. Moriah and Hurricane churches attended. The contest culminated at the close of the sermon Friday night, when every one adjourned to the basement of the church to enjoy a social hour of recreation and refreshments. This revival instilled a spiritual lesson in each Leaguer's heart, and we feel that it will greatly benefit the community.

This District is organizing its Unions and planning to do better and finer work than it has been doing. We hope to have every chapter represented at the summer assembly.

We are glad to report a new Hi-League at Vienna and a Senior League at Eros. Who said Ruston District was the "Baby District" asleep on the job? We're waking up—now watch us grow!

Leaguerly yours,
BETH MURPHY,
Ruston District Secretary.

TEARS.

By Charles N. Pace.

A chemist tried to analyze
The tears that often blind our eyes,
But with the problem could not cope
Since all he had was a microscope.
He did not have the power to see
Their elements of mystery.

He could not find a trace of pain,
For happiness he looked in vain.
The beauty of the earth and sea,
Its wonder and its majesty,
So often cause for silent tear,
Did not beneath his lens appear.

He could not find a sign of woe,
Or joy that set the face aglow,
Or love that has its gain and loss,
Or suggestion of a cross,
Or hope, or prayer, or tender dreams;
Perhaps there's more in tears than seems.

gave us a splendid talk. "Work Among the Colored People in our Community" was discussed by Mrs. Hagman. The following officers were elected for the year 1929: President, Mrs. John Bush; Vice president, Mrs. Robt. Bush; Secretary, Mrs. J. W. Ratliff.

Appreciation of the Christian leadership of Mrs. John Bush and Mrs. J. O. Ware, retiring secretary, was expressed by rising vote from the session.

Mrs. F. L. Applewhite, of Bolton, thanked the ladies of Reeves Chapel for the pleasant day we had spent with them, and for their gracious hospitality.

Raymond invited the zone meeting for the first quarter of next year.

Mrs. Hackler dismissed the meeting with prayer.

MRS. J. O. WARE, Secty.

ZONE 4, SEASHORE DISTRICT.

The fourth session of the fourth zone of the Seashore District was held at Columbia, Miss., Oct. 30, 1928.

The meeting was called to order by the president, Mrs. W. H. O'Donnell, and the devotionals were conducted by Rev. T. J. O'Neli, of Poplarville.

Mrs. H. H. Hinton, of Lumberton, charmed the audience with a vocal solo, "I Am Satisfied With Jesus." After this, Mrs. Thad Tatum, also of Lumberton, discussed "What the Auxiliary Means to the Community."

Miss Sallie Eilis, Superintendent of the Moore Community House at Biloxi, gave a very interesting account of the organization of the mission, and of the work being done in that great institution.

Mrs. Charley Carver, of Poplarville, most delightfully sang "Just As I Am, Without One Plea." Then Mrs. Thos. Ford, of Columbia, district secretary, outlined plans for observance of the Week of Prayer.

Miss Mary Annie Stokes, a deaconess from the Wesley House at Biloxi, told in her charming way of the great work being done through the Wesley House—especially among the foreign element of Bixoli.

After this, recess was taken for lunch, which was served in cafeteria style in the ladies' parlor of the church by the members of the Columbia Auxiliary.

The afternoon session was opened with the singing of the Jubilee hymn. The president then called for reports, and all the auxiliaries within the zone responded. These reports indicate that encouraging progress has been made during this Jubilee year.

A vocal solo was very beautifully rendered by Mrs. Nellie Ford, of Columbia. Then Mmes. A. L. Jones and J. E. Williams, of Picayune, acted a dialogue, illustrating a good plan for securing subscribers to the Missionary Voice.

Since this was the last meeting for this Conference year, officers for the incoming year were elected. Mrs. L. D. Simmons, of Columbia, was elected president, and Mrs. C. McDonald, of Picayune, was elected secretary. Lumberton was selected as the place for holding the next zone meeting.

An offering of $18.75 was taken for Misses Stokes and Eilis. Resolutions of thanks to the ladies of Columbia for their royal entertainment, and of appreciation to Mrs. O'Donnell for her faithful and efficient service as president during the year, were adopted, and the meeting adjourned.

MRS. D. B. STEVENSON,
Secretary.

There's peace in the household guarded by Castoria. Peaceful sleep for Baby. Uninterrupted rest for Mother. For a few drops of pure Castoria will quiet any fretful infant. Or put the little one back to sleep when there's an upset during the night.

Parents, don't try to do without good old Castoria! It isn't fair to the baby, and it makes things hard for you. You can't give Baby medicine meant for grown-ups—or shouldn't! Castoria is the solution. It is always safe. It always does the work. And although it acts as swiftly as an opiate or a narcotic, it contains neither. Castoria is purely vegetable. Give it whenever there's constipation, colic, diarrhea.

No less than five million modern mothers have come to depend on Castoria, for twenty-five million bottles were bought last year! Get yours today; don't wait for some night when it's needed, and the drugstore is closed!

SUNFLOWER MINISTERIAL ASSOCIATION.

The Sunflower Ministerial Association will meet at the Methodist Church in Tutwiler on Tuesday, December 11, at 10 o'clock. At that hour Rev. A. T. McIlwain, of First Church, Greenwood, will preach.

All the preachers, and their wives, of the Greenwood District are members of this association. They are urged to be present. Some new preachers have moved into the district, and they are most cordially invited and urged to be present at the Tutwiler meeting. Any preachers outside the Greenwood District who will join in with us are most cordially invited also. Membership is not restricted to the Greenwood District.

The program of the day will be helpful round-table discussions of plans for the conference year.

ALL MANKIND.

Why do I dare love all mankind?
'Tis not because each face, each form,
Is comely, for it is not so;
Nor is it that each soul is warm
With any Godlike glow.
Yet there's no one to whom's not given
Some little lineament of heaven,
Some partial symbol, at the least, in sign
Of what should be, if it is not, within,
Reminding of the death of sin
And life of the divine.
There was a time, full well I know,
When I had not yet seen you so;
Time was, when few seemed fair;
But now, as through the streets I go,
There seems no face so shapeless, so
Forlorn, but that there's something there
That, like the heavens, doth declare
The glory of the great All-Fair;
And so mine own each one I call;
And so I dare to love you all.

—Henry Septimus Sutton.

How Doctors Treat Colds and the Flu

To break up a cold over night or to cut short an attack of grippe, influenza, sore throat or tonsilitis, physicians and druggists are now recommending Calotabs, the purified and refined calomel compound tablet that gives you the effects of calomel and salts combined, without the unpleasant effects of either.

One or two Calotabs at bed-time with a swallow of water—that's all. No salts, no nausea nor the slightest interference with your eating, work or pleasure. Next morning your cold has vanished, your system is thoroughly purified and you are feeling fine with a hearty appetite for breakfast. Eat what you please—no danger.

JOHN BUNYAN: THE IMMORTAL DREAMER.

By H. H. Smith.

Just three hundred years ago—November, 1628—John Bunyan was born at Elstow, near Bedford, England. His parents were poor but of respectable descent. He was sent to school until he could read and write, but he cannot be regarded as an uneducated man, for, by the constant reading of the English Bible, he learned "how to write his mother tongue with purity and force—an accomplishment which even a university does not always impart." But he learned more than the English language by reading the Bible incessantly. Professor Phelps says: "You can learn more about human nature by reading the Bible than by living in New York." And Bunyan's writings reveal a remarkable knowledge of human nature.

Bunyan grew up in a wicked age among evil companions. He says: "Even as a child, I had few equals in cursing, swearing, lying and blaspheming." However, he seems to have been entirely free from intemperance and licentiousness, habits which were so common among his associates. His profanity was such as to make even the ungodly shudder. But with all his sinful habits, he seems to have had a tender conscience and a strong religious nature. When he began to feel conviction of sin, he was often frightened with terrible dreams, and even in his waking hours was horrified at the thought of a future judgment. His conscience condemned him for using profane language, and he says: "I wished with all my heart that I might be a little child again, that my father might learn me to speak without this wicked way of swearing, and from this time forth I left off my swearing." Hearing three or four godly women conversing on spiritual matters, he was greatly affected by their words and often went into their company to hear them speak of religion. He was tormented with the fear that he might not be among the elect, and with eager longing sought every passage of Scripture that offered any encouragement. He says: "Oh, how I loved those words that spake of a Christian's calling: as when the Lord said: 'Follow me.' 'Oh, thought I, that He would say so to me, how gladly would I run after Him! I cannot express with what longings I cried to Christ to call me. I saw such glory in a converted state that I could not be content without a share therein. Had I a whole world it had all gone ten thousand times over for this, that my soul might have been in a converted state."

Luther's commentary on Galatians brought him untold consolation, and he regarded it before all books, "as most fit for a wounded conscience." It was at the Cross that the load finally fell from his back, and he describes his experience in these lines:

"Thus far did I come laden with my sin;
Nor could aught ease the grief that I was in Till I come hither; what a place is this!
Must here he the beginning of my bliss?
Must here the burden fall from off my back?
Must here the strings that bound it to me crack?
Blest cross! blest sepulchre! blest rather be
The Man that there was put to shame for me!"

Bunyan was baptized about 1655, in a small stream near Bedford bridge. Not long after his conversion he was asked to speak a word of exhortation at some of the religious services of his church. His hearers were deeply moved, and soon afterward he was ordained to the ministry. As a preacher he was so diligent that he was called Bishop Bunyan. After preaching a few years, he was arrested as a non-conformist and imprisoned in Bedford jail. His imprisonment lasted twelve years, because he steadfastly refused to accept his freedom on condition that he give up preaching the Gospel. During the early days of imprisonment he feared that the gallows might be his end. He did not shrink from hanging so much as from fear that when the time came he might

DR. HENRY T. CARLEY.

Henry T. Carley, D.D., a son of the late Rev. Lyman Carley, of the Mississippi Conference, was educated in Millsaps College and in the theological department of Vanderbilt University. He began his ministry in his native state but soon transferred to the Louisiana Conference, serving pastorates in New Orleans and teaching in Centenary College, Shreveport, during the years preceding his election as editor of the New Orleans Christian Advocate. These facts, briefly told, show how thoroughly he was prepared, by his intimate acquaintance with both Mississippi and Louisiana, to edit a journal devoted to the interests of the Methodists in those States, and how fully he was also prepared for this work by his familiarity from childhood with the affairs of our church, and by his literary and theological training.

In the length and the value of his service he made a fine record. For ten years he ably edited the New Orleans Christian Advocate and rendered a great service to the church. During those years some of the mightiest tasks of the church were accomplished—through the Centenary of Missions and other enterprises, and to all of these Dr. Carley gave his unstinted and loyal support and contributed much to their success in the three Conferences which the Advocate serves. As was his right, he expressed his convictions upon great issues before the church, but he did not address his arguments against the men from whom he differed and his policy left no bitterness in their hearts.

He has set a high standard for the New Orleans Christian Advocate and given a chaste tone to its editorial utterances and to its literary form—for Dr. Carley knows his mother tongue and has the ability to use it.

In all he has exhibited the character of a Christian gentleman and made for himself many staunch friends whose hearty good wishes follow him into his important work as presiding elder of the Shreveport District.

FROM THE PELICAN PINES.

By Rev. S. A. Steel, D. D

Well, that lovable P. E.—and they never made a better one—W. W. Holmes, sent me a pass over the railroad, and I went to Conference at Lake Charles. Dr. Wynn treated me kindly, putting me at the hotel, Amen, and inviting me to preach, Amen and Amen! I love to preach. Sixty years' practice has made a permanent groove, and when Sunday comes and I have nowhere to preach, I feel like something has gone amiss. If you don't want me to preach, don't ask me, for I am sure to snap at the chance. And the manager of the Hotel Majestic treated me nicely, gave me a quiet room, and when I left slipped into my bag a couple of ducks for milady. I like Mr. Calvert. He glides about his hotel, with an eye on everything, and making his guests feel easy. I sat vis-a-vis in the dining room with Turner from Nashville, an old-time friend, and Turner from Shreveport, the temperance watch-dog of Louisiana, and that brainy Smith from Centenary, Dean I believe he is—good fellows all. If there is a more beautiful church than Dr. Wynn's I don't know where it is, or one that seems better adapted to its purpose. The acoustics are perfect, especially in the gallery; and everything is as it should be inside. I say inside, for I like a tower, especially one like the one at the Scarritt College in Nashville. A church like Dr. Wynn's is a sermon in stone, more eloquent than any sermon that will be preached in its pulpit.

I came home Thursday evening. I'm on no committee, or board, and had nothing to do but listen. I was strongly tempted to stay just to hear Mars Warren expound the Scriptures each morning; but work at home was urgent. I am trying to get a book ready for the press, and keep my typewriter clicking at a lively rate. I have never made any money by what I have published, but I get a lot of pleasure out of writing. I have Emerson's works in 12 volumes. According to a rough estimate, if my writings were published in book form, they would make more than fifteen volumes the size of his. And I know better if some of my stuff isn't as good as his. (Here is the place to quote against me the proverb, "Self-praise is half scandal." Don't fail to punch me with that). But I live in the South and am a Methodist preacher; he lived in New England, a nursing-mother of letters, and kicked clear out of the harness! He is famous and I am unknown. All right. I'm not kicking. It is what we may expect in this topsy turvy world.

So we go to Lafayette next fall. I hope to be there, for I love old Louis Hoffpauir. He will take good care of the Conference; but I think the Conference ought to select Alexandria as its permanent place of meeting, and not jog around to different towns. Alexandria is central to the territory, has good hotel facilities, and other things needed by a Conference session. We are sorry to give up W. C. Childress. He is a fine preacher and a lovable man, and has done excellent work here. I am glad he landed in a good place, which he doubtless will make better. Homer, O dear me, the old Greek bard. I read his "Iliad" and "Odessey" with endless delight. So, too, we are

THE MEMPHIS MISSIONARY CONFERENCE.

With nationals and Christian leaders from the ends of the earth hurrying o Memphis, Tenn., to attend the first International Missionary Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, January 1-3, 1929; with every town and city in Southern Methodism pledged to support the church-wide gathering by sending its quota of the 5000 delegates; and with every bishop of the church and leading church officials, editors, college presidents, laymen and missionaries behind the movement, there is every indication that the approaching meeting will mark a new day in religious assemblies, according to W. D. Hawkins, director of the Conference, who, with Dr. W. G. Cram, head of the Board of Missions, sponsoring body, and other leaders, spent the week-end in Memphis conferring with local leaders and making final arrangements for the great meeting to be held in the municipal auditorium in that city.

Y. C. Yang, of China, new president of the Methodist University at Soochow, an official delegate and program speaker, has sailed from the Orient, according to advices received here, and is expected at Missionary headquarters in Nashville several days prior to the meetlng.

Wladislaw Dropioski, of Poland, and Joseph Dobes, of Czechoslovakia, are on the way, and Andres Osuna, of Mexico, another speaker of international reputation, will also be ou hand.

Leaders from other denominations who have accepted invitations to speak on the program include Dr. E. Stanley Jones, missionary to India, author of "Christ of the Indian Road"; Dr. Ralph E. Diffendorfer, of New York City, general secretary of the Board of Foreign Missions of the Methodist Episcopal Church; Dr. James Endicott, of Canada, moderator of the United Church of Canada; and Dr. William P. Schell, of New York City, home base secretary of the Board of Foreign Missions of the Presbyteerlan Church, U. S. A.

Among Southern Methodists, the list of speakers includes Bishops Warren A. Candler, James Cannon, Jr., W. B. Beauchamp, U. V. W. Darlington, W. N. Ainsworth, H. A. Boaz and S. R. Hay, all of whom have supervision of mission fields; and Dr. Frank Onderdonk, superintendent of the Texas Mexican Missions. In addition, the program will include the denomination's most capable pastors, laymen and women, who will take part as speakers, presiding officers and leaders of groups.

A popular feature, according to Mr. Hawkins, will be the presence of all the missionaries of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, who are in the States on furlough. It is also planned to bring to the Conference numbers of young foreign Christians who are in America attending college. An international night during the Conference, when representatives of all nations and races will be on the platform to take part, is among the program plans.

Music will be featured and song leaders of ability will be secured. Lamar & Whitmore, church publishers to more than three milllon Methodists, have announced their purpose to issue a special song book, containing old and new missionary hymns; among the latter is "The Missionary Marseilles," recently printed. Folk songs and spirituals by the Paine College colored quartet of Augusta, Ga., promise to lend variety and interest to the program.

Mr. Hawkins, who has returned to Nashville headquarters from Memphis, seat of the Convention, reports local plans are shaping rapidly for the entertainment of the big church body composed of 5000 Methodists representing every department of organization and membership. Local Methodists and the Memphis Chamber of Commerce, Mr. Hawkins said, are leaving nothing undone which will contribute to the success of the meeting.

R. E. Logsdon, director of the Convention and Tourist Bureau of the Memphis Chamber of Commerce, is looking after hotel reservations.

The Rev. Felix R. Hill, Jr., is chairman of local arrangements and Dr. Lud Estes is directing the movement in the bounds of the Memphis Conference, which, in addition to its quota of 200 selected aud 55 official delegates, is entitled to 500 "home guards" from Methodist churches in Memphis.

The idea of the meeting originated with Dr. W. G. Cram, geueral secretary of the Board of Missions, Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and he was authorized by that body to call the Conference, the purpose of which, he says, is strictly inspirational and informational. It is believed the Conference will not only increase interest in the church's missionary program, but will be the means of developing new ideas and policies with reference to foreign missions.

The theme of the Conference is, "A Missionary Motive for this Generation."

The entire church, leaders say, is solidly behind the project, which it is believed will assemble the greatest gathering of church workers which has been attempted in more than a generation.—Secular Press Bureau, M. E. Church, South.

REV. S. W. MILLER GIVE INTERESTING INCIDENTS.

Dear Mr. Editor: I have been thinking of giving you a few thoughts in regard to my association with Sardis, Miss. I was on the Tyro circuit in 1870, and A. J. Sea was at Sardis station, and in March he began a series of meetings, during which time he took sick. The brethren concluded to continue the meeting in a prayer meeting, and use preachers as they dropped in. Two young brethren came in and preached. I also went to see Brother Sea, at which time my horse got loose from me, and Brother Vanderpool took me in his buggy and drove over the town until we found him. In our ride he told me of the meeting and that I must hold the service that night; but why he failed to ask me to preach, I could not understand. In getting to the church several came to me and said, "You must conduct the service." I said: "I have been preaching in school houses and under brush arbors, and if I conduct the service, you must take the bridle off, for I can't work under constraints." They all said, "The meeting is in your hands to conduct as you please." I read a scripture and made a running comment on it and invited penitents, and we had a great service. So when I closed they came to me and said, "You must preach tomorrow night." I said, "Brethren, why did you not ask me to preach to night?" They said, "Those two young college graduates used so much Latin and Greek in their discourses that we were afraid you would do the same." I will not give their names. I preached the next night and Dr. J. W. Boswell, that great man of God, came up from Grenada and took the pulpit. Brother Sea died later and went home to God, whom I expect to see some sweet day.

In 1885 I attended our last district conference before coming to Texas. I stayed with that lovely character and his wife, Dr. and Mrs. T. C. Weir, who told me that Dr. Galloway was to preach for him the first week, and Dr. J. W. Ramsey was to preach the next week, and I must come and preach the third week, which I did. The church was greatly stirred, but no visible results. On Saturday morning, at the close of sunrise prayer meeting Dr. Weir and Brother Terry, that saint of God whom I saw three years ago, were at the pulpit, talking, when Brother Terry said, "Brethren, we had just as well give this town up to the devil." I said, "I don't want to hear you say that any more." "Well," he said, "after the preaching of Galloway, Ramsey, and yours, and no more results, it seems we had just as well give it up." I said, "I have not preached a single time that I have not felt the presence of God with me, and you will see the result of this meeting before long." The next March Dr. Cameron, in his mid-week meeting, saw spiritual power manifest and said, "There will be service here tomorrow night"— and there was eighty-odd souls saved. I ask, where did the revival begin? The great trouble with our modern evangelists and our popular preachers is like Dr. Cottrell once said—one is like a man trying to burst a great rock with his pick and hammer; he is drilling down into the center of the rock to locate his blast, and along comes one of our modern revivalists and says there is no use in that, just hollow out a place and put your blast down and have a chuck. So it is with many of our revivals—they are still-born babes, with a great smoke which evaporates as soon as it strikes the air.

I hope I may be able to attend the sixtieth session of the North Mississippi Conference and be with J. J. Brooks, the only one living who was charter member of that conference with me.

Enclosed find a dollar to renew the Advocate. I am superannuate. Yours in Christ,

Frisco, Texas. S. W. MILLER.

REV. T. W. DYE GONE.

Early Thanksgiving morning Rev. T. W. Dye of Clarksdale passed to his heavenly home. Brother Dye was widely known and beloved by all who ever met him. He was one of the greatest men of the North Mississippi Conference two and three decades ago when there were giants among us.

He was 85 years of age and had been an honored superannuate for several years. He was making his home in the latter days of his life with his son, a distinguished and beloved physician who is in honor and usefulness on the board of stewards of his church.

Brother Dye belonged to that old school of great preachers, theologians, scholastics and expounders of the Word of God of a full generation ago and he was one of the greatest of them all.

He was deeply learned in the scriptures, in the Latin and Greek classics, the great masters of logic, metaphysics, moral and intellectual approaches to the profound question of life and destiny. He was familiar with the best sources of human thought. His mind was of high order and he went to the highest authorities for information and analyzed and thought them through and reached his own conclusions which he was ever able to defend and make vital with impregnable and unanswerable proof.

He ranged with love and interest and the joys of an adventurer and discoverer, the fields of literature, philosophy, and ethics.

His faith in the Word of God, his grip on moral and spiritual things was not second-hand or a vague guess but a living, potential experience, founded on the clearest, deepest insight and fortified by the final and everlasting testimony of the ultimate facts of physical and moral being. His love of the Bible, its great doctrines, its portrayal of redemption and the heights of revealed human and spiritual attainment through grace divine was his specialty and glory. He was a mighty doctrinal preacher. No booted knight of old ever wielded a more shivering lance than did this knight of the Word when false ideas or doctrines came to the fore.

He was a mighty defender of the faith that saves men's souls. And his faith was fully exemplified in his life and character. His whole life was truly genial, sweet, gentle, and full of love and charity for all, without a shadow, a spot or an acid of bitterness or gloom to mar its wholesomeness and attraction. How we loved him can never be known until we are able to speak the language of the New Jerusalem.

Brother Dye was built on the highest lines of intellectual and spiritual manhood.

His funeral was held in the Methodist church at Clarksdale in the afternoon of November 30, marked by a beautiful and loving service, very large and rich floral offerings and a great throng of loving and sorrowing friends. The service was conducted by his beloved pastor, Dr. H. F. Brooks, assisted by Rev. N. G. Augustus, Rev. W. W. Woollard, and the writer; and besides these, others of his ministerial friends were present.

Brother Dye reared a noble family, praiseworthy, useful and honorable. One of his daughters is a noted missionary, the wife of Rev. J. L. Gerdine of historic note and labors in Korea for more than a quarter of a century now.

She was the last one of his loving children to reach his bedside. He was sweetly awaiting her coming. Had given each of the others his parting blessing and message. The chariot was waiting just outside the door to take him home, but the Lord held it until "Daisy" arrived. She entered the room; he kissed her with the last affectionate kisses of his love, patted her lovingly on the back and held her in his embrace a little, then turned over and said, like Simeon of old: "Lord, now lettist thou, thy servant depart in peace." And heavenly peace settled upon the cold face and he stepped into the charlot and was whirled away, like grand old Elijah, to realms of light forever. He had expressed several times the desire to spend Thanksgiving in heaven and the dear Lord granted him his soul's request.

Brother Augustus, a life long and devoted friend to Brother Dye, will write his memoir.

L. M. LIPSCOMB.

TO THE PASTORS AND SUNDAY SCHOOL SUPERINTENDENTS OF THE COLUMBUS DISTRICT.

I have been appointed by the Conference Sunday School Council as District Superintendent of Sunday Schools in the Columbus District. In this position I stand ready to give any reasonable assistance in the field that I am able to do. Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, our Conference Superintendent, will outline and suggest the type and phases of work we should best devote ourselves to. He has already said that he wants us to hold several Sunday school institutes and at least one district training school, in which the presiding elder shall be the director. The place and time for this district school will he determined by the presiding elder. We are asked to raise this year on Sunday School Day's offering at least $300 in the entire district. It is our plan to increase the number of schools giving fourth Sunday offering for missions, so that it will bring in more than last year.

W. R. LOTT,
West Point, Miss.

THE OLD AND THE NEW—UNION AND PORT GIBSON.

Dear Mr. Editor: Just a word from me for your paper. We finished up our quadrennium at Union this last Conference year. As we look back over the four years we are very happy over our stay there.

In the first place, we are the first pastor to serve Union four years in succession since there has been a pastor living there. When we were appointed to Union there were three churches on the work, Union receiving one-half time, paying $1350 for the support of the ministry; had never paid its Conference claims in full (the three churches paying $69 on benevolences the year before we went there); church buildings at Conehatta and Union in very bad repairs; and consequently Sunday schools not organized.

During the first year we built a modern building at Conehatta and equipped it throughout, and we continued to serve this church for the first three years, paying all but a small amount of the indebtedness on building and equipment; paid all claims in full, and increased the pastor's salary. At close of the third year it was taken off and put with Lake charge.

This left Union with full time and Mt. Zion to be served in afternoon. Mt. Zion church paid all claims in full each year and increased pastor's salary.

At Union we remodeled and added to our old building until we have a working plant ample for the fast growing town and church. We paid off all indebtedness on this church, and a small debt on the parsonage, which leaves the property free from debt for the first time in twenty years; a well organized Sunday school by departments, having worship services in each department to themselves; a piano in each of these departments and a nice new Baby Grand just installed for the auditorium. Union paid all its benevolences in full each year, all the Mission Special, and increased the salaries from $1350 to $2400, thus making the two churches on the charge paying $2650 for support of ministry as we closed out the year for meeting of Annual Conference. Also, the two churches have 62 subscribers to the New Orleans Christian Advocate. The parsonage was remodeled on inside, and refurnished throughout, including bathroom fixtures, making it one of the most comfortable and well furnished parsonages we have had the pleasure of being in.

We were read out for Port Gibson Monday noon, packed our books, and were in Port Gibson the following Friday night. We were met by a number of the ladies, who made us feel at home. They had supper on the table for us, and groceries in the pantry to start us off with. They have been nice to us ever since we arrived. The ladies have bought some things for the parsonage and are planning to do more.

Our church building is in bad repair. We do not have much Sunday school equipment—only three small rooms and a basement. We are installing a new heating plant this week. Our people are interested in arranging the basement into a working plant for Sunday school, also make some other repairs to church throughout. We hope to get started at this as soon as we can get plans and specifications from an architect. We want to attempt great things for the Lord this year, and expect great things from Him.

Yours for Service in His Kingdom,

R. H. CLEGG, P. C.

FROM ACKERMAN, MISS.

We are beginning another Conference year under the leadership of our new pastor, Rev. A. R. Beasley. He has been on the ground about two weeks, and we have found him to be more than equal to the occasion. He has filled his appointment here twice and delivered at each time master sermons to a large and appreciative congregation. The people of Ackerman are all highly pleased with our new pastor, and are looking forward to one of the greatest years in the history of the Methodist church at this place. Since coming to us Brother Beasley has met practically all of the people in the town, shaking hands with them in the old fashioned Methodist way, and with it that usual smile which is so characteristic of his winning way.

On last Tuesday night the official board was called together for organization, by the chairman. Every member was present. J. H. McKinnon was elected chairman, C. J. Murphy, vice chairman, Clyde F. McGee, secretary-treasurer, with the following who compose the membership of the board: W. F. Burney, C. E. White, R. B. Fulcher, S. W. Harrington, J. H. Johnson, W. A. Leach, J. R. Brinson, R. L. White, Joe Weaver. After a pleasant social hour, and making plans for the coming year, it was decided to hold a joint meeting with the official board at Weir. Last night we met in the hospitable home of Hon. W. Roy Pollard; the meeting was presided over by the chairman of the Ackerman board. After prayer by the pastor, the apportionment of the churches' finances were discussed freely and satisfactorily apportioned to the two churches. The official board of Weir was then organized as follows: Hon J. T. Moore was elected chairman; E. L. Gatlin, vice chairman, W. Roy Pollard, secretary-treasurer.

Then followed an hour of old time Methodist prayer, praise and experience meeting, each member of the two boards pledging himself to support his new pastor with his time, talent and money. The pastor and his family are happy, and the people of the charge are more than delighted with them. Surely God led the Bishop and presiding elders in sending this good man our way.

Our outgoing pastor, Rev. C. A. Northington, served this charge for two years. Brother Northington is a good man and a hard worker. We hope he is pleased with his new work and wish him great success in his new field.

We desire to thank Bishop Candler and his cabinet for their kind consideration in sending to us a man whom we regard as one of the outstanding young preachers of our Conference.

There are many other good things we might say, but space will not permit.

Trusting the Advocate may have the best year of its history, I am with best wishes,

Cordially Yours,

J. H. McKINNON,
Chairman Board Stewards.

W. S. HOLMES HONORED BY FIRST CHURCH, BATON ROUGE.

Throughout his life Brother Wiiiie S. Holmes has been a faithfui member of, tiie Methodist Church, serving always with consecration, diligence and grave concern, in the high places and in the iow, and ever exemplifying in all aspects of his iife that type of aggressive and effective Christian character which is the ideal of the church.

During twenty years preceding this night he has been the active leader and president of the Board of Stewards of First Church, Baton Rouge, La. These years in the church have abounded in the growth and change experienced in virtualiy every phase of our fast-moving civilization. From a smali struggling membership, and a part-time pastor, his stewardship has expanded through the years as he has provided leadership and inspiration to a growing church.

Each new turn has been braveiy met, with deiiberation and earnest consideration. Each new probiem has been carefuiiy dissected for its elements of good and its elements of bad. Each case has been decided upon its own merits; and where error or mistake, if any, may be found, it wiii be ascribed by aii who know him to a never-ceasing anxiety that justice be done, and that God's right ultimately prevaii.

Now when iiis church is mighty, with its appeai reaching thousands, and its power and influence tracing down with inestimabie benefit and uplift to countiess future generations, his ieadership fuiiy answers an ever-increasing demand, with dignity and with wisdom, with sacrificial and tireless effort, and with purity of motive and sincerity of purpose in all that he undertakes to do.

It is in sadness that we see his active leadership terminate. And yet we recognize that after these arduous years of service it is his just due. We are grateful for his work and for his exampie, and we can best honor him by pledging ourselves anew to the accompiishment in the church of the ideals ever springing up with renewed freshness out of the purpose of his heart.

It is our wish as the newly organized Board of Stewards of First Church in regular session convened on this 19th day of November, 1928, as a further expression of our estimate and love, that Brother Willie S. Holmes is hereby eiected President Emeritus of this Board for the remainder of his iife, in token of which this declaration is hereby unanimously adopted and approved, with instructions to the secretary to spread the same on the official minutes of this meeting.

IRA NABORS,
Secretary of the Board.

FROM THE BRANDON CHARGE.

For the first time in years I have recentiy iost some days from my activities on account of sickness. This time I carried doubie influenza and carbuncies. I did not get to Conference. Shut in, I visualized from day to day Bishop Candler in the chair, saw the secretaries and iooked in on the preachers and iay deiegates. I enjoyed them thus; but it was not equai to being there. O the fellowships of a child of God; the feiiowships of the church; the feiiowships at an Annual Conference! I have had no confiicts with the brethren of the Conference; there are no painful memories; nothing but love for every one of them.

The brethren of my own charge—this includes the sisters—carried on during the closing days of the Conference year just as if the pastor had been at his best. Brother Foreman preached for me two or three times. Though he is not in condition to bear the exactions of a pastorate, he preaches weii, and is a good man. Messages, flowers, fruits, and aii sorts of kind attentions came in from over the charge, and the Missionary Society of Pelahatchie brought in some new rugs and other furnishing for our living room. Just after Conference adjourned I received the teiegram from the Conference, then individual messages began to come in from our preacher brethren. The past few days I have been up again and going on, in part, with my duties. So many have toid me how giad they are to have me continued with them that it helps me regain my strength and press on with gratitude and hope.

These things declare I unto you, that ye may have fellowship with us; and truly our fellowship is with the Father and with the Son. What does any one want to deprive himself of the sacred and sweet fellowship of the brotherhood and that with God for?

ROLFE HUNT.

Brandon, Miss., Nov. 20, 1928.

FOREIGN-LANGUAGE SCRIPTURES FOR NEWCOMERS.

The American Bibie Society is co-operating with the Bureau of Reference for Migrating People of the Home Missions Council and Council of Women for Home Missions in providing for the distribution of digiot foreign language scriptures to foreign-speaking newcomers. This will serve the minister, or church worker who has received the name of an immigrant foreign-speaking famiiy from the Bureau of Reference for Migrating People, as a spirituai introduction. Digiot scriptures are in two languages, English and a foreign language, both appearing on one page. For instance, diglot FATTI DEGLi APOSTOLI is the ACTS OF THE APOSTLES in Italian and Engiish, the right-hand column of the page giving the Engiish, and the left-hand column the Italian, verse for verse.

The gift of a digiot copy of the scriptures which can be read in the newcomers' own language may serve to reawaken interest in the BOOK OF BOOKS, help them to connect with a church in the new home, exert an influence for good, and acquaint them with the English language.

The American Bible Society has supplied the Bureau of Reference for Migrating People with special request bianks for the use of ministers to whom the name of a foreign-speaking family is sent. This enables the minister to forward a request for a particuiar digiot, direct to the branch agency of the American Bible Society nearest him. Pastors who avaii themselves of this privilege will find a helpful means of welcoming and serving the newcomers.

THE CHILD OF THE NEAR EAST.

By May E. Bullock.

Little Lord Jesus, when you were here,
You were a Near East Babe so dear.
In Bethlehem town where you were born
Near East babes are playing this morn.
In the carpenter shops of Nazareth Town,
Near East boys waik up and down.
These are your brothers and sisters small,
Who for love of you have iost their aii.

As Wise Men brought you their gifts from afar,
Following beams of a silvery star,
So we eat a Golden Rule meal today
And share with the chiidren of Far-away,
Who live in the iand and walk on the street
That once knew the pressure of your dear feet,
Doing to them, as we'd like to do
If the Near East babe, dear Lord, were YOU.

METHODIST MINISTERS ORGANIZE ASSOCIATION.

The Methodist ministers of Caihoun County met in the Calhoun City Methodist Church, Wednesday, November 21, at 10:30 a. m., and organized the Caihoun County Methodist Ministers' Association. Rev. E. C. Driskeii was elected president; Rev. D. H. Crowson, vice president; Rev. G. W. Robertson, secretary. The foiiowing members were enrolled: E. C. Driskeii and D. H. Crowson, Calhoun City; G. W. Robertson, Pittsboro; W. W. Hester, Vardaman; J. V. Stewart, Derma; R. T. Carter and E. L. Ward, Slate Springs. After this, the Missionary Society served lunch at the Men's Bible class room. The Association will meet monthly and the next meeting will be at Pittsboro, Wednesday after the third Sunday in December.

GREENWOOD DISTRICT PLANS FOR GREAT YEAR.

The preachers and district stewards of the Greenwood District had a very enthusiastic meeting in First Church, Greenwood, Tuesday, Nov. 27. Brother L. P. Wasson is a very aiert presiding elder and in high favor with the pastors and membership of his district, and planned this combination business and inspiration meeting with characteristically good judgment.

Two of the preachers of the district were prevented from attending on account of sickness, and practicaiiy every charge was represented by at least one steward. About forty were present for the morning session and the noon iuncheon.

Brother A. T. Clanton opened the meeting with a stirring devotional taik on Thanksgiving. After a short taik by Brother Wasson, outiining some of our objectives for the year, Mr. T. G. Tanner, of Indianola, brought a gripping message on the magnitude and joy of our fundamental task. His message was filled with the Spirit and inspired by a deep love for the church and her great task of winning lost men. With such men and such messages, and such backing and stimulation and encouragement for the pastors, the Greenwood District wiil go forward to new and greater triumphs for our Lord this year.

Brother B. P. Brooks, district lay leader, from Belzoni, was present and brought a brief, enthusiastic message. Brother Bennett, pastor at Belzoni, summed up for those present the messages of the morning in three great objectives for the district this year: (1) Bringing men to Christ; (2) Building men up in Christ, and (3) Setting men to work for Christ. Every preacher and layman present caught the vision and the urge of the great task summed up in these three worthy objectives, and went home with a new zeal and a new consecration.

In characteristic way the ladies of First Church served a deiightful Thanksgiving dinner in the church dining hall. This abundant iuncheon so deftiy served added wonderfully to the pleasures of the day. During this social hour the new preachers of the district were introduced and given a cordial welcome into the fellowship of the Greenwood District.

During the afternoon session the regular business of the district stewards was attended to in a fair and business-like way. There was a fine spirit of brotherliness and optimism in the meeting. The assessments were accepted cheerfuiiy. Watch for better reports from the Greenwood District this year than ever before!

Brother A. T. McIlwain, new pastor at First Church, seemed properiy at home and as host of the day cared for every need and made us all realize that we shall continue to have a delightful time whenever we visit Greenwood.

A. Y. BROWN, Sec'y.

The first Vacation Bible School ever held in Passo Fundo, Brazil, was held for two weeks during the month of January, 1928, for the summer vacation in Brazil comes during December, January, and February. The little Brazilian children were enthusiastic about the school work, many of them going without their morning "coffee," the first meal of the day in Brazil, so that they could get to schooi on time at 8:15. Between sixty-four and seventy-four children were in attendance.

In the Songdo North District of Korea there are nine keuipangs with 303 students enroiled. The missionaries in Korea consider these little country schools, or keuipangs, one of the best agencies that can be used to assist in the spread of the gospel. Here the chiidren are taught the Bible and Christian principles by a Christian teacher, and the influence of the school is felt far and wide throughout the community.

HIS UNLUCKY DAY.

Wunst I got mad at ma,
I don't remember why;
But I 'ist walked right off to school
'Thout tellin' her goodby.

A big ol' lump came in my throat
An' purt' near made me cry,
For me an' ma is awful pals
An' allus kiss goodby.

An' might' near ever'thing I did
Went wrong, looked like to me;
I stubbed my toe an' tore my waist
An' fell an' skinned my knee.

I missed in 'rithmetic an' lost
A chanst to git up head,
An' in the spellin' class I left
A letter out of "dead."

An' that ol' lump growed an' I says:
"S'pose if ma should die
Right now an' me a-leavin' her
'Thout kissin' her goodby."

My! that's the longes' mornin'
'At ever I spent, I know,
It seemed like more'n fifty years
'Fore it was time to go.

An' never mind what happened
When I seen my ma, but
'Ist guest I won't go 'way no more
'Thout kissin' her goodby.

BILL, HIS TRUNK.

By Rose Brooks.

"I'm a small, battered, brown steamer trunk, with headquarters in a dark-as-a-pocket trunk room in the blistering hot or freezing cold (according to the season) attic of his house. I call it his house, because I belong to him, but I suppose he belongs to his father and mother, though maybe it's the other way round.

"Of course I didn't just grow, like a mushroom, in my dark-as-a-poeket headquarters. Like all other trunks, I was put together in a factory, and then stood on one end in a big department store, till, one happy day, he and his mother came to a stop by me and he patted me with one brown hand and said:

"'What's the matter with this trunk for me, mother? Do we have to look at every trunk here? Why not just take this one, quick, and that ends our camp shopping and we'll be in time to meet dad for lunch?'

"'This one?' said his mother, pleasantly. 'Why this is the very trunk we're looking for, I'm sure.'

"'The address?' says the salesman.

"'No,' says my boy. 'No, I'm going to camp tomorrow, so there isn't time to send it. We'll put it on the running-board. That's the way it's going to camp, so it might as well get used to it.'

"Onee home, he and his father carried me upstairs to his room, and set me down in front of a couch piled high with his belongings.

"'I'll open up Bill and pack,' said my boy, turning my key and unhasping me.

"'So it's Bill, is it?' asked his father, with never a smile, and I soon learned it was a trick of my boy's to fasten a name on each of his possessions he partieularly liked.

"'Guess Bill and I are going to be partners, years and years,' sighed my boy.

"'Suppose I pack,' said his mother, coming in the door. 'Seems to me I get things in a little flatter.'

"Next morning we all drove about a hundred miles to his camp in the mountains, me roped to the running-board of the side where my boy sat.

"When we got to camp, I was stacked with about seventy other steamer trunks on the ball diamond, and his father and mother said good-bye to us and drove away.

"Around supper time, my boy and another boy lugged me down to a tent, and plopped me down in front of a cot. 'Our quarters, Bill,' said my boy. 'Guess I'll take a look inside you, to locate things, before I shove you under my cot. You're going to be my locker all summer.'

"He unsnapped and unbuckled me, and, as he threw up my cover, wasn't I proud of my orderly piles of things! But he? He routed hastily through my tray, and not finding what he was after, out came the tray, and inside of one jiffy he had taken all my neatly folded clothes in his arms and flopped them upside down. 'Here we are!' he shouted, fishing out a ball and bat and glove that had been at the very bottom of everything. And in goes the tray on top of a perfect muddle, and how he ever knew again where anything was all summer, I don't know. But he never once seemed to mind.

"By that time three other boys were in our tent, each with a steamer trunk dumped in front of his cot, and if every boy didn't do precisely the same thing! I've spent a great deal of time wondering why mothers don't put those three things, ball, bat, and glove on the very top, instead of on the very bottom. But I've never found out. If I could pack myself, I feel as if I could arrange things better than any one in the world. Because that summer was but the first of three when my boy and I went eamping, and each summer the very same things happened.

"Then came the time when my boy and I went away from home to school. By that time I was weak in spots. Straps gave out; locks broke; my tray went all to pieces; and I had to be re-enforced in all sorts of surprising places. I always thought one reason my cover was always giving out was that my boy could never get all his things in, when it was time to go home, unless he and all his tent mates or school mates sat on me, hard, or if that didn't work, danced on me till I shut.

"You can imagine how I felt when his father and mother suggested that my boy have a new trunk to take to school. But I took heart when I heard him say:

"'A new trunk? Why, I can't get on without Bill. I'll take him to the trunk man.'

"And take me he did, and that trunk man and I became fast friends, as well as we might, since I usually spent all my school vacations in his shop.

"Toward the end of our second, and last, year at school, I was terribly worried, because each time I was sent back or forth, my boy added yards of strong rope to hold me together. But once home, he always hustled me off to the trunk man, and somehow I began to get stronger, instead of weaker, perhaps because most of me was gradually getting brand-new.

"So, when we came home finally, our school-days over, I thought, though I was then fairly strong, that most of my time would have to be spent in the dark-as-a-pocket attic. Of course my boy was going to college, but college was so near home that I thought he'd cart all his stuff back and forth just loose in the car.

"I was feeling pretty dull in that dark trunk room, wondering if my career was over while I was yet strong when one day I heard the footsteps I know better than any in the world pelt upstairs.

"'Bill, come out of your hole, you old loafer!' he says, dragging me out of my corner, hoisting me to his shoulder, and running, yes—running, down to his room with me.

"Yes, there on his couch were piles of clothes! Hurrah!

"'Better have a new trunk,' said his father, looking more solemn than he usually does. I wonder if he can think more of that boy than even I do.

"'New trunk!' says my boy. 'Why what's the matter with Bill? Why, I couldn't go round the world without Bill!' So that was it—around the world! Yes, as I found later, we were off on a year's adventuring before we studied any more.

"'New trunk!' says his mother, coming in the door. 'Why, no other trunk could possibly go! Strong? Old Bill's strong as he was in the beginning, and think what he's full of!'

"'Full of? Why, Bill's empty,' said his father.

"'Full,' insisted his mother. 'Full of wonderful things. Just because we can't see them—'

"'But I can,' pipes up my boy, understanding in a wink just what she meant. 'I can see every one.'

"'Of course,' says his mother, with one of her old smiles. 'And every one was worth packing in, wasn't it?' His father, seeing by this time what the two were talking about, was smiling now, too.

"'Yes,' he agreed, 'old Bill's the fullest empty trunk I ever saw.'

"'And when we get back from this jaunt,' my boy spoke as if round the world was about as far as round an apple, 'I'll empty Bill, and he'll be fuller yet! You wait till we get home and see!'

"That's what we know, you see, my boy and I, that wherever we go, we are always coming home again. And maybe that's what all mothers and fathers do—just what my boy said—'Wait and see!'

"Being only a small, battered brown steamer trunk, there are so many things I don't know."—Zion's Herald.

A FOX TALE.

When I ask children to tell me what they know about a fox, they almost always reply: "He is a little red beast, very cowardly and cunning; he kills hens, and has a very bushy tail."

This is all quite true; but Reynard lives a very hard and extremely uncertain life; yet all the while is so dashing and gentlemanly, so quick and clever, that you must forgive him one or two faults.

He begins his life in a niee warm nest of hay, dry moss and leaves, at the bottom of a deep burrow, generally in a sandy bank. His mother tends him, fondles him, plays with him, as only a mother can; her one ambition being to keep him concealed from human sight. Once a man came by a partieular burrow with his dog, hung about for some time near by, and then went away again. That night Mother Fox took her little one up in her mouth by the nape of the neck, and set off to find a safer home. Hardly had she gone ten yards from her burrow when a dog jumped out of some bushes and gave chase.

Mother Fox flew like the wind over hill and dale, on and on, till her breath began to come in short, sharp gasps, and she felt she would soon have to turn and face her pursuer. But never once did she dream of dropping her little one and thereby saving herself; oh, no! cowardly as foxes are ever said to be, the mothers will always die fighting for their young.

Happily for this mother, however, a long streteh of bushes just then came in sight, and, summoning up all her strength she made a last spurt, and crept into the thick of them. The dog followed for a short distanee, but evidently found the thorns too sharp for his thick nose and long flapping ears, for he soon retired, leaving Mother Fox gasping, but triumphant, with her cub in her mouth, and made tracks for a hollow tree which she knew of in the neighborhood. Reaching it in safety, she soon had a warm nest made in the tree trunk, where little Reynard lay for weeks eating and sleeping by turns, till he grew into quite a respeetable fox.

And what a merry little fellow her was! As playful as a kitten, and quite as active; running all around and over his poor patient mother, burying his face in the furry depths of her brush, or, if she refused him that huge enjoyment; flying round and round in a mad race after his own, till he looked for all the world like a woolly spinning top.—B. Grieve, in the Carroll and Brooks Readers.

New Orleans Christian Advocate

ROBERT H. HARPER, D.D., Editor.

CHAS. O. CHALMERS, Manager.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE:

Louisiana Conference—Rev. W. W. Drake, D.D., Rev. R. H. Harper, D.D., Rev. S. J. Davies.

Mississippi Conference—Rev. J. T. Leggett. Rev. W. H. Saunders, Rev. J. E. Gray.

North Mississippi Conference—Rev. J. H. Felts, Rev. J. W. Dorman, Rev. L. M. Lipscomb.

DIRECTIONS:

All checks and money orders should be made payable to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

Communications pertaining to subscriptions and other business matters should be addressed to the Manager, or to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

The Printed Label on a paper shows the date to which a subscription is paid. It is as good as a written receipt. When renewal is made, if the date is not moved forward after four weeks, notify us, and we will make it right.

Communications intended for the Editor should be directed to him at 512 Camp Street. Correspondents will observe the following rules: 1. Write on only one side of the paper. 2. If you have a typewriter, by all means use it; otherwise use a good quality of black ink. 3. Leave a space of at least two inches at the top of the first page; leave a margin of at least one inch on the left-hand side of the page; do not crowd the words and the lines together. 4. Take special pains to write proper names correctly and legibly. 5. Use letter paper if you can get it—not note paper. No attention will be paid to rolled manuscripts.

Editorial

TO BEGIN WITH.

To begin with the new editor will not announce a fixed policy, as he believes that such can best be determined through experience. But he cherishes the hope that he may be able to deal with issues and not with the men involved in them; that he may contribute something in a practical way to the organization and maintenance of the church; that every great cause before the church may be promoted; that a deeper loyalty to the church may be developed and that our people may come to believe more heartily in the doctrines, discipline and destiny of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, loving not others the less but our own the more as a mighty force for righteousness; that the Christian life may be ministered unto, and that, through the consecrated use of printer's ink and by the help of God, a real service may be given unto the kingdom and unto Him.

GRATEFUL ACKNOWLEDGMENT

The new editor is very grateful for many expressions of good will and kindly offers of cooperation as he takes up his duties. He is also greatly indebted to Dr. Carley for hard work done for the Advocate during and following the session of the Louisiana Conference. In the transition it was a necessity that Dr. Carley should bring out the issue following the Conference, and, as one issue of the Advocate, in the work of the office, overlaps another, that he should prepare the "first half" of the present issue. All this he has cheerfully done and left to the writer only-the "second half."

APPOINTMENT, DISAPPOINTMENT, REAPPOINTMENT.

It was the observation of the writer, while serving in the cabinet, that bishop and presiding elders labor long and earnestly at the task of making the appointments, with a deep sense of responsibility and with absolute sincerity of purpose striving to provide well for the men and for the churches. But sometimes a brother feels aggrieved and his appointment means a sore disappointment to him. But it is safe to say that in the field to which he goes he will find the opportunity of service for the Master, a church to be built up and strengthened and many souls to be won.

After all, this is what the preacher professes to desire—a place to serve, rather than to be shown "the way to promotion and pay." Now that the three Conferences in our patronizing territory have been held and all the appointments have been made, it is well to reflect that the poor place can be made the good place and that ofttimes the disappointed brother may gladly be the reappointed brother at the next Conference.

TALKING SHOP.

Talking shop—perhaps we should better say, talking subscriptions—is necessary if the New Orleans Christian Advocate is to render the largest service. In Louisiana and Mississippi there are 200,000 Methodists, but at the present time we have less than 7,000 subscribers. The editor realizes that he is involved in this matter, both in his duty and the service he would render, and he is ready for any opportunity to increase the usefulness of the Advocate—he is open to engagements anywhere in the three Conferences and to any service that should help to popularize the Advocate and add to the number of its readers. But there will be a limit to the time he can give and he craves the help of all the pastors. For, without their help, the largest success can not be realized. The club rates of 100 subscribers at $1.00 a piece; of 50 at $1.25, and of 20 at $1.50, offered until April 1, should make it possible for every pastor, by only a little time and effort, to put the Advocate in the majority of the homes in his charge. We humbly believe that such time and effort will not be in vain. For the Christian Advocate, as heretofore, will advocate those things which vitally concern the work of pastor and people.

You need the Advocate, and the Advocate needs you—needs subscriptions, and needs the news from your charges. Let not the sense of modesty, because you are involved, deter you from giving us items of real interest from your charges. And you are invited to contribute to our pages such articles as will be timely and helpful to our readers.

All together!

Your Gift Will Purchase An Income---

Annuity Bonds of the Board of Missions produce an attractive income. The income is at the highest rate consistent with safe investment and, as a rule, higher than the average commercial investment of equal security.

Annuity Bonds of the Board of Missions not only provide to the purchaser an income that will not shrink, but they bless others in that they make it possible for the missionary to interpret to humanity the love and mercies of God in healing the sick, in clothing the naked, in feeding the hungry, and in teaching and preaching the Gospel to all people and to all nations.

Annuity Bonds of the Board of Missions will be issued in exchange for cash, bonds, stocks, lands, and partial cash payments made monthly.

When writing for particulars please GIVE AGE AND THE NAME OF THE PAPER IN WHICH YOU SAW THIS ADVERTISEMENT. This is important.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. C. D. Atkinson, Louisiana Conference Superintendent of Sunday schools, called at the Advocate office on last Monday.

Rev. J. E. J. Ferguson writes that be has been kindly received by the good people of Monticello, Miss., and that the outlook for a prosperous year is encouraging.

The office of the Oklahoma Methodist, formerly at Tulsa, has been removed to 317½ North Harvey street, Oklahoma City, Oklahoma. Wallace M. Crutchfield is the editor and manager.

Though he knew his appointment in advance, the editor could not escape the task of moving and, in the midst of bringing out his first issue of the Advocate, he has had tbe task of getting settled in his new home at 1233 Lowerline street.

From Vaughan, Miss., Rev. Hilary S. Westbrook writes: "We have been well received by the good people of this charge. Lots of real nice things are being placed in the parsonage for our comfort. We had two very fine services Sunday. We are hopeful and happy in the Master's work.

We regret to learn that Rev. J. B. Cain, pastor at Fayette, Miss., has had to take bis three-year-old son, Neil, to the Piedmont Hospital, Atlanta, for treatment under Dr. Charles E. Dowman. The little lad's condition is considered serious and the prayers of the brethren are asked for him.

A number of preachers and laymen at the session of the Louisiana Conference, just closed, ordered "Tinker and Thinker, John Bunyan," by W. H. Nelson. These have been sent from the publisher and when the book is received the price of same may be remitted by check or money order to the author at 307 Pacific Building, San Francisco, Calif.

Rev. J. A. McKee, Conference Superntendent of Sunday School and Epworth League work for the Northwest Conference, with headquarters at Walla Walla, Washington, called at the Advocate office on Monday last, while passing tbrough New Orleans on his way to Nashville. Brother McKee graduated in the class of 1907 from Millsaps College; began his mnistry in the North Mississippi Conference and later transferred to tbe west.

In a letter to his presiding elder received just before the session of the Louisiana Conference, Rev. A. M. Serex wrote that he and Mrs. Serex were comfortably settled in their home in Brussels and that he had taken up his studies in the university there, looking toward a Ph.D. degree. Brother Serex formerly served as pastor of Second Church, New Orleans, and at tbe recent session of the Louisiana Conference was appointed as a student to the University of Brussels.

New Orleans Methodism has given more than one hundred preachers to the church—tbe latest being Rev. J. Thurlow Barrett and Rev. Carl F. Lueg. Both young preachers were recommended for license to preach by the Epworth church of this city, and, after completing their education, Mr. Barrett at Millsaps and Mr. Lueg at Centenary, they expect to apply for admission on trial. While pursuing his studies at Centenary, Mr. Lueg is supplying the Shreveport circuit.

Group insurance for the bretbren in Louisiana was made possible by action of the recent Conference and by the applications of a number of Conference members sufficient to secure such insurance. Mr. Cockerham, a member of our church at Natchitoches, La., represented the insurance company. The matter was first advocated by Rev. H. L. Johns, pastor at Carrollton Avenue, New Orleans. Group insurance provides protection at a remarkably low rate, as compared to other insurance, and the members of the Louisiana Conference are to be congratulated.

The editor worshipped on last Sunday morning at Rayne Memorial Church, where Mrs. Harper holds membership, and had the privilege of hearing a good sermon on the incident of Aaron and Hur staying up the hands of Moses while Joshua discomfited the Amalekites. The pastor, Dr. J. B. Mitchell, drew from the incident helpful lessons concerning the work of pastor and flock during the new Conference year. After the sermon Dr. Carley and the writer assisted the pastor in the administration of the Sacrament to the large congregation present.

Dr. Charles W. Crisler has been royally received by the good people of First Church, Laurel, Miss., and the outlook for the year is most encouraging. On December 1 the contract was let for the erection of a new young People's Educational Building, to cost approximately $62,000, and to be completed by July 1. The church budget for the year has been fixed at $25,000, most of which has been pledged on the tithing plan. The pastor finds the people of Laurel loyal to the church and enthusiastic over the outlook for a greater Methodism in Laurel.

After kindly expressions of good wishes for the editor in his new task and a hearty offer of cooperation in the work of the Advocate, Rev. S. B. Patts, our pastor at Victoria, Miss., writes as follows: "We closed a very successful year on the Red Banks Circuit. I know I have never labored with a more spirtual and loyal people since I have been in the ministry. They were very anxious for their pastor to state on the Conference floor at Pontotoc, 'Everything paid up in full, Bishops,' and they made it so. We are making a very fine beginning on the new year with good church attendance, church houses repaired and parsonage replenished. On Thanksgiving morning the good people of Victoria expressed their benefits received; a good steward drove up to the back gate of the parsonage home with a wagon loaded with all kinds of good things, corn, potatoes, sausage, and a nice quantity of groceries. 'Surely goodness and mercy will follow us all the days of our life,' when we so anxiously and willingly follow the instructions of God."

IN COMMENDATION OF REV. W. R. HARVELL.

Having learned that our esteemed brother and comrade in the ministry, Rev. W. R. Harvell, has been appointed to another field of service we, the Ministerial Association of Hammond, La., and vicinity, would give expression of our friendship and fraternal fellowship for him in the following resolution:

Be it resolved: That we offer hearty congratulations to our brother, Rev. W. R. Harvell, upon his promotion to a presiding eldership in his church and appointment to a position of increased responsibility and enlarged opportunity;

That we hold him in highest esteem for his work's sake as pastor of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in our city during the past two years:

That we bear glad testimony to his Christlike character, devotion to the kingdom of our Lord and fine spirit of co-operation with his fellow-workers in the gospel of God;

That while we deeply regret the removal of this noble minister and his splendid family from our town and Ministerial Assocation we pray our Heavenly Father's richest blessings upon them wherever they may go and in whatever sphere of labor they may be called.

Respectfully submitted,
WILLIAM E. HATHORN,
Committee on Resolutions.

Hammond, La., Nov. 28, 1928.

JOHN BUNYAN: THE IMMORTAL DREAMER.

fail as a witness to the saving grace of Christ. But even in that trying hour should God hide His face, he would still stand true to His word. "If God doth not come in, thought I, I will leap off the ladder even blindfold into eternity, sink or swim; come heaven, come hell, Lord Jesus, if Thou wilt, catch me, do; if not, I will venture for Thy name."

His library while in prison consisted of the Bible and Fox's Book of Martyrs. During his confinement he experienced great spiritual peace. "I never had in all my life so great an inlet into the Word of God as now. The Scriptures that I saw nothing in before are made in this place to shine upon me. Jesus Christ also was never more real and apparent than now. Here I have seen Him and felt Him indeed." So great were his spiritual consolations that he says: "Were it lawful I could pray for greater trouble for the greater comfort's sake."

One of Bunyan's earliest biographers gives the following personal characteristics: "He appeared in countenance to be of a stern and rough temper, but in his conversation mild and affable; not given to much discourse in company unless some urgent occasion required it. He was free from boasting. He abhorred lying and swearing. He was righteous and charitable. He had a sharp, quick eye, was an excellent discerner of persons, of good judgment and quick wit. He was tall of stature, strong boned, though not corpulent, somewhat of a ruddy face, with sparkling eyes, wearing his hair on his upper lip, after the old British fashion; his hair reddish, and in his latter days, sprinkled with gray; his nose well set, but not declining or bending; his mouth moderate large, his forehead something high, his dress plain."

Another writer adds: "Amid all his violences of religious emotion, Bunyan never lost a certain saving good sense. Shrewdness and manly energy are written on his face." A Quaker called on him one day with a message from the Lord, saying he had been to half of the jails in England, and was glad at last to have found him. To which Bunyan replied: "If the Lord sent thee you must not need to take so much trouble to find me out, for He knows that I have been in Bedford jail these seven year's past."

His immortal work, "The Pilgrim's Progress," written during his imprisonment, has such a heart grip because of its Christian spirit and profound humanity that it reaches all classes. Dr. Samuel Johnson said: "His Pilgrim's Progress has great merit, both for invention, imagination, and the conduct of the story," and speaks of it as one of the few books "one can ever possibly arrive at the last page."

For Macaulay, "during the latter part of the seventeenth century, there were only two minds which possessed the imaginative faculty in a very eminent degree. One of these minds produced the Paradise Lost, the other The Pilgrim's Progress."

Defending Bunyan against the charge of "other-worldliness," Dowden, his biographer, says: "When we consider his fervent beliefs in the future life, that, on the one hand, everlasting felicity, purity, light; on the other, everlasting torture, darkness and gnashing of teeth; on this side the presence of God and of His shining ones forever; on that the perpetual companionship of devils and the damned; imagine him aware of the fragility of human life—a breathing, sensitive, passionate human creature, suspended by a thread between paradise and the pit—imagine this, and applaud him for the fervor of his otherworldliness."

Bunyan had the true preacher's passionate longing: "In my preaching I have really been in pain; I have, as it were, travailed to bring forth children to God."

His last words are said to have been: "Take me, for I come to Thee."

A CHRISTMAS OFFERING FOR SUPERANNUATE ENDOWMENT.

If the pastor of any charge desires to give his people an opportunity to make a special "Christmas Offering" to the Superannuate Endowment quota of his charge, the Board of Finance will gladly furnish attractively designed Christmas offering envelopes for the purpose.

Any pastor who is planning to try this method should wire the Board immediately, Security Building. St. Louis, Mo., stating the number of these envelopes that he will need, and they will be sent to him promptly.

The pastor can distribute the envelopes to his people on any Sunday prior to Christmas Sunday (Dec. 23), stating his purpose in an appealing manner, and urge them to return the envelopes containing their offerings on Christmas Sunday (Dec. 23).

To distribute the envelopes to those who are not present when the public distribution of them is made, the pastor should send a form letter on the subject to them and enclose an envelope in each case.

If the pastors can and will make use of this suggestion, I am sure that every one of them who does so will obtain results that will be surprising.

sorry to give up our very efficient P. E., W. W. Holmes. We old "forgotten" preachers especially love him, because he does not forget us, and seems always to be thinking of our comfort.

An editor for a P. E., and a P. E. for an editor! Well, we will see how swapping harness will work, and are ready to help both Carley and Harper in their work. We are loyal Methodists. I stick to my church and to my political party, though we have some leaders in both I don't like. And they don't like me, so we are even; but the world is big enough for us all so far. Maybe ten thousand years from now it will be a little crowded. But we won't be here. Where will we be? The universe is big, "In my Father's house are many mansions." Dr. John Hannon once nominated me for Presiding Elder of the Milky Way; but it was before the airplane, and besides, the job was too heavy, would have taken me away from home too much. I reckon my "rambling" days are over; but I'm happy in my Den.

RESOLUTIONS OF APPRECIATION.

(Unanimously adopted in regular session, November 16, 1928, by the Board of Stewards of Capitol Street Methodist Church, Jackson, Miss.)

Whereas, after 26 years of faithful, untiring and ever vigilant service for Christ and his church, our much beloved and most highly esteemed Brother, J. L. Enochs, has seen fit to retire as Chairman of the Board of Stewards of Capitol Street Methodist Church, Jackson, Miss.; and,

Whereas, during these many years of untiring service he has been ever faithful, a guiding influence and a great inspiration to the fellow members of the Board; and,

Whereas, having been the beneficiaries of his wise judgment and keen forethought in the administration of the affairs of the Church; and,

Whereas, we feel that the loss of his counsel and wise guidance will be a great handicap; therefore

Be it resolved, That we, the members of the Board of Stewards of Capitol Street Methodist Church, do hereby express to Brother Enochs our full appreciation of the splendid service he has rendered us, and that we extend to him our deepest love and gratitude for his past services and our highest esteem and regard for him, both as a man and a co-worker.

Also, that we extend him our love and best wishes for his future health, peace and happiness. That, while he is not still an active member of our body, as Honorary Chairman for the rest of his life, which, we pray God, will be a long one, we hope he will not refrain from, at all times, giving us the great benefit of his wisdom, forethought and counsel, and the uplifting inspiration of his ever faithful attendance and deep interest in the work of this church and the advancement of the kingdom of God in this community.

Be it further resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be delivered to him, a copy spread upon the minutes of the Board, a copy sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate, and a copy be read to the congregation at the morning service on Sunday.

FAMILY PRAYER.

"More things are wrought by prayer
than this world dreams of;
Wherefore let thy voice rise like a fountain night and day;
For what are men better than sheep or goats
That nourish a blind life within the brain,
If, knowing God, they lift not hands of prayer
Both for themselves and those who call them friend?
For so the whole round earth is every way
Bound by gold chains about the feet of God."

Should Christian hearts, then, be strangers to this sweet exercise? Should Christian homes be silent as to prayers? Ah, not only in the sanctuary, but in individual hearts and homes should this breath of faith go up to God. Morning by morning, or evening by evening should the family meet in this blessed exercise and ask God's blessings upon the day's work done, or guidance in the duties forth to which they go. It would be a strength and blessing to the parents' hearts in the midst of their care and their responsibility. It will be like a sheet anchor to those young souls whom God has given you, holding them fast in all the storms of life, or if they should break away from their early moorings, then like a beacon would it stand to guide them safely back to port. The old home, the family altar, the voice of prayer—how much they mean and how deep their influence upon the wayward and the wandering! The old church, God's holy day, the means of grace in praise and prayer, how much these mean to the weary, the burdened and oppressed! How much this blessed intercourse with God means to every heart, whether expressed in public or in private, for where prayer is offered, God is there ready to hear and bless.—William Carter, Ph.D., D.D., in "The Other Side of the Door."

The BEAUTIFUL ROSE WINDOW of NOTRE DAME

A Masterpiece of Permanent Beauty and Color

THE Famous Rose Window of the Cathedral of Notre Dame in Paris is a work of infinite beauty and splendor. It is perhaps the masterpiece of all art glass windows. Built in the Thirteenth Century, it stands today unsurpassed in beauty and excellence of workmanship. The color of gorgeous gems and precious stones are wrought into this magnificent spectacle for the admiration of passing thousands through all the years. If a world-wide search were made for a monumental material approaching the beauty of the assembled colors of the famous Rose Window, such material would be found in

It is found, also, that the beautiful colors of Winnsboro Granite come from the various crystals it contains, which are identical in substance to many of the finest of precious stones and jewels of the order of the amethyst and moonstone. When the surface of this granite,—which is a composite of these actual precious stone crystals,—is highly polished, all the beauty and color of these jewels become visible. Could a more beautiful monumental stone be found anywhere than this?

Winnsboro Granite is most lasting because it is composed of the most durable mineral known. It is superbly beautiful because it is made up of the substance of precious stones and gems. Inscriptions on it are clearly legible because of the marked contrast between cut and polished surfaces.

Be sure that "Winnsboro Granite" is specified in your contract for monuments. Like other high quality materials, there are many inferior substitutes, which resemble this granite on first appearance, but do not possess its lasting qualities and permanent beauty, because they contain more deleterious elements, such as water, lime and iron. These elements tend to disintegration and discoloration.

Have your monument dealer furnish you with a personal guarantee from the quarries that the monument you purchase is cut in genuine Winnsborn Granite.

The certificate of the quarries is signed by B. H. Heyward, Treas., and General Manager, whose signature insures genuine Winnsboro Granite. A facsimile of this signature is reproduced below.

FIVE CLIPPINGS FROM CHURCH AND SECULAR PRESS:

There are 800 missionaries in Japan. More than 170,000 Protestant and 70,000 Catholics have been converted. In number of converts the Presbyterians are first; Episcopalians, second; Methodists, third; Congregationalists, fourth, and Baptists, fifth.

THE CALL IN JAPAN.

"The opportunities for preaching the gospel in Japan were never greater than they are to-day," says Dr. S. H. Wainwright, who recently returned to that country after a year's furlough. "Great is the need for workers and urgent is the call."

It is in the rural districts that the need for preaching of the gospel is greatest, for even after fifty years of work in Japan we have never been able to advance with the gospel into the Japanese villages. One reason for this seeming neglect of at least 65 per cent of the Japanese people is because the country folk of Japan are extremely conservative, and any outsider, even though he be a Japanese from a neighboring village, has always had great difficulty in gaining a hearing. He has always been considered a "yonder man," and that was enough reason for holding him at arm's length. But to-day radical ideas are penetrating into rural Japan and are working all kinds of havoc among the farmers. And great is the need for the gospel in these sections, greater than ever before.

THE JAPANESE CORONATION.

Hirohito has been enthroned as Emperor of Japan—the 124th in the Imperial line. But the manner of his enthronement in Kyoto, the nation's ancient capital, differed from previous ceremonies of coronation in at least two particulars.

For the first time, newspaper correspondents were allowed to witness the ceremony. A concession, that, to the power of the press and the determination of the people to share in the ceremony. For the first time, also, the Empress was enthroned with the Emperor, mounting her own throne and receiving her own coronation. And that, unquestionably, is a recognition of the new status of womanhood in twentieth-century Japan.

PROHIBITION LAWS IN CHINA.

Leaders of the Nationalist (Kuomintang) party in Kansu Province have set about it to enforce stricter discipline upon party members. Henceforth, according to a regulation recently passed, no member of the party shall indulge in gambling or the use of alcohol or tobacco. Penalty for the infraction of this rule is expulsion from party membership.

AMERICA'S CHINESE VOTE.

En route to Washington, Vice President-elect Charles Curtis was flooded with telegrams. The first was probably the most interesting. It was from New York City and signed by John T. Find for the Chinese-American Citizens' Alliance. It read:

"We are particularly gratified that Chinese-American votes in New York have increased 500 per cent, of which nine-tenths were cast for you. For the first time in the history of this city American women of Chinese ancestry voted."

There are some 75,000 Chinese in the United States. Of this number only those born in the United States have citizenship rights.

Windham, of Lena; A plea for completion of unfinished task, illustrated by reading of a beautiful poem, Mrs. Dr. K. P. Wood, of Lena.

A letter was read from our Conference President, Mrs. Alford, of McComb, stressing the necessity of reaching our goal for the Jubilee year.

Vocal solo by Mrs. James Allen Dahney, of Carthage. Benediction for noon hour, Rev. M. L. McCormick, of Carthage. A delightful plate lunch was served by the Carthage ladies.

Afternoon session opened by singing song No. 68, "O Zion, Haste."

Scripture reading, 12th chapter Romans, Rev. T. B. Winstead.

Prayer, Brother W. H. Wood, of Lena.

Vocal Solo, Mrs. Dr. K. P. Wood, of Lena.

The nominating committee placed the following names in nomination to serve as officers for the ensuing year: Mrs. Dr. K. P. Wood, Lena, Zone Leader; Mrs. Claude Sanders, Harperville, Secretary.

At what age is a man in his prime?

Many a young man old before his time

EVERYBODY will tell you something different. Some people are past their prime by the time they're forty. A few never know what it's like to feel in their prime. And then you talk to some hale and hearty man of 65, and he'll tell you he's been in his prime as long as he can remember.

"I'm still in my prime," he'll declare. "It's all a matter of how well you feel. And that's largely a matter of keeping your system in good working order. Living by regular schedule.

"Nujol helps things function like clockwork. Makes everything normal and regular, just as Nature intends it to be. Nujol is not a medicine. It contains absolutely no medicine or drugs. So it can't possibly upset or disagree with anybody.

"It's just a pure natural substance. It not only keeps an excess of body poisons from forming (we all have them), but aids in their removal. It's these poisons that sap your health and energy, slow you up, make you old before your time."

Start the Nujol habit now — no matter whether you're only 20, or whether you're getting on in years. Buy a bottle today. You'll find Nujol at all drugstores. Perfected by the famous Nujol Laboratories, 26 Broadway, New York. Sold only in sealed packages.

Keep up the treatment for the next 3 months — faithfully — and you'll never want to go back to just trusting to luck again.

Sunday School

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

Thanksgiving service at Alexandria was a great occasion. The new educational building at First Church was crowded for the union service. The sermon was preached by Rev. W. C. Ramsey, pastor of the Presbyterian church.

The eighty-third session of the Annual Conference at Lake Charles is now past history. The Conference was a great one in all of its elements. The weather was ideal, hospitality unexcelled and the spirit of its membership earnest, serious and hopeful.

The Sunday School Board accomplished its work in three official meetings, at which the spirit of unity and co-operation prevailed. There were few changes made in the Conference Board Staff: Dr. Frank L. Wells takes Dean R. E. Smith's place as superintendent of Adult Work and Miss Lois Hammett takes the place of Mrs. R. C. Culpepper as Conference Elementary Superintendent.

The General Council Meeting is booked for December 7-12, at which we hope to have several members of the Conference Board Staff present. Last year we had five members of the Conference Staff present.

The Conference Board decided to hold its State-wide Conference on April 2-3, at Alexandria. The Board accepted the use of the new educational building at Alexandria for this meeting. Entertainment at this State-wide Conference will be on a pay basis.

Dr. F. N. Parker has tentatively accepted an invitation to give the Bible messages at our State-wide Conference in April.

At the Annual Conference many encouraging Sunday school notes were given by presiding elders and pastors in their annual reports. The presiding elder of the Monroe District, Rev. E. C. Gunn, reported three new Sunday schools organized.

Perhaps the four oldest Sunday school superintendents in service in Louisiana Methodism are: Mr. Z. T. Price of Evergreen, A. M. Mayo, Lake Charles, T. W. Camp, Haynesville, and T. W. Holloman of Alexandria. Three out of the four were in attendance at Lake Charles. Brother Price is in his 82nd year and has been superintendent over forty years. Brother Mayo and Brother Camp have served as superintendents over thirty years. Mr. Holloman has served between twenty and thirty years.

The Conference Board nominated, and the Conference elected Judge E. L. Walker to take the place of Mr. J. L. Caldwell on the board. Business prevents Brother Caldwell's attendance at the board meetings. The other lay member of the board present was Mr. S. M. Collins, faithful superintendent of the Sunday school at Monroe. Both of these laymen added much to the meetings of the board.

The General Board representative at our Annual Conference this year was Dr. Fennell P. Turner, Secretary of Missionary Education and Foreign Extension. Dr. Turner rendered valuable service at each of the meetings of the board, and was the main speaker at the Anniversary of the board on Thursday night.

He writes: "It was a great pleasure to be present at the meeting of the Sunday School Board and have the opportunity for fellowship with you during those days. Congratulations on the success of your work in the Louisiana Conference and the progress which is being made in promoting the Sunday school work in that territory."

Mrs. F. C. Wren of Winnfield writes: "We observed Childhood and Youth Week the last week in October. We closed the week with special services on the evening of October 28. Brother Wier gave an impressive sermon. We had a very good attendance of adults, and our Forward Step was to secure chairs for the Junior Department."

Mrs. R. E. Smith, Conference Superintendent of Parent-Teacher Work, in her report said: "One of the greatest handicaps to the work is the lack of leaders. We hope to overcome this to a certain extent, by having courses bearing on the Home, taught in our Training Schools during the year. This year there were two such courses given, one at Shreveport and one at New Orleans. We respectfully request the pastors to bear this in mind, when assisting in planning for their schools to be held in 1929."

Mrs. Smith rendered special service at the State-wide Conference last year, and will no doubt plan another great program for this work during the State-wide Conference of 1929. I wish all parents in Louisiana Methodism could realize that "Training of Children is no mere side line; it is a main business for those of us who are parents."

C. D. ATKINSON,
Conference Superintendent.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

The past Sunday was Mission Sunday. We have received replies from a very few of the schools. We are anxious to have each Sunday school keep up this year so that our support to the cause of missions both at home and abroad will be regular and that it will also be larger.

I want to call attention again to the fact that we are going to support China with our part of the Dual-Extension money this year and to ask all who are interested to watch the Sunday school literature and other magazines for articles on China, to make this work interesting to the Sunday schools.

We received approximately $150 Sunday School Day money after the session of the Annual Conference; it would have helped us much if we could have gotten this money before Conference met.

There are many mistakes in the Sunday school table. We have tried to audit them but were unable to make an accurate audit as we had checked so few Sunday schools this fall. We are reporting both a loss of membership and Sunday schools this year, when in fact we had a gain of members and of Sunday schools.

Childhood and Youth Week reports are coming in slowly; we would appreciate all of those who observed the week sending in their reports immediately. We are anxious to gather all the data to compile for further use.

Pray for the work and the workers.

JOHN C. CHAMBERS,
Conference Superintendent.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE EPWORTH LEAGUE NEWS.

We have just received the announcement of Miss Ina B. Anderson's marriage to Mr. Clinton Coyt Simpson, on Saturday, Nov. 17, 1928, at Laurel, Miss. Miss Ina B. is our very efficient Epworth Junior Hi-League secretary for the Newton District, and all correspondence intended for that officer should be addressed to Mrs. Simpson at Laurel. Mr. Simpson is the principal of the school at Laurel, where Miss Ina B. is teaching. We congratulate the happy couple and wish for them all happiness and success. It has not been our privilege to meet Mr. Simpson, but we hear that he is a fine Christian young man. Miss Ina B. is known to Epworth Leaguers throughout our Conference, especially to the Hi-Leaguers who have worked with her in the Assemblies and at Camp Dantzler Hi-League Camp. These Hi-Leaguers say that the B. in her name stands for "Beautiful," and those who know her are persuaded that it does stand for her beautiful Christian life of service.

We do not believe that we are going to lose an officer, but rather that we are gaining another helper.

J. H. WEEMS.

FROM THE LOUISIANA FIELD SECRETARY.

Dear Epworth Leaguers: With a new Conference year having begun, I feel that you Leaguers are ready to take a new start in carrying out a greater program than ever. I trust that you will give your new pastor, if you have one, the same loyal support that was shown your old. A reception, or a surprise party, for the pastor and his family is always heaps of fun and enjoyed by all.

I spent the entire week attending Conference and enjoyed very much my associations with those who were present. I wish that every Methodist might have the pleasure of attending at least one Conference. Dr. F. S. Parker, our General Secretary from the Central Office, was present and reported the general work of the Epworth League to the Epworth League Board. On Saturday evening the Anniversary of Epworth Leagues was observed. Rev. J. B. Grambling presided at the program, and, with several other interesting numbers, Dr. F. L. Wells delivered the address of the evening.

The most interesting news that I can relate to you is that plans are now being made for an Epworth Hi-League Assembly to be held just before the Senior Assembly next summer. Because of Miss Anna Pharr Turner's endeavors as Hi-League Conference Superintendent and the splendid cooperation she is receiving from the Hi and Junior District Secretaries over the Conference, the Hi-League work has advanced greatly since our last Assembly. We are anxious to put forth every effort in making our first Hi-League Assembly a success.

I am sorry that I failed to mention the observance of Corporate Communion Sunday in my last letter. December 2, the first Sunday in Advent, is the Sunday set aside by all Leaguers in the Methodist Episcopal Churches, both North and South, in which to observe a special service of the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper as a body. In churches on circuits, the pastors are asked to observe this day on the nearest Sunday thereto.

In a letter from the Union secretary, Miss Winona Montague, I am informed of the naming of a new Union in Lake Charles District, to be known as the James V. Reed Union.

I am still receiving reports from the Young People's Revivals. The Lake Charles Leaguers conducted their own revival, and report that great good was derived from it. Last year these Leaguers started a Young People's Prayer Meeting that is still meeting each Tuesday night, with some Leaguer in charge of the service. I had the pleasure of attending one of their services and the earnestness of these young people cannot be excelled anywhere. Miss Elsie Whitman, their League president and district secretary, deserves much credit for the work being accomplished.

Is your League making plans for the proper observance of Christmas and New Year programs? It isn't too early to start on that pageant, play or Watch Night service. Follow suggestions in your Era for these services.

Your co-worker in His service,

ELIZABETH LANGFORD,
Field Secretary.

In Five Million Homes Tonight

There are times when all a mother's love can't soothe a fretful baby. No way of telling just what's wrong, yet something must be done. Castoria time! A few drops, and Baby has dropped off to sleep. Yet this marvelous means of quieting a restless infant is utterly harmless. There is not one ingredient but what all doctors know and approve, and would let you give your baby every day in the week. In fact Castoria is a purely vegetable product. Gas pains, constipation, even diarrhea can be dispelled in this same manner. Castoria is older than you are, but physicians still say "nothing better for babies." An old-fashioned remedy if you count its years, but parents are old-fashioned who still raise babies without its aid! And at least five million modern mothers keep it handy day and night, for twenty-five million bottles were bought last year! Buy yours now; don't wait until you need it.

How Doctors Treat Colds and the Flu

To break up a cold over night or to cut short an attack of grippe, influenza, sore throat or tonsilitis, physicians and druggists are now recommending Calotabs, the purified and refined calomel compound tablet that gives you the effects of calomel and salts combined, without the unpleasant effects of either.

One or two Calotabs at bed-time with a swallow of water—that's all. No salts, no nausea nor the slightest interference with your eating, work or pleasure. Next morning your cold has vanished, your system is thoroughly purified and you are feeling fine with a hearty appetite for breakfast. Eat what you please—no danger.

The Holy Communion

THERE is no time in the Christian's life when he comes into closer and more intimate relationship with the Divine than when he sits at the Lord's table. Why not approach its celebration with unalloyed joy; discarding all fears; thinking only of the wonderful privilege?

"The Sanitary" INDIVIDUAL COMMUNION Cups

It is now generally recognized that the Sanitary Individual cup increases the attendance because it removes all fear of uncleanliness, and promotes a deeper reverence in the communicant. The Sanitary Communion Outfit Company offers an improved and satisfactory outfit throughout, including the highly polished beautiful mahogany tray here shown, which eliminates all noise, is lighter and more easily handled than others and is more in keeping with the furniture of the church than a tray of any other material.

Make your communion service all that it should be; send for free booklet and catalogue (with quotations).

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

Histories of the societies represented at this zone meeting were read: Forest, by Mrs. G. G. Beaman: Forest Young Women, by Mrs. O. B. Triplett; Lena, by Mrs. P. A. Townsend; Harperville, by Mrs. V. V. Eason; Carthage, by Mrs. R. L. Jordan.

Hillsboro, on the Harperville circuit, is the only new Jubilee Society in our Zone.

A rising vote of thanks was extended to the Carthage ladies for their generous hospitality. Words of appreciation were given to Rev. and Mrs T. B. Winstead for their faithful work in our district.

The next Zone meeting will be held at Harperville. The Forest society will give the program.

Benediction by Rev. M. L. McCormick.

LOUISIANA LIVE WIRES.

Ringgold reports a wonderfully helpful week of prayer culminating in a beautiful service, Sunday evening, with both adult and junior auxiliaries participating. The Golden Gift Offering amounted to seventy dollars.

From Haughton, Mrs. R. K. Nelson sends an enthusiastic report of the splendid programs given during the Week of Prayer. The Jubilee Year has meant for them an increase from twenty members to thirty-six, and a much greater manifestation of interest.

From Haughton, Mrs. R. K. Nelson have an account of a large and interesting meeting held at Jonesville High School, on November 3. Space forbids publication of the entire report, but here are some interesting extracts from it:

Seventy-five members present.

Two Jubilee societies, Selma and Good Pine, were given place in the recognition service. One of these societies, Good Pine, was presented with the Christian Banner for largest percentage of members, ten out of eleven, attending this meeting.

"Autumn flowers and beautiful ferns were very tastefully arranged on the stage while at the extreme right on the stage was a white table topped with a beautiful three-tiered birthday cake holding fifty golden candles—this year being the fiftieth anniversary of the organizing of the Woman's Missionary Society. The color scheme of gold and green was very effectively carried out in all the decorations.

"All the delegates were given golden badges representing the Jubilee Year.

"The birthday cake was then lighted by five ladies who had been in the missionary work for twenty years or more."

IMPORTANT BUSINESS LETTER.

My dear Women of the Missionary Society:

We are rapidly approaching the close of our Jubilee Year. I believe that all of you will agree with me when I say that the year 1928 has been a year of wonderful experiences. As we, through a closer study of God's Word and daily communion with Him, have realized more nearly in our own individual lives the value of spiritual power. As we have studied the story of our Auxiliary, Conference and Council History we have been inspired to imitate the faith and courage of our Pioneers. We have had the privilege of securing the Bookshelf and making a study of the same. The Auxiliary and Conference Commissions have made a study of our organization to see what we can do to bring it to a higher standard. We have auswered the questionnaire sent out by our Council Re-evaluation Commission. These activities, and especially the making of our Golden Gift and the observance of the Week of Prayer have brought a great spiritual blessing to our lives.

According to our Corresponding Secretary's report, we have 341 Jubilee members and 14 Jubilee auxiliaries. We are indeed thankful for this increase, but it does not fully meet our expectations. Will not each member put forth an effort to gain as Jubilee members those women who have not been reached heretofore? Through personal approaches and public presentation let's give them the message and win them to our Missionary Program.

I am asking that the District Secretaries send the names of the Pres-

A THREE DAYS' COUGH IS YOUR DANGER SIGNAL

Coughs from colds may lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for coughs from colds and bronchial irritations. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of coughs from colds, bronchitis and minor forms of bronchial irritations, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)

idents of all Jubilee Auxiliaries that have been organized up to date, and all others as they are organized, to Mrs. B. W. Lipscomb, Nashville, Tenn. The Jubilee societies are to have special attention, and, to this end Mrs. Lipscomb is preparing a letter of greeting to them. Also, for the Annual Meeting in 1929 we shall have a special feature for them.

Our Treasurer's report at the close of the third quarter shows that we have $9,376.28 to be raised during the fourth quarter, in order that all obligations to Council may be met.

Let the Executive Committee of every auxillary check carefully the work of the year and see that local obligations are met in full. The Scarritt and Wesley House fund, dues, pledge—all should make a 10 per cent increase over the preceding year.

In a way this year is the closing of a quadrennium of work in our Mississippi Conference, and we are earnestly desiring that we round out the year in a satisfactory way to ourselves and in an acceptable way to God.

May I express my appreciation to every officer and member of the Conference for loyal support. To your wonderful co-operation is due in large measure the achievements of the Jubilee Year.

May the Jubilee year bring a fullness of blessing to every member of the Conference and may this experience prepare us all for a greater service in the years to come.

Sincerely yours,

MRS. L. W. ALFORD.

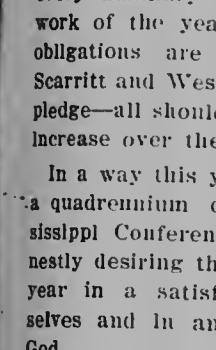
WILL DO ALL IT CLAIMS TO DO

Mrs. Steele Says of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Pratt, W. Va.—"I was so weak and nervous that I was in bed most all the time and couldn't sit up and I am only 30 years old. I saw your advertising in a magazine and after I had taken three doses of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I could feel that I was better. After taking two bottles I began doing my work and I feel like a new woman. I recommend the Vegetable Compound to my friends and say it will do all it claims to do and more. I will gladly answer all letters I recive."—Mrs. S. E. Steele, Pratt, W. Va.



Famous Recipe For Stopping a Severe Cough

You'll be pleasantly surprised when you make up this simple home mixture and try it for a distressing cough or chest cold. It takes but a moment to mix and costs little, but it can be depended upon to give quick and lasting relief.

Get 2½ ounces of Pinex from any druggist. Pour this into a pint bottle; then fill it with plain granulated sugar syrup or strained honey. The full pint thus made costs no more than a small bottle of ready-made medicine, yet it is much more effective. It is pure, keeps perfectly and children love its pleasant taste.

This simple remedy has a remarkable three-fold action. It goes right to the seat of trouble, soothes away the inflammation, and loosens the germ-laden phlegm. At the same time, it is absorbed into the blood, where it acts directly upon the bronchial tubes and thus helps inwardly to throw off the whole trouble with surprising ease.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway Pine, containing the active agent of creosote, in a refined, palatable form, and known as one of the greatest healing agents for "flu" coughs and other severe coughs, chest colds and bronchial troubles.

Do not accept a substitute for Pinex. It is guaranteed to give prompt relief or money refunded.

THE SPECTATOR.

To make good times we must make good men. Our difficulty is not with our times, but with ourselves.

* * *

He who walks with God must walk somewhat alone among men.

* * *

It is a maxim of worldly wisdom that "necessity knows no law;" but the law of God knows no necessity. Only that which is right is allowable under any circumstances.

* * *

He who serves God best serves men most.

* * *

The life of the nation depends upon the life of the families of the land. The home is the unit and unifier of civilization when God dwells in it.

* * *

Our duties outrank our rights, and when we are most insistent upon our rights, we are most negligent of our duties.

* * *

One must be good before he can do good. To bless men we must be blessed by God. Wherefore God said to Abraham, "I will bless thee and thou shalt be a blessing" (Genesis xii:2).

* * *

Power that exceeds piety is perilous to him who possesses it and to all others about him.

* * *

A godless life is a life not worth living.

* * *

A suspicious man may well be suspected. He cannot trust because he is not trustworthy himself.

* * *

If taxes were imposed on human follies there would be ample funds for both federal and State governments.

* * *

Some preachers read the command of Jesus, "Feed my sheep," as if it read, "Stone my sheep."

* * *

Some people can "hold their own" except their tongues.

* * *

Eating little promotes health and speaking little promotes peace.

* * *

Pretence is always predatory. When the fox falls to praying he is preparing for preying—and soon the geese cease laying.

Some people who say the most have the least to say, while some who say the least say the most.

EDITORIAL

THE DISCONTENTED PENDULUM.

If memory is not at fault, the above is the title of a story in one of McGuffey's readers. It is the story of a clock that all at once decided to stop, after it had been faithfully regulating the household for years. When an investigation was made within the clock, the fault was put upon the pendulum. The guilty pendulum confessed, pleading that the thought of the great number of times he would have to swing to and fro during the months and years to come had quite appalled him, and saying that he had determined to quit the job. Another part of the clock asked the pendulum to execute one full stroke, which he did quite easily. and was commended. Then the pendulum said that it was not one stroke that troubled him, but the thought of the thousands of strokes during the years to come that quite appalled him. The other part of the clock asked the pendulum to remember that, though he would have ever so many times to swing to and fro during the months and years to come, he would always have a full minute to execute every stroke. The pendulum thought upon this for a little and then began cheerfully to swing back and forth and the clock went merrily on.

There should be a good lesson in this old story that many of us read when we were children. Sometimes we are appalled at the sum total of the things we have to do. But every hour's task that God gives us, he gives us a full hour to complete. Now that the pastor has reached his new charge, or has returned to his work in the same charge, he will be planning the activities of the year, with never a thought, we hope, of leaving anything undone that his church requires of him—the special enterprises of the whole church as well as the work that belongs to the local church. Let him be assured that, though the tasks are many and the sum total of his labors large, he will have ample time for every task, if he gives himself freely and seeks help of God.

LOYALTY.

The Methodist Church is doubtless known as a "broad" church in the sense that her people are tolerant at all times toward others and that any Christian can feel at home in their midst. But breadth can be carried so far that neither depth nor dependable substance will be left. We are sometimes so tolerant toward others that we are actually intolerant toward ourselves—impatient toward our own claims and rights and toward those who would stand by them, and more concerned, it would seem, for others than we are concerned for ourselves. We are usually so sensitive about wounding the feelings of others that we neglect to preach our own doctrines and to inform our own people, while for lack, perharps, of any definite convictions, some of our leaders are not greatly concerned to promote our own enterprises and institutions.

The above statements cannot in fairness be construed as advocating a bigoted and narrow policy toward other Christians. But they mean that we ought to magnify our own that we may contribute more to the work of the whole kingdom. We may show a loyalty to all of God's people by showing at all times a loyalty to the church in which we have of our own free will and accord chosen to serve—cleaving to and preaching her doctrines, building up her institutions and bringing souls to Christ at her altars.

MINISTERIAL SUPPORT.

The satisfaction with which one of our pastors reports a much-needed increase in his salary for this Conference year reminds the writer of how urgent is this matter of salary with many of our preachers, especially those in the smaller churches. The fact that the preacher goes where he is appointed; that he is not allowed as other men to enter into an agreement for his services; that he is sometimes not even consulted about his needs, as the Discipline says should be done, and that he has no option but to agree to any sum that may be fixed by the stewards and confirmed by the Quarterly Conference—all should lead those responsible to be very kindly and considerate in determining their pastor's salary for the year.

Give your pastor as much as you can and arrange to pay him by the month. The salaries of other men do not depend upon the weekly receipts of the company employing them. Neither should the salary of a pastor depend upon the weekly receipts of the church he serves. Arrange to pay your pastor by the month, even if for a time when the receipts are not sufficient you have to establish a "line of credit" at the bank and add a little interest payment to your budget.

In connection with this matter, a prominent banker in New Orleans, who is a steward in the largest Methodist church in the city, said that he is a believer in high salaries—that they secure the best service from men and the largest returns. We are not pleading for opulent salaries for our preachers, but we do believe they should have sufficient salaries to meet the needs of themselves and their families, if the churches they serve are to command the best service. No man can give his best service when he has to engage every day in the struggle to "keep the wolf from the door." And, to put it in a rather ugly way, a preacher should not be penalized because he is engaged in the greatest calling in the world.

CRIMES OF COVETOUSNESS AND HATE.

By Bishop Warren A. Candler.

The flood of crime overflowing our country is alarming, notwithstanding all efforts to minimize it and explain it away. That it has greatly increased during recent years will not be denied, except hy hlind optimists who would not be optimists at all if they were not blind.

Crimes committed to obtain money and crimes of hlood are especially prevalent. Often these two offenses are mingled in one; murder is done to obtain money. Men and women are slain for mammonistic motives of the most sordid nature. The man in charge of a filling station that is kept open day and night, is the mark for the attacks of criminals ready to kill for small sums. Such a man serves in a position more perilous than a picket on guard in the army.

Along with these murderous assaults, which ahound in all sections of the land, defalcations and embezzlements are reported daily.

Another manifestation of criminal covetousness which is constantly in evidence is shameless and almost limitless gamhling. Men and women lay wagers on everything from petty games about tables and the sports of schoolboys, to the size of the crops and the securities in the stock market. At this time a huge gamhle is going on in New York which is so extensive that when the buhhle bursts, as it must do soon, the whole nation will be shocked and the most disgraceful dishonesties will be diclosed by the consequences following the collapse which is inevitathle.

Gamhling of course is hut a form of greed, midway between passive covetousness and active stealing. If to nouns were applied degree of comparison, as we do with adjectives, we might say most aptly and as accurately: "Positive covetousness, comparative gamhling, superlative stealing."

Gamhling is related to theft as dueling is to murder. In a duel each combatant risks his own life in order to take the life of the other, and in gambling each gambler takes a hazard on his own property in order to secure the property of the other without giving value received.

These crimes of greed and hate are the natural outcome of excessive opulence. Where wealth abounds men generally decay; and our country is amazingly rich. No nation on earth ever possessed as much and as eagerly yearned for more, as does the United States. These amazing accumulations harden the heart and inflame the passions. They impart a consciousness of power which often leads their owners to feel that they are above law and that they may defy law with impunity. Indeed, many such men of wealth are brazenly and truculently lawless, committing crimes and snaping their fingers in the face of the authorities who are commissioned to enforce law.

Is there a remedy for these appalling conditions? and if there is what may the remedy be?

In undertaking to answer these searching questions, one is met at once with the discouraging fact that in the past no nation once corrupted by excessive wealth has ever been cured. Luxury and consequent lawlessness, ending in national death, have heen the course and end of all the excessively rich nations of which history has taken account. They all have died as suicides, their deaths arising from their self-inflicted demoralization and degeneration. So passed Egypt, Babylon, Nineveh, and the proud Empire of Rome.

The conditions which corrupted and overthrew them exist in our land in an alarming degree at this time; aud we have but one force to correct them which those ancient kingdoms had not, namely, the Christian religion. But what will the Christian religion avail for our salvation if we refuse to accept it? The Christ was revealed to the Jews before their capital was taken and their Temple was destroyed; but they rejected him, and their uation, as a nation, perished. Does a similar sad fate, on a far larger scale, await the American people? Most certainly it does, if they refuse to accept the only remedy that is sufficient to avert the dreadful doom.

Even imprisoned criminals, when caused by their incarceration to think seriously, perceive that this is true.

Not long ago a most striking editorial was published in "Good Words," the official publication of the Federal penitentiary in Atlanta. The Editor, who is himself imprisoned there, entitled his article, "Crime, Its Cause and Remedy." Among the causes of crime he euumerated intoxicating liquors, dance halls, immodest dressing, immoral picture shows, corrupting books, lack of education, etc.

Evidently this complicated bundle of crime-infected evils cannot be corrected by mere reformers and reforms. The one evil of intoxicating liquors alone has been handled imperfectly and with results more or less disappointing notwithstanding wise and zealous efforts to eradicate it. What then shall we do in the face of all the other sources of crime? Obviously nothing less penetrating and potent than the Christian religion can save our crime-cursed nation.

To this conclusion the editor of "Good Words" comes, and he asserts it in these forceful words of ardent appeal to the people:

"Back to purity of standards of living, back to personal supervision of child by parents. Away from irreverence for all good things, away from booze parties, petting parties, lascivious literature, false standards of life and all that leads to them. When we accomplish these things, it will be more difficult for crime to flourish."

He does not overlook the evil of ignorance, nor depreciate the value of education, but sets up no claim for any cleansing power in mere culture. On the contrary he says:

"The unspeakable crimes of sexual perverts have rocked this nation with their repugnancy. They are very often hidden in character and quite frequently, are especially revolting. Yet many of these originated iu homes of the most cultured environment, surrounded with every advantage of wealth and comfort."

Evidently the editor, who thus writes, is not without a considerable degree of intellectual culture; and he knows what it can and what it cannot do.

Clearly our country must choose between Christ and crime, between religion and ruin. This fact must he faced without delay.

Reformations are good as far as they go, but they do not go very far. Something deeper is required, and that which is needed is religion—religion in the home, in the school, aud most of all iu the heart.

And the only religion that can save the American people is the Christian religion. This great Republic is a nation founded by faith, and it must be saved by the same faith, if it is to be saved at all.

In the charter of every one of the original thirteen colonies "the propagatiou of the gospel" is enumerated among the objects to be accomplished by its founding.

So manifestly was the nation horn of religion—and the Christian religion, of course—that M. de Tocqueville, the acute French commentator on "Democracy in America," said in his famous treatise, "religion gave birth to Anglo-American society."

It must live hy the same life-giving power which gave it hirth. If that force should be withdrawn or should be spent, the American nation would die —and die of heart-failure.

FROM THE COMMISSIONER MILLSAPS-WHITWORTH SYSTEM.

Dear Dr. Harper: I would like to announce through the Advocate that I was appointed Commissioner for Millsaps College and the Millsaps-Whitworth System at the recent session of the Mississippi Conference. I have entered upon my work as Commissioner and am now living at 1600 Pine Street, Jackson, Miss., and my office is at Millsaps College.

My work is to represent Millsaps College in the territory of the North Mississippi Conference and the Millsaps-Whitworth System in the Mississippi Conference. Especially am I charged with the task of completing the $650,000 expansion program for new buildings and equipment for Millsaps College, which was begun this year.

The completion of this program, which means the raising of approximately $400,000, is imperative. Had I not believed that this was one, if not the most vital need facing Methodism in Mississippi at this time, I would not have left a delightful pastorate to undertake it.

I trust that I shall have the hearty co-operation of pastors and laymen in both of the Conferences.

With best wishes and kindest regards, I am,

VICTOR G. CLIFFORD,
Commissioner.

Jackson, Miss., Dec. 3, 1928.

MEETING OF THE APPROPRIATIONS COMMITTEE OF THE BOARD OF CHURCH EXTENSION.

The Appropriations Committee of the Board of Church Extension of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, will meet in the Peabody Hotel, Memphis, Tenn., Thursday, Jan. 3, 1929.

All applications must be approved by the Conference Board of Church Exteusion and in the office of the Secretary of the General Board, 1115 Fourth Ave., Louisville, Ky., ou or before Dec. 27. No application will be entertained ou the calendar after this date.

T. D. ELLIS.

TO PASTORS AND SUNDAY SCHOOL WORKERS, LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

The Conference Sunday School Board elected me as Conference Superintendent of Sundy School Evangelism. It was my purpose to write each pastor and superintendent a persoual letter about the fine opportunities in Sunday school evangelism, but I find in my own mail a special letter from Dr. J. W. Shackford on that subject. Instead of the letter I planned, let me call attention in this way to a few important matters in relation to this holy task.

1. Now is the time to begin Sunday school evangelism in your church. Do it through conferences and prayer groups with Sunday school workers, in preparation for special work later on.
2. Read Dr. Chappell's book, "Evangelism in the Sunday School." It is an excellent guide.
3. Order a good supply of evangelistic leaflets from the General Sunday School Board. Distribute them among your helpers.
4. At the beginning of the year, make a study of the personnel of your Sunday schoool classes and departments and find out the Christian status of the membership. List individuals for personal interviews.
5. Plan intelligent Christian cultivation that will lead to intelligent Christian decisions.
6. It is time to pray for the harvest.

Yours in Christ's service,

New Orleans, La. H. L. JOHNS.

A LIBRARY OF MISSIONS.

By W. W. Pinson.

The full report of the Jerusalem meeting of the International Missionary Council has been published in eight volumes, neatly printed and bound and elaborately indexed. This set of books contains heaten oil, for they bring to us the revised preliminary papers, and interpretative summary of the discussions, reports of the sectional meetings, and the final statements passed by the Council.

The meeting in Jerusalem was unique among missionary gatherings. Dr. Mott says of it: "One of the outstanding contributions of the Jerusalem meeting was the fact that an unusually representative body of men and women who command to a unique degree the confidence of Christians the world over, found it possible to arrive at a common understanding and to reach unanimous conclusions with reference to the world-wide Christian mission."

In an hour of peace treaties, disarmament conferences, and International readjustments, as well as of missionary readjustments, such a result alone would make this meeting historic and the published record a unique body of literature to every student of missions and of world relations. For it was an open forum of represeutatives from fifty-one countries and nearly all races, of an international and interdenominational and inter-raciel character. It was as near a body of experts as such a body could be made, and whatever it lacked in that it made up in the catholicity of its spirit and the candor and courage of its attitudes.

Each of these volumes treats of one of the phases of the meeting, all of which were vital and several of them new in missionary gatherings. Taken in order, the titles are, "The Christian Message," "Religious Education," "Younger and Older Churches," "Missions and Race Conflict," "Missions and Industrialism," "Missions and Rural Problems," "International Missionary Co-operation," "Addresses on General Subjects." This tempting array of subjects is treated with studied care and presented in clear and condensed form, and with down-to-date accuracy.

No student of missions or of international relations can well afford to deny himself access to this source.

Complete report, International Missionary Council meeting at Jerusalem. Price, $7. International Missionary Council, 419 Fourth Avenue, New York City.

POETICAL THOUGHTS.

By Mrs. George S. Brown.

"O, Lord, how great are thy works, and thy thoughts are very deep."—Psalms 92:5.

Great Things.

Greater things have come to pass
  Than the crowning of a king;
There's the growing blade of grass,
  Or the willow's glow in spring.
More entrancing things are heard
  Than the songs that thrill or sway;
There's the first lisped little word
  That a baby learns to say;
Greater than majestc ships
  That defy the ocean's rage
Is the prayer upon the lips
  Of devout, serene old age.

More important than the right
  Of the chieftain to decide,
Is the burial of spite
  Or the mastery of pride.
Greater things are being done
  Than the financiers have planned;
Daily wind and rain and sun
  Spread their profit o'er the land.
More inspiring than the cheers
  When the leader passes by,
Is the blossom that appears
  Where the hough was bare and dry.
Greater things may still be seen
  Than the robes a king may wear,
There's the hillside turning green
  Or the colt beside the mare.

—Selected.

I do not know who wrote the above lines, but I like the sentiment, don't you? The things that we term great are so often of little consequence and the small things of earth hath God made to confound the mighty. How the masses turn out and crowd and jostle to see a king crowned or a president inaugurated, and yet it is not half so wonderful as what we see about us every day. Nature far exceeds anything that man can do. No mother but what will tell you that the first word her baby lisped was a far sweeter music than any opera on record. No trained volce can thrill like a bird on the tree top.

We watch the ships sailing the ocean and think of the mighty wonders of tbe sea and of how the ships breast the waves and ride the storm, and yet they canuot compare with the faith and devotion and prayer of a serene old age. We see men and women who have buffeted life's storms and trials and troubles and who have come through refined as by fire and, knowing their lives of devotion and trust, we bow in reverence when they lift up their voices to God.

The Good Book tells us that he that ruleth his own spirit is mightier than he who rules a city. We know how hard it is to master self, to conquer temptations, to overcome pride and prejudice, to govern our tongues, to push self into the background, and when we succeed it is indeed a comfort to know that in God's sight we are greater than emperors and kings. The blessings God sends us every day are more wonderful than any man can give us, no matter how powerful and influential. We may not get laurel wreaths and crowns, but more inspiring than the laurels of men are the blossoms that send out their sweetness just for us all along the way. We may not have great possessions, and wear gorgeous robes, but far more lovely is the green of the grass and the changing color of the leaves. There are inventions and discoveries, but what strikes a deeper cord in the heart than the little birds in the nest, the little new-born colt or lamb, and sweetest of all the love light in the mother's eyes as the babe lies nestled in her arms? O would that we could open our eyes and see the real great things of life! Putting aside all envy and malice and jealousy, and finding no time for complaint, because the Master's praise is continually on our lips, realizing how great things God has wrought, let us rejoice and be glad.

AN APPRECIATION OF REV. AND MRS. J. B. GRAMBLING.

After serving as pastor of the Keithville church, Grand Cane charge, for the past two years, Brother J. B. Grambling moved last week to Hammond, La., to which church he was appointed for tbe coming year.

Our church has heen honored in having Brother Grambling as pastor. The church has grown as a result of his labors, and we can truly say that his godly life and fearless preaching have lifted his people to a higher plane of Christian living. While with us Brother Grambling organized the young people into an Epworth Hl League, which we hope to carry on successfully.

We wish much success and happiness for Brother and Mrs. Grambling in their new home. May God richly bless them.

Brother Nease comes to us from Barham for this year. We are sure that he and his family will prove a blessing to Keithville.

MRS. JOHN O. HENDRICK.

Keithville, La., Dec. 4, 1928.

SERMON ON PREACHING CHRIST.

(The first sermon preached after Conference by Rev. H. A. Wood, pastor of Gibson Memorial Church, Vicksburg, Miss., and, by request of the people, offered for publication to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.- Editor.)

"For there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved."—Acts 4:12.

Having recently received the appointment at the Anuual Conference your pastor is on the job for another year at Gibson Memorial. You perhaps are wonderlng as to the program and task before the church. We are face to face with a great task. The most wonderful phase of the task that we as a church are confronted with is that of the salvation of souls. All round about us on every side are men and women, lads and lassies, unprepared to meet God. There are thousands of people in this old historic city who have no personal knowledge of salvation. Here and there is a woman who has lost her standing with God and man. Lost that which rightly possessed makes her a lady, though she be dressed in rags, hut when lost makes her less than a lady though she be dressed iu silks and satins; here and there is a dirty urchin of the streets; here and there a cultured woman; here and there a notoriously wicked man; here and there a moral man. But the one outside of Christ is just as surely lost as the other. All are in need of the saving power of Jesus' blood.

In and Through Jesus Alone is Salvation.

Some there are who seem possessed with the thought that people can now be saved by socialistic arrangements and movements, by moral precepts, by amusements, and hy societies. But, my brethren, what is to become of the spiritual natures of the people if we shall be merely and simply philosophical, philanthropic, and socialistic? There is great danger of getting lost in the "swamps of social service." Social service is good in its place. The right kind of work done for suffering humanity in the name of Jesus and from love to him, will not he without reward. But social service is not Christianity, it is only a by-product of Christianity. We dare not crucify Christ on a scholastic cross and bury him in a humanitarian grave.

There are those who would substitute education or culture for Christian experience. Some seem to think that Christians are turned out like broom handles from a factory. We are not saved hy culture, we are born into the kingdom hy the "new birth." There can be nothing but loss and certain wreckage to any denomination which majors on education and minors on soul-winning. Winning souls to Christ is vital, basal, primal, fundamental. Evangelism and education should go hand in hand, but evangelism or soul-winning should go just a little in advance. Let us not put our trust alone in education or culture, in socialistic arrangements or movements, in moral precepts, nor in amusements of societies. Salvation to the individual and the human race comes and comes alone through proper faith in Jesus Christ. "For there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must he saved."

False Guides.

There are false guides who are telling us that we are born in a state of moral purity. That there is no special need of a change of heart or of the "new birth." Setting aside the work of the Holy Ghost, and the power of the gospel, they undertake to replace the divine plan with mere human teachings and substitutes. They never call the people to repentance, nor warn sinners to flee from the wrath to come, nor entreat wicked men to seek the Lord Jesus Christ in his pardoning mercy. They are comforting the hearts of the impenitent wicked in their sins and promising them life without true repentance and saving faith in the Lord Jesus Christ. Such ministers

We are grateful to Rev. Wm. L. Robinson, Coffeeville, Miss., for sending us a good list of subscribers.

The work on the Montrose charge, Mississippi Conference, has begun auspiciously. Rev. D. E. Vickers has been returned to the charge for the second year.

Rev. J. E. Selfe writes that he and Mrs. Selfe were most kindly received by the people of New Iberia, La., upon their arrival on Wednesday of last week.

Rev. Claude P. Jones has been cordially received by the good people of East End Church, Meridian, and improvements are being made upon the parsonage.

Rev. J. C. Price, who was returned to Gilbert, La., received a hearty welcome on the first Sunday after Conference and the services of the day were helpful to all.

Rev. J. W. Sells, our pastor at Pascagoula, Miss., and Mrs. Sells, visited New Orleans on last Friday. While in the city Brother Sells visited the Advocate office.

Rev. H. N. Harrison, newly-appointed pastor of the Abbeville church, Louisiana Conference, requests us to announce that his address will continue to be 7447 Hampson Street, New Orleans.

The Algiers Church of New Orleans has increased the salary of the pastor, Rev. Martin Hebert, to $2,200, and plans are being made to pay off at an early date the indebtedness on the parsonage.

At the Istrouma Church in Baton Rouge, La., Rev. J. W. Booth pastor, all indebtedness was paid last year, and for the first time in its history the congregation begins the new Conference year ont of debt.

Mrs. W. H. Heath, of Fitler, Miss., in renewing her subscription, writes as follows: "I wish to thank you for all the good things you have brought me each week, almost continuously for more than thirty years, and to wish for you many more years of prosperity."

Dr. and Mrs. J. R. Countiss, of Grenada, Miss., have been in New Orleans with their son, a student in Tulane Medical School, who is in the Baptist Hospital on account of serious injury suffered in an automobile accident. We are glad to report that he is doing well.

Mr. P. A. C. Voss called at the Advocate office on Thursday of last week and the editor regretted not seeing him. Brother Voss has been superintendent of the Felicity Sunday school of this city since 1905 and has served in other places of usefulness during that period.

Rev. L. M. Lipscomb, presiding elder of the Greenville District, North Missssippi Conference, reports a spirit of optimism throughout the district. The meeting of the District Stewards at Cleveland was well attended, nearly every church in the district being represented.

Dr. Henry T. Carley moved the latter part of the past week to Shreveport to enter upon his important duties as presiding elder of the Shreveport District. He and Mrs. Carley made the journey of 300 miles or more in their Elcar. Dr. Carley's address is now 839 Monrovia St., Shreveport, La.

A letter from Rev. J. L. Decell, presiding elder, asks us to announce that Rev. A. B. Barry, has been transferred from the Arkansas Conference to the Mississippi Conference and appointed to the Barlow Circuit, Brookhaven District. Brother Barry is now back in his home Conference and has made a good beginning on his charge.

Rev. W. R. Lott, pastor at West Point, Miss., is preaching a series of sermons at night, running for six weeks, on the subject "Pearls of Great Price of the New Testament." "The Pearl of Gethsemane," "The Alluring Pearl," "The Clear Pearl Within," "The Lost Pearl," "A Rare Pearl," and "A Priceless Pearl," are the different sermon titles.

The Editor had the opportunity of hearing Rev. H. L. Johns preach Sunday evening on "The Road to Bethlehem." In the large congregation the presence was noted of Rev. C. K. Smith, who has just entered upon his work as Financial Commissioner of the Memorial Home of Mercy, New Orleans. Brother Smith will live at 624 Carrollton Avenue.

Rev. W. L. Doss, Jr., newly-appointed presding elder of the New Orleans District, is now comfortably settled in the delightful district parsonage at 1431 Octavia Street. He preached last Sunday morning at Carrollton Avenue Church and in the evening at Epworth Methodist Church. The new elder is no stranger to the city, having served as pastor here.

We take the following from the "Methodist Messenger" of First Church, Shreveport: "A wonderfully fine congregation gathered for the morning church service to greet Dr. Goodrich in his first service of the new year. Dr. Goodrich's sermon was necessarily brief on account of the Communion service, but his message on 'What Keeps the Church From Dying' was especially good and helpful."

Dr. D. H. LaGrone, a minister in the Methodist Episcopal Church and pastor of a large church in Oklahoma, preached at the evening service.

Rev. H. A. Wood, pastor of Gibson Memorial, Vicksburg, who preached the helpful sermon appearing in our columns this week, secured last year 102 subscribers to the Advocate, and he writes that he hopes to do as well this Conference year. We appreciate the fine work he has already done and we trust he will succeed, as he hopes, in doing as well this year.

We learn from an editorial in the Southern Christian Advocate that the campaign for $500,000 endowment for Lander College, Greenwood, S. C., is meeting with success. Within a short period the sum of $225,000 has been raised, and it is expected that the campaign will be contiuued until the full amount is realized. Dr. R. H. Bennett and his helpers are to be congratulated.

Our church at Lafayette, La., Rev. Louis Hoffpauir, pastor, has recently opened its basement to Scout Troop 19 of Lafayette. Prof. Adam Anders, principal of the Junior High School, is master of the Troop. Mr. Anders is a son of Rev. G. D. Anders, one of the "honor men" of the Louisiana Conference, and brother of Rev. Dan F. Anders, our pastor at Opelousas, La.

The December number of the "Workers' Council" carries articles by Dr. C. J. Harrell and Dr. W. H. Parks, while Mrs. Edith Kent contributes an article on "Pageants, Plays and Programs for Christmas." The Home Quarterly for January, February and March will carry articles by Bishop Candler, Bishop DuBose and Drs. N. B. Harmon, Jr., W. B. Duncan, Edward Leigh Pell, H. B. Trimble and W. H. Nelson.

We learn from Rev. J. M. Alford, who was appointed to Cedar Grove at the recent session of the Louisiana Conference, that Cedar Grove has been annexed to Shreveport; the post office at Cedar Grove is discontinued. Names of streets and avenues in that section have been changed. Brother Alford's address will be 6510 Lexington Avenue, Shreveport. He writes that he preached at the Cedar Grove church on last Sunday and had a great service.

Rev. C. A. Northington, pastor last year at Ackerman, Miss., calls attention to an omission in the names of stewards of the Ackerman charge, as given in an article which appeared in the Advocate last week, written by Mr. J. H. McKinnon. He writes that at the fourth quarterly conference nine others, not named in Brother McKinnon's article, were elected as stewards: Mrs. J. James, Mrs. J. H. Johnson, R. A. Moss, W. C. Gillis, H. C. Seawright, J. A. Hanna, A R. Moss, W. A. Bruce and L. J. Weaver.

A note from Rev. S. L. Riggs, formerly pastor at Cedar Grove, La., but who was given at the session of the Louisiana Conference just closed the superannuate relation on account of greatly impaired health, states that he is slowly improving and will soon be able to walk. Physicians think that he should be all right within two months. Brother Riggs desires to thank his brethren of the Louisiana Conference for their love offering made in his behalf at the session in Lake Charles.

The new pastor, Rev. L. J. Snelgrove, and family arrived at the Methodist parsonage Wednesday evening, Nov. 21. Immediately after their arrival many of the people came in to welcome the new pastor and family to their new field. On the following Friday evening an enormous pounding was given in the parlor of the home. A real spiritual service was conducted by the laymen of the charge with a large number of the members present. Many real nice things are being placed in the parsonage to add to the comfort of the family. All are looking forward for a good year.

Through the gift of a devoted Christian, a piece of land has been purchased on the Mount of Olives, facing Jerusalem, and has been donated to the Travel Institute of Bible Research. This is the first piece of land to be owned on the Mount of Olives proper by a Protestant Church organization. It borders the traditional site of Christ's weeping over Jerusalem and is but a few minutes' walk east of the Brook Kidron, and above the garden of Gethsemane. As soon as the funds are available there will be erected on this spot a Bible Study Center for teachers, pastors and other church workers of all Protestant denominations and of all nationalities.

Rev. J. L. Greenway, who was superannuated at the last session of the Mississippi Conference, has moved from Kingston, Laurel, to Jackson, where he will make his home. His address is 505 Broad Street, Jackson, Miss. He writes: "We are very comfortable in our new home and are beginning to get adjusted to new conditions. To make us feel at home, Rev. T. M. Brownlee, with Mrs. Brownlee and about forty of his young people came in a body one night and gave us a royal pounding. We were made to feel that though out of the active ranks, as a preacher we were not forgotten. Such kindly remembrance of us speaks well for Brother Brownlee and his splendid body of young people." Brother Greenway will worship at the Capitol Street Church.

CHURCH EXTENSION, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

The Committee on Appropriation of Funds of the Board of Church Extension will meet in the Peabody Hotel, Memphis, Tennessee, Thursday, January 3rd, 1929.

All applications must be in the hands of the Secretary on or before December 27, 1928.

W. M. WILLIAMS, Chairman,
Miss. Conf. Board of Church Extension.
Bay St. Louis, Miss.

GREENVILLE'S RECEPTION TO MINISTERS.

From the Daily Democrat-Times, of Greenville, Miss., we take the following account of a delightful reception recently given in that city:

"A fitting compliment to Rev. and Mrs. J. E. Cunningham, (Rev. Cunningham, pastor of the First Methodist Church,) and Rev. and Mrs. L. M. Lipscomb, (Rev. Lipscomb, presiding elder of this district) who have been returned to serve the good people of Greenville and the district, was the beautiful dinner given in their honor Friday evening in the Sunday school rooms of the church. This lovely affair was given by the ladies of the Missionary Society under the supervision of Mrs. Edmund Taylor, Jr. A splendidly prepared program was given, as follows:

"Invocation, Mr. Harmon Barlow.

"Toastmaster, Mr. E. H. Cason.

"Address of welcome, Mrs. W. P. Kretschmar.

"Response, Mr. Cunningham and Mr. Lipscomb.

"Talk, Judge Percy Bell.

"For this happy occasion a wealth of fall flowers, intermingled with beautiful red berries, were used in decorating the room, while the small tables arranged around the room were centered with chrysanthemums and red berries in keeping with the festive season. A large table was arranged in the center of the room, from which the delicious menu was served. The near approach of the Yuletide was prettily manifested in the table decorations. A large bowl filled with fruit imbedded in red berries and autumn leaves furnished a lovely centerpiece for the table. Silver candlesticks held red tapers. Mrs. J. D. Coleman and Mrs. Ernest Smith served the salad course. Mrs. Milton Smith and Mrs. Robert Mann served croquettes; Miss Willye Miller served the desert source, and Mrs. Lynn Stewart poured coffee. A number of young matrons and maids assisted in serving the delicious three-course menu. Seated at the honor guests' table were Mr. E. H. Cason, Mrs. Reid Dunn and Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Kretschmar. The guests joined in singing a number of songs, with Mr. Fred O'Bannon leader. During the serving of the menu beautiful music was furnished by Mrs. George Helms, Mrs. Alberta Gildart and Mrs. Barlow. The dinner was brought to a close by singing 'America.'"

MINISTER'S SON AWARDED RHODES SCHOLARSHIP.

From the Times-Picayune, Dec. 10.

Cleanth Brooks, Jr., a fellowship instructor and graduate student in English at Tulane University, has been elected a Rhodes scholar to Oxford University, England, according to press dispatches from Swarthmore, Pa., where the results of the annual election of Rhodes scholars were announced Sunday by Dr. Frank Aydelotte, president of Swarthmore College and American secretary to the Rhodes trustees.

Mr. Brooks is one of the thirty-two college men in the United States to receive this year the honor that is generally conceded to be the highest academic award for which American students can compete. The choice is based on intellectual attainments, combined with qualities of character and leadership and interest in outdooor sports. The award carries an annual stipend of 400 pounds, about $2,000.

Vanderbilt Graduate.

Young Brooks, 22 years old, is the son of the Rev. Cleanth Brooks, of the Noel Memorial Church, Shreveport, formerly a pastor in Alexandria, La. He was born Oct. 16, 1906, at Murray, Ky., but has lived most of his life in Tennessee, where he attended the McTyeire School at Mackenzie for four years preparatory to entering Vanderbilt University at Nashville. He graduated from Vanderbilt with the class of 1928 and obtained the teching fellowship at Tulane which he holds while pursuing his postgraduate study of English.

Mr. Brooks met with the rigid qualifications of the Rhodes scholarship trust by virtue of a wide range of college activities and interests, which included football, basketball and track in the line of athletics and membership on the staff of the Masquerader, Vanderbilt's student publication, for three years of the four he studied there. He is also a writer of poetry, and earlier this year he contributed to and edited a book of verse by Vanderbilt poets which was publihed at Nashville in June under the title of "Facets, an Anthology of Verse." His flair for poety was so marked during his college days that he was elected class poet by his fellow-seniors.

Honored as Student.

In fraternity affairs Mr. Brooks also took an interested part. He is a member of Alpha Tau Omega and Sigma Upsilon, an honorary literary fraternity, and achieved the high academic honor of being elected to membership in Phi Beta Kappa. As an A. T. O., Brooks played in interfraternity football, as well as going in for the fraternity track team. He was for two years a member of the Vanderbilt debating team, which ranks high in the South.

New Award Basis.

He is making his home in New Orleans at the residence of A. Capdevielle, 1459 Calhoun Street.

What college he will enter at Oxford has not been decided by Mr. Brooks, who received word of his appointment Sunday, but he will specialize in English literature. He will not begin his studies there until October, 1929.

The present year marks the beginning of a new basis of tenure for the Rhodes scholarships. They formerly were appointed for three years, but since it now is possible for an American graduate to take a degree at Oxford in two years, the Rhodes trustees have authorized appointments for only two years, in the first instance, with a possibility of each scholar remaining for a third year, providing his record justifies it, and providing he presents a satisfactory plan of study.

Still further changes in the regulation of Rhodes scholarships are contemplated in a bill which has been introduced in the present session of the British Parliament. This bill, if passed, will make it possible to carry out a proposal made some years ago by the American Rhodes scholars and endorsed by the leading educational authorities in the United States, changing the basis of appointments from States to districts.

For the thirty-two scholarships open this year there were 398 candidates, each having been selected previously to represent his college or university in the competition.

IN SUPPORT OF THE EVANGELISTIC WORK OF THE WHOLE CHURCH.

By John W. Shackford.

The Sunday school has long been recognized as a most important agency of evangelism in the church. It may, however, be a matter of interest to those who have found valuable suggestions in the plan of evangelism now for several years recommended by the General Sunday School Board to know the circumstances under which this plan was prepared.

In 1920, following the Centenary Movement, Dr. O. E. Goddard, who was then engaged for the Board of Missions in outlining a church-wide campaign of evangelism, approached the Sunday School Board, asking its co-operation. A committee was appointed representing the Sunday School Board to outline the steps of a practical plan by which the Sunday schools could co-operate in this church-wide campaign of evangelism.

Dr. Goddard and representatives of the Sunday School Board had numerous conferences regarding the lines of co-operation. The program of evangelism which the Sunday School Board finally approved and recommended was the outcome of thorough understanding and co-operative planning and was, of course, but a development and enlargement of what was already being done in many Sunday schools.

The main features of this Sunday school program of evangelism outlined at that time and now familiar to the church, are as follows:

I. An increased emphasis on evangelism throughout the entire year's program of the Sunday school.

II. A special period of evangelistic emphasis during January, February and March, this to include three essential phases:

1. A period for the preparation of the forces through prayer, study and consultation. (Suggested for January.)

2. A period of personal and class evangelism. (Suggested for February.)

3. A period for the careful training of pupils to be received into church membership.

This plan has the twofold value of recognizing the evangelistic purpose and work of the Sunday school throughout the year and of specific emphasis at certain times upon this essential work. It further calls attention to the absolute necessity for the careful preparation of the whole working force of the Sunday school through prayer, conference and study in order that mechanical and harmful processes may be avoided and that the resident forces of the Sunday school may enter into the work of evangelism prepared in mind and heart for this work. And, finally, it lays a new emphasis upon the need for the careful preparation and training of those who are to be received into church membership.

This plan proved so widely satisfactory in the Sunday schools and seemed so sound and practicable that it has been continued from year to year by the General Sunday School Board without substantial change, and is again being recommended by the Board. Our Sunday schools throughout the church are being urged to observe this special season of evangelism along the lines indicated during January, February and March.

The very circumstances under which this plan was worked out indicate the desire of the General Sunday School Board to make the evangelistic program of the Sunday school an undergirding and re-enforcement of the entire evangelistic work of the church. There is of course nothing hard and fast in the plan suggested. Nor is there anything in the plan which would leave any possible grounds for seeming competition with other evangelistic plans and programs that may be under consideration.

The work of the Sunday school, like that of any real school, is continuous, and the programs of the Sunday school are most effective as they become a continuous and regular part of the Sunday school work. For this reason the General Sunday School Board does not seek to provide new or striking changes in its program of evangelism, but rather endeavors to encourage the enlargement, enrichment and more effective use of a program which has already taken its place as a regular and established part of the general program of Sunday school work.

SERMON ON PREACHING CHRIST.

boasting of their own generosity of spirit and breadth of view are proclaiming a salvation without faith in Christ and the atonement which he made upon Calvary. We are told in God's word that without the shedding of blood there is no remission of sins. During the world war we found preachers who were so far adrift from the word of God as to teach that soldiers that gave themselves to die on the battle field in a righteous cause, made for themselves a sacrifice sufficient to atone for their sins; such teachings sent men reeking in their sins to the battle front, trusting in their own efforts and blood, in the awful hour of death, instead of prayerfully looking to Christ in whom alone is salvation. How contrary are such teachings to the Holy Scriptures. Here we learn that "no blood can cleanse sin but that which was shed upon Calvary; no power can open the gates of heaven but that of him who hath the key of David, opening so that no man can shut, and shutting so that no man can open." If men would only meditate upon the solemn truth that "God spared not his only begotten son who died the just for the unjust that he might bring us to God." They would see that it is blasphemy to imagine that the salvation of man can he secured in any other way. For if so, God would have spared his only begotten Son.

"Could my tears forever flow,
Could my zeal no languor know,
These for sin could not atone,
Thou must save and thou alone.
In my hand no price I bring,
Simply to thy cross I cling."

The great depositum of the gospel is, "For by grace are ye saved through faith; and that not by yourselves; it is the gift of God; not of works, lest any man should boast." And in the text the great apostle speaking of our Lord Jesus, declares, "Neither is there salvation in any other: for there is none other name under heaven given among men whereby we must he saved." Our Lord himself says: "I am the door; he that entereth not hy the door into the sheep-fold, hut climheth up some other way, the same is a thief and a robber." The Bihle in its entirety from the first chapter of Genesis through Revelation gathers about this one great central truth, that in and through Christ alone is redemption, forgiveness of sins, the sanetifying of the nature, and everlasting life. God give us of Gihson Memorial faith in the old, old gospel.

The One Big Business of the Book of Books.

The Bible with its sixty-six books is one great volume portraying Christ the Saviour of the world as its outstanding theme. Jesus the Christ, the promised Messiah, is the God-man. It tells how he should come, and why he should come. Then it tells of how he came as the world's Saviour and Redeemer, Lord and Master. Some 6,000 years ago the prophet in the book of Genesis, the Book of Beginnings, spoke of the Saviour as the seed of the woman who was to ohtain a great triumph over the powers of darkness hy hruising the serpent's head. In Exodus he is the passover lamb. In Leviticus the atoning Sacrifice. And thus on and on, throughout the Book of books, there is one beautiful unrolling panorama of Jesus as the Saviour of the world.

The One Outstanding Theme of Mighty Men.

The great, powerful and sueeessful men of the church should he looked upon as men with one passion, purpose and profession, that of preaching Christ as the world's Savior. Nearly 2000 years ago, John, the immediate forerunner of Christ, face to face with the multitudes, contented himself then and there again and again counting it his soul-mission here below to point all to the Lamh of God which taketh away the sins of the world. Paul, the most illustrious merely human being the world has even known, the greatest preacher of all ages, had one theme, one subject, and one cause; that theme was Christ Jesus; tha subject was the cross; that cause the cause of salvation. With the faithful ministry of the great apostle and other mighty men contemporaneous with him in the first hundred years of the Christiau era, the lightning shaft of truth shivered every idol pinnacle, and Jesus was worshiped from the rising of the sun to the going down thereof. Hurrying on down through the succeeding eras of history, we would have you remember how that when Chrysostom, the golden-mouthed preacher with no uncertain sound, with no question mark or interrogation point to the power and influence of the gospel of Christ, the people listening hung forward to catch every word, and anon broke their silence with the clapping of hands, the stamping of their feet—how they were carried away with such spiritual enthusiasm that often they leaped to their feet shouting for joy. God was exceedingly magnified and sinners were ahundantly saved. Again we would have you remember that Martin Luther arose during a nighttime of the world's history and preached the gospel of the grace of God; and how the nations trembled and the world heard the voice of Jehovah and lived. We would have you remember Zwingli, Calvin and the mighty works that God did by them. Remember how Wickliffe went forth into every market town and hamlet of England preaching the gospel and how history speaks of him as a fire-brand in the midst of dry stubble.

Passing on down the pages of history, we would have you remember the wondrous things which God did in the days of Bunyan, John Knox, John Wesley, Whitefield, Brainard, and Edwards. How these mighty men dared to preach Christ and him crucified. While the churches were asleep, irreligion was the rule of the day and unbelief was rampant. Remember how that in a few years England and Scotland and America were permeated with evangelical truth and saved from a false science, unbelief and skepticism. Coming on down nearer our own times, we would have you remember Finney, and Spurgeon, and Moody, all mighty men of valor. And thank God in our own day we have Candler, Darlington, Ainsworth, and Morrison, and a host of others who are true to the faith once delivered to the saints, preaching with might, majesty and power the gospel of Christ, the only gospel that will save.

The One Big Business of Gibson Memorial Church.

We are favored to believe that the great Methodist Church at large will be true to the trust and preach Jesus as the one and only one through whom the world may be saved. And please God, our church, Gibson Memorial Methodist Church, shall in the pastorate of this year become noted as the church whose one purpose, passion and profession is to preach Christ and him crucified, very God of very God, the world Saviour and Redeemer.

We expect to preach Christ, and him crucified. Every sermon shall have as its foundation source a suffering, dying and conquering Saviour. The gospel of a crucified, resurrected and risen Christ alone is sufficient adequately to meet the needs of our lost and ruined race. Through Christ crucified we come to understand God's estimate of man. It is not what modern scholars think. Men's findings alone are faulty and inadequate. There is so much taught that is not so. Much of the so-called scientific and philosophical talk of our modern times is false and soulless. We give man credit for seeking earnestly after truth. The world has learned a few things that are so, but many of its findings, which it thinks are truth, are not true. Each age is puzzled over the ignorance of the ages that have passed. Sometimes for long years things that are hurtful errors will be taught as truth. The scientific teachers of some 500 years ago taught that the earth was flat and square, and that beyond the ocean hobgohlins would rise up and devour. More falsehoods than truth have been taught in most every science in the ages that are gone, and who knows but that the next age will discover that the most we teach is false. If this seems impossible to you, so did the past ages have this feeling. Constantly the world of mankind is thinking that it has arrived at truths. It is teaching its conclusions only to have the next age show that the most of them were false. Thus it is seen that only through God we can come to a sure, certain and proper estimate of man and his needs. So we should not be concerned about what modern scholars think, nor what we ourselves think, but what God thinks of the moral condition of man. He tells us that in our natural state, "The heart is deceitful above all things, and desperately wicked." That "From the crown of our heads to the sole of our feet, there is nothing but bruises and putrifying sores." That in this condition poor lost souls are without God and hope in the world; they feed on husks, they perish with hunger, they are clothed in filthy rags. That "All have sinned and come short of the glory of God."

We expect to preach the old, old story of man's lost and undone condition and need of a Saviour, for only in man's lost condition can we come to understand the cross. We expect to preach the old, old gospel of Jesus our Saviour as taught in the Word, because the deepest and most wonderful revelation of God's justice and holiness is the crucified Christ. Here we see God suffering and dying in the person of Jesus Christ to redeem man from the curse of sin. We expect to preach the old, old gospel because in and through Christ crucified we have love bringing a remedy for sin What love is this, what love is this:

"When I was sinking down
Beneath God's righteous frown,
Christ laid aside his crown
For my soul, for my soul."

A Wonderful Saviour and a Great Salvation.

What a wonderful Saviour is Jesus. And what a great salvation he gives. "Salvation," In the words of another, "comprehends the first dawn of conviction of sin, the exercise of repentance and faith, the joy of forgiveness, adoption and renewal, a life of holiness and usefulness—it's conflicts, conquests, triumphs, entrance into heaven, everlasting life in the Christian's home in glory, fullness of joy, light, knowedge, love and perfect felicity forever and ever in God's presence." Such a salvation, thank God, is the portion of the poor as well as the rich. It may be embraced by the illiterate as well as by the learned. It is for one and all.

"He is abundantly able to save all to the uttermost that cometh to God through him." In and through him we have liberation from sin. In and through faithfulness to him we shall come to our coronation in the by and by. Then from all the heights and depths and windings of our foremost heings, our immortal souls, let us proclaim our Saviour to a needy and dying world. "For there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved."

"Oh, for a thousand tongues to sing
My great Redeemer's praise,
The glories of my God and King,
The triumphs of his grace!"

"He breaks the power of canceled sin,
He sets the prisoner free;
His blood can make the foulest clean;
His blood availed for me."

The English Language College at Warsaw, Poland, enrolled 1,266 students during the past year. Among this number are representatives from practically all professions and occupations, namely: Physicians, nurses, professors, students, engineers, architects, lawyers, singers, actors, journalists, painters, business men, State employees, etc. This school is largely responsible for the good feeling towards the work of the Methodist church in Poland.

The Home Circle.

BLIND.

"Show me your God!" the doubter cries.
I point him out the smiling skies;
I show him all the woodland greens;
I show him peaceful sylvan scenes;
I show him winter snows and frost;
I show him waters tempest-tossed;
I show him hills rock-ribbed and strong;
I bid him hear the thrush's song;
I show him flowers in the close—
The lily, violet, and rose;
I show him, rivers, babbling streams;
I show him youthful hopes and dreams;
I show him stars, the moon, the sun;
I show him deeds of kindness done;
I show him joy, I show him care,
And still he holds his doubting air,
And faithless goes his way, for he
Is blind of soul, and cannot see!

INGENIOUS ENGINEER PUTS TOYS TO WORK.

A combination of childhood memories and good headwork the other day, enabled Chief Engineer Deets Arceneaux, of the Southwestern Gas and Electrle Company, Natchez, Miss., to put over what looked like an impossible job with what was mere child's play!

The big steel smokestack of the power plant, 135 feet high, simply had to he repainted. Well, that's easy. Yes, but the pilot eable was so badly rusted that it came smack in two near the pulley block and down it crashed. The guy wires proved absolutely gone, too.

Well, said the painters contracting for the joh, the only thing to do Is to crib up through the center of the stack, whieh will be both costly and risky.

Engineer Arceneaux, meanwhile, had been quietly looking on, and while his eyes and mind were apparently "in the air," his thinker had beeu working pretty effectively.

"Get me a few toy balloons, boys," he said, "and we'll put this thing over and have some fun along with it." He recalled his boyhood stunts and conceived the idea of a speetacular balloon ascension.

Eight or ten ordinary nickel balloons were bought, filled with natural gas and tied to a long silk fishing line. They were taken into the bottom of the stack, and the aseension began. Up, up, up, they went, out of sight of the crafty engineer, as he watched from the bottom.

"Here they come!" shouted the erowd of neighborhood boys, who had been summoned with their air rifles. When the balloons had soared high above the stack, the eommand to fire was given.

"Pop! pop! pop-pop!" and the silken line, swaying in the breeze, fell gently down to the ground.

The job was as good as done. The fishing line was used as a pilot to pull over a slightly heavier cord, and then a steel wire was pulled up, and last a heavy rope. Thus in less than an hour blocks were hoisted and hooked to the top of the stack, and the painters got busy.

Many days and dollars, and perhaps some lives, were saved by a little real brain work.—Utility News.

LAMBS AND LEAPS.

A flock of sheep with lambs, passing like a billowy wave down a country lane and then skillfully shepherded by a wonderfully intelligent dog through an open gate into a field, scattering itself with a chorus of "baas," is generally nothing more or less to an onlooker than a confused mass of wool and legs, all alike.

But just lean with us over the gate for a short time and watch the flock dissolving into units. Then, and then only, do differenees leap to the eye. How is it possible for the ewes to recognize their own offspring, or vice versa.

There is one old sheep with a voice like a big rattle. "Burr-burr-hurr," she croaks, and no wonder her lambs find her easily with a voice like that. These three are the whitest in the flock, in great contrast to the two black ones standing near—the black ones that look up as the others scamper away and then go on with their business.

Lambs appear to recognize their mothers more quickly than their mothers recognize them. The mother of the black ones does not seem to be quite certain that they are hers until she has sniffed them carefully. Probably the sheep, whose horizon is bounded generally by other woolly backs on every side, have to depend more on the sense of smell than of sight for recognition purposes.

It is usually after the lambs have finished their afternoon meal that they become balls of frisking, leaping wool. Look at that one with the black face whose mother has just lain down for a rest. There he goes, jumping backwards and forwards over her back, and she really does make a fine vaulting horse. Then he casts his eye on a mound some distance away, where others of his kind are collecting for a game of "King of the Castle." He gambols over to investigate and joins the others, who all seem to try and stand in one spot which will hold only one at a time. Consequently as many lambs are slipping down the mound as are climbing up on it.

Now, our black-faced friend suddenly begins to jump around with legs stiff as iron bars, and then gallops away. Immediately all the others begin to jump in the same place as he did and then gallop after him. As he stops suddenly—as suddenly as he started—the remainder collide with him and each other, and the result is a general butting match.

Here comes a stately old matron with her two little children who look as if they would prefer walking with mamma than playing. But the call of youth and high spirits s too much for them at last, and the old sheep continues on her way alone, while her naughty children amble off towards the mound.

But suddenly—surely not—yes, one of the old sheep has so far forgotten herself as to wish to take part in the youngsters' play. She runs awkwardly up the mound, slides round a bit and then proceeds to beat the lambs at their own jumping game. The lambs stand respectfully aloof, gazing in astonishment at the old sheep whose legs perform queer evolutions in the air. Then suddenly she remembers where she is and shamefacedly pretends that she has climbed up the mound to admire the view. When she joins her old neighbors, the lambs, with looks of reproach, resume their merry gambols.—P. J. McCann, in Our Dumb Animals.

THE FIRST ALPHABET.

An old, old story about the beginning of the alphabet is retold in "Better English Habits," a book written by Blount and Northrup, and published by the Wheeler Publishing Company. This is the story:

Long ago there lived in a far-off land a young princess named Europa. She had four brothers and many playmates. One day the youths and maidens were picking flowers in a lovely meadow near the sea. In the same meadow a beautiful white bull was feeding. He was so gentle and so friendly that the maidens wound about his neck and body long garlands of daisies and violets and primroses. After a time Europa said, "I am going to have a ride on the White Bull," and she mounted on his back.

At once the White Bull ran to the sea and began swimming for the distant shore. Europa was frightened. She grasped his horns with one hand and held the other towards her friends crying for help. They ran after her, but the White Bull was far out on the water and they could hardly hear the screams of Europa. At last the Bull and maiden disappeared in the distance.

The weeping brothers and playmates went home to tell their parents what had happened. The father and mother of Europa were, of course, in great sorrow. They commanded their eldest son, Cadmus, to go to find his sister. So Cadmus, with several other young men, set out.

The had many strange adventures. Perhaps the most wonderful was the one with a dragon. The monster lived in a cave, near which was a clear spring. When the comrades of Cadmus went to fill their pitchers at the spring, they were slain by the dragon. Cadmus attacked the serpent and slew him with his spear. Then he planted the dragon's teeth in the ground as if they were seeds. Immediately they came up as full-grown men, armed with spears and swords, and began fighting one another. When almost all of them had been killed, Cadmus persuaded them to give up the battle and to become his followers. With these five men he went on, seeking his sister.

But Cadmus could find no trace of Europa, and finally he became very weary of constant travel. He asked a wise man where he might find a home.

"Follow that cow," said the wise man, pointing to a cow that was walking down the road. "Where she lies down, build a city for yourself and your men."

So Cadmus followed the cow. Soon she lay down in the midst of a grassy pasture. Cadmus and his men put down the packs they were carrying on their shoulders, and began building houses to live in. Other men and women came to the same place, and Cadmus was made king of the city, which they called Thebes.

Four daughters and one son were born into the family of Cadmus. Although they lived so long ago and so far away, they were very much like the children of this day in America. They loved to hear their father tell of his journeys and his adventures. Many a time he told them of his childhood with his three brothers and his sister Europa, and of his long search for the lost maiden. And when his own children grew up they told the same tales to their children.

As Cadmus became very old, he said to himself, "I shall not he here much longer. When I am gone the stories about my parents and brothers and sister and my journeys and adventures will be forgotten. How can I make a record of them?"

After long and careful study, the wise old man invented a system of letters which should represent the sounds of speech. These letters he combined in such a way as to represent spoken words. Then he wrote the tales of his life so that all those who should come after him might know them. And he taught his grandchildren to read the books he had written.

This is the old Greek story of the origin of the alphabet.

When the White Bull had crossed the sea, he carried the Princess Europa into a lovely garden, surrounding a splendid palace. Then she discovered that the White Bull was not a bull at all, but the King of that land, who had taken the form of a bull to bring her into his kingdom. She became the Queen and lived there the remainder of her life. She was very happy with the King and her children; but sometimes she was very lonely for her father and mother and four brothers.

The name Europa was given to that country in honor of Queen Europa.—Exchange.

The little undernourished children in the public schools of the North Highlands section of Columbus, Ga., are growing plump and well from their daily allowance of rich sweet milk, donated to the schools by the mills of the community. It was the Rev. John S. Sharp, pastor of the Hamp Stevens Memorial Methodist Church in the mill district, who called the attention of the mill officials to the condition of the children and helped to secure for them this new supply of milk.

If you have a typewriter, by all means use it; otherwise use a good quality of black ink. 3. Leave a space of at least two inches at the top of the first page; leave a margin of at least one inch on the left-hand side of the page; do not crowd the words and the lines together. 4. Take special pains to write proper names correctly and legibly. 5. Use letter paper if you can get it—not note paper. No attention will be paid to rolled manuscripts.

Editorial

A LAYMAN'S SUGGESTION.

The editor may be pardoned for talking a little more shop, especially as a chance meeting on the street with a faithful layman gave the editor an idea which, by the way, was a wholesome thing for an editor, and would be for some others. The good layman in question is Dr. E. L. King, long a steward in the First Methodist Church of New Orleans. The good Doctor spoke of the New Orleans Christian Advocate, and expressed his desire to see the circulation of it greatly increased. He referred to the fact that many an organization has the policy of including in its dues a subscription to the periodical devoted to its interests, and he named the American Medical Association, the Southern Medical Association, a local association, etc., while the editor thought of the Kiwanis Club and others. Why, the Doctor asked, could not the official board of a Methodist Church in Louisiana or Mississippi ascertain the number of families represented in the congregation and write into the budget of the church an amount sufficient, at the present club rates, to send the Advocate into every home in the charge? Why not? A comparatively small amount would send the Advocate into every home in one of the smaller charges, while $200 or $300 would suffice for the most of the larger churches in our patronizing territory.

THE MUSINGS OF A MISSIONARY SECRETARY.

By Dr. O. E. Goddard.

As I sit here in Africa to-day taking a retrospective view of what has happened since I left home, nothing worth noting seems to have occurred between Nashville and Brussels. On arriving in Brussels, something came near happening. As I passed through the gates, some one gave a lurch at my hip pocket. In that pocket I had all the money for this long trip—some in currency, some in notes and a draft. I thrust my hand back to see what had happened, and my two purses were just in the act of falling to the ground. In one more second my money would all have been gone. Now, although I keep the pocket containing money and notes pinned, when any one begins to tinker with that part of my anatomy, I hold fast to my purses.

Seven years ago I was in Belgium. Then we could not hold a public preaching service. Now I find great revival meetings in progress on public squares with the permission and protection of the Belgian Government. The attitude of the public mind toward our work has greatly changed in seven years. We now seem to have almost unlimited opportunity for our work. Dr. Twynham is faithfully looking after the business interests of the Board and preaching to the English-speaking congregation. Brother Thonger is sanely and effectively pushing the work of his district. Seven years ago I was rather pessimistic about our work in Belgium. To-day I'm optimistic. We are rendering a real and an indispensable service in Belgium.

In Czechoslovakia there have beeen great changes, but of a different nature. Then the great exodus from the Roman Catholic Church was on. They were clamorous to hear anything Protestant and American. That is not the case to-day. They have now settled down to a more static condition and are not so keen for the Protestant message as they were at the close of the war. Brother Nelson, our only American-born missionary, and his bride (daughter of the American Consul) are rendering a constructice service. Brother Joseph Bartak, Brother Vaclav Vancura and Brother Joseph Dobes, Czechs by birth but American by adoption and training, are well equipped men doing great service for their people.

I had a conference with all the pastors to encourage them in their evangelistic program in particular. Since I held the first revival services conducted by our church in Czechoslovakia, I was interested to know how many of the present membership remembered those meetings and were brought into the church under my ministry. The brethren improvised an appointment for me to preach one night in the church that was built where I held my first meeting. Brother Nelson asked the congregation that night how many of them attended my meetings there seven years ago. To my surprise about half of the hands went up. It was most comforting to me to see that the work abides.

I journeyed from Antwerp to the Congo on the "Elizabethville," which carried about sixty Protestant missionaries and board secretaries and a large number of Roman Catholic priests going out as missionaries to the Congo. We had the two civilizations, Catholic and Protestant. We had Catholics with their services, Protestants with theirs, and a group that had no interest in either Catholic or Protestant.

Among the Protestant group were several Negroes as delegates to the Jubilee Conference at Leopoldville. These enjoyed all the privileges that others did on the boat. The Belgian Government looks askance at the incoming of American Negroes, but these were high-class, educated people who were not to remain long in the Congo. If England, France, Portugal and Belgium should close the door to American Negroes, they would have no opportunity for foreign missionary work. All the vast continent of Africa, except Liberia and Abyssinia, is controlled by the governments mentioned above. Some of the American Negroes who have been admitted into those colonies did not behave properly. Hence the attitude of Belgium toward American Negroes. But this is reaching a general conclusion from particular premises. There are no doubt many American Negroes—preachers, teachers, industrialists, mature Christian men and women—who could render fine service to the black people of the Congo if Belgium would only permit them to come. It is hoped that no other government controlling parts of Africa will discriminate against our American Negro as Belgium has. If Negroes were freely admitted to the Congo, we could doubtless get good workers from the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church to supplement our work. These black people could probably stand the climate better than our white people. At best the hazard of living in the Congo is great to every white person. I'm not very far into the Congo yet, but I have already taken more quinine than I had taken in forty years.

We, our Southern Methodist group, Miss Case, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Ayres, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Wheeler, Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Tabb, Joseph Maw, Herbert DeGossarie and I, arrived in Leopoldville in time for the Jubilee Conference. Here we met Captain De Ruiter and his wife in our boat, "The Texas." Thus twelve of us enjoyed the rare privilege of sitting in for more than a week to hear what had been done in the Congo in these fifty years of missionary effort.

Protestant Missions began in the Congo fifty years ago in a very humble way and in the face of a most inhospitable climate and fierce, cannibalistic savages. We heard a resume of what had been done. There are twenty-eight Protestant boards supporting missionaries in the Congo, about one thousand missionaries, more than 200,000 church members up to date.

The Congo Protestant Council invited other western African centers to join in the Conference. Delegates came from Liberia and the French, English and Portuguese possessions in Western Africa. It was a great, harmonious, brotherly meeting. Denominational lines could only partly be seen. The medical, educational, industrial and evangelistic problems were frankly discussed. Co-operation along all these lines that there may finally be a self-propagating African Church seems to be the agreed objective of all workers. I think they are trying to avoid superimposing too much of our western forms upon these people and they are surely avoiding creating in them a source of dependence on the foreign church. Self-support for the native church in its evangelistic work is emphasized by all.

I was greatly surprised with the high honor conferred upon me in being appointed to preach the Sunday morning sermon the closing Sunday of the Conference. That the Southern Methodist, in the midst of the older and larger missions of the North and of Europe, should be thus honored was not to be expected. Your representative, by the help of God, discussed "The African Church To-Be." I think the Lord used me to say what should have been said at that hour.

Now we are packing for a month's journey up the Congo to reach our work. If I write again it will be concerning our work in the Congo and incidentally the trip up the Congo.

HIGH RECOGNITION FOR S. M. U.

By Herschel S. Burgin.

The recognition of Southern Methodist University by the American Association of Universities as one of the institutions on its approved list of colleges and universities assures the acceptance of S. M. U.'s degrees and credits without question everywhere among member-institutions of the Association; and gives to the degrees already granted by the Dallas institution a still higher standing in the educational world, according to an official announcement by Dr. Charles C. Selecman, President.

"This recognition places S. M. U. in the highest class of American institutions of learning," declared Dr. Selecman. "It is the most important event in the life of the institution since it was founded. So far as I know, no other institution in America has achieved this distinction at the age of Southern Methodist University—in other words, at the age of thirteen years. Less than 200 institutions are on the approved list of the Association, and only four of these are in Texas."

The organization of the American Association of Universities was effected fifteen years ago among twenty-five leading universities of the country such as Northwestern, Johns Hopkins, Columbia, and Cornell, for the purpose of raising the standards of work done in American institutions of higher learning. Only one institution has been admitted to membership since its original organization. The approved list to which S. M. U. has just been admitted includes the names of all other colleges and universities accepted since then, on the basis of the meeting of the Association's requirements on efficiency of faculty members, salaries, plant, teaching equipment, endowment, and grade of work done by students.

AN APPEALING PROGRAM OF MISSIONARY EDUCATION FOR OUR SUNDAY SCHOOLS FOR 1929.

By Rev. Fennell P. Turner, Secretary, Missionary Education and Foreign Extension, Sunday School Board, Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

If our church is to meet its responsibility as a missionary church an effective program of missionary education is essential. Such a program should begin with the children. It will be integrated with the policy of religious education, planned to meet the genius and requirements of our Southern Methodist people. It should start in the home and be continued in the Sunday school. In addition to provision for instruction there must be provided for the pupils the opportunity to express the feeling of responsibility to help support the work which is generated by the study which they are making. This desire to help is expressed when children share in the regular missionary offerings. This is most practical. The money the children may earn or receive in their allowances is that much of themselves and when money is given to missions they are giving that much of themselves.

For our Southern Methodist Sunday schools for next year, a plan known as "Our Dual Special for 1929" has been worked out. This contemplates the following: (1) the extension of Sunday schools in the needy areas within the bounds of each Annual Conference; (2) the extension of our program of Sunday school extension into all our mission fields abroad; and (3) the study and support of the mission work carried on by our church in China, our oldest mission field.

A few words with regard to these important objectives may be of interest.

1. Within the bounds of each of our Annual Conferences are needy and neglected areas in which Sunday schools should be organized if provision is to be made for the religious education of those in the neglected districts for whose religious care our church is primarily responsible. There are also many weak and inefficient schools which need superivison and care. Special attention is being given to these needy areas. In the Annual Conferences there have been appointed by the Conference Boards Sunday school extension secretaries who are carrying forward programs within the Conferences which include: (a) The organization of new Sunday schools in needy areas. This involves a careful and thorough study of these areas of the participating Conferences and the wise organization of new Sunday schools at strategic points within the bounds of the Couferences. (b) The organization of new Sunday schools in the congregations which have no Sunday schools. This requires in co-operation with the pastors a study of the membership of these congregations wth a view to the selection of men and women qualified to serve as officers and teachers of the new Sunday schools. In organizing a new Sunday school it is absolutely essential that the best qualified men and women be selected as officers and teachers. If this is not done the new school will not succeed. To accomplish such results the services of skilled workers are required. (c) The sympathetic and intelligent supervision of weak and struggling schools which are inefficient and need reorganizing and building up if they are to render the service they ought to render to the church and the community. (d) The organization of Sunday schools for less favored races within the bounds of the participating Annual Conferences. Here is a field for needed service. So far, little has been done to meet this great need and wonderful opportunity. (e) The extension of our Sunday schools into industrial centers located in territory within the bounds of our Conferences where the religious needs of the people have not been fully met.

2. With regard to the extension of our Sunday school program in our foreign mission fields: The Sunday school work is being assisted this year in all our mission fields. In two countries (Cuba and Korea) we now have Secretaries for Sunday School Work. The extension of an adequate program of religious education in our foreign mission fields should be carried forward much more rapidly. This is urgent. This was recognized by the International Missionary Council in session at Jerusalem in April, 1928, during which meeting much time was given to the consideraton of the topic and one volume of the Jerusalem report is devoted to religious education.

It should be remembered, however, that, important and urgent as this work is, it can be carried forward no more rapidly than our Sunday schools in the home Conferences make possible. Our hope is that the Sunday schools will respond so generously to the appeal for the extension of our Sunday school work in the foreeign field that this can be done without great delay. The work in all our missions in other countries is being retarded because our program of religious education has not been adequate to the needs of these fields.

3. Beginning Jan. 1, 1929, the Sunday schools will take up the study of China and our very successful work carried on in that country. For the past three years the Sunday schools have been studying our European work. So great was the interest aroused in our mission work in Europe that all our work in Belgium, Czechoslovakia and Poland was supported by the voluntary offerings of the Sunday schools. After Jan. 1, 1929, the Board of Missions will become responsible for the support of the European work. Our Sunday schools will then devote their attention to our work in China. The Board of Missions has asked the Sunday schools to become responsible for the entire budget of our missions in China. The support of all our work in China for 1929 depends, therefore, on the fourth Sunday missionary offerings of the Sunday schools.

It is an opportune time to study China. A new epoch has begun in that country. The Government has been recognized and set up in Nanking, China's old capital. A new president has been inaugurated. As to Christian missions in China: Those who know the situation best, have no douht that years of wonderful spiritual fruitage are just ahead. China has passed through years of great difficulty and suffering. The lesson of church history is that such periods have in the past been followed hy periods of growth and expansion. This was true in the years following the Boxer uprising in 1900. Our Chinese Christians during the past few years of strain and stress have been tested and tried hut have not been found wanting. The new epoch begins with a church which is stronger because of the difficulties and sacrifices.

For this study of China upon which our Sunday schools are entering, ample materials are available, such as: (a) In the Sunday School Lessons will he found interesting materials during the year in the Group Graded and the Closely Graded Series. (b) The Sunday school papers will carry interesting articles and stories about China, her people, her government, her social and religious life—in fact, all aspects of life in China. Informing articles on the progress of the Christian Movement in China will be published. Most valuable articles already have appeared. (c) A special China library will be available. Every Sunday school, large and small, will want this China library. (d) In addition to the above Library on China, in our papers will appear notices and reviews of the latest books on China as they are published. A list of hooks on China may he secured on request. (e) Maps and charts, flags, pictures, etc., will be available at small cost. (f) Interesting plans have been worked out for a "China Log Book." Suggestions for "Our China Log Book" will be sent on application. (g) A good selection of plays and pageants is available. (h) The bulletin "Here and There" issued each month will carry material which will be helpful.

This appealing program has in view giving the benefits of well organized Sunday schools to the needy sections within the bounds of each Annual Conference; the extension of our Sunday school movement to every foreign mission field of our church; and the study and support by the Sunday school of the entire work of our church in China.

The primary objective is to educate the Sunday school pupils of to-day so that the church of tomorrow may be a church that is sacrificially missionary in spirit and in practice. If carried through with vigor and enthusiasm, this program will most effectively contribute to the realization of this objective.

EUGENE L. JOYNER.

On April 25, the angel of death visited our community and called away one of our beloved brethren. Too soon it seemed to all who knew him, too soon it seemed to the church that needed him; but his time to come home was known to God who loved him. Long had Eugene L. Joyner served his God and his church and the time for his rest to begin arrived in his 69th year.

Eugene L. Joyner loved his Savior, and dutifully and faithfully served and followed him. In all the walks of life he was sunshine and flower, but when the storms did come he was solid oak. He loved justice, aided the poor, relieved the oppressed and lived a life that aided in lifting all who knew him. And today if all to whom he has done some favor should cast one rose upon his bier, he would sleep tonight beneath a wilderness of flowers. In the fields of commerce and business he climbed to the summit, at the same time leaving pride behind. He travelled carefully the way of the cross and it has led him home. And to his dear Christian wife and loved ones we express our sympathy and prayers for their comfort. Eugene L. Joyner has fought a good fight, he has finished his course, he kept the faith: henceforth there is laid up for him a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous judge, shall give him at that day and not to him only but to all them also that love Christ's appearing. ONE WHO LOVED HIM.

Pelican, La.

JOHN A. HUGHES was born in Bradley County, Tenn., March 1, 1845, and died November 8, 1928, aged 83 years, 8 months, and 8 days, at the home of his daughter, Mrs. H. C. Lea, Sikes, La., with whom he had made his home about ten years. He went to Henderson County, Texas, December 3, 1855. He entered the Civil War February 26, 1862, in "J. C. Robertson's Company C, 17th Texas Cavalry," and served part of the time on detailed wagon service. He attended the Confederate reunions with great pleasure. In 1865 he moved to Houston County, Texas, where he married Miss Emily Peacock, on March 24, 1870. To this union were born seven children. He is survived by four children: Mrs. Ella Weisinger, Jasper, Texas; Mrs. Annie E. Lea, Sikes, La.; Robert A. Hughes, Pasedena, Texas, and Geo. W. Hughes, Terrel, Texas; sixteen grandchildren, six great-grandchildren, and two brothers, Asberry and Alfred Hughes, of Texas. His first wife died September 20, 1886; on May 16, 1888, he married Miss S. L. Little, who died June 16, 1907. He joined the Methodist Church when eight years old, but went astray for awhile; but, under the influence and prayers of a loving Christian mother, he came back to the church in 1867 and lived a devoted and consistent Christian to the end, when he told me, "Annie, I won't be here much longer, but I am happy and ready to go." He served as steward of the church most all the time and as Sunday school superintendent. He was a great friend to the orphanage. He loved the work as a whole. He loved the preachers, and his home was the preachers' home—not only his preacher's, but those of all denominations were welcome and came often. He was a loving father and husband, and will be greatly missed in our homes, churches, and lodges—he was made a Master Mason in Grapeland, Texas, Lodge No. 473, in 1880. He was true to his masonry. Funeral services were conducted by his pastor, Rev. H. C. Murphy, after which the Order of Eastern Star and Masons took charge, paying a last tribute of honor and respect to a beloved member. Interment was made in the Salem cemetery, near Eros, La.

His daughter,
MRS. H. C. LEA.

MRS. EMMA HESTER ALLEY. The death of Mrs. Emma Hester Alley, wife of P. W. Alley of Ruston, La., on Nov. 13, 1928, at a local hospital in Jackson, Miss., brought sorrow to her many friends and acquaintances in Mississippi, especially in Montgomery County, where she had lived for a number of years.

Mrs. Emma Hester Alley was born in Copiah County, Mississippi, Dec. 17, 1852. Married to Mr. P. W. Alley Dec. 12, 1872. Professed faith in Christ and joined the Bethesda Methodist Church, near Hazlehurst, at the age of 12 years; lived a consistent member of the church to the day of her death, which occurred Nov. 13, 1928, following a lingering illness of four months. Her body was laid to rest in the Greenwood cemetery at Ruston, La., on the day following her death; funeral services being held in Trinity Methodist Church in the presence of a large number of friends, the services being conducted by her pastor, Dr. W. W. Drake, assisted by the pastor of the Presbyterian Church.

Sister Alley was a great Christian character. Her home was her pastor's home also. This humble writer never felt more at home than he did when in her home. In the departure of this saintly woman, another sweet and beautiful life has gone home. But she has left us a legacy. No one can look on her memory without feeling that there is such a life as a spirit-filled life. The home, the church, and society loses heavily when such a life takes its flight.

Her many friends can't but feel that she is happier, and that we are all made better in heart, and richer in soul, when we reflect on her beautiful life. We believe that she could say with Paul, "For me to live is Christ, and to die is gain." His will seems to have been her will. Her life was not only like His life, but was His life. She had a Christian face; a Christian courage; she was a Christian wife and mother. She leaves an aged husband of 80 years, two sons: C. C. of Ruston, La., and T. W. Alley of Vicksburg, Miss.; one daughter, Mrs. T. W. Hendrix of Lake Providence, La.; one sister, Miss Sallie Hester, of Franklin County, Miss., with a host of friends to mourn her departure. But our loss is her gain. She lived a beautiful life and died a beautiful death. May she have the two-fold resurrection—one into the life beyond, with her Lord, and loved ones, the other in the lives that remain here on earth, blessed and purified by her influence. May God's richest blessings rest upon her aged husband, her three children and her sister, with all relatives and friends, is the prayer of her former pastor. We shall meet her again.

Holcomb, Miss. W. J. WOOD.

RESOLUTIONS.

Whereas, our Heavenly Father, in tender mercy and infinite wisdom, has seen fit to call our beloved MRS. CLARA E. HUNT to the home where sickness and sorrow are known no more, be it resolved by the Woman's Missionary Society of First Methodist Church, West Monroe, La.:

1. That this society has lost a most noble woman, who has given a long life of service and devotion to her Master and Lord, ministering to the sick and needy and distressed, so thoughtful and kind at all times, in all of her ways following the crucified Christ.

2. That we have lost a personal friend, who was always an inspiration, a friend who was found tried and true. We shall always cherish the memory of "Grandma," as she was called by all. We shall endeavor to follow her example of Christian virtue and faith.

3. That while her place is vacant, the memory of her sweet, gentle Christian life will be an inspiration to those who knew and loved her. We extend our prayerful sympathy to her family, and pray that they may be comforted by the Saviour she loved and served; we commend them to him, who doeth all things well.

4. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, the Ouachita Citizen, the New Orleans Christian Advocate, and that another be spread on the minutes of the Missionary Society.

Signed: Lillian E. Collins, Mrs. T. L. Hood, Mrs. W. A. Kirkpatrick, Committee.

A SPIRITUAL UNDERGIRDING.

In the movement to secure World Peace it is important that we labor to reduce national armaments, to secure the signing of peace pacts outlawing war and pledging the nations to peaceable means of settling their difficulties; to set up the international machinery necessary to secure peace among the nations, such as the League of Nations and the World Court of International Justice, to remove national misunderstanding and prejudices which lead to war; to bring to bear motives to overcome the forces which make for war such as the futility of war, the terrible destruction and horror of modern warfare, motives of self-enlightened interest, economic and humanitarian motives.

All this and much else of similar character is good and should have the active support of the friends of World Peace. But all this is insufficient. Without something else, more vital and fundamental, the peace movement will fail. The peace structure we are building to-day needs a spiritual undergirding. A mighty spiritual dynamic must be supplied to the peace movement to give it the force and power necessary to carry it forward to success.

This dynamic is found in the gospel of Jesus Christ applied to national life and international relationships. The mighty power of the gospel has been proved in the sphere of individual life and individual relations. Its ideals of righteouness, service and love have overcome selfishness, pride, jealousy and hatred in the individual life and brought peace and good will in individual relationships where before there had been strife and bloodshed. It has done this because those entrusted with the gospel believed it was for the individual and brought its power to bear upon individual lives.—The Christian Statesman.

NOTES.

The Woman's Missionary Society of Lake, at one of its recent meetings, adopted resolutions of appreciation of the work of Rev. M. L. White and his wife, and regret at their removal to another field of labor. Let all of us take note and strive anew to be such members of the Missionary Society that our presence or absence will be deeply felt.

From Louise, Miss., comes a belated but interesting account of a zone meeting the latter part of October. The meeting was held at Silver City, and was a union of the Louise, Silver City and Holly Bluff auxiliaries, Vicksburg District. A letter was read from the District Secretary, Mrs. McKeown, and a letter from Miss Eurania Pyron. "She gave a very interesting description of her voyage to Poland and of the beginning of her work there." Zone officers were elected for the ensuing year: Mrs. Earl Sledge, chairman, and Mrs. Ben Kern, secretary.

On Nov. 14, Zone 2, of Baton Rouge District, met at Slaughter. Fifty-five members and fifteen visitors were in attendance, and the meeting proved to be one of the best of the year. Sketches were given of eight pioneer members of the Baton Rouge First Church: The rest of the program centered around discussion of "Woman's Responsibility in the Home and the Church." Mrs. Wynn was the leader of this meeting, and Mrs. Law the secretary.

CENTRAL ZONE, BROOKHAVEN DISTRICT.

Our last zone meeting for this year was with the Bude auxiliary, Nov. 15. Mrs. McGehee, our zone leader, urged each auxiliary to prepare a history of their Society for their own keeping and to send a copy to our State Historian, Mrs. B. F. Lewis, of Jackson, Miss.

Mrs. C. L. Freiler, of Norfield, presented some of her Juniors. They gave quite an interesting program

Each auxiliary gave a brief report of the year's work, showing progress and the addition of a number of Jubilee members. The Jubilee offering was much larger than that for former weeks of prayer.

Mrs. J. Frank Decell, District Secretary, reported Brookhaven District as meeting all obligations to date and hoping for a full report by the close of the year.

Mrs. L. W. Alford closed the discussions of the day. She gave a brief review of the work, and then began her address on "Christian Living, or Witnessing for the Master." Many claimed that this was the best talk they had heard Mrs. Alford give. All felt a renewed determination to do more for the Master.

As a result of the annual election the following named officers will serve for the year 1929: Mrs. C. L. Freiler, of Norfield, president; Mrs. C. E. Mullins, of Bude, secretary. Brookhaven was chosen as the next meeting place. Date to be set later.

Reviewing the four zone meetings of the year we find that the host pastors have ably assisted us by conducting the devotionals, leading in prayer and doing everything possible to make these meetings enjoyable and profitable. Different members and visitors have given liberally of their time and talent—both musical and literary—for the programs. The ladies of the different societies have served fine lunches. In fact, everything has been done for our comfort and pleasure. We feel that these zone meetings have not only been pleasant but very profitable. Now we must move forward, praying for greater things for the Master in the coming year.

Respectfully submitted,
MRS. J. C. McGEHEE,
President.
MRS. L. S. McWATERS,
Zone Secretary.

OUR RESPONSIBILITY TO THE UNDERPRIVILEGED.

(Paper Read at Group Meeting at Lena, Miss.)

In the gospel of Luke Christ revealed to us his passiou for men and women, especially for the underprivileged and backward people whom he touched. The lost sheep, the lost coin, the prodigal son, the grain of mistard seed—all suggest his faith in the possibilities of those who were generally unrecognized by the religious leaders of their time. In his mind there were no walls built up between men, no castes to divide them, no limitations that made men's struggles hopeless. To him, a man was a man because of his kinship with God. Under his ministration, humble fishermen became fishers of men, fallen women, saints who gave him unstinted loyalty; tax-gatherers became pillars in the spiritual church. He caused men to believe in themselves because he believed in them; he set no limit to the possible development of mind and character.

The test of the Christian religion lies just here: his greatest followers have always been those who caught enough of his spirit to minister unto the less fortunate and the most unpromising. But so many of us adopt an attitude of complacency and condescension with regard to underprivileged and unpromising individuals. Luxury, the love of pleasure, social pride, and heartless selfishness cause men to lose sight of the struggling masses.

In our mountain schools, our Negro schools, our homes for dependent girls, our settlement houses, our Wesley houses and other institutions, we find evidence of what can happen in the lives of those who have been considered by many as the most hopeless elements in Southern social life. When we read or hear the stories of some of our students in the mountain schools, our faith in what may happen when all the backward people of mountain regions have been brought within the sphere of education and religion is renewed. To those who teach in colleges, one of the greatest disappointments is that those from whom we have a right to expect most by reason of their inheritance and opportunities are those who fail to realize their possibilites and responsibilities. On the other hand, those who most surprise and delight us are the sons and daughters of humble people who have to struggle against every possible obstacle in order to attain the privileges of education and culture. The spirit of condescension or of doubt or of cynicism gives way before such substantial evidences as we find in industrial, intellectual, and moral progress among the underprivileged. The institutions that we sponsor have only pointed the way to what must be done. It has been said that the greatest undeveloped resource of the South is the untrained human life.

Miss Belle Bennett once said that "an experience of eighteen years among the so-called 'submerged classes' has compelled even the most skeptical to believe that 'God is no respecter of persons;' that, notwithstanding the accident of birth and the blighting influence of the worst environment, the gospel is the power of God to every one that believeth, and every soul born into the world has a right to the life more abundant which the gospel proclaims."

The Southern Methodist Church has had thrust upon it by every demand of the religion that it professes, the obligation to promote the development of unfortunate, backward people.

The Negro in all his want and degradation, is one of our greatest problems. Our lives are not separate from him. In fact, the Negroes are a vital and intimate part of our home life, and will continue to be. If they suffer, we, too, must suffer. The confusion and immoral influence of the small cabin, and overcrowded homes that abound in every Southern town produce some of the acute problems of the colored people. From whom does the Negro get his conception of God, of honesty, of virtue, of right living in every form, except from the white men and women about him?

In the first place, we should take an interest in the things that the Negroes

Sunday School

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

By Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

The best help I know for a teacher of adults is Snowden's Notes on the Sunday School Lessons. This makes an acceptable Christmas present for the teacher. Order of Lamar & Whitmore, Nashville, Tenn. Price, $1.50.

The full aim of the Sunday school is not thoroughly understood by many of our leaders, judging by the small number who are led to Christ each year. The aim is to lead each pupil to a knowledge of God's will and acceptance of Jesus Christ as personal Savior and Lord. The school falls short of its high calling when it fails to put the aim into practice. The teacher must harve a saving knowledge of Jesus Christ before she can lead others into this experience. If a teacher discovers the fact that she cannot do this, the thing to do is to repent and ask the Lord for a salvation that will desire to see others saved. Teachers of children from eight to thirteen years of age have a glorious opportunity. This group is easily led to confess Christ. The chief purpose for organizing classes from the intermediates up, is to train members of these classes to win others who have missed the way. We have the best machinery in the world for preventing childhood from going into sin and of winning those who have gone into the broad road that leads to destruction, but the machine without power is useless. It is appalling that we can sleep while the world is waiting for us to bring it to the Savior. Evangelism should continue daily; all times are hers. The General Sunday School Board has prepared literature on every phase of evangelism, but if it is not used, what is it worth? Our trouble is, we need more genuine religion. We can get more religion by undertaking to lead others to Christ. Lord, teach us to pray, to read, to work while it is day; for the night cometh when no man can work. We propose to devote much time during January, February, and March to this, the main task.

The church at Winona is prospering under the leadership of Rev. Mellville Johnson. The new educational building is all that one could desire; the furnture is the best money can buy. The pastor, the superintendent, the teachers are of one mind, namely, to fill the building and to use it for all it is worth.

There is urgent need for some one to qualify to teach the course on "Stewardship" in our Standard Training Schools. Some great, big layman should do this work. If you hear the call of the Spirit and are willing to answer this call let me help you make the necessary preparation.

How many schools are willing to have some course of the Bible taught at the Sunday school hour for credit? The first of January is a good time to begin.

How many schools are ready to have a Parents' class in the Sunday school? Courses are offered on the following: "Our Children," "Practical Home Problems, I and II," "Co-operation Between Home and Sunday School." The texts are 20 cents each. Write Mrs. C. T. Court, 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn. She is ready to help you begin this work.

Rev. J. Q. Schisler has called a conference of all approved instructors in the two Conferences to meet at Jackson, Miss., Dec. 29, at 9 a. m., in the Capitol Street Methodist Church. These conferences are being held over the entire church. Let the approved instructors of North Mississippi show their love for this work by attending this important meeting.

Rev. Roy Grisham writes that he has found only one Sunday school on his circuit that is meeting regularly. He proposes to teach one or more classes in each of the six schools that they may be brought to life. Training leaders will bring about the desired results in the country as well as in the towns and cities. The pastor who teaches his leaders can find more about their needs in one week than he can find out in a whole year by letting them drift along in idleness.

Three teachers have written that they lack Junior Materials and Methods for their gold seal. Let me know your needs and I shall do my best to have the courses in the training schools you want. One of the difficult thinigs that I am called upon to do is to secure proper instructors for the different courses.

The first item to work at in every charge is to increase the attendance at the preaching services and at the Sunday school. A thorough survey of the community will reveal the fact that we are reaching a small per cent of the people, old and young. After the survey has been made the non-attendants should be given to the classes to which they properly belong that they may be visited until they are brought in. Visits are to be repeated until they are won. If they are not won after reasonable effort has been made then it will be time to find out whether the trouble is with the absentees or with the school. The Cokesbury Record Books are designed to help build up the membership of the school and the congregation. A determination to win is half the battle.

How can we preach to them or teach them unless we get them to attend the services? We must get them if we mean to evangelize them. Never forget it, our aim is to win them to Christ and build them up in the faith. Soul winners first prepare themselves by much prayer and the study of God's Word. "Follow me and I will make you fishers of men." "And they that be teachers shall shine as the brightness of the firmament; and they that turn many to righteousness as the stars forever and ever." There are teachers and members of Bible classes who have a yearning for this work, but they are waiting for some one to teach them and lead them. Is it not worth while to use the prayer meeting service during the month of January to discuss such topics as "The Home and Evangelism." "The Sunday School Teacher as an Evangelist," "How to Present Christ to Children," "How to Win Young People," "The Holy Spirit Our Teacher and Power for the Work?" The leader who is too indifferent to lead in evangelizing needs to be evangelized.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

Rev. Frank L. Wells, newly elected Superintendent of Adult Work, writes: "I assure you that I appreciate the call to this service, and I will hold myself ready to aid you in any way possible." Brother Wells will have charge of the adult program in the State-wide conference to be held at Alexandria, April 2-3.

Miss Lois Hammett, new Elementary Superintendent, will make her headquarters in Alexandria. She left this week to attend the Elementary Council at Nashville.

Rev. A. K. McLellan, Extension Secretary, was in the Baton Roouge District last Sunday, visiting the Fellowship Church, on the Walker circuit. He leaves to-day for the General Sunday School Council meeting at Nashville.

Miss Myra Whitman, Hineston, La., sub-district secretary in the Alexandria District, writes in the interest of her fifth Sunday rally which will he held at Elizabeth. We appreciate the following invitation: "Would it be possible for you to be present at this meeting, and also to bring us a message on some phase of Sunday school work?"

The Sunday school at Ruston is planning a "White Gift Service" for their Christmas program. We hope to hear of other schools planning such a service.

Sunday, Dec. 2, at 11 a. m., your writer filled the pulpit at First Church, Alexandria. Their new pastor, Rev. W. W. Holmes, arrives this week.

Monday, Dec. 3, we spent in New Orleans. At 10 a. m. we visited the Union Preachers' meeting, which was held in the Y. M. C. A. building. Rev. W. H. Giles, our pastor at St. Mark's, was acting secretary of this meeting. The speaker of the morning was Prof. Collins, of Tulane University. He spoke in the interest of the "machinery," which is now set up to outlaw war.

While in New Orleans we called to see our former District Secretary of Sunday School Work, Mr. J. H. Carter, who has been on the sick list for several weeks. His present condition is encouraging, and he hopes to be well soon.

During our recent visit to New Orleans we had the pleasure of calling on the new editor of the Advocate, Dr. R. H. Harper, who has a new task, but the work is not new, as he has had a great deal of experience as editor and writer. We wish him great success.

Mrs. R. E. Smith will be one of the delegates from Loulsiana to attend the General Council meeting. She is superintendent of Parent-Teacher Work in our Conference, and also an approved instructor in Standard Training Schools. She has taught in more Training Schools than any other instructor in Louisiana. Mrs. Smith had charge of the Parent-Teacher program at our last State-wide meeting at Alexandria, and will have charge of this feature again at our 1929 meeting.

Two BOOKS for YOU and Your FRIENDS This CHRISTMAS

For YOU because they will delight you as they have delighted thousands of readers this year.

For YOUR FRIENDS because you will speak about them to your friends when you read them.

For YOU and YOUR FRIENDS because "helpful devotional books are rather scarce," and these will help your friends as they will help you.

"These volumes have been a delight to me as I have gone through them," comments Eugene B. Hawk, of Fort Worth. "I shall speak of both volumes this week in the paper published here at First Church."

Walking with God

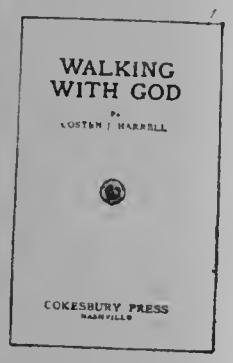
By Costen J. Harrell

We wish we could lay before you the thousands of lines of praise received from the press and readers themselves about this book. The best we can do is to reproduce a few lines:

"I think the studies by Harrell are a distinct contribution to devotional life," writes Eugene B. Hawk. "Wherever you dip into them you find something good," comments the Record of Christian Work. "Ask people to buy it with the idea of reading a chapter each morning," suggests Robert L. Russell. And part of the Theological Monthly Review reads: "The brief interpretation of Scripture passages given in this book are examples of how new interests can be aroused in old truths."

"Messages from the Church bulletin that are brief, to the point, and vital. . . . The subjects are very suggestive."—The Congregationalist.

"Excellent for devotional reading, and good for the basis of many an illustration and Scriptural talk."—The United Presbyterian.



Other comments: "A devotional volume of high order, rings true, and will also be valuable to those who are called upon to give short talks upon any religious subject." . . . "We gladly commend this book for either public or private devotions.

PRICE $1.00
Gift style and binding

"It is really very hard to read either one of these books and not use them in the next sermon," writes R. S. Truesdale, of Lincolnton, N. C. "They are great."

"Both these books are very high type and suggestive."—R. L. Russell.

The House of Happiness

By Bruce S. Wright

Enthusiastic letters and press comments would fill several pages if we were to reproduce them. Here are a few:

"I purchased this book and am very pleased with it," writes Dr. Fred R. Chenault, of Richmond, Va. "Written in a captivating style, it strikingly reminds us of the studies of F. W. Boreham, the noted Australian essayist," comments the Baltimore Southern Methodist. "This book would be a great contribution to any home. It would save thousands of couples from the divorce courts," declares Eugene B. Hawk. "These are remarkably fresh messages about the house of our own body, of home, Church and world, our faith and God," states the Presbyterian Banner.

"Helpful discussions and a fine presentation of what will lead anyone who builds his life after God's plan into the 'house of happiness.'"—The Baptist.

"'A home builder and home mender this book is destined to be, both from the fact that the author has been both."—Evangelical Messenger.

Other comments: "Many a refreshing message is contained herein." . . . "Very helpful and inspirational are the studies in this book." . . . "This is a charming title, and the book is just as charming as the title indicates." . . . "The book is beautifully printed."

FROM THE LOUISIANA FIELD SECRETARY.

Dear Epworth Leaguers: This past week has found me busy meeting with the Leaguers of Lake Charles District. I was very greatly pleased with the fine group of Leaguers at Sulphur. Miss Elsie Whitman, District Secretary, and I drove to Sulphur from Lake Charles last Wednesday evening. I spent a happy Thanksgiving Day in the home of Mrs. W. C. Whitman. We very fittingly closed the day with a Thanksgiving party by the Lake Charles Leaguers, with the De Ridder Leaguers as guests. The large social room of the church was decorated with autumn leaves and chrysanthemums. The "Tomahawks" and "Gobblers" competed for first place in the jolliest of relays and games. After the party I went to De Ridder with a car of Leaguers, and, after spending the night there, went to Leesville to meet with the Leaguers there. I always enjoy being in the home of Mrs. J. N. McDonald, which I have grown to call my Leesville home. I attended Sunday school and church in Lake Charles, and went to a meeting of the James V. Reed Union in Jennings in the afternoon. Although the Jennings Leaguers are from the Northern Methodist Church, they were very enthusiastic in our union work. The Corporate Communion Service was observed as a part of the devotional. From Jennings I went to Lake Arthur with Rev. T. F. King, and met with the Leaguers there at their devotional hour. I found a splendidl group of Leaguers both at Lake Arthur and Abbeville, where I went next. Tuesday evening I found myself at Rayne, having made the trip from Abbeville with Rev. and Mrs. Roy in their car. Miss Flavia Spell, Junior and Hi District Secretary, went with me out to Indian Bayou, where more than forty Epworth Leaguers came together for a business and social hour. I was delighted with such a large group of young people. They announced a union meeting of the Bessie Holt Union for Sunday afternoon, to be held at Indian Bayou. I am now in the home of Miss Spell, but will leave to-day for Alexandria.

Since we are so near the Christmas holidays I'm wondering what our Leaguers are planning to do to show that Christmas is more than just a big holiday. Should a Christian's Chrstmas be different? To me Christmas isn't to be just celebrated with "things," but is a matter of the "heart." In our day of rush and madness we even take the Christ out of Christmas and spell it with an "X." I would not be one who wrote that day of all days as Xmas. It not only takes Christ entirely out but it makes him an unknown quantity. I want him to be a known quantity in my life, and Christmas is first of all his birthday.

Leaguers, let's be busy planning our Christmas carols, serenades, watch night services and cheer for those less fortunate than we. There is much for us to be doing to show the right spirit at Christmas time.

May I take this opportunity to ask the treasurers of the different chapters to send in your Conference Promotion pledge as soon as possible, if it is not already in? Our treasury is in need of those pledges, and this reminds me that our State treasurer, Mr. H. F. Riggs, of Monroe, now signs his name as Senior, as H. F. Riggs, Jr., is almost three weeks old.

It is not too soon to order your Quiet Hour Covenant Cards, as that night is to be observed the first Sunday in January. If the State office can be of any assistance to the Leaguers and their friends remember that it will be our plasure to serve you.

Your Field Secretary,
ELIZABETH LANGFORD.

FROM BATON ROUGE UNION.

Dear Fellow-Leagures: This is my first letter to the Advocate and I'm sorta skeered it won't get printed, but here goes anyway. I surely do enjoy reading he Christian Advocate, and I always pass mine on to some friend.

I want to tell you all about the very successful meeting of the Baton Rouge Union. This union has not been organized fully for about two years—I think I'm pretty safe in saying that. Last Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock a bunch of Leaguers from Istrouma, Zachary and First Church, Baton Rouge, met at First Church. All were much enthused over the idea of having a union. The following officers were elected: DeWitt Milton, president, Baton Rouge; Miss Wall, vice president, Istrouma; Mrs. A. W. Montegueda, secretary, Zachary; Inez Easton, treasurer, Baton Rouge; Beatrice Thomas, corresponding secretary, Baton Rouge; Gladys DeLaune, publicity agent, Baton Rouge and Zachary.

The department superintendents will be announced at the next meeting of the union. It was decided that we would meet the first Sunday in every month. Since next Sunday is the first Sunday in December we shall meet in Zachary.

Leaguers, you know it is getting close to institute time. So, let's talk institute until we are blue in the face. You know we are to have Mr. Pim, from the general office, down here, and we want to show him just what Baton Rouge District can do. Let's get busy!

From Nov. 5 to 10, Rev. J. H. Bowden, of the Keener Memorial Church, Baton Rouge, held a class in the Epworth League handbook, which proved very interesting and helpful to all who took part in it. We are all deeply grateful to Brother Bowden for teaching such a handful.

We were all so glad to have our pastor, Dr. Frank Wells, returned to us. I don't know what we would do without him. He is such a wonderful leader and has such a "winning way" with young people and the older folks as well.

Well, here's hoping this won't get thrown in the waste paper basket. Leaguers, let's all pray that we will have a bigger and better institute than ever before.

Leaguerly yours,
INEZ EASTON,
District Secretary,
Baton Rouge District.

COLDS MAY DEVELOP INTO PNEUMONIA
Coughs from colds may lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.
Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for coughs from colds and bronchial irritations. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.
Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of coughs from colds, bronchitis and minor forms of bronchial irritations, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)

are doing in our own communities, and let them know that we have confidence in their ability and desire to become honest, upright, citizens. We see the great need of Bible teaching among the Negroes, yet why do we not establish training schools for them? We make no provision for trained nurses among them when we see the inroads that tuberculosis, typhoid and other diseases make on them. Do they need to have clean and sanitary homes? Is our neglect not due to carelessness, indifference, selfishness, and narrowness? If our underprivileged people were given the opportunity, might we not find in them the eager and responsible men and women who need only an opportunity to become the well-trained and loyal citizens of the kingdom of God that we sometimes fail to be?

HISTORY OF THE PIAVE METHODIST MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

The Piave Methodist Missionary Society was organized in March, 1925, by a committee of ladies from the Avera Missionary Society, and the pastor of the church, the Rev. P. H. Howse. The first officers of the society were as follows: President, Mrs. Lipscomb Vernon; Vice President, Mrs. W. I. McLain; Secretary, Miss Bernice Hinton; Corresponding Secretary, Miss Ruby Cantrell; Treasurer, Mrs. W. L. Whitman. There were about twelve members enrolled. The meetings were held twice a month at the homes of the members, for there was no church building at that time. The society prospered, much interest was taken, and the membership increased to about fifteen. Upon the removal of Mrs. Vernon from town, Mrs. W. I. McLain succeeded to the presidency. At the close of the first year, the members of the society felt that they had cause for thanksgiving in that the organization had grown, interest had continued, and dues and financial obligations had been met.

The second year's work was entered upon with the following officers: President, Mrs. W. I. McLain; Vice Pres., Mrs. C. H. Bishop; Secretary, Mrs. L. L. Hamrick; Treasurer, Mrs. John Pulford. Meetings were held as formerly twice a month, at the homes of the members, and interest continued good. There was a small increase in membership, and dues and obligations were met. Two boxes were sent during the year to Wesley Houses.

Officers for the third year were: President, Mrs. H. M. Thames; Vice President, Mrs. C. H. Bishop; Secretary and Corresponding Secretary, Mrs. G. A. Graham; Treasurer, Mrs. John Pulford. During the first part of this year, a church building was erected, and as a direct result, renewed interest was felt in all the organizations of the church. The missionary society came in for its full share of this increased interest, and as a result of a membership drive, the enrollment was increased to twenty-five. The purchase of a piano for the new church was undertaken by the society early in this year. The task seemed great in addition to meeting the regular obligations of the society, but with prayers for strength and guidance, it was undertaken. The payments which fall quarterly, have been promptly met, and the offerings to other causes have not suffered on account of this additional burden. At the close of this third year, the members reviewed the year's work with pride. A large increase in membership, renewed interest manifested, ready response to all calls for financial assistance, substantial boxes sent to Wesley houses, obligations met, the purchase of a piano for the praise and worship of God in the new church, besides contributions to local causes, and much social service work done. "Attempt great things for God, accomplish great things for God."

The present year, which is the fourth, is also one of promise. The following officers are serving with efficiency and ability: President, Mrs. W. F. Mudge; Vice President, Mrs. R. L. Martin; Secretary, Mrs. J. T. Hunter; Treasurer, Mrs. John Pulford; Corresponding Secretary, Mrs. R. L. Martin. A junior society has been organized under the leadership of Mrs. John Pulford, with Miss Lucille Pevey as junior leader. The work of this new organization is very encouraging, and much interest is being shown. The membership of the adult society is now twenty-seven, with an average attendance of fifteen. Meetings are held every Wednesday afternoon at the church, with the exception of social meetings which are held in the homes. Mission study under the able leadership of Mrs. E. L. Grubb, with the text book, Our Templed Hills, is proving very interesting. One meeting each month is devoted to this study. Another meeting is given over to Bible Study, with Mrs. G. A. Graham as leader. The text book, Great Bible Characters, is used for this study. The other two meetings are given over to Jubilee or Voice programs, and business and social meetings. Better and fuller reports are being sent in to our conference superintendents, dues and pledges are promptly paid and all obligations met. Two boxes of clothing and supplies have been sent to the Biloxi Wesley House. The payment of a share of the parsonage rent, apportioned to this church, has been assumed by the society. The interest is good, there is prompt and willing response by the members to calls made upon them, and there has been spiritual as well as financial and numerical growth in the organization.

We look back over the work of three and a half years, and lift our hearts in humble praise and heartfelt thanks to the Giver of All Good and Perfect Gifts—and the end is not yet.

THE MEANING OF CHRISTMAS DAY

BY BISHOP WARREN A. CANDLER.

The annual observance of Christmas celebrates the greatest of miracles—the incarnation of the Son of God.

Whether men have or have not fixed upon the right date for the celebration of the transcendent event is a matter of no great consequence.

It is now said, and with a show of probability, that the Declaration of Independence was not signed on July 4; but, if it were proved that the American people have fallen into an error in celebrating their national independence on that date, it would not be a matter of grave moment. The historic charter of their freedom from monarchic oppression is in their hands, and before their eyes; around them on every side, are the evidences of the liberties which it assured. Their independence is a reality whatever may be the exactly correct date of the signing of its declaration.

In like manner the fact of the Christ stands firm in history whatever may have been the day and year of his birth, and the coming of God into humanity through the Incarnate Son is the central fact in all human history, to which all that went before it looked forward and from which all the subsequent moral progress of mankind has issued. This is certain if there is anything certainly known among men.

Jesus Christ is the center of a supernatural course of events, which both preceded and followed his coming into our world. Human history is not what it would have been, if he had not come. Men need not stick at the record of his Virgin Birth and deny it as an incredible "biological miracle." The Incarnation by any method or process must by its very nature be the most marvelous of all miracles. He who accepts the fact of the Incarnation thereby commits himself to the whole principle of the miraculous.

Some skeptically inclined men claim that it is more easy to believe in the Incarnation without believing in the Virgin Birth than it is to accept as historic fact the birth of Christ of Mary at Bethlehem; but as a matter of fact such is not the case. History shows that there is a vital connection between acceptance of the Incarnation and belief in the miraculous conception of Jesus by the Virgin Mother. From the days of the Ebionites and the Docetae in the first century to the era of the Modernists in the twentieth century doubt of the Virgin Birth has resulted in the rejection of the Incarnation. The real difficulty lies in the latter and not in the former. Belief in the Incarnation carries with it cofident faith in all the miracles, including the Virgin Birth and the bodily Resurrection of Jesus Christ.

The nature of the God of love makes the Incarnation antecedently probable; for the supremacy and universality of the law of love render it necessary that the loftiest Life should descend to the lowest in order to lift it up.

CHRISTMAS MORN.

By J. B. Tullis.

Hail! sweet, celestial day and morn,
Wherein the King of kings was born;
I sing to celebrate the birth
Of one whose home is not on earth—
Who bade the sandy desert bloom,
Who called up Lazarus from the tomb,
Who by his wisdom from above,
Subdued the world with filial love.

Oh! what a miracle and morn,
A Man—a God of woman born—
The angels sung, and heaven consigned
"Peace and good will" to all mankind.
'Twas His—that bright and morning star,
Whose sacred light shone from afar,
Which guided wise men from the East—
Who came to dine at wisdom's feast.

Ye messengers of love, draw nigh;
The world is saved—a man shall not die;
And ye are honored to proclaim
The glorious tidings of His fame.
Say that a branch from Jesse's rod
Blooms in reality of God;
Say that a King is on the throne
Of David, and we shall not moan.

Go, bear these tidings steeped in tears
Of mercy to the neighboring spheres,
And bid them in their course resound,
The King of kings on earth is crowned,
And thou, too, Bethlehem, rejoice,
For out of thee shall come a Voice,
A Prince, a Ruler over all,
Whom out of Egypt I shall call.

A Nazarene He must be styled,
The "Lamb of God," the undefiled,
The Bride and Bridegroom both in one,
Perfection's Child God's only Son;
And all nations shall adore,
And gather 'round Him to implore
The blessings of eternal days—
For every tongue shall speak His praise.

New Orleans.

The Incarnation is the most natural and inevitable conforming of the Eternal Father to this law of His life. If Jesus had not come, men would have been justified in looking for another. Hence the question sent to our Lord by John the Baptist, the greatest among all them that have been born of women, "Art thou he that should come, or do we look for another?" (Matthew xi:2-11). The prophet of the wilderness felt assured that the nature of God and the needs of man alike demanded a saving revelation of the Most High in an incarnate form. Without such a revelation heaven would have disappointed "the desire of all nations" (Haggai ii:7).

Eternal Love could not remain forever latent and unrevealed. A God existing eternally in loveless solitude and unbroken silence is uthinkable and unbearable. Atheism were better than to believe in such a God.

Our Father in heaven has never left himself without revelation. "The heavens declare the glory of God; and the firmament sheweth his handiwork" (Psalms xix:1). Theophanies to saints and seers of old were granted to show something of his love and power. These all prefigured and prophesied the coming of his Eternal Son in fashion as a man, through whom shines forth the fullest, final, and highest revelation of the divine nature.

Hence at his birth in Bethlehem the angel host in seraphic strains sang, "Glory to God in the highest" (Luke ii:14).

That glorious disclosure was not only a revelation from God, but it was primarily and pre-eminently the supreme revelation of God. It was nothing less than "the light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ" (II Corinthians iv:6). It revealed the human side of God and declared anew the divine authority that man was made in his image and likeness.

Wherefore the Incarnation proclaims the dignity and worth of human nature as well as it reveals the glory of God. It shows humanity as not foreign to the divine but a fit dwelling place for it. It therefore revealed the divine side of man as well as the human side of God, and opened a way of salvation to mankind that enabled those who walk in it to say, "Truly our fellowship is with the Father, and with his Son, Jesus Christ" (I John i:3).

The proclamation of the birth of an Incarnate Saviour by whom human nature may be lifted to the level of such heavenly fellowship could not be, and cannot be, other than "good tidings of great joy to all people" (Luke ii:10). While revealing glory to God in the highest, it also assures "on earth, peace, good will toward men" (Luke ii:14).

No wonder the wondrous event of the Saviour's birth attracted to it the beams of Bethlehem's Star and elicited the praises of the

A LARGER VISION OF GOD.

(The following paper was read by Dr. R. E. Smith, Dean Emeritus and Professor of Biblical Literature in Centenary College, Shreveport, La., at the last student assembly before Thanksgiving. —Editor.)

"O that men would praise the Lord for his goodness and for his wonderful works toward the children of men."—Psa. 107:8.

The flight of time but adds to the debt we owe the Pilgrim fathers. The story of their faith never loses its charm. Amid the bleakness of their winter colonies and their perilous environs, like a cheery logwood fire, shines their glowing religious zeal. For it and because of it they had forsaken bonnie England, had braved the untracked Atlantic and, after buffeting tempestuous billows and outriding head winds, they had effected a hazardous landing upon the icy beach-land of this wilderness world. A hurtle of hostile arrows greeted their arrival as they knelt upon the snowy carpet of their open-air home. Nevertheless, they gave thanks to God for their safe arrival: then set to work to build first of all a combination meeting-house and school. Much also they suffered, many ills they bore; many rough-made mounds registered sorrows whose walls rent the leaden skies ere springtime smiled upon them. So great was the task to found our American colonies and bring the Puritan God to New Albion.

Thanks for their indomitable courage, their invincible independence, their unflagging loyalty, their unquenchable sense of God's sovereignty and their unreserved surrender to his will—as they understood it. But alas, for those who did not so interpret it!

Although the Pilgrims had fled England because of Archbishop Land's high church demands; because of persecution and inability to worship as they felt they should worship, no sooner had they gained a foothold in America than they adopted the same intolerant attitude toward those who differed from them. Witness the banishment of Roger Williams and Mrs. Anne Hutchinson; and the hanging on Boston Common of four Quakers (one being a woman)! Before swiftly condemning these pioneers let us remember that practically all of our colonies, save Rhode Island and doubtful Maryland, felt the same intolerant disposition. Moreover, the old countries of Europe were still reeking with the same iron-hearted ideas. Holland alone stood as a haven of refuge for all faiths persecuted and oppressed. And Holland was looked upon as much as we regard Russia to-day.

Indeed such rock-ribbed religion seems suited to that age and that rigorous clime. It is to be doubted whether anything less than Calvinism and intolerance could have survived the settlement of America. Tolerance, liberalism, co-operative worship and service are the rich ripe fruits of leisure, education and the amenities of life.

Standing in the halo of this glorious Thanksgiving season it may not be amiss to attempt to evaluate the abiding and permanent elements of progress made since the fathers first lifted their hearts and voices to the Bountiful Giver of blessings.

It is a far cry, indeed, from the simple life, and frugal meals, the plain, bare open-handedness of that day, to the complex, highly-developed, superdread nothing age in which we find ourselves either "quick or dead." Our material prosperity and expansion have been on such colossal scales that any comparison defies the wildest standards and bankrupts all estimates. The most rapturous prophet of Pilgrim days would rub his eyes in utter amazement could he but stand on any street to-day for one-half hour! While a visit to some of our exquisitely modeled temples of worship would overawe him, as was Isaiah when prostrated by the Vision Splendid.

Nevertheless, boundless as our material prosperity seems, in the teeth of blatant conservatism and ranting obscurantism, I dare to assert that this outward display of glory does not work our greatest advance over the Puritan age. Despite howling critics and self-appointed censors and guardians of morals, I aver that it is in our spiritual ideals and programs that we much excel our worthy Pilgrim Fathers! This, too, with full knowledge of the crime wave, riot of lusts, strident and sensational struggle for front page thrills, shrieking, screaming radio and motion picture overtones from underworld denizens. Bad as things are, through the welter and chaos comes the good Spirit of God brooding over the face of the deep. The broad bands of light are gleaming, and soon "'twill be daylight everywhere!"

After all, the God we worship is much bigger and better than the God the Pilgrims worshiped, as our material prosperity over-reaches their poverty and want. By as much as our geography, our government, our abundant wealth overtop their narrow territories, constricted boundaries, and straightened resources, so do our religious conceptions, our spiritual ideals, our ethical standards and our Christian program surpass theirs.

Our God has grown with the centuries. Frankly, we do not worship the same God that the Pilgrims worshiped. If, indeed, we worship the God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, we do not hold the same conception of him that they did. Though in substance and essence he is the same, yesterday, to-day, and forever, still his purposes and plans are revealed more or less as different ages respond to or reject him. An expanding universe demands an expanding God. Every new star in the sky requires that Orion widen his belt. When our powerful one hundred-inch telescope swept its lidless eye through the vast empyrean eight hundred million-million-million miles, it pushed back the curbstone of ether-haunting space, and revealed other worlds, other suns, other systems like scattered sheep grazing in the meadows of God. Now we are about to double the diameter of our largest telescope. When we swing that 200-inch lens into the heavens where will be the limit? Whither the outposts? What kind of God do we need for such an universe? Would the God of the Pilgrims do? They lived in a very small world. They counted perhaps 1,500 to 2,000 stars. We count that many systems. They thanked God that a rolling ocean separated them from Europe. Three months and more were required for passage; now we fly across in less than three days. Then they loved Independency of England; splendid isolation made them feel secure. Now we know the ties that bind us are becoming more indissoluble with every revolving sun.

On a coat-of-arms in Massachusetts were emblazoned the words: "He who is unknown to me is my enemy." No stranger should be trusted, though he lived just over the border a few miles. God was almost forced to be a tribal or at best a national God. Compare Jacob running from Esau, his angry brother. Pausing at nightfall over the tribal boundary, he thought he had also outrun God. But in his vision hours at Bethel that night he found God in that place, though he knew it not.

The God of the Puritans was partial, vindictive, cruel. Only certain favored Elect could be blessed, or hope for mercy. Poor unfortunates or defectives were "witches"—whom God had turned over to the devil. Cotton Mather, one of the powerful and learned (?) ministers of the day, exhorted his congregation to report all witches and bring them to justice—meaning death. High courts, presided over by religious judges, who opened the session with prayer, would condemn helpless men and women to death for starting an epidemic in the community. If scarlet fever, or smallpox broke out, the minister forthwith appointed a committee to find the witch or witches who caused it. The death which followed the accusation was often as cruel and horribly barbarous as it was unmerited. The Chief Justice in Carolina said: "That there are such creatures as witches I make no doubt; neither do I think they can be denied without denying the truth of Holy Scriptures."

Slavery, too, was not only common, but it was also upheld as a divine institution. Wars raged even among the scattered colonies and their neighbors, not to mention falsifying and double-dealings with the Indians, often leading to massacre. Guns were brought to church and prayer was sometimes interrupted by the cry, "To arms!" Whiskey was plentiful, even the ministers partaking. Many of the best women smoked tobacco without rebuke from the men. Only the Quakers lifted up their voices against the worst evils of the day. Only the Quakers insisted upon fair dealings with the Indians and with neighboring races. Only the Quakers protested against war, and found short shrift for their pains. Be it said, however, that no drop of Quaker blood was shed by an Indian, and many a man not a Quaker found it expedient on long wilderness journey to conceal his weapons beneath Quaker clothes.

Even the greatest preachers dwelt for hours—the average sermon being two hours—upon the terrors of a literal hell—an angry God—and the anguish of lost souls. There was no effort to evangelize other nations or peoples—no missionary movement. There was no responsibility to carry the gospel, for God would save only the elect, and this he would do without any suggestions, or assistace of men.

Against all this, contrast our enlightenment. The rich blessings of our day, which we take as commonplace, would have been revolutionary and iconoclastic to the Pilgrims.

Chiefly then, I repeeat, our greatest advance comes not in inventions, and conveniences; not in easier lives and greater wealth; not in bursting barns and plenteous storehouses; not in better sanitation; not in faster transportation and quiet communication. No—our transcendent progress is in our spiritual ideal of God. What a holy, shepherding, universal God is ours! One of All Men; all nations, kindred, and tongues. How he longs for us to learn his plan for all—even the smallest. Most like him are we when we reach out to protect little children, the weak and the helpless; when we plan and build for the future generations to learn and do better than ourselves; when we sign treaties to end war forever; when we seek to banish poverty and disease from the earth; when we demand an equitable share of the returns of labor for each and all who produce it; when we banish unemployment and safeguard old age; when we do our utmost to spread the Good News to the last man on earth, then we shall bring joy to the angels and perfect our Thanksgiving.

SAFETY SIGNALS.

By Rev. S. J. Davies.

At the morning service the choir of our First Church sang a magnificent, soul-stirring anthem, the refrain of which was "Pandiso," Pandere!" Ambrose, bishop of Milan, was accredited its authorship. A glance at the name awoke a train of memories which had been stored in keeping, from studies of church history. Great indeed must have been the genius of this father and builder of the early church. For he lived in the fourth century after Christ, and his music is still rendered in praise and adoration of his Lord whom he so faithfully and courageously served.

A millenium and a half has swept by, yet Christians still sing the hymns and anthems of Ambrose. They tell this incident of his life—how he became bishop. The one holding the office in this metropolitan see had died. Ambrose was prefect or governor of the province under Roman civil authority. So wisely and well had he ruled and directed the affairs of Milan that he merited the love and respect of all. A meeting was called to elect a new bishop. Ambrose, as governor, presided. No one was found, at first trial for election, worthy of the honor. A little child, noting the dignity and bearing of the governor, cried out, "Ambrose is bishop!" It was taken as a heavenly sign of approbation by the crowd, and he was elected by acclamation. He resigned his civil office, was baptized, betook himself to study, and the welfare of the church. He spent a long, useful, busy life in the defense of the Catholic faith as against Arianism, and was noted for the vigor and wisdom of his administration. I wonder if the old saint, now an inhabitant of the Paridise of God these thousand and a half years, hears the innumerable choirs who on earth sing his anthems. Surely if by a kind of divine radio these melodies are borne to him he must count them among the richest treasures laid up where no moth enters and no thieves break in to steal. However this may be we are assured that the music and melody of a great soul sings on through the ages, and we as heirs are sharers in its beauty and harmony. By what standard, then, may one measure the wealth and influence of a life dedicated in consecrated service to God and his church! Let each of us who move in lesser spheres think on these things.

Man is a born struggler. He struggles, gasps and cries for his first breath at birth, fights against many diseases incident to childhood, enters the larger arena of youth, contends with mastering the difficult lessons in securing an education, and as life enlarges into the larger sphere of manhood finds that the battle waxes even fiercer. Nations, too, struggle for an existence. War, that fell enemy of the race, enemy of all that is kind and just and fair, enkindling the powers of hatred, lust for power and unholy ambition, in short, arousing the fiercest, meanest, basest, passions of humanity, again threatens to raise its bloody, unbowed head in the affairs of this old, struggling world. I do not, from personal experience know much of preceding generations. I do know somewhat of the later three that have passed athwart the world stage, and these, if my judgment served me fair, were much like the Athenians in seeking things new, thrilling and sensational. And this spirit abates not, but rather grows upon us. There is a large, and I fear, a growing class of people whose entire end of life is to seek the sensational, the startling, the risque, and enjoy such so-called thrills. This spirit is never contented, never at peace, ever restless, ever striving. "Peace I leave with you, my peace give I unto you, let not your hearts be troubled, neither let them be afraid." This peace is after all the world's richest heritage, a panacea for every ill, a treasure given by the Lord of peace, held in the golden casket of faith.

WHAT IS WRITTEN? HOW READEST THOU?

By Rev. S. S. Bogan.

Some things I would like to know for my own satisfaction. First, is the General Secretary of the General Epworth League Board, by any chance, directly or indirectly responsible for what is dished out to our Epworth Leaguers and young folks by the editor of the Epworth League column of the Christian Advovate, or is the editor just a free lance? Secondly, is the editor of that column by any chance recognized by the General Board and its secretary as being a logician, a theologian or an expert commentator, who is an authority in Methodist law and doctrines and Scripture interpretations, "rightly dividing the word of truth?" or is she just a social faddist with a very marked Modernistic slant? Thirdly, is the editor of that column an employee and a recognized correspondent of the General Epworth League Board, or an independent scribe with propaganda rights in the Christian Advocate?

Now, however these questions may he answered, the fact remains, the said correspondent has used the columns of the Christian Advocate and the prestige of the Epworth League to ridicule and hold up to contempt some of the most fundamental doctrines and teachings of Methodism and the Holy Scriptures; and undertakes to impress upon the minds of the Leaguers that such and such doctrines have become obsolete and classed as outworn theology, and by this means our young people are being misled and prejudiced against some of the most cardinal doctrines of the church and the Holy Scriptures.. How long must the church endure those, who eat of her bread and wear her livery and speak in her name, while they deny and ridicule her doctrines and sow seeds of unbelief in the minds of her youth?

In the Christian Adovcate of June 15, page 15, column 3, we have this statement: "'Saving the heathen from hell' was a logical motive in the days when hell fire and brimstone figured in every series of evangelistic services." "In later years the church at home shifted its emphasis somewhat to that of the 'heavenly home' and glorifying God by the number of stars in our crown." Now the natural implication is that the doctrine of hell fire and brimstone is at present an obsolete doctrine that served its generation, but is now held as a mere curio of the ignorance and superstition of a generation gone—one of the links or passing phase in the evolution of religion. Therefore all those Scriptures that teach, directly or indirectly, the doctrine of hell fire and brimstone as punishment for the wicked is marked for deletion. Such teachings of the old Book find litte consideration and no sympathy at all at the hands of those who conceive themselves to be wiser than what is written. To such, the Holy Scriptures have no authority, but by permission of their cult. For example, "The wicked shall be turned into hell, and all the nations that forget God" (Ps. 9:17). Again, "Upon the wicked he shall rain snares, fire and brimstone, and an horrible tempest: this shall be the portion of their cup" (Ps. 11:6). It was no less an authority than Jesus Christ, who said, "If thy hand offend thee, cut it off: and cast it from thee, it is better for thee to enter into life maimed than, having two hands, to go into hell, into the fire that never shall be quenched: where the worm dieth not, and the fire is not quenched" (Mark 9:45, 46). And there is the sentence of the great king upon those upon his left, "Depart from me, ye cursed, into everlasting fire prepared for the devil and his angels; and these shall go away into everlasting punishment" (Matt. 25:41 and 46). "And the devil that deceived them was cast into the lake of fire and brimstone where the beast and the false prophets are, and shall be tormented day and night for ever and ever" (Rev. 20:10). "What shall we say to these things?" To all those who believe the Holy Scriptures, they find in these words of the Book, both the motive and the obligation to warn men everywhere to turn from their sins and flee from the wrath to come, and be saved from their sins; and this in perpetuity.

But then, to the disciples and exponents of the new enlightenment and the social gospel fad, these Scriptures have no message, nor appeal, they have outgrown such crude and horrible ideas and have become more refined and wise under the teachings and influence of that social gospel of to-day that laughs at and taboos the idea of fear and punishment in a lake of fire and brimstone.

Turn now with me to the Christian Advocate, June 29, page 15, column 3, and read what our scribe has to say, about our hymns. "The hymns are all too few"—the social gospel sort. "When will our hymnal be revised, those hymns of outworn theology dropped, and hymns with a social message included?"

Naturally, one wonders which of our great old hymns are included in the outworn theology class, through which these social gospel preachers have drawn their pencil and marked for deletion Those who recommend, should be able to specify. I for one would like to see a list of those hymns that our scribe finds objectionable because of their outworn theology. Let her name them if she dare! Ah! that would never do. Modernists shun definitions as they would the plague.

Turn now to Christian Advocate, July 13, page 13, column 3, or last. Our informant rises to inform us that, "The social awakening goes back much further than we are apt to think." . . . "Of course when we really study the teachings of Jesus, we know that he was a great teacher of the social gospel," but our scribe being the judge, "The social gospel goes even beyond the message —teaching—of Jesus." Therefore she must recognize others to be greater than Jesus, and therefore more authentic teachers of the social gospel than he. Now, lest I be accused of reading into her sayings more than is written, I will quote her further, "The prophets grasped the idea of a God" —"a god of all nations"—now don't laugh, "who wanted righteousness, justice and mercy rather than songs and prayers, and offerings which did not come from the heart."

Can it be that our scribe has never read these sayings of Jesus, "Therefore all things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them: for this is the law and the prophets" (Matt. 7:12). Or that other saying, "Ye have heard that it hath been said, thou shalt love thy neighbor and hate thine enemy. But I say unto you, love your enemies, bless them that curse you, and do good to them that hate you, and pray for them which despitefully use you and persecute you" (Matt. 5:43, 44).

Perhaps had our scribe sat more at the feet of Jesus and less in the counsel of the social gospel exponents, she would have hesitated long before asserting that Jesus lagged and fell behind others of the sons of men in his grasp, knowledge and appreciation of the highest standards of the moral and social relations of man toward man. However, according to our scribe's teachings and logic, you cannot escape the conclusion that the servants —the prophets—are greater than their Lord, and they that were sent greater than he that sent them.

Well, this is some of the stuff and sort of religious teaching being taught our Leaguers and young folks, and presumably under the auspices of the General Epworth League Board. Do they disclaim responsibility in this matter? If so, why?

Evidently it is a small thing for these preachers of the so-called social gospel to sit in judgment upon the "Son of Man," the Lord of life, and give his glory to others. Yea, set others including themselves, above him who is above all blessed forever.

CHANGE OF ADDRESS.

It is important that all requests for change of addresses be made as promptly as possible. No change can be made without request. In writing, give the old address as well as the new.

BUSINESS MANAGER.

Not only by the missionaries but by the men of the Navy and Marine Corps is our country judged in foreign lands—that is the truth that the Rev. C. B. Burns, Southern Methodist missionary among the marines, is trying to impress upon the men of the Marine Corps as they leave Parris Island, S. C., the largest marine training station in the world, for foreign parts. Mr. Burns is designated by the chaplain at Parris Island as the "friend of all who know him."

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Bishop Ainsworth passed through New Orleans on last Monday morning, en route home from the Bishops' meeting in Dallas, Tex.

Rev. S. S. Bogan writes as follows: "I am happy in the hearty welcome given me at my return to Glenmora (La.) for another year; the prospects are pleasing and the outlook encouraging."

We regret to learn that Rev. B. H. Andrews, our pastor at Houma, La., has been bereaved by the death of a sister. May God in infinite love comfort him and others of the family.

Bishop Candler passed through New Orleans last week en route to the meeting of the Bishops in Dallas, and on his return home passed through this city on last Monday.

The readers of the Advocate will be grieved to know that Bishop James Cannon, Jr., is in sorrow over the death of his wife some days ago. May God's richest blessings rest upon this one of our chief pastors who is to-day in such affliction.

Mr. Keller Doss, son of Rev. W. L. Doss, Jr., had to come home from Millsaps College recently on account of influenza developing, and was ill for some days at the home of his parents here in New Orleans.

Rev. Ben P. Jaco, an honored superannuate of the North Mississippi Conference, making his home at Raymondville, Tex., with Mrs. Jaco, passed through New Orleans on Thursday of last week en route to spend Christmas with children in North Mississippi.

Rev. W. E. Thomas, one of our general evangelists, called at the Advocate office during the past week. Brother Thomas served in pastorates in New Orleans before entering the evangelistic work, and he has many friends in the city who are always glad to greet him.

The people of Hammond, La., have given a most cordial welcome to Rev. J. B. Grambling and Mrs. Grambling, and the outlook for the work of the year is most encouraging—so reported Brother Grambling to the editor when they chanced to meet on St. Charles Street a few days ago.

On a recent Sunday when Rev. J. B. Peters, pastor of First Methodist Church of New Orleans, was confined to his home on account of sickness, Rev. H. L. Johns preached at First Church in the morning and Rev. Guy M. Hicks preached there at night.

Rev. J. E. Allen, pastor of the West Laurel church, conducted a revival meeting from Dec. 2 to 16, but as yet we have not heard the definite results. Evangelist J. O. Hanes, of Birmingham, Ala., did the preaching, and Rev. J. A. Wells had charge of the singing.

Dr. E. R. Smoot, evangelist, has recently assisted the pastor, Dr. Charles Humphrey, in a good meeting at the Virginia Avenue Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in Louisville, Ky. Brother Smoot held the Kavanaugh camp meeting near Louisville in August.

We greatly regret to learn that the handsome home of Mr. Henry Pharr, on Bayou Teche, near New Iberia, La., was recently destroyed by fire. Brother Pharr has long been a leading steward of our church in New Iberia, and he and Mrs. Pharr have meant a great deal to our Methodism in the southern part of the State.

Just as we were to close the forms, Rev. John L. Williams gave us two subscriptions as Christmas presents to his two daughters in New Orleans—Mrs. Mehaffey and Mrs. Canaday. This is a fine idea which we commend unto others—making a subscription to the Advocate as a Christmas present to a friend or member of the family.

In the first round of quarterly conferences, Monroe District, as published in the Advocate, there was an error in the date given for the missionary set-up meeting for that district. The correct date of the meeting is Tuesday, Jan. 8. Rev. J. G. Snelling, Missionary Secretary of the Louisiana Conference, will be present at this meeting.

Rev. Wm. L. Robinson, of Coffeeville, Miss., is still engaged in securing subscriptions for the Advocate, and he gives the following as the chief reason for the urgency of the matter at the present time: "I am anxious for them to get the church news during the Missionary Conference at Memphis." We are very grateful for his efforts

Mrs. B. C. Taylor and little son, Bobbie Charles, left on Tuesday of last week to visit in the home of Mrs. Taylor's parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. P. Lee, Throckmartin, Tex. That is a long way out in Texas, and Brother Taylor says the parsonage of Louisiana Avenue Church, New Orleans, now seems a very gloomy place.

Dr. Charles C. Jarrell, General Secretary of the Hospital Board, on his way to attend an executive meeting in Tucson, passed through the city one day last week, and he and the editor visited several of the hotels and discussed other matters in preparation for the meeting of the Hospital Board and the Hospital Association in New Orleans about the middle of April.

Dr. W. Winans Drake, of Ruston, La., one of the Publishing Committee of the Advocate, writes that he will take up the matter of subscriptions to the Conference organ in February. Dr. Drake has been one of the most successful of the pastors in sending in large lists of subscriptions to the Advocate, and there is little doubt that he will send in a large number of renewals and subscriptions by the 1st of April.

Dr. Carley moved his household effects from New Orleans to Shreveport by auto truck, and A. Clarke, a responsible colored man who has been the chief mover for several of our New Orleans preachers in recent years, made the long trip successfully and placed the furniture right in the district parsonage. Some things, at least, are being made easier for the preachers when the time for moving comes.

Dr. Henry Felgar Brooks, of Clarksdale, Miss., writes that he has set the first Sunday in the new year as the time for presenting to his people the claims of the church paper. He is asking for a number of copies of the Advocate to serve as samples and is otherwise getting ready for this Sunday. We appreciate his interest and we naturally wish him abundant success in this enterprise.

Our church at Aberdeen, North Mississippi Conference, has begun the use of a bulletin for the Sunday services. The first copy is before the editor, and it is very creditable. We note from it that the pastor, Rev. S. L. Pope, is working toward a prayer meeting of one hundred. Also we read that at the first meeting of the year for the board of stewards every member who was in the city was present. Good!

On the first Sunday in December, at 11 a. m., with impressive service, the pastor, Rev. J. E. Cunningham, installed the stewards of the church at Greenville, Miss. The pastor presented to each steward a Discipline of 1926; this served a double purpose, bringing a token of love from the pastor and equipping each steward with a book that fully outlines his duty. The installation of the stewards can be made a very helpful and impressive service and should be more the practice of our churches.

Rev. J. B. Cain, of Fayette, Miss., writes from the Piedmont Hospital, Atlanta, under date of Dec. 10: "Our boy Nell, who has been under observation and treatment for the last ten days, is much better. What was thought to be a tumor on the brain seems now to be only an abscess in the socket back of the eye. We have had many assurances of the prayers of the brethren, those of the Conference and our friends at Fayette and other places, and we believe that his recovery is largely in answer to prayer. We hope to be back at our work in the pastorate before long."

The new pastor, Rev. R. S. Saucier, and family arrived at Beauregard, Miss., on Thursday, Dec 6, and were hospitably entertained in the homes of Messrs. T. O. and L. L. Mercier until the parsonage could be put in readiness. On Dec. 8 Brother Saucier and family moved into the parsonage, and about 7 o'clock in the evening a great number of people gathered to greet the new preacher folk and to give them an "enormous" pounding. The young people sang "Blest Be the Tie That Binds," while the pastor and several of the ladies present made appropriate talks.

Rev. B. M. Hunt writes us as follows: "Our predecessors at Grace Church, Jackson, were good and faithful men. We find the church well organized. We received a most cordial welcome from the people. The parsonage has been renovated, the spirit of the people is optimistic, and we anticipate another happy pastorate. The other pastors of the city and many other friends in Jackson have also helped us to feel at home as we enter our new field of labor. Our four years at Gloster and Liberty meant the formation of strong bonds with the people. We commend most heartily to them their new pastor as a most worthy man."

Rev. J. A. McCormack has been reappointed to the church at Franklin, La., for the sixth year, evidence of how well he has met the difficult situation confronting our church in southern Louisiana. During his pastorate, the church building, erected some years ago during the pastorate of Dr. W. Winans Drake, has been thoroughly repaired and beautified and a splendid pipe organ installed, while the salary has been raised from $1800 to $2400. Brother McCormack is beloved by persons of all denominations—has been invited to pray in time of bereavement in Catholic homes, and last year he delivered an address at the commencement of a Catholic school in Franklin.

Bishop Wallace E. Brown, one of the bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church, who resides in Helena, Montana, preached at the evening hour for the pastor and congregation of the First Methodist Church, South, of Kosciusko, Miss., on Dec. 9. Bishop Brown was in Kosciusko, presiding over the Upper Mississippi Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church. The Conference adjourned with the reading of the appointments following the morning service, and the bishop remained for an evening service at the First Methodist Church, South, as the guest of the pastor, Rev. R. P. Neblett. The house was filled and the sermon was well received.

While all the returns are not in and the results cannot be given out officially, it is now definitely

TO THE MEMBERS OF THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Dear Brethren: The Board of Finance of the Mississippi Conference requested that a Christmas offering be taken for our Superannuate Endowment Fund. I have sent out 1500 envelopes. If any brother needs more, write me at Jackson, Miss. Whatever you raise will count on your quota. Please present this request to your people.

J. M. MORSE, Director.

known that the constitutional question handed down by the General Conference for the approval of the Annual Conferences will fail to carry. The chief feature of the question is that it proposes that a delegate to the General Conference shall bo disqualified as a delegate, if a clerical one, should he transfer from the Conference which elected him, and, if a lay delegate, should he move from the bounds of the Annual Confereuce which elected him.

Last Sunday was observed by First Church, Shreveport, La., as the regular annual Every Member Visitation Day. The 136 stewards of the church, with sixty-nine lay associates, were scheduled, after the morning service, to visit the 3,254 members of the church to secure their pledges for the support of the church during tho new Conference year. Before going out for this visitation they were served dinner at the church by the Missionary Society. "The Methodist Messenger," published by First Church, states that this annual visitation of the church has been perfected during the last ten years, until now 89 per cent of the active resident members of the church sign a pledge for the support of the church. There were 2,300 pledges made during 1928, and 2,700 sets of envelopes were ordered for tho church for 1929. First Church, Shreveport, is one of tho greatest churches in our connection, and the above evidence of the systematic way in which they attend to the Lord's business gives at least one good reason for the success of the work there, under the pastoral care of Dr. Robert E. Goodrich.

The editor, in company with Bishop Candler, had the pleasure on Monday morning of this week of attending the regular meeting of the New Orleans preachers. Bishop Candler made a very fine and helpful talk to the pastors present concerning the work in New Orleans and the great opportunity which the city presents to our Methodism. Rev. W. L. Doss, Jr., the newly-appointed presiding elder of the New Orleans District, called for reports from the pastors as to the opening of the work of the new Conference year and, without exception, the reports were of an optimistic nature, and many good items of progress were reported from the several churches represented. Rev. J. B. Peters, who has recently suffered a severe attack of influenza, with his family, was able to be present, and thanked the brethren who had so kindly assisted by preaching for him during his illness. Brother Peters reported that tho usual every member canvass had been made at First Church, and that the results would be satisfactory. Carrollton Avenue, Parker Memorial and other churches reported that the every member canvass was being put on by the leaders. After the meeting the preachers had Bishop Candler as their guest at luncheon in the Monteleone Hotel, where, a small dining-room being prepared for their use, good things to eat and good fellowship were enjoyed. While lingering about the table, Rev. J. G. Snelling was called upon to speak concerning the special campaign for Missions this year. Following his remarks, Bishop Candler reviewed the mission situation at the present time and urged the brethren to do their utmost in promoting the missionary enterprises of the church.

WHITE CHRISTMAS SERVICE AT CARROLLTON.

The white gifts Christmas service at Carrollton Avenue Church, New Orleans, will be next Sunday evening, Dec. 23, at 7:30 p. m., under the auspices of the Sunday school, with Mrs. Jacob Cohen directing. Gifts for the Near East Relief will be received at the door as the congregation enters the church. The Christmas decoration will emphasize the white gifts idea, and the service will consist of carol singing, Christmas stories, special music directed by Mrs. H. R. McLeod, and other features. Miss Myrtle Stayer will tell the story, "The Legend of Cathay," and Mrs. H. L. Johns will give "Why the Chimes Rang." A large attendance is desired, and all are invited.

BEGINNING AT PASCAGOULA.

(By the Editor)

The editor set out on a pleasant adventure on last Saturday night, making his initial trip in the interest of the Advocate. His destination was Pascagoula and, though the hour of arrival was midnight, the enterprising pastor, Rev. J. W. Sells, was at the train to welcome the editor and pilot him to the comfortable two-story parsonage beside the church.

Sunday morning the editor preached the best sermon that he could; then talked of the Advocate and asked the congregation to send the Advocate into every home of the church. One man gave enough to provide for eight subscriptions; several gave enough for five, etc., until the whole number necessary, fifty, was provided for. And, a good suggestion for other places, the Epworth League, the W. M. S., and the Board of Stewards, as organizations, helped to complete the list.

On Sunday afternoon Brother Sells and the editor, as guests of the fine layman, Mr. Everett, drove to Kreole, where the editor talked with the pastor, Rev. A. A. Sims, about the Advocate.

Sunday night tho editor preached in the beautiful church at Moss Point, where Rev. J. M. Corley is pastor. Here are a number of Advocate subscribers, and Brother Corley said he would ask the Board of Stewards to include in the budget the amount necessary to complete the list there and send the Advocate into every Methodist home at Moss Point.

After the evening service, Brother Corley's son known on the ball field as "Spark Plug," a big league ball player formerly with New Orleans and also with Memphis, drove with the editor to Pascagoula.

The editor is very grateful for the kindly hospitality given him on this pleasant adventure and for the encouragement received in the circulation of the Advocate.

REV. ROBERT RANDLE DEAD.

On last Sunday morning, according to a telegram from his son, Mr. Richmond Randle, of Memphis, Tenn., Rev. Robert Randle, an aged member of hte Louisiana Conference, passed to his eternal reward. The funeral was to be held in Minden, La., on last Monday morning.

Rev. Robert Randle was admitted into the Louisiana Conference in 1871, ordained a deacon the same year, and an elder in 1873. At the time of his death he was at the head of the chronological roll of his Conference.

Brother Randle gave a long period of active service to the Louisiana Conference, serving as presiding elder and in important pastorates.

After his superannuation he made his home with a son, Honorable R. O. Randle, of Monroe, La., one of our most prominent laymen, several times delegate to the General Conference. Following the death of this son, he made his home with another son, Mr. Richmond Randle of Memphis, Tenn.

We shall expect one of his intimate associates, who knew and loved him best, to give us an appreciation of his life and labors.

TO THE PEOPLE CALLED METHODIST IN MISSISSIPPI.

My Dear Friends: Did you know that we had an Orphanage in Jackson? Did you know we have cared for 3,500 children in that Home? Did you know 250 of that number have graduated from high school? Did you know that twenty-three are now in high school? Did you know that fifty have graduated from college? Did you know that 1,800 are now holding good positions? Did you know that 300 have married and are in homes of their own? Did you know that 900 have been adopted into good homes? Did you know that sixty-two were adopted into homes during 1928? Did you know that Mrs. Riley is in the field all the time finding homes for those children who come to us subject to adoption?

Then did you know that we have $376,000 worth of property? Did you know this consists of land and buildings and does not include furnishings? Did you know that we owe in bonds outstanding $105,000? Did you know that we owe in short time notes, unsecured to the banks, $53,451.24? Did you know we owe paving notes of $5,475.66?

Now all this is true. Did you know it takes about $3,300 each month to run this Home? When it takes a barrel of flour every three days and a bushel of potatoes each day, with other things in proportion, bills mount up. And it takes some shoes and clothing for 175 children.

There are scores of applications on our waiting list at present. We have the room but just now we are financially embarrassed. We need to-day in cold cash $60,000, but what is that for the multiplied thousands of Methodists in the State? There are forty Methodists in our State who ought to give us from one to five thousand dollars now. The regular contributions have and will pay the running expenses of the Home, but, until we can pay for the very fine buildings we have, we will be embarrassed.

I know Rev. J. L. Neill will allow me to use the following story which I have heard him tell. A traveling man went to the depot to get his train, forgetting his sample case. He discovered an old Negro with a horse and buggy. The horse was old, stood with drooped head, ears hanging and eyes closed. The buggy was shaky and harness tied with strings.

The traveling man said: "Nigger, take me to the hotel to get my sample case." "No, sah, boss, dat hoss can't do dat." "But he must." "No, sah, dat's an old cavalry hoss. He caln't make it." "Is that a cavalry horse?" the salesman said. "Yes, sah," said the Negro. "Get in that buggy and give me the lines." Into tho buggy they jumped. The traveling man cried out, "Attention." The horse stood up and pricked his ears. "Charge," and down the street the old horse went to the hotel. "Halt," the driver cried. He got the sample case and was back to the train in ample time.

The old darkey, all elated, said, "Boss, what is dem words you used to dat hoss?" First, "Attention." "Attention?" "Attention." "Yes, sir, I'se got dat." "Second, 'charge.' Then 'Halt' stops him." "Attention," dat gets him ready. "Charge," dat makes him go; "Halt," dat makes him stop." "Yes, sir; yes, sir."

When the train rolled in the old darkey was walking up and down the platform crying, "Best cavalry hoss in town—takes you anywhere you want to go." One or two men seated themselves in the buggy. "Attention," cried the old driver. The horse stood up, ears pricked. "Charge," and down the street they went—on past the hotel—still going. The darkey, somewhat bewildered, said, "Mens, you will have to git out the best way you can—I have forgot de word whut stops him."

Brethren, "Attention;" "Charge;" but forget to halt. Send me some big checks, or some small ones if you cannot send big ones. Send them for Christmas. Make them payable to me as Commissioner. Send them to me at Jackson, care of Methodist Orphanage.

These are God's children. We promised to take care of them. Let's go!

Yours for the orphans,

W. M. SULLIVAN, Commissioner.

FROM THE MINDEN CHURCH.

By Rev. L. I. McCain, Pastor.

Editor of the Advocate: The complaint is not seldom made by Methodist people that their pastors do not use the Conference organ enough to acquaint the people in the State with the development of an outstanding character made on the different charges of our Conference.

We have had on the Minden charge another unusual year. During the year 1927 we made a record of superlatives, and we have been specially blessed of God during the year just closed.

From reports on the schools of missions held on the respective charges in the early part of the year, made by Dr. Snelling, our Minden school had by far the largest attendance.

We have also excelled in the matter of missionary maintenance—being equalled or surpassed by only one church—the large and exceedingly wealthy church—First Church, Shreveport, La.

We led the Conference as regards the circulation of our church paper, the New Orleans Christian Advocate, having 265 subscriptions going into the homes of our people this year. Our church is one of the very few of the Conference where the congregations are large enough to require extra seating accommodation every Sunday. Our midweek prayer meeting is not only one of the finest and largest in the Conference, but one of the large prayer meetings of Southern Methodism.

Our Wesley Brotherhood, which meets monthly, has the largest membership, as far as I have been able to ascertain, in the Conference.

Our Sunday school has so progressed and expanded that we now meet in four divisions in different sections of our city. If we only possessed adequate accommodations and modern arrangements, our school would be much larger, and work of a superior character could be done by our capable and well-trained officers and teachers.

We have had for three years in succession at Minden a Standard Training School for our Sunday school officers and teachers. In proportion to constituency, we have ranked with the best schools in the matter of issuing of credits. These schools have been wholly financed by the Minden church.

From an obscure League our Senior League has grown to be one of the best in the Conference, being one of few to score 100 per cent in efficiency last year. We have organized, also, a Hi League and a Junior Epworth Society.

Our Woman's Missionary Society has had the largest growth among the large auxiliaries of the Conference.

We have received into the church 400 during the three years, representing an increase of about 65 per cent.

The last three years, though the hardest in a financial way since the world war, have witnessed the finest development along financial lines.

Some have thought that our record as regards missionary maintenance is due to large gifts from wealthy individuals. We have carried a Home Special at St. Martinville, La., and supported a missionary in Malines, Belgium, this year—and the largest individual gift was $50. We have made it an "Every member canvass," and that explains our success, along with the missionary cultivation that has preceded the canvass. We have been co-workers with God and he has given us a great harvest.

LAUREL MINISTERS ADOPT RESOLUTIONS ON LOSS OF PASTORS.

From the Daily Press.

The Laurel Ministerial Association, in regular session on a recent date, adopted the following resolutions of regret over the removal of the Rev. J. L. Greenway and B. L. Sutherland by the Methodist Conference:

"Resolved, That the members of the Ministerial Association of Laurel, Miss., sincerely appreciated the fellowship, the brotherly and fatherly counsel and lively interest in the discussion of all questions before the Association of Revs. J. L. Greenway and Benj. L. Sutherland. That we further appreciate the influence of each upon the social, moral and spiritual life of our city.

"Resolved, That we regret our loss caused by their moving from our midst, and that we heartily commend Rev. J. L. Greenway to the Ministerial Association, the churches, and the citizens of Jackson, and Rev. Benj. L. Sutherland to the Ministerial Association, the churches and the citizens of Meridian. We feel that each will prove a strong power for good to the social, moral and spiritual life of the respective city to which he has moved.

"Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the daily papers of Jackson, Meridian and Laurel, to Revs. Greenway and Sutherland, and that a copy be recorded in our minutes.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE GROUP INSURANCE.

Seventy-five per cent of the members of the Louisiana Annual Conference at the Lake Charles session entered into a group life insurance policy, underwritten by the Equitable Life Assurance Society of New York, Mr. John H. Cockerham, Natchitoches, special agent.

This policy will be dated Nov. 1, 1928, to make it possible to have the dividend checks ready for the insured members by the time of the next Annual Conference. It is also important to note that the time for joining the group is extended to Jan. 1, 1929, and it is hoped that others will come into the plan, not only to have its benefits but to insure its success.

The insurance committee has named Rev. James T. Harris, Rochelle, La., as collector, and payments of $9.91, the first quarter's premium, are now due.

For any information, address members of the group insurance committee, or Mr. John H. Cockerham, Natchitoches, La.

SUNFLOWER MINISTERIAL ASSOCIATION.

By Rev. A. Y. Brown, Secretary.

The Sunflower Ministerial Association met in its first regular monthly meeting for the year 1928-29 in the Methodist church at Tutwiler on Dec. 11, 1928. Nineteen preachers and a good number of the Tutwiler people were present.

Rev. L. P. Wasson served as temporary chairman and the election of permanent officers for the year resulted in the selection of Rev. J. D. Wroten, of Indianola, president, and Rev. A. Y. Brown, of Marks, as secretary-treasurer. The secretary was instructed to send a report of each meeting to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

At the 11 o'clock hour Rev. A. T. McIlwain, of Greenwood First Church, preached a very inspiring sermon on I Tim. 1:15. In the usual period of discussion of the sermon during the afternoon session Brother McIlwain told the Association that he was inspired to prepare that sermon by a sermon along a similar line, though from a different text, which was preached by Rev. Hal Spraggins while he was presiding elder of the Greenville District. Thus God's word does not return unto him void; a sermon preached by a faithful presiding elder years ago lingered on in the heart of his pastor-hearer and burst forth anew into a warm and glowing presentation of the Christ before the Ministerial Association in Tutwiler. "Let us not be weary in well-doing, for in due season we shall reap if we faint not."

A delightful luncheon, with the usual good fellowship accompanying, was served by the ladies of the Tutwiler church in the attractive new woman's club building.

The topic for discussion during the afternoon session was "Plans for the new year, including (1) pastoral visiting, and (2) finances." The round table discussions were entered into freely, and proved to be very beneficial.

A motion was passed that each charge of the district make earnest effort to pay one-half the benevolences of the year by the time of the meeting of the district conference.

A plan was introduced for an educational campaign on benevolences throughout the district. The Association voted to heartily endorse this movement. The following committee was appointed to work it out in detail: Rev. J. V. Bennett, Rev. A. T. McIlwain, Rev. L. P. Wasson.

Rev. W. C. Beasley, of Price Memorial Church, Greenwood, was elected official reporter to the New Orleans Christian Advocate for the district, and the pastors were urged to send him items of interest to report to the paper.

The Association will meet in Drew in January in conjunction with the District Missionary Institute.

A. Y. BROWN, Secretary.

A FINE CHRISTMAS MESSAGE.

(We are giving the readers of the Advocate the fine thoughts and sentiments of the following Christmas message of Rev. B. C. Taylor to his people of the Louisiana Avenue Methodist Church of New Orleans.—Editor.)

The Angel Chorus is again in the air! Expectant children are talking of the "Light in the East," men and women are hurrying through the crowded streets as if on some joyous mission; the church organ peals forth welcoming notes of gladness—Christmas is nigh!

As we approach this sacred season, we ask for the privilege of joining with that host of friends who are sending greetings to you, and adding our prayers and wishes to theirs, that this may be the happiest Christmas and the most rewarding New Year you have ever known.

The glory of this happy occasion lies in the fact that for one brief period of the year, our thoughts turn away from ourselves, and cluster about our friends, our faith, and our loving Heavenly Father. Therefore, as we remember our friends with tokens of esteem, our families—father, mother, sister, brother, children—with gifts of love and tender appreciation, may we not forget to remember our church and its mission to those who look to us for Christmas cheer.

We wish for you, this year, a real Bethlehem experience: that the love of the ever living Christ may surround you; that griefs may be sweetened with friendship; that joy may come after pain; that you may be spared the Herods of hate; that the vision of service may challenge you to greater endeavors; that the gracious presence of the Prince of Peace may attend you as you direct fellow-pilgrims to the Star which brought the wise men to "The Light of the World."

LOUISIANA BOY WINS NATIONAL TROPHY.

By F. W. Bennett.

For being the outstanding boy in 4-H club work in the United States, John C. Jackson, of Central, La., was awarded, Monday night Dec. 3, in Chicago, the Sir Thomas Lipton trophy, a huge silver loving cup.

Jackson is now at the National Congress of 4-H Clubs which is being held in connection with the International Live Stock Exposition at Chicago.

The boy won his trip on his excellent record in forestry work. Colonel W. H. Sullivan, of Bogalusa, made possible the trip by taking care of his expenses. For the past several years Colonel Sullivan has donated $500 each year in prize money to Forestry Club boys.

Louisiana has been displaying a forestry exhibit at the Chicago show through invitation, being the only State asked to put on such an exhibit.

F. W. Bennett, of the State Forestry Division, returned on Dec. 5 from Chicago after putting up the exhibit. The display was eight by eighteen feet and built up on a sand table. It showed the advantages of protection from forest fires in sharp contrast to the devastation caused by the forest fires.

The 4-H Clubs throughout the State have good records in forestry work generally. It is due to those records that Louisiana was invited to put on the exhibit.

Jackson's selection as champion club member for the United States was based on his record of past three years. In judging the contest, leadership, increase in the size of the project, and the financial record during the three-year period were the points considered.

Jackson is 16 years old and is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Jackson, of Tenth Ward, East Baton Rouge Parish.

The Louisiana delegation of eighteen members gave Jackson a rousing cheer when he stepped forward to receive the huge silver loving cup, according to Mr. Bennett, who was present for the presentation.

A trophy similar to Jackson's was awared to Miss Sybil Herring, of Cuba, Ill., for being the outstanding club girl in the United States for her work in clothing and home keeping.

The Louisiana club boys and girls, with W. C. Abbott, State club agent, who was in charge, left Chicago Friday of last week on their return home.

THE LITTLE WHIRLWIND.

One bright morning a little whirlwind ran away from old Father Northwind and started out to have some fun by himself. He broke away just as the children were starting to school. He dashed right in among them, twirled on one foot a few seconds and then whizzed away with a little girl's arithmetic lesson that she had carefully written on a fresh piece of paper. When he gave it back to her it was all muddy! He lifted a kind old gentleman's hat just high enough to make him drop a bundle of eggs in order to catch it. Then the little whirlwind put it right back on the old gentleman's head! He found a pile of leaves that a lady had raked up and drove them down the street like a herd of frightened sheep. He certainly was a bad little whirlwind!

After he had blown dust in a boy's eyes and flipped one of the housemaid's white, freshly-washed aprons from the line he danced down the street and out into the pretty country. There he saw a little squirrel sitting up pertly and minding his own affairs and made up his mind to tease him.

Just then old Father Northwind called to him to come home and help him blow up a rain cloud, for the fields and flowers needed a good drink. But the saucy little whirlwind said, "Go and blow it up yourself! I'm having my own fun."

Old Father Northwind said nothing, but he kept his wise old eye on his naughty son.

First the little whirlwind tried to annoy the squirrel by throwing leaves in his face. Then he tried his old scheme of blowing dust into the little fellow's eyes. Then he ruffled the squirrel's fur coat the wrong way. But the little squirrel paid no more heed to the wind than he would have paid to a grasshopper! The little whirlwind grew so angry that he whirled in a perfect rage!

"I'll get him somehow!" he hissed furiously.

Now the squirrel was thinking hard all this time. At last he said, "Humph! You make a lot of fuss! Why, you can't blow worth a cent! If you were really clever you would blow at least as high as this tree! I can run to the top in no time!"

"Well, I guess I can beat you to the top of the tree!" replied the whirlwind.

That is just what the squirrel wanted him to say. He told the little wind that he would run up the trunk while the whirlwind ran up through the branches. The squirrel said:

"One for the money, two for the show, three to make ready and four to go."

The little whirlwind gathered all of his strength, and when the "four to go" sounded, buzz—whir, up through the branches he whirled his little self with a great flourish. Of course he reached the top before the little squirrel reached it, and while he waited there to gloat over his rival the smart little squirrel was down on the ground gathering a lot of nuts that the whirlwind had blown off the tree.

"Why, you deceitful squirrel! You just raced with me so that I should blow off those nuts for you," whizzed the whirlwind.

"Of course I did. What are you going to do about it now?" said Mr. Squirrel, and began busily to collect his food.

The whirlwind was so angry that he ran and ran until he ran straight into a barnyard full of old hens. He blew their feathers the wrong way until the poor hens were nearly crazy.

Then one, who was very old and wise, decided that she would fool him. I'll just run into the barn and hide until he goes off. It is time for me to lay an egg anyway." So into the barn she ran with an angry squawk.

The whirlwind heard the squawk, and without thinking ran straight into the barn after her. "I can run right out again," he said to himself, but old Father Northwind had been waiting for just such a chance. He blew with all his force, and bang, he blew the barn door shut in a jiffy.

"Now, will you talk back to your father?" asked the old Northwind from a crack under the door.

How the little whirlwind puffed and pushed in his effort to find a way out of the barn! But he couldn't find one.

"Please, dear Mrs. Hen, tell me how to get out of this barn, and I will never bother you again!"

Just then Father Northwind called under the crack in the door, "If he will promise to turn the windmill hard for two hours, you may tell him how to get out. But he must promise me to stop being so bad and to do something useful in the world!"

"I'll promise," said the little whirlwind. "Indeed I will be good! I'll help father to blow up a big rain!"

When the old hen was quite sure that he would keep his promise she told him that she had a little private doorway in the old horse's stall down in the corner, and the little whirlwind lost no time in getting outdoors again. He was as meek and well-behaved the rest of that day as any one could desire, and turned the old windmill until it creaked. Then he helped his father blow up a big rain to give the fields and flowers the drink that they needed. The next day he found the squirrel again, and he spoke politely to him.

"That was real clever of you, the trick you played on me yesterday. I'll blow down a few more nuts if you would like them." And he did. He blew every nut off that tree, for he just had to do something blustery.—Youth's Companion.

HOW BRUCE EARNED HIS WATCH.

There was no other way to do it. Bruce simply would have to go and take the money to Grandfather Morris. Bruce's father was very ill, and of course his mother could not be spared. The money had to be taken to Chester that very day, and Bruce was the only one who could go. Over and over his mother explained that sometimes robbers took things from people and that he must be very, very careful.

"If Bruce were not such a talker, it would be all right," said the doctor to whom they told their troubles. The doctor did not know that Bruce was in the next room. "I can put him in care of the conductor, and it is only twenty-five miles to Chester, so no harm could befall him, but he may tell the secret to some one."

But Bruce was sure he would not. He was only in the second grade, and he did talk a great deal for one small boy; but if he said he would keep a secret, they could count on him.

"I won't say a word, not a single word till I get to Chester and see grandfather. I'll just let them think I'm a little dumb boy like Johnny Harp."

In spite of their troubles, they all had to laugh, even sick Mr. Morris. Mrs. Morris stopped laughing to say that if she thought Bruce would do that, she would give him the watch he had been working so hard to earn.

"The watch is as good as mine, mother," said Bruce. "Please give it to me right away, so I can tell when to get off the train at Chester. Miss Lucy taught us to tell time on the school clock."

But of course no one could go and get a watch when time was so pressing, and then nobody thought Bruce would keep still. The money was made into a flat package and pinned to his clothes with a safety pin. He was told over and over not to touch that place where he could feel the packet, but to look out of the window and keep still until the conductor came to put him off.

But nobody could have guessed that that morning the passenger train would run into a freight train and the conductor get badly hurt. After the injured man was taken to the hospital a new man came on, and of course he knew nothing of Bruce. Poor Bruce! He was determined to win that watch, but how would he know when he reached Chester? All this time they were going around a strange way to avoid the wreck, and Bruce didn't know a single place. Of course the man would call the name, but he did it so quickly that Bruce could not understand what he said.

"Ticket! Ticket!" said the conductor at Bruce's elbow. "Little boy, where is your mother?"

"Not a word from Bruce. Finally a lady across the aisle said: "I think that he must be a little deaf and dumb boy, Conductor. He hasn't said a word even when the accident threw him from his seat."

By this time Bruce drew out a little card on which he had printed in tipsy letters C-H-E-S-T-E-R. "Good," said the conductor. "He may be dumb, but he's not deaf." Then he and the lady laughed, but Bruce looked out of the window.

So presently they rolled into grandfather's town, and the conductor helped him to go down the steps. He and the lady watched, and presently an elderly man grabbed Bruce up and hugged him. The train was just pulling out when they heard a shrill little voice say: "Grandfather, I've got a lot of money pinned to my clothes inside. Mother said if I didn't say a word on the way down here she'd get me a watch, and I've earned it."

And the laughing conductor waved from the platform and said to grandfather: "He's right, mister. We couldn't get a word out of him all the way."

So Bruce won his watch, but grandfather bought it; and when he made the return trip alone he not only wore the watch, but he told all the passengers for three seats around exactly how he had earned it.—Hilda Richmond, in the Christian Advocate.

CHRISTMAS THOUGHTS.

The editor has tried to turn away from the noisy streets, from the jostling throngs in the stores, and from all the things that are usually connected with the days preceding Christmas, to think of what Christmas should really mean to each one of us.

The observance of sacred days is old as history. But too often the fine significance of such a day and the possible good to the people are lost because the origin and meaning of the day are forgotten and it is looked forward to only as a time of huge feasting and merry-making. Alas, that such can be true, and often is true, of Christmas. Much that is associated with the season is not wrong in itself. The great loss comes in the fact that the Christ himself is forgotten by men who are presumably celebrating his birth.

Christmas should be a time of joy and we should look with anticipation to happy home-goings, the happiness of giving, and all the good things that we expect with the return of the season. But all should be related to the one great Cause of all our blessings, and it should be our greatest desire to honor Christ when we are celebrating the day of his birth.

As long ago as the time of Job this question was asked, "Canst thou by searching find out God?" (Job 11:7), but some are still seeking to find him through their own knowledge and pains, and still others are seeking to find him not. For "The fool hath said in his heart, 'There is no God.'" The Supreme Council Bulletin tells us there is a well-formed plot of the atheists to oust God from his throne. And here are some of the plans for a gigantic campaign to overthrow the government of the universe and leave it to blind chance or perhaps to the misrule of the atheists themselves.

To abrogate laws enforcing Christian morals. To remove the motto, "In God we trust," from our coins. To exclude the Bible as a sacred book from public schools, and to mutilate and destroy the Gideon Bibles found in the hotels. To oust chaplains from Congress, the Army and the Navy. To train lecturers, arrange for debates, and acquire a radio station for propaganda. To distribute literature—especially to schools and colleges, and to form among the students such organizations as the "Junior Atheistic League," "The Society of the Godless," "Sons of Satan," "Damned Souls," etc. To de-Christianize Easter and Christmas.

The Bulletin makes the following quotation from the literature of the atheists, "We are continually circularizing schools and colleges." "We desire the names and addresses of students preparing for the ministry." "The revolt of modern youth, which so alarms the Orthodox, makes easier the formation of anti-religious groups in high schools and colleges."

These things seem horrid and blasphemous. Perhaps the reader will shudder to think that the seeds of atheism are being spread among our children and youth, even among those preparing for the ministry. Perhaps there will be a natural reaction to defend the faith of our fathers, who came to this country to find a place where they could worship God according to the dictates of their own consciences. But some will ask, "Is it possible that these atheists can accomplish anything?" Perhaps there are reasons why things have come to such a pass that a set of men should initiate plans to oust God from his throne. Do not some that are classed as Bible teachers seem concerned chiefly to explain all the divine out of the Bible and oust God from his own Book? Do not some that are called preachers of the gospel seek to strip Christ of his deity, denying the Virgin Birth, explaining his miracles on so-called natural grounds, and leaving to him only the example and appeal of his spotless character, and his challenge to service? When religious leaders seek to oust God from the Bible and strip Christ of his deity, we have no great right to complain very vehemently when others go further and seek to oust God from the entire universe.

But from such disturbing things we, who still hold the simple faith in a revelation of God to men, turn with joy and happiness to the revelation of God that we find in Jesus Christ, rejoicing that Christ has come to show us Who God is, and What we, through Christ, may become.

At this time when we think again in special way of the herald angels who sang of the coming of a new-born King, let us read and ponder the passage:

"God, who at sundry times and in divers manners spake in time past unto the fathers by the prophets,

"Hath in these last days spoken unto us by his Son, whom he hath appointed heir of all things" Hebrews 1:1, 2).

The birth of the Babe in Bethlehem 2,000 years ago would have been forgotten, in the sweep of time and in the midst of world-forming changes, but for the fact that the Babe in Bethlehem is very God—that God became the Son of man that men, through Christ Jesus, might become the sons of God. And our thoughts at this time should be of that tremendous event which initiated the plan whereby there are offered freely unto all release from the guilt and power of sin and the hope of eternal life.

The thoughtful man grows weary of the prize plans which men are still trying out in an effort to make men good. You cannot legislate men into goodness; you cannot polish them up from the outside with a veneer of culture and stop the dry rot within, and you cannot improve their environment and make them pure, though men are still cherishing these hoary delusions. "Beauty is only skin deep," and there are some who seem to think that sin is only skin deep and that it can be eradicated by something like the processes of a beauty parlor. It is useless to "paint the lily and gild the rose," but, on the other hand, cosmetics can hardly restore the jaundiced skin.

The writer once stopped to water his horse at the foot of a hill near Natchitoches, and he wondered why the water in the trough was so muddy, for he knew that the stream came from a crystal spring above. But as he journeyed on up the hill he saw that one of those creatures of the same tribe as those that once ran violently down a steep place into the sea was lying supinely and comfortably in the spring itself and enjoying the cooling experience. So long as the hog was there we might go to the watering trough and dip out the mud with all our might, but the water would never be clear.

So the fountain of life must be cleansed. The heart is the great plague spot of humanity, and naught but the power of God has ever reached that mystic realm where thought is linked with thought, desires are conceived and motives are born that govern conduct, shape character and fix eternal destinies. Let us then, at this time, renew our faith in the good God who took upon himself the form of men that he might cleanse the hearts of men and reconcile them unto himself, and let us mightily preach the same. And as wise men of the present day, let us bring our gifts of penitence, worship, self-sacrifice and love to the new-born King.

THE MEANING OF CHRISTMAS DAY.

heavenly host. The being and well being of all moral agents throughout the universe are affected by it. The Incarnation is not an event confined to our earth and thus isolated in its influence. Its effects extend to all worlds. Its power is cosmic in its sweep. St. Paul teaches us that its ultimate end is nothing less than "to make all men see what is the fellowship of the mystery, which from the beginning of the world hath been hid in God, who created all things by Jesus Christ: to the intent that now unto the principalities and powers in the heavenly places might be known by the church the manifold wisdom of God" (Ephesians iii:9 and 10).

By such a far-reaching revelation and abounding salvation mankind is lifted above "the provincialism of this planet" and brought into heavenly fellowship with angels and arch angels, with the free spirits of all worlds which compose "the whole family in heaven and earth" bearing the name of Christ Jesus, the Incarnate Son of God and Redeemer of the human race.

As Dorner suggests, the earth once pressed by the feet of Jesus and glorified by his presence in it may be "the Bethlehem of the Universe," and God in Christ be the center of the unity and communions of all worshiping spirits in his kingdom. Thus may be fulfilled the prophetic words of St. Paul concerning the pre-existent, incarnate, and exalted Son of God, "who being in the form of God grasped not at equality with God as for a prize, but made himself of no reputation, and took upon him the form of a servant, and was made in the likeness of men; and being found in fashion as a man, became obedient unto death, even the death of the Cross. Wherefore God hath highly exalted him, and given him a name which is above every name, that at the name of Jesus every knee should bow, of things in heaven, and things in earth, and things under the earth; and that every tongue should confess that Jesus Christ is Lord, to the glory of God the Father" (Philippians ii:6 11).

THE SUPERNATURAL CHARACTER OF CHRIST,

By H. H. Smith.

Dr. Bushneli, in his book, "Nature and the Supernaturai," has a chapter on tho "Seif-evidencing superhumann character of Christ," that is intensely interesting and instructive. A few excerpts from it may prove heipful—though oniy a few may be given here.

Dr. Bushneli ciaims that Jesus is "the only great character that hoids a footing of innocencc." This great thinker says: "Decisive, great, and strong, Christ is yet aii this, even the more sublimeiy that he is invested, withal, in the lovely, but humaniy, garb of innocence. And that this is the true conception, is clear, in the fact that no one ever thinks of him as weak, and no one fails to be impressed with a sense of innocence hy his life. When his cnemies are caiied to show what evil or harm he hath done, they can specify nothing save that he has offended their bigotry. Even Piiate, when he gives him up, confesses that he finds nothing in him to blame, and, shuddering with apprehensions he cannot subdue, washes his hands to be ciear of the innocent biood! Thus he dies, a being hoiy, harmiess, undefiled. And when he hangs, a bruised flower, drooping on his cross, and when the sun above is dark, and the earth heneath shudders with pain, what havc wo in this funerai grief of the worids, but a fit honor paid to the sad majesty of his divine innocence?"

Concerning his morai character, Dr. Bushnell says Jesus is the oniy character that disowns repentance. "Human piety begins with repentance. It is the effort of a heing, impiicated in wrong and writhing under the stings of guilt, to come to God. The most righteous, or even scif-righteous men, blend expressions of sorrow and vows of new obedience with their excrciscs. But Christ, in the character givcn him, never acknowiedges sin. It is the grand pecuiarity of his piety that he never regrets anything that hc has done or heen; expresses, nowhere, a singie feeiing of compunction, or the ieast sense of unworthiness. On the contrary, he holdly chaiienges his accusers, in the question—'which of you convinceth me of sin?' and even declares, at the close of his life, in a solemn appeai to God, that he has given to men, unsuiiied, the giory divine that was deposited in him."

It is the unique experience of Christ that he unites characters difficult to be united. "He is never said to have laughed, and yet he never produces the impression of austerity, moroseness, sadness, or even of being unhappy. On tho contrary, he is described as one that appears to be commonly filled with a sacred joy—'that they might have my joy fuifiiied in themselves.' . . . He is the most unworidly of heings, having no desire at ail for what the earth can give, too great to he caught with any longing for its benefits, impassable even to its charms, and yet there is no ascetic sourness or repugnance, no misanthropic distaste in his manner; as if he were hracing himseif against the world to keep it off. The more closely he is drawn to other worlds, the more fresh and susceptible is he to the humanities of this. The littie chiid is an image of giadness which his heart leaps forth to embrace. The wedding and the feast and the funerai have ail their chord of sympathy in his breast."

Contrasting Christ's manner of life aiong this iine with the conduct of men of the world, we are impressed more and more hy his superhuman nature. "Men undertake to be spiritual, and they become ascetic; or, endeavoring to hoid a iiberai view of the comforts and pleasures of society, they are soon huried in the world, and siaves to its fashions; or, hoiding a scrupuious watch to keep out every particular sin, they become iegal, and faii out of iiberty; or, charmed with the nohie and heaveniy iiberty, they run to negiigence and irresponsible iiving; so the earnest become violent, the fervent fanatical and censorious, the gentie waves become violent, the firm turn bigots, the iiberal grow iax, the henevolent ostentatious. Poor human infirmity can hoid nothing steady. . . . And yet the character of Christ is never modified, even by a shade of ratification. It is one and the same throughout. He makes no improvements, prunes no extravagances, returns from no eccentricities. The baiance of his character is never disturbed, or readjusted."

The superhuman character of Christ is also shown in his "astonishing pretensions." "Imagine a human creature saying to the world—'I came forth from the Father'—'ye are from heneath, I am from above;' facing aii the inteiligence and even phiiosophy of the worid, and saying in hold assurance—'behold a greater than Solomon is here' 'I am the iight of the world'—'the way, the truth, and the life;' puhlishing to all peoples and reiigions—'No man cometh to the Father, but by me;' addressing the Infinite majesty, and testifying—'I have giorified thee on the earth;' caiiing to the human race—'come unto me;' 'foiiow me;' iaying his hand upon aii the dearest and most most intimate affections of life, and demanding a precedent iove—'he that ioveth father and mother more than me, is not worthy of me.' Was there ever dispiayed an example of effrontery and spiritual conceit so preposterous? But no one is offended with Jesus on this account. '. . . For eighteen hundred years these prodigious assumptions have been puhiished and preached to a world that is quick to lay hold of conceit, and bring down the iofty airs of pretenders, and yet, during aii this time, whole nations of peopie, composing as weii the learned and powerfui as the ignorant and humble, have paid their homage to the name of Jesus, detecting never any disagreement between his merits and his pretensions, offended never by any thought of his extravagance. In which we have absoiute faith that he practicaiiy maintains his amazing assumptions!"

On the death of Christ, Dr. Bushneii remarks: "He dies not as a man, but rather as some one might, who is myteriously more and higher. So thought aioud the hard-faced soidier—'Truly this was the Son of God.' As if he had said, 'I have seen men die—this is not a man. They call him the Son of God—he cannot bc iess.' Can he be less to us?"

POETICAL THOUGHTS.

By Mrs. George S. Brown.

With One Accord.

Oh, hurst of song that echoed o'er Judean plain and hiii;
Oh, hoiy iight that did with awe the lonely shepherds fiii;
Oh, siiver-fingered guiding star, resplendent, heaveniy gem,
That ied the Eastern scers unto the inn at Bethiehem!
Oh, heraid angels, heaveniy host, thy voices once again
Bring tidings of great joy, of peace and good will unto men!
Oh, joyous heiis of Christmas mcrn, from every church spire ring,
And aii, with one accord, prociaim the birth of Christ, the King.

—Dr. George S. Brown.

This is one time of the year when every thinking mind runs in the same channel. We may forget that the New Year is dawning, because all days seem aiike; we may forget to show forth any particuiar gratitude on Thanksgiving Day; the fourth of Juiy may pass unnoticed; Valentine Day has oniy passing thought, but who couid forget Christmas? It is in the very air. The stores, crowded with shoppers, the holiday goods so artisticaiiy displayed in the fascinating windows, the hright wreaths of holly and green mistletoe, the mysterious packages, the gay ribbons, the happy faces, the home preparations—all say it is Christmas. What does that day mean to us? Do our minds travel back with the inspired narrator to the promises made to God's people that out of Bethlehem should come a king? Do we feel with them the hope and iook with them for one who shouid be the Savior of the world? And in our mind's eye, can we not picture the faithful shepherds watching their flocks and probabiy talking of this promised Messiah, when, lo, a wondrous light that fiiled them with awe shone round about them? They were sore afraid until the angel of the Lord said unto them: "Fear not, for I hring unto you good tidings of great joy which shall be unto ail peopie." And then a muititude of the heavenly host praised God and sang: "Peace on earth, good will to men!" And then that wondrous star, that guided the wise men to the manger, where the Christ child was as they brought their gifts to iay at his feet! All this is in the far past and yet the same oid story is ever new, and each Christmas morning, from every church spire, is rung out the giad news, and with one accord we prociaim that Christ, the Lord, is King. Like the wise men, we wouid hring of our choicest gifts to him, goid and frankincense and myrrh. We wouid imbibe the Christmas spirit and give our hest to God's iittie ones. There are sad and loneiy hearts to-day. We wouid bring to them the comfort and sympathy they so much need, and tell them that Christ came to heai, to heip and to cheer the broken-hearted. We would give of our time to minister to them in sickness and distress, we wouid give of our goid and silver and hring gladness and joy into poverty-stricken homes. We wouid not think of ourseives and our own enjoyment, but we would minister to others in his name and so in our hearts wiii ring the giad tidings, that Christ the Lord has come.

MR. HENRY CLAY HAWKINS was born Feb. 28, 1857, and died Sept. 30, 1928. He was sick for some months before his death. He was married in early life to Miss Eunice Howze. There was born to this union one child, a son. This good wife passed away not long after they were married. Later in life, Brother Hawkins was married to Miss Liza McLaurin. There were born to this union two sons and two daughters. Four of the five children still survive. Brother Hawkins lived in Jasper County, Miss., all of his life; for some while before his death he lived in Louin. He was a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, for many years, and was regular in attendance. The writer knew nothing of him save a good man.

D. C. VICKERS.

MRS. ALICE CAREY McKINNEY, nee Sadler, was born at Fort Deposit, Ala., March 20, 1865. She was converted in early childhood, and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. Her conversion resulted from impressions received in reading a religious book, and came as she knelt in prayer at her own bedside. She was one of the pioneer members of the Woman's Missionary Society, joining it as a girl soon after its organization. In February, 1887, at Pearl River, La., she was married to Mr. J. C. McKinney, establishing a home in the Mississippi Delta, where she lived until all their posessions were swept away through the overflow. For the last twenty-five years she has made her home in and near Ruston, La., until her death, which occurred Oct. 8, 1928. Her sorrowing husband, one daughter and two sons, with many other devoted relatives and friends, remain to mourn her departure. Throughout her life Mrs. McKinney was a devoted Christian, active in every phase of the work of the church; teacher of the woman's Bible class, active in the Missionary Society, regular in attendance at the services of the church, including the weekly prayer meeting, a faithful member of the board of stewards, sometimes filling a vacant pulpit on occasions. For the last 19 years she was president of the State W. C. T. U., and gave to its cause enthusiastic and efficient service. She always stood aggressively for righteousness in the community and State, and held the respect and confidence of all classes, even of those who disagreed with her aggressive principles. In recent years when the responsibility of citizenship was being realized for the first time by women, numbers throughout the State looked to her for council and guidance, and among her most devoted friends were many of the best women of the State. In her own life she experienced sorrows and trials, but in them all she maintained her confident and submissive trust in her heavenly Father. The outstanding qualities of her character were simplicity, sincerity, fidelity and courage, which shone out in all her relations. During her last months of sickness and suffering her patient courage and her cheerful spirit never faltered. Just before her passing, she said with a cheerful smile that she realized, if she had not before, how foolish it was to wait for the end of life to prepare for death, since the suffering and weakness would have made such preparation all but impossible. No doubt she has heard the welcome, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant, enter into the joys of thy Lord."

GOOD NEWS FROM CHINA!

Mr. George E. Lerrigo, who for thirty years past has done Y. M. C. A. work in Amoy, in the southern part of China, writes an interesting letter in one of our church papers. The Encyclopedia Britannica labels Amoy as the "world's filthiest city." But see what Mr. Lerrigo says of changes there—and elsewhere—under the new regime:

."Several months have passed since Peking was captured, and instead of rival factions, each striving for power, we see great leaders sacrificing their own opinions and convictions in order that a way may he found to develop an unified government. We see the last vestiges of the old form of organization suggested by the Communists abandoned, and a new group of councils organized to care for the various departments of the government. We see the leaders standing together aud finding ways and methods of working together. We see drastic steps being taken all over the country against Communistic propaganda.

"Efforts are being made to disband some of the great armies, but this necessarily is slow work, for to rapidly dishand the army under the present economic conditions which prevail over the land would be to augment the great bands of bandits and pirates that already exist. The army can only be disbanded as work can be found for the men. New motor roads are being built in every direction to provide occupation for the men and improve the general transportation facilities. Practically all the great cities are being remodeled.

"Here in Amoy a bund is being built all around the city, houses and shops are being torn down to make way for modern streets, sewers are being built, parks created and the city modernized as rapidly as possible. In Canton, even greater changes are taking place. Automatic telephones are being installed, a long-distance line to connect with Hongkong is projected, a commercial air-line to communicate with other large cities is projected and the changes within the city itself are so great and rapid that, after an absence of a few months, I hardly knew the place.

"A recent visit to help the local Association there showed me that there is a completely different atmosphere among the people. The secretaries have an enthusiasm about their task and great hope for the future. I found the old truculence among the working men completely gone. There was not the slightest trace of any anti-foreign spirit and there was a definite feeling that the new day has dawned and China is to go forward."

Stubborn Cough Quickly Ended by Famous Recipe

Here is the famous old recipe which millions of housewives have found to be the most dependable meaus of breaking up a stuhborn, lingering cough. It takes hut a moment to prepare and costs little, hut it gives real relief even for those dreaded coughs that usually follow the "flu."

From any druggist, get 2½ ounces of Pinex, pour it into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup or strained honey. Thus you make a full pint of better remedy than you could buy ready-made for three times the cost. It never spoils and tastes so good that even children like it.

Not only does this simple mixture soothe and heal the inflamed throat membranes with surprising ease, hut also it is absorhed into the hlood, and acts directly upon the hronchial tubes, thus aiding the whole system in throwing off the cough. It loosens the germ-laden phlegm and eases chest soreness in a way that is really astonishing.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway Pine, containing the active agent of creosote, in a refined, palatable form. Nothiug knowu in medicine is more helpful in cases of severe coughs, chest colds and bronchial troubles.

Do not accept a substitute for Pinex. It is guaranteed to give prompt relief or money refunded.

A NEW INTEREST IN JAPAN.

The Literary Digest of Dec. 8 contains an interesting article on "Sports Winning in Japan." After showing that the past twenty years have revolutionized and Westernized Japan in regard to her interest in athletics, a Tokyo editor writes to show that Japanese youths are accepting not only the form but the real spirit of physical sport. In part he says: "All this is a matter of twenty years. It is foolish to mistake sport for the purpose of life or the only topic of conversation, but it can be a great social educator. It teaches teamwork; it inculcates the priceless moral lesson that the game is greater than the player; the philosophical truth that the pursuit is sweeter than the prize; the social lesson that to lose gracefully is as admirable as to win brilliantly."

FRIENDSHIP FOR UNITED STATES GROWING IN JAPAN.

Dr. Erickson, Missionary, Tells of Nippon's Attitude.

"The Japanese attitude towards America is good. Conditions have improved since the passing of the anti-Japanese Immigration law in this country, for Japan is having the same trouble with the Koreans and Chinese. Also the Japanese are a sentimental people, they appreciate deeply the aid given hy the United States at the time of the great earthquake, and last year when the school children of America sent 40,000 friendship dolls to Japan, it appealed to them probably far more than the aid given them by the Red Cross.

"They are now planning to send a Japanese doll to each capitol of every State in the Union to express the friendship that Japanese children have for the American children. The government is building two memorials, one at Tokyo and the other at Yokohama, to the earthquake and to America with the funds that were not spent in relief work."

Dr. Erickson has heen stationed in Japan for twenty-eight years. This is his second furlough.—From Commercial Appeal.

ZONE MEETING AT MONTROSE.

The last zone meeting for the year was held at Montrose, Nov. 15, 1928.

The meeting was opened by singing the doxology, prayer by Mrs. Keown, of Dushan. The fifty-second chapter of Isaiah was read by Brother Blackwell, of Rose Hill, followed by prayer hy Brother Vickers, of Montrose.

Minutes were read and adopted. Call for delegates found Rose Hill, 10; Newton, 3; Dushan, 2; and Montrose, 13. Lake was not represented.

Welcome address was given by Brother Vickers, of Montrose. Response by Mrs. Porter, of Rose Hill. Mrs. Hopkins, the District Secretary, gave an interesting talk on the essential thing to leadership, the subject being, "Sacrifice of Self." Rose Hill gave the entire program:

Song 105, "Lead On, O King Eternal;" "Value of the Zone Meeting," Mrs. T. F. Graham; reading, "Our Jubilee Goal," Mrs. Merrel; reading, "Aids to Spiritual Growth," Mrs. Cooley; song No. 22, "Love Divine."

It being the close of the year the nominating committee nominated Mrs. McClinton from Newton as our new zone leader for 1929. She was unanimously elected.

It was voted by the meeting to have only light refreshments at the zone meetings. Next meeting to be at Newton Thursday of the third week in January.

Brother Blackwell, of Rose Hill, gave an interesting talk on how much help the Missionary Societies are to the church.

We were dismissed by singing song 231, and prayer hy Mrs. Neil, of Montrose.

MRS. MUSTIN, Zone Leader.
MRS. PRUITT, Secretary.

ZONE MEETING.

The Woman's Missionary Society, zone three, Minden District, held their fourth quarterly meeting at Montgomery Wednesday, Dec. 5.

The meeting was opened by the congregation singing, "All Hail the Power of Jesus' Name." Scripture lesson was read by Rev. Mrs. Wardlow from the tenth chapter of the Gospel by St. John, foliowed by prayer. Special violin music hy Misses Madeline Williams, Doris and Ernestine Harrison.

Responding to roll call were thirty-two members and eight visitors. Minutes for last meeting were read and approved. Reports from each auxiliary president on work being done by their Society.

A playlet, "A Missionary Society That Lost Its Voice," was given by Mrs. Clyde Howard and Mrs. Harold Collier. A story, "The Youngest Thief," was effectively told by Mrs. A. H. Perry. A quartet, "To the Work," was rendered by Mr. and Mrs. Beaird, Mr. Thompson and Mrs. McCain.

The meeting was adjourned for lunch, which was served at the city hall by the Montgomery ladies.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

Miss Hettie Wiginton, Mount Pleasant Sunday school, Tremont charge, sent an offering for the Near East Relief. Dr. E. B. Chappell, 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn., is treasurer of this fund in our church. If you cannot think of the proper person to ask a question or send money or do anything connected with the Sunday school, I am ready to serve you.

Recently wall charts have been placed at Mount Pleasant, Tremont charge, and at Belmont. These guides help to do the work in a better way. Try a wall chart.

The approved instructors in Standard and Cokesbury Schools of the two Conferences have been called by Mr. Schisler to meet at Jackson, Miss., Dec. 29, at 9 a. m., in Capitol Street Church. The purpose is to help us find our defects, our difficulties, and learn a better way of doing our work. We are grateful to those who have signified ther intention of attending.

It is no small honor to have the church select you to attend the International Missionary Conference to be held in Memphis, Jan. 1, 2 and 3. Half the number allotted to the Sunday School Board have sent in for tickets. Of course the other half will be there.

The Sunday School Council of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, held its annual meeting in the city of Nashville, Dec. 7-11. This Council is composed of the Conference Superintendents, Extension Secretaries, Elementary Superintendents, Directors of Religious Education, Professors of Religious Education, Conference Board Chairmen, and others. Dr. Hickman, of Duke University, delivered three strong addresses. The main thing we did was to agree upon a Program of Work for the schools that have from ten to forty members. It appears to me that this is a most excellent piece of work. We will know better after we have tried it out in the field. The General Board staff and the Conference men have been working at this for several years. It would require a small book to record all that was done. Miss Martha DuBerry and the Conference Superintendent were the representatives from the North Mississippi Conference.

May the Christmas spirit pervade the Sunday school workers of our Conference, and may we all have a more intimate knowledge of the Christ who makes possible our joys and who shares our sorrows.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

The General Workers' Council just closed in Nashville was in many respects the best Workers' Council the church has ever held. One of the best features of this Council was the creating of a Program of Work for the small Sunday school with from 10 to 40 members. We are hoping that this program will be released for use this coming spring that will make it possible for every school to have a definite type of program that they have a reasonable expectation of carrying out in full.

The workers from the Missssippi Conference contributed largely to the success of this Program of Work, and I feel that they ought to be commended for their efforts.

Another matter of importance was the creating of definite units of Bible study which, if carried out, will give a person a thorough knowledge of the entire Bible.

Possbily, the supreme item of importanc was the stressing of the need of spirituality in the life of the workers in order to carry out the program fully. This was evident in the Programs of Worship and in all of the addresses delivered to the group.

There will be published within a short while a leaflet in which the Sunday school superintendent will be featured and brought to the fore in a way that should be helpful not only to the individual superintendent but to the church as a whole.

This week there will be mailed to the superintendents of the Sunday schools a booklet called "The Methodist Workers' Guide." This book will be of invaluable help to every superintendent, and if for any reason your superintendent does not get his book, let us know that we may send him one. This book is also available for any pastor who may desire it.

The Workers' Councils have been held and the goals set for the coming year. We will try to get this in shape for next week's Advocate.

When you read this, it will be the week before Christmas. I trust that this season will find you happy and well and may God bless you each and every one. At this time, remember the workers and work in your prayers that God may use them in a most helpful way.

The Seashore, the Newton, Meridian and Vicksburg District Workers' Councils have been held and the place and dates of the District Institutes have been set. These meetings were well attended and the inerest of the workers exceedingly fine.

The Newton District is planning a check-up campaign early in the year in an effort to make a large improvement in Sunday school work. This is a laudable undertaking, and I trust that it will succeed far beyond the expectations of the group.

The fourth Sunday offering for November is coming in slow. We trust that the workers throughout the Conference will take on new interest in the cause of missions for the coming year.

We would call your attention again to the fact that the foreign mission field this year will be China. There are many things happening that makes this field wonderfully interesting. The United States is closely allied with China now and we trust this friendship shall be thoroughly Christian.

The campaign of evangelism in the Sunday school should be the first three months in the new year. We trust that you will secure the leaflets on this and get your workers to study them, so that the campaign may be done in the most helpful way possible. No need is so great throughout the church as the need of personal workers. This gives an opportunity of producing a large group of personal workers committed to the great task of evangelism. Another added feature of this work is that it enriches and makes more meaningful the occasion of Easter.

The work for the new Conference year starts well and we trust will continue to improve and make progress. Pray for the workers and every item of the work.

Yours in Him,
JOHN C. CHAMBERS.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

Dr. F. N. Parker, of Emory University, writes: "I find that our spring quarter here opens on the 19th of March. This will enable me to attend the Louisiana Conference State Sunday school meeting, at Alexandria, as indicated by you for April 2 and 3."

The Sunday school leaders in Louisiana will read that item with interest, and will be present to hear Doctor's "Bible Messages."

Mr. T. W. Holloman, Conference Lay Leader, writes: "I want to advise that the Board of Lay Activities appropriated $50 for the first ten Standard or Cokesbury Training Schools that will have a course on "Stewardship," with the suggestion that they be distributed into every presiding elder's district in the State." We hope the district leaders in Training Work will take advantage of this offer. This cooperation on the part of the Conference Board of Lay Activities is highly appreciated by the Sunday School Board. The General Sunday School Board has allotted nine honoraria to our Conference, one to each district, with the exception of the New Orleans District, the second going to the French Mission field at Houma.

Rev. H. W. Jordan, new pastor at Columbia, writes: "We are well pleased here. Have a good Sunday school. Hope you can pass by to see us some time during the year." We appreciate these words from Brother Jordan, including the invitation.

The last report from "Childhood and Youth Week" observance comes from Oak Ridge, which makes the third from the Monroe District. Mrs. H. J. Norris, superintendent, writes: "I don't feel that what we did is worth reporting for credit, but I do believe our effort was helpful to us." The Forward Steps adopted by them were: "Increase teacher training by correspondence course; better observance of Promotion Day, and appointment of regular substitute teachers."

Mr. S. L. Campbell, assistant superintendent of the Evergreen Sunday school, in writing about Brother Z. T. Price, says: "He has been superintendent here since 1883, which makes forty-five years. No one else since then."

Brother Price is now 82 years of age, and we congratulate him on this almost half century service in the Sunday school work. Hope he will be able to attend our State-wide Sunday School Conference, at which a large place will be given to the work of the Sunday school superintendents. Mr.

John R. Pepper, of Memphis, Sunday school superintendent, has made a tentative promise to he present. His record is forty-eight years of service.

Your writer had the privilege of attending the twentieth annual session of the General Sunday School Council, which was the eighth session he had attended, and it was in many ways the best session. Louisiana had five delegates present: Dr. A. S. Lutz, Superintendent of Teacher Training; Mrs. R. E. Smith, Superintendent of Parent-Teacher Work; Miss Lois Hammett, Conference Elementary Superintendent; Rev. A. K. McLellan, Extension Secretary, and myself.

Rev. B. C. Taylor, Superintendent of Adolescent Work, wrote: "I find it impossible for me to get to the Council meeting this year. Stop when you come back through if you can and we will talk things over." We regret he was not able to be at the Council.

Sunday, Dec. 9, I was at McKendree church, Nashville, Tenn., for the Sunday school hour, and at West End for the 11 o'clock service. Thirty years ago I was at Nashville, a student at Wesley Hall; I thought of the changes in these two churches. There had been no change in the bulding material at West End church, but they are to move in their new church soon. McKendree had remodeled her building a little. Rev. John B. Matthews was pastor at McKendree, and at West End Dr. E. B. Chappell, whom I saw present Sunday at West End, was pastor there.

At the Sunday school hour, Dr. W. P. King, editor of the Review, spoke on the Sunday school lesson, giving us what he thought were the outstanding elements of the character of St. Paul, who was in prison, and a character like Nero, who was on the throne, hut to-day we name our sons "Paul," after the man in prison, and our dogs "Nero," after the man on the throne.

At 11 o'clock, at West End church, Dr. Frank S. Hickman, of Duke University, spoke on Religious Education.

Sunday afternoon we visited the home of Andrew Jackson, near Nashville. We were in each room of this historic home. The kitchen was separated from the main house, which was true of homes in that day. We noted the furnishings of the kitchen of that day, and decided the greatest change had come in the modern home in the room known as the kitchen. The old type was the symbol of the place of a servant, with its many burdens.

Tuesday noon I was invited to lunch in company with all former students at Wesley Hall who were attending the Sunday School Council. This gracious invitation was issued hy Dr. Tillett, Dean Emeritus of the Theological Department of Vanderbilt University. This proved to he a pleasant and happy occasion.

Two other pleasant social functions your writer enjoyed were the annual hanquet at Scarritt College, with special entertainment hy the Glee Club of Fisk University on Saturday night, and the special banquet given for the Conference Superintendents by Dr. J. W. Shackford at the Jeff Davis Hotel on Monday night.

C. D. ATKINSON,
Conference Superintendent.

FIVE HUNDRED THOUSAND IN CONGO SUNDAY SCHOOLS.

"Thy Kingdom Come," the report of the tenth convention of the World's Sunday School Association, which was held at Los Angeles last July, has many referencces to Sunday school developments in all parts of the world. The report of approximately four hundred pages can be ohtained from the World's Sunday School Association, 216 Metropolitan Tower, New York City. The cost postpaid is $1.50. The following is a part of the statement by Dr. Royal J. Dye, of Bolenge, Congo Belge:

"About a thousand miles up the Congo near the equator is a missionary station. There are many Sunday schools carried on by these missionaries and thero are 500,000 natives in those Sunday schools. These great forces are heginning to change the dark heart of Africa into a new day.

"One boy told a friend of his, an old man, that he knew how to write to his teacher and that he could make a piece of paper tell the teacher to give the old man whatever he wanted. The man told him to write that he wanted an orange, so the boy wrote the message on the paper. The man would not touch the paper, hut fastened it to the end of a hamoo cane and carried it that way to the missionary. When he presented it to the missionary, and the missionary, after reading the message, gave the man an orange, the man was astonished and could hardly helieve that such a miracle had been wrought. The boy came to school again another year, and another year, and now is a teacher in his village.

"Another boy chose things he thought his mother would like. Now in Africa, when a boy earns money, he always takes it and gives it to his mother. This boy wanted his mother to have a hig bowl to eat from. He also selected a looking-glass and some salt. Then he walked twenty miles to his home town. When he approached the village he hegan to call, for he saw no one. As he neared his home he called 'Mother!' but no one answered. They were all gone. Not a soul was in sight. Presently he saw, pecking out from behind the dwellings, a band of warriors from another tribe. They rushed out and caught him nad told him that because one of the men from the trihe to which the littie boy helonged had killed one of their men, they had come for blood vengeance. The report came to me that they were about to kill him, and I took a friend with me and we ran as fast as we could that twenty miles, hut were too late. They had killed him and his head had heen carried away by a snake or some animal.

"Later, two of these warriors came to our mission and told us that this iittle hoy had told them hefore they killed him all the stories which he had heard at the mission, sang all the songs he had learned from the Christians, and prayed all the prayers he knew. Then he had said, 'Now you can kill me.' These two men hecame Christians as a result of this little boy's teaching."—Sunday School News.

MR. EBIZAWA, THE NEW GENERAL SECRETARY OF THE NATIONAL CHRISTIAN COUNCIL OF JAPAN, ON THE FOREIGN MISSIONARY.

In the three religious conferences held recently 150 Christians among some 1300 members took such a wonderful place of leadership that the Conference cast its resolutions almost entirely in the Christian spirit.

I realize that these conditions so favorable for Christianity were hrought about chiefly as the result of the missionary enterprise during the past 70 years.

What great perseverance and much patience the missionaries must have used during these years!

People are very slow to appreciate your services, but I must say that I am now learning to give you my hearty sympathy out of my own personal experience, at least in the following two points.

In the first place, I am often obliged to speak in my broken English, holding back my eloquent mother tongue, and it seems to me a good lesson to learn what it means for you missionaries to work here with the handicap of language.

In the second place, I can see plainly what it means for missionaries to educate their children, often breaking up their home life. There may be many other things which we native workers cannot fully realize and I have nothing hut appreciation and gratitude for all your services for the sake of our nation.

We have been very slow to learn how to appreciate your contrihution, and I regret that there may be some who are prone to throw unkind criticism upon you missionaries.

I hate to see a narrow nationalism coming into the motives of the Kingdom of God. Christianity is hroader than any nation. We mnst pull together in the Vineyard no matter of what nationalities we may be. We shall certainly need more missionary workers in order to reach those people who still remain untouched by the Christian forces.

We shall much depend upon yon for this great task. Japan is a unique field for Christian missions. She may be a test stone for the missionary enterprisc. She now occupies a particular situation which challenges Christianity. Until you can really Christianize this nation, you cannot truly Christianize the whole Orient.

MRS. GLADYS ROGERS
Route 5, Grand Ave., Atlanta, Ga.

Atlanta, Ga.—"My mother gave me Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound when I was a girl about 14 years old, when I was just entering womanhood. Then after I married, I took more of it. During the time before my hahy was born this medicine gave me splendid results. I have been taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Pills for Constipation also and recommend these medicines to my friends and will answer letters asking about them."—Mrs. Gladys Rogers, Route 5, Grand Avenue, Atlanta, Georgia.

A Lot Better By Taking It

Trafford, Pa.—"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetahle Compound because I could not eat a thing. I had no appetite whatever and never felt good. I was talking to my friend one day and she passed the remark of how thin I was getting since I got married and I told her my trouhle and she advised me to take the Vegetable Compound. I feel a lot hetter now since I have been taking it regularly and I can eat most anything. I recommend your medicine to anyone who tells me of troubles like my own, for I know what it has done for me. I have also used your Sanative Wash. I am willing to answer women if they ask about the medicine."—Mrs. E. Gelatic, Box 502, Trafford Pa

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

After lunch a business session was called. After the business was dispensed with, the meeting was addressed hy Rev. Mrs. Wardlow. She emphasized the part each individual member might have in the great program of missions, giving many of her experiences during her visit and study in the Holy Lands this past summer. She told of the great needs as well as some of the things being accomplished in our mission fields, which first hand information was very inspiring.

The next meeting will be held at Campti some time during the first quarter of 1929, definite date to be named later.

KEEPING CHRIST IN CHRISTMAS.

If one were to form his judgment on the basis of the Christmas cards that have been current in recent years, he might easily conclude that Christmas no longer has anything to do with Christ. Yule logs, holly, mistletoe, snowy landscapes, stage-coaches, taverns, banal verses—these and many other trivialities, to say nothing of flippant jokes ahout drinking parties and prohihition—we have all seen overloading the shelves of stores and shops. Conspicuous only by their rarity have heen the greeting-cards that call to mind him whose natal day Christmas is meant to celebrate or that suggest anything of his inexhaustible meaning for human life.

When some one, a few months ago, interviewed officials of the Greeting Card Association on this suhject, he was informed hy them that the manufacturers "give the public what it wants." They added that during the present season not a few numbers will be offered which hear a distinctively religious message or are in some way related to the deeper meaning of Christmas. "We shall be interested to observe," the spokesman for the manufacturers said, "whether there really is any considerahle body of people who will call for this kind of card; we are willing to be shown."

The National Board of the Y. W. C. A. has rendered a helpful service in this field for several years hy issuing a series of most attractive cards in the form of reproductions of famous masterpieces of art dealing with the Christmas story.

Probably almost every one who reads these lines will he purchasing Christmas cards in the next few days. Why not make a special point of asking your dealer for cards that carry the true significance of Christmas-time? If Christian people in all parts of the country would insist on this, we might reasonably expect to see next year a great improvement in the quality of cards offered for our patronage.—Exchange.

LITTLE GIRL, DON'T CRY.

There! little girl, don't cry!
They have broken your doll, I know;
And your tea set blue,
And your playhouse, too,
Are things of the long ago;
But childish troubles will soon pass by—
There! little girl, don't cry!

There! little girl, don't cry!
They have broken your slate, I know;
And the glad wild ways
Of our schoolgirl days
Are things of the long ago;
But life and love will soon come by—
There! little girl, don't cry!

There! little girl, don't cry!
They have broken your heart, I know;
And the rainbow gleams
Of your youthful dreams
Are things of the long ago;
But heaven holds all for which you sigh,
There! little girl, don't cry!

Life looks rosy for him

Health worth more than fortune

THE baby to be envied is the one who is born with an inheritance of perfect health, to begin with. And who's lucky enough to have a mother who knows how to build up this fortune.

"Perhaps I'm old-fashioned," she'll say to the doctor who pronounces her child physically 100% at a baby show, "but this health certificate means more to me than all the stock certificates in the world. If my baby grows up strong and well, I'm willing to leave it to him to make a career and fortune for himself.

"Already I'm teaching him the value of regular habits. Regular sleep, regular meals, regular functions. He's never once been off schedule, not even when he was cutting teeth or traveling to the country. I make sure of that by giving him Nujol regularly."

Nujol works so easily and naturally that it won't upset a baby under any conditions. It keeps everything functioning properly. It not only prevents any excess of body poisons (we all have them) from forming but aids in their removal. It is safe and sure. Nujol was perfected by the Nujol Laboratories, 26 Broadway, New York.

Heir to millions

Just try Nujol for your baby. Give it to him regularly for the next three months. See if it doesn't make things much easier for both of you. Certainly it could do no harm — for Nujol contains no drugs or medicine. Your druggist carries it. Be sure you get the genuine. Sold only in sealed packages.

WHAT THE AMERICAN RED CROSS HAS ACCOMPLISHED DURING THE LAST YEAR.

1. In Porto Rico the American Red Cross has a half million homeless and destitute persons under its care, and in Florida there are 50,000 persons looking to it for assistance as a result of the tropical hurricane which swept out of the Caribbean Sea in September and cut a path of destruction over a fifteen hundred mile course. A relief fund of about $5,500,000 has been raised with which the organization is preventing intense suffering, and in many instances actual starvation.

2. During the organization's fiscal year which closed June 30, it gave assistance following eighty-eight disasters, sixty-six of which were in this country and twenty-two abroad.

3. Its workers in nearly 3,000 chapters in the United States have assisted an average of 40,500 service and ex-service men each month, helping them to settle government claims and procure hospital treatment and seeing that their families did not suffer while these claims were pending. At the same time Red Cross workers in camps and hospitals assisted an average of nearly 16,000 men each month and arranged during the year more than 22,000 recreation and entertainment events.

4. Carrying on civilian relief activities only where there is no other agency to do it—mostly in small towns and rural sections—the Red Cross has assisted more than 10,000 families during the year.

5. In communities throughout the United States and in our Insular and Foreign possessions, its 745 Public Health nurses have been fighting disease and suffering and improving the health standards of the nation. They have made more than a million visits to homes during the year to care for the sick and protect the well. Eight hundred and seventy-four thousand school children have been inspected and given assistance in having their physical defects corrected.

6. Nearly 60,000 women and girls have been taught, in the organization's Home Hygiene and Care of the Sick classes, how to give home care to the sick in their homes and how to prevent sickness by the proper care of the home and the family.

7. In their fight against malnutrition, the cause of many physical defects in children and adults, the organization has given nutrition instruction to 128,000 person, of whom 122,000 were children.

8. With 90,000 persons a year dying as a result of accidents, the American Red Cross is waging a nation-wide campaign to reduce this annual loss of life. In the last twelve months it has instructed more than 150,000 persons in the United States in first aid for the injured, while the number of persons enrolled in its life saving corps, after receiving intensive instruction in methods for rescuing and reviving the drowning persons, has reached nearly 174,000. During the year it has also given more than 4,000 lectures and demonstrations for the furtherance of this campaign.

9. In addition to helping with the administrative and other phases of the work, Red Cross volunteers have, during the year, produced more than a quarter of a million garments and two and a quarter million surgical dressings for use in disaster relief work and other contingencies. They have also transcribed 1,316 volumes into Braille, a system of raised lettering whereby the blind are enabled to read. Practically all Braille transcribing in this country is done by Red Cross volunteers.

10. The American Red Cross makes no appeals for funds during the year except following great national disasters, in which cases all funds contributed are spent for relief work in the disaster for which the appeal is made. This entire program of service is financed from membership dues obtained during the Roll Call. In addition to this the membership funds finance many relief operations following relatively small disasters in which no special appeal is made.

PREVENTION OF INFLUENZA.

"Influenza is an acute, highly contagious, infectious disease, occurring in pandemic, epidemic and isolated form. It is characterized by suddenness of onset, temperature, headache, marked prostration, respiratory symptoms and a tendency to severe pulmonary complications."

The epidemics of 1889 and 1918 were epidemiologically and clinically alike. Individual cases of influenza are not seen singly except under the rarest circumstances. When an epidemic is raging many cases are reported as influenza that in reality are only mildly contagious infections.

No ready means of identification of influenza has been found. When the specific germ is finally determined, the discovery will be of real aid and will probably result quickly in the development of a serum.

No race is exempt from influenza, but it is more prevalent among white people. While it most frequently attacks the young adult, it occurs in all ages, but under one year of age influenza is rare.

Occupation has very little effect on the disease. Influenza attacks those who live in protected places as well as those who live practically out-of-doors. The part that occupation plays has more to do with contact infections, the disease being diffused among factory employees, clerks, in fact all who mingle freely with one another at work.

Droplets of infected secretion sprayed by the acts of coughing and sneezing are probably the most prolific sources of dissemination of infectious material and the most frequent cause of direct contagion. Foodstuffs and drinking water are also probable sources of spreading contagion. Utensils, cups, etc., may harbor infected material, especially if boiling water is not used in the cleansing.

The duration of an average case of influenza is from eight to ten days. When the disease sets in abruptly, there is a sudden chilliness, fever, headache, pain in the back and legs, and a sensation of intense prostration. Headache is among the most common and severe symptoms. When influenza develops gradually the earliest symptom is a feeling of weakness. Among the earliest symptoms is a catarrhal inflammation of the entire respiratory passages. If the attack of influenza runs a favorable course without developing further complications, symptoms quickly subside.

The best advice to prevent attacks of influenza may be summed up briefly: Keep away from crowds. Stay in the open air and sunshine as much as possible. Build up the resistance of the body by adequate food, bathing and exercise. Avoid fatigue. If an attack develops, go to bed in a well-ventilated room, keep warm and send for a doctor.

Vol. 75—No. 52. Official Organ of the Louisiana, Mississippi, and North Mississippi Conferences, Methodist Episcopal Church, South. Whole No. 3733

ROBERT H. HARPER, D.D., Editor NEW ORLEANS, LA., THURSDAY, DECEMBER 27, 1928. CHAS. O. CHALMERS, Manager.

New Orleans Invites the General Conference

New Orleans invites the General Conference of 1930 to meet in the largest city in distinctively Southern Methodist territory. The local committee has asked Mr. Sam Fowlkes, of the Convention Bureau, and Rev. R. H. Harper to represent the committee and present the invitation and the claims of New Orleans when the committee on location of the General Conference meets in the Peabody Hotel in Memphis on the second and third of January. Dr. Forney Hutchinson is chairman of the committee; Dr. J. W. Johnson is secretary.

New Orleans is asking for the General Conference, first, because the city is centrally located and easy of access from all sections of the South—the southern terminal of some of the greatest railways in the country, such as the Illinois Central, the Southern Pacific, the Missouri Pacific, the Texas and Pacific, the Louisville and Nashville, and the Southern. An over-night run would bring all the delegates from the largest Conferences to New Orleans, while delegates from the most distant points in our territory could reach the city without change of cars. New Orleans is also America's second port, and regular passenger service is maintained from home ports, from Cuba, South and Central America, and from many other foreign ports. Good roads lead into the city from every direction, including the Old Spanish Trail and the Jefferson Highway.

New Orleans has exceptional hotel facilities, with 5000 modern rooms in its ten largest hotels. Rates are reasonable and the committee on invitation are prepared to quote rates for the General Conference that cannot possibly be surpassed by any other city, while an ample auditorium can be provided in either church or public hall, with all facilities needed to expedite the work of the Conferences.

FIRST METHODIST CHURCH,
Mother Church of New Orleans Methodism. Congregation organized in 1825. Rev. J. B. Peters is Pastor.

New Orleans is known as "America's Most Interesting City," and it offers more of interest to convention visitors than any other city on the American continent. Its "charmingly different" atmosphere and its many places of historic interest will especially appeal to the type of men in attendance upon the General Conference. The twelve miles of steel docks, along which may be seen ships flying all the flags of the world; the Industrial Canal which cost $20,000,000, and other modern enterprises, as well as the magnificent parks, the splendid buildings of recent construction, the churches and institutions of learning will vie with the ancient landmarks, such as the Napoleon House, the old mint, the French Market, Spanish Fort, the Cabildo and St. Louis Cathedral, and with such historic spots as Jackson Square, Congo Square, and the battlefield of New Orleans where "Old Hickory" achieved undying fame. The delegate to the General Conference can walk the busy street where William Winans taught a school more than a hundred years ago though he cannot locate the spot where the old house stood on Bienville Street; he can view the exact place where the first Methodist church building was erected in 1825 by Dr. B. M. Drake—a piece of ground now in the heart of the commercial district and worth multiplied thousands of dollars.

Delegates to the General Conference would doubtless not be averse to the carnal delights of Creole cuisine, famous all over the world. The restaurant prices are reasonable, too, and lower than those of many cities. Try Bayou Cook oysters on the half shell with a dash of Louisiana Tabasco in the sauce, or almost the size of pork chops fried, or "a-la-Rockefeller" at Antoine's (An-twines) and elsewhere; shrimp any style, Creole gumbo, turtle soup, courtbouillion, red snapper, pompano, or what-not, as you may have them in New Orleans, and you will return to the Crescent City if you can.

Some persons who live elsewhere will tell you of the heat in New Orleans—because they do not know anything about it. The heat records of summer are actually lower than the majority of southern cities and below the highesth records of northern cities. River and Gulf breezes make the difference. In May weather conditions are ideal and the temperature is delightful.

That New Orleans is well prepared to entertain such a body as the General Conference is shown by the fact that the general assemblies of the Episcopal, the Presbyterian, and the Baptist churches have been held in the city in recent years. Though the population are largely Catholic the city welcomed these great conventions and extended every courtesy to the delegates. The mayor of the city, Hon. Arthur O'Keefe, himself a Catholic, is joining heartily in the invitation to the General Conference.

Though other great churches have recognized New Orleans by holding their conventions here in recent years, the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, has never held but one General Conference in the city of New Orleans, and that was in 1866, sixty-two years ago. Surely if there is anything in taking turns, it is now the turn of New Orleans, largest city in Southern Methodism and field of unmeasured opportunity for our church.

New Orleans, as indicated above, has every facility and the spirit to entertain the General Conference. And finally, a plea for the Methodism of the city. Other things being equal, as they are in this case, and unequal, too, in favor of New Orleans, we believe that some consideration is due New Orleans because of the contribution which the Methodism here has made to the church at large and because the greatest progress of Methodism in the city will require the intelligent and sustained help of the whole church. New Orleans has a small Methodist membership compared to other cities, chiefly on account of the preponderance of the Catholic population. But the Methodist churches of New Orleans meet all the claims of the church every year; they report everything in full at Conference, paying more per capita than almost any city, supporting every enterprise, and thoroughly loyal to all the interests of the church at large. The Methodism of New Orleans has given more than 100 preachers to the church, including the Parkers, the Knickerbockers, Thomas Carter, S. H. Werlein, H. B. Carre, W. H. Nelson, in the church at large, and many of the prominent leaders of our church in Louisiana. Four bishops of the church were long and intimately connected with the Methodism of New Orleans: McTyeire, Keener, Parker and Galloway.

Above all, New Orleans needs the General Conference. The church at large has never seen New Orleans, though it is the largest city in Southern Methodism, and though it offers an unlimited opportunity to our church. The city has no general office of the church; no outstanding institution of the church, and, when we make application to any of the boards of the church we are placed absolutely on a par with other cities where the Methodists outnumber the Methodists of New Orleans three and four to one. Here in this city is a marvelous opportunity for our church and we firmly believe that the session of the General Conference in New Orleans would give to the church at large a vision of the need and opportunity in the city and would bring our leaders to realize that only 4,000 Methodists need the support of the whole church if Methodism is to command any influence and power in a city of 450,000 people.

Louisiana will join heartily with New Orleans in the invitation to the General Conference, and we would appreciate it greatly if the Mississippi and North Mississippi Conferences, through their presiding elders and other leaders, would approve our invitation, and give us such help as they are able in our effort to secure the Conference for New Orleans.

CARICATURE OF THE CHRIST.

By Bishop Warren A. Candler.

Men cannot escape the fact of Christ. He is the one inevitable and unavoidable character in history from which no thoughtful man in all Christendom can get away.

Hence, in our day many writers are undertaking to write lives of Jesus. Even men who are avowedly faithless presume to write his biography.

Strange to say many of these pretentious biographers of Jesus seek to discredit the only records we have of the life of Jesus on the earth, and to fill up the vacuum thus credited with all manner of whimsical fancies and skeptical imaginings of their own. By consequence they produce only sorry caricatures of the Christ. Their pseudo biographies of him are not so much lives of Jesus as they are libels of our Lord.

The writer of a recent composition of this sort dares to say that if the London Times wished to record the death of Christ in what might be called a normal obituary notice, there is scarcely enough historical matter definitely known about him to enable that newspaper to fill three lines. This utterly unfounded statement introduces a discussion of the Christ entitled "The Great Galilean"—a rationalistic production which casts doubt upon the deity of our Lord, and treats him as "the man of history and the God of legend," thereby reducing the object of all Christian worship to the level of a mere legendary figure and, by inference, making of the Christian church a communion of superstitious idolaters of a mere myth.

Another writer of the same school, and bearing the title of a minister of the gospel, discredits the history as written by the four evangelists—Matthew, Mark, Luke, and John—and then advances most logically to say "there is no such thing as pure history." Yet it is astounding to note that he calls his book, in which is expressed this extreme skepticism of all history, by the title "The Gospel of the Living Jesus." In truth he explains away both Jesus and the gospel, taking away our Lord and leaving his readers in doubt of where he has laid the Redeemer of Mankind.

In like manner another work, which has a popularity far beyond its merits and a confidence greatly exceeding its trustworthiness, treats the life of Christ as "The Man Nobody Knows," and by its sub-title "A Discovery of Jesus," suggests that it has remained after all these Christian centuries of faith and devotion, for this shallow writer to discover in the Master what the saints of all ages have marvelously missed. What a Columbus in theology he claims to be!

Now, it may as well be understood that all these writers and writings are nearly, or quite, worthless. What they say does not illumine the truth about Jesus, but does rather tend to diminish the sum of human knowledge of his life, if they are accepted as true.

The evangelical records are reliable, and in them and through them shines "the light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ."

Even Unitarians and other rationalists, who deny the deity of Christ, acknowledge the reliability of the four gospels.

John Stuart Mills, an extreme liberalist, in one of his "Essays on Religion," says:

"Whatever else may be taken away from us by rational criticism, Christ is still left; a unique figure, not more unlike all his precursors than all his followers, even those who had the direct benefit of his personal teaching. It is of no use to say that Christ as exhibited in the Gospels is not historical, and that we know not how much of what is admirable has been super-added by the tradition of his followers. The tradition of followers suffices to insert any number of marvels, and may have inserted all the miracles which he is reputed to have wrought. But who among his followers, or among their proselytes, was capable of inventing the sayings ascribed to Jesus, or of imagining the life and character revealed in the Gospels? Certainly not the fisheermen of Galilea: as certainly not St. Paul, whose character and idiosyncrasies were of a totally different sort: still less the early Christian writers, in whom nothing is more evident than that the good which was in them was all derived, as they always professed that it was derived, from the higher sources."

To the same effect speaks Dr. William Elery Cranning as follows:

"Christ's history bears all the marks of reality; a more frank, simple, unlabored, unostentatious narrative was never penned. Besides, his character, if invented, must have been an inventiou of singular difficulty, because no models existed on which to frame it. He stands alone in the records of time. The conception of a being, proposing such new and exalted ends, and governed by higher principles than the progress of society had developed, implies singular intellectual power. That several individuals should joiu in equally vivid conceptions of this character, and shonld not merely describe in general terms the fictitious being to whom it was attributed, but should introduce him into real life, should place him in a great variety of circumstances, in connection with various ranks of men, with friends and foes, and should in all preserve his identity, show the same great and singular mind always acting in harmony with itself: this is a supposition hardly credible; and, when the circumstances of the writers of the New Testament are considered, seems to be as inexplicable on human principles as, what I have suggested, the composition of Newton's 'Principia' by a savage."

Jean Jacques Rousseau, the French philosopher and skeptic, says:

"It would be more incredible for a number of men to fabricate such a book, than that it should contain the account of a real life. No Jewish writers assumed the tone, none expressed the morality of the Gospels. They have such striking marks of truth, such inimitable marks, that the writers of such books would be a greater wonder than their hero."

Friedrich Heinrich Jacobi, the German metaphysician, exclaims: "O myth! O, how far exalted above all human mythology is this representation of Christ! He who could create such fiction is able also to create worlds, call spirits into being, inspire life and the highest blessedness, by the simple power of his breath. The facts are conclusive, that one was here, not myth, but overwhelming reality and truth."

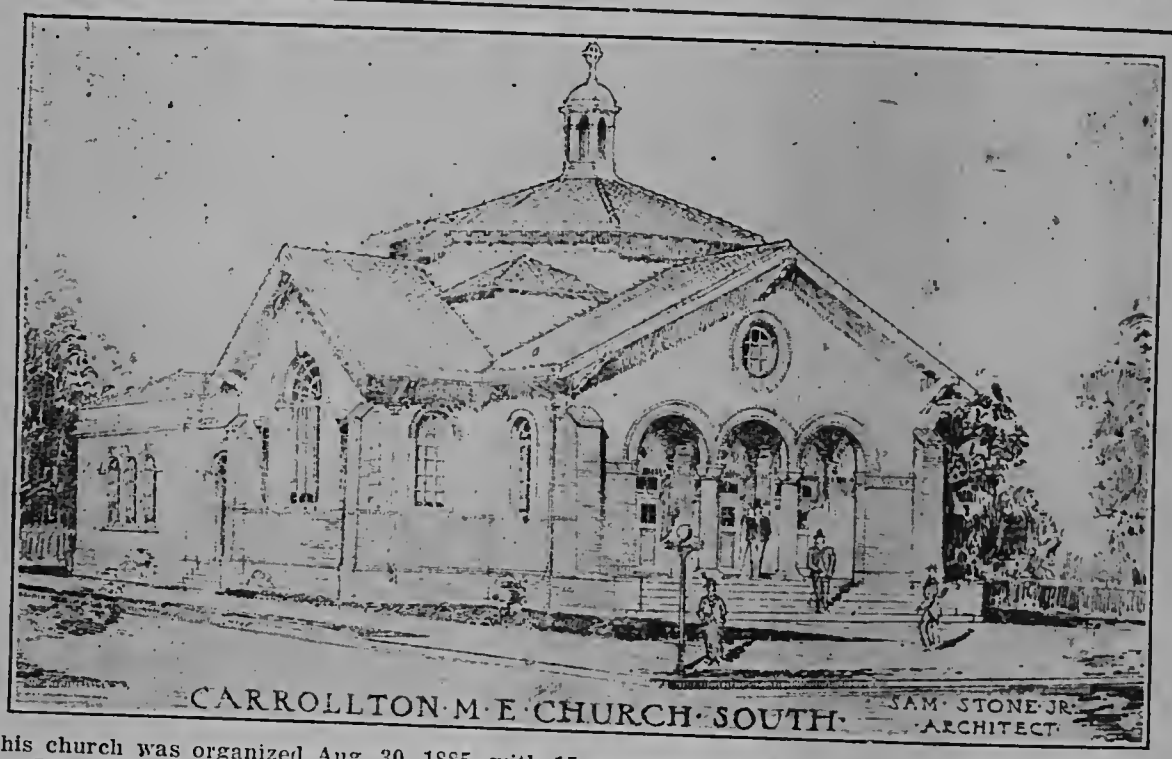
Besides these statements of the mighty men quoted how sorry a show is made by the writers of these so-called "lives" of Christ! They are mere peddlers of fragments of the vesture of Jesus as he is clothed by the four evangelists—tatters which they have rent from the records and then interwoven with shoddy stuff of their own creation, and which they offer in the market place for purchase by deluded people who do not know how worthless they are.

These caricaturists of the Christ do not know so much as the latest conclusions of the historical criticism with which they claim to be so fully acquainted.

They have not yet found out that Adolf Harnack, the corypheus of German rationalists, in his book entitled "The Date of the Acts and the Synoptic Gospels," published as far back as 1911, made such a surrender of liberalistic views that he created astonishment and consternation among many critics.

On the books of these writers, who are ignorant of the works of even the rationalistic critics, and who are far more ignorant of the Christ, ill-advised people have already spent too much money and wasted too much time. Such solemn fiction as they paint is worse than worthless. It were better for one to read "the Arabian Nights Entertainments," mistaking those Oriental tales for reliable history.

These caricatures of Christ are no more like the historic Jesus than Fisher's "Mutt" resembles the Apollo Belvidere.



This church was organized Aug. 30, 1885, with 15 members. The original building, in which Bishop John C. Keener was a regular worshipper was dedicated in Feb. 1886. The present building erected during the pastorate of Rev. J. G. Snelling, was opened May 31, 1914. Rev. H. L. Johns is pastor.

CONCERNING CONFERENCE IN MEMPHIS.

Mr. T. W. Holloman, Director for Louisiana of the International Missionary Conference, states that many of the Conferences at a long distance from Memphis will not be able to fill their quotas of delegates to that Conference. There will be room, therefore, not only for all of the official and appointed delegates in Louisiana, numbering some two hundred, more or less, but for any others in Louisiana who would like to attend that Conference. Any such others are cordially invited to attend, and if they desire to do so should send in their applications for registration, together with check for $2.50, at once to Mr. W. D. Hawkins, Director, 501 Doctors's Building, Nashville, Tenn., and should also make hotel reservations promptly.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE PRESIDING ELDERS' MEETING.

By Rev. J. L. Decell, Secretary.

The presiding elders of the Mississippi Conference met at the district parsonage in Jackson on Tuesday morning, Dec. 11, at 10:30 o'clock.

The following were present: Revs. W. A. Hays, J. T. Leggett, H. G. Hawkins, H. A. Gatlin, J. L. Sells, W. H. Lewis, and J. L. Decell.

J. T. Leggett was elected chairman; W. A. Hays, vice chairman; and J. L. Decell, secretary-treasurer, for the new Conference year.

The District Missionary Institutes were set as follows:

Jan. 8, Meridian, at East End.
Jan. 9, Newton, at Newton.
Jan. 10, Jackson, at Galloway Memorial.
Jan. 11, Vicksburg, at Crawford Street.
Jan. 15, Brookhaven, at Hazlehurst.
Jan. 16, Hattlesburg, at Main Street.
Jan. 17, Seashore, at ———.

The $35,000 Mission Special asking was distributed to the several districts:

Jackson	$6,500
Brookhaven	6,000
Meridian	5,500
Hattlesburg	5,000
Seashore	4,200
Vicksburg	4,000
Newton	3,800

The annual district conferences will all be held in April, as follows:

Seashore District, at Lumberton, April 2-3.
Brookhaven District, at Summit, April 4-5.
Jackson District, at Florence, April 9-10.
Newton District, at Carthage, April 16-17.
Vicksburg District, at Louise, April 18-19.
Hattlesburg District, at Main Street, April 23-24.
Meridian District, at Lauderdale, April 24-25.

On motion it was decided to request all the pastors to hold church conferences to elect the delegates to the district conferences not later than their rounds in March, and get the list to their presiding elders by the first of April.

Mrs. J. T. Leggett was hostess at a delicious dinner served the presiding elders at her district parsonage home.

After prayers and plans the meeting adjourned subject to the call of the chair.

FROM THE MERIDIAN DISTRICT.

By Rev. H. G. Hawkins, Presiding Elder.

The first Sunday following the session of the Mississippi Annual Conference at Philadelphia the writer took advantage of the opportunity to attend preaching in the morning at Central Church, where Rev. B. L. Sutherland was holding his first service in this pastorate. The sermon was a good one, and several new members were announced and welcomed. I love the chimes of Central. At the evening hour we heard another sermon by Rev. H. J. Moore, who was holding his second service in his new pastoral charge, Poplar Springs, Meridian. Both these pastors, as well as Rev. C. P. Jones at East End and Rev. G. G. Yeager at Seventh Avenue, were accorded hearty receptions by their congregations.

The second Sunday morning following Conference we preached in the Chalk school building at Fifth Street, on "Paul, a servant of Jesus Christ, called to be an apostle," to an appreciative audience. The splendid new church building was finished and furnished, excepting the art glass windows. These have now arrived, and Rev. W. B. Jones, pastor, has announced that the congregation will begin to use the new building on the Sunday before Christmas. The new Conference year opens auspiciously in this charge, with plans for enlarged activities in Sunday school and all departments. Also Rev. J. L. Smith and his congregation at Hawkins Memorial are working and planning. So, we are expecting great things from our Meridian Methodists this year, with its seven congregations. (With Bonita eight.)

The third Sunday after Conference was spent with the pastors of De Soto and Quitman charges, Revs. S. C. Moody and J. A. Moore, with one preaching service and quarterly conference at each place. There are many loyal people at De Soto and elsewhere on Brother Moody's charge. Crandall, a mill town, is the strongest point in financial support. The nice new brick building at Quitman is a delight; and the music is fine.

The fourth week-end after the meeting of the Annual Conference took us to Poplar Springs on the Matherville charge and to Shubuta. That was a "dinner right" we had at Poplar Springs; and Rev. J. C. Jackson, the new pastor, "went after" the Conference claims, and during the occasion secured more than two hundred dollars on these. At Shubuta Rev. W. J. Dawson, the pastor, is also Boys' Scoutmaster; and an interesting feature of the evening service was the singing by boys and girls grouped near the pulpit. At the quarterly conference it was revealed that during the past year or two the Shubuta Sunday school, Dr. A. P. Hand, superintendent, has changed its grade from thirty to ninety-five as a school of the C type. At Andrew Chapel, which is attached to the Shubuta station, a new church building is being erected. Near by is the Carmichael school, one of the largest rural high schools in all this section. It has twelve teachers, for the four classes.

No disposition to retrench has appeared anywhere in the district; but rather, to go forward. The district stewards' meeting, attended by nearly all of the preachers and district stewards, finished its regular work in less than an hour, and the remainder of the time was spent in consideration of various phases of our work. The Woman's Missionary Society of Central church furnished dinner; and in the afternoon the meeting was merged into a session of the District Board of Lay Activities. Speeches were made as follows: By Dr. J. M. Sullivan, on "Raising the Benevolences;" by Rev. J. L. Neill, on "The International Missionary Conference;" by W. M. Taylor, on "Wesley Brotherhood; by W. D. Hawkins, on "The Church Board of Lay Activities;" by Rev. B. L. Sutherland, on "Superannuate Endowment." The pastors organized for group meetings, with W. J. Dawson president, and T. E. Nicholson, secretary of the southern group; T. B. Winstead, president, and G. G. Yeager, secretary, of the northern group.

Our District Missionary Institute will be held at East End Jan. 8; and our Sunday School Institute, at Pachuta, Feb. 5.

A GREAT DAY FOR THE PREACHERS IN OKOLONA.

The preachers of the Aberdeen District met at Okolona, Thursday, Dec. 13, with Rev. T. E. Gregory, pastor-host. The sermon at 11 o'clock was preached by Rev. W. S. Selman, who gave us a very spiritual and helpful message. After the morning service the preachers were turned over to Brother Joe Herndon, who led the way to the Criechton Cafe, where a wholesome and bountiful meal was served. Thanks to Bro. Joe and any one else who might have had a part in this treat to the preachers. At the opening of the business session song No. 22, "Amazing Grace, How Sweet the Sound," was sung. All the new men in the district were enrolled as members of the Association. The secretary was instructed to send Rev. Carroll Varner a message of regret that he was sick and therefore unable to attend the meeting. Instructions further were to the end that the association accept Brother Varner's invitation to meet with him in the Tupelo church for the next meeting. Motion was made and carried to the effect that the by-laws be changed so as to include the wives of the ministers as members of the association, and it was the sense of the meeting that the wives be urged to attend the meetings. The pastors were urged to write to the pastor-host each time immediately after receiving the program, telling him whether or not they will attend the meeting, in order to make entertainment easier. The program was exceedingly interesting and I am sorry space does not justify a comment on each speaker. We are helped by these meetings mutually, and we hope that the boys who missed this one will begin now to make preparations to meet with us in Tupelo in January.

R. T. HOLLINGSWORTH, Secretary.

FROM ELIZABETH, LA.

By Rev. H. B. Hines, Pastor.

Those who are acquainted with parsonage life know that it is filled with sentiments which run too deep for expression. And I know of no class of readers that can appreciate a reminder of these sentiments more than the readers of the Advocate. Therefore, the offering of this little story:

Last night as we answered a knock at the door we were greeted by a large crowd of friends who advanced with smiles and jokes as they sought the dining room table to deposit the many choice articles which go to make up a complete "pounding." These articles consisted of everything from a dressed up turkey, docile and well trained in acting his part, strutting his hat and jacket around, bowing polite obedience to the occasion as he acted the spirit of the poem which consigned him to a Christmas dinner in the parsonage, to the most delicious drinks of the day as found in the "Finke Special" (coffee), and in the "Hines Special"—a choice packing of sea foods. But the greatest value of this happy occasion was the fine spirit of the people—that spirit that brought them together in this loving expression of their tender regard for God's kingdom and his servants. Such a beautiful spirit must cast its fragrance upon the glories of eternity as well as the glories of time. I have often thought how dreadful it would be to be sent back to a people who did not wish your return, but as we meet this expression on our return for this our third year together I feel that we are in position to build higher, deeper and more gloriously the saving influences of God's kingdom in the hearts of men as we continue our walk together in the Master's spirit. It has been our good fortune to be assigned from time to time to a good people who later became our good friends, and to be returned to those who have been tried and found true is a delight to the heart of a pastor, and my prayer is that our work this year with the good people of Elizabeth may be just what God would have it be. Let these advantage points be tokens of advancement in the realm of God. We count all lost except that spiritual gain which brings us more fully into that great life with God. A people filled with God's loving grace can help the pastor show forth the truth and beauty of our salvation in Christ.

I hope that each pastor is beginning the new year with the people of his heart, and that it may be the most gracious year, individually and generally, that has ever been realized in God's kingdom among men.

Testifying to the value of Methodist work among the White Russian students, a White Russian leader declares the whole moral tone of the high school at Radoszkowicze has been raised by the young people from the Methodist hostel.

The Southern Methodist Church is carrying on missionary work among six of the leading Indian tribes of Oklahoma—Choctaws, Chickasaws, Creeks, Seminoles, Euchees, and Kiowas. The future for work among the Indians was never brighter.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. J. B. Grambling, newly-appointed pastor at Hammond, La., and Mrs. Grambling sent out a very beautiful Christmas message.

We regret to learn that Mrs. W. W. Holmes has recently been ill with influenza. Improvements have heen made upo the parsonage at Alexandria.

A beautiful pageant was given at the MacDonnell School at Houma, La., on Dec. 21. Miss Ella Keener Hooper is the principal of the school.

We note from The Methodist Messenger that Mrs. H. T. Carley and Miss Kling Carley on December 16 placed their membership in the First Methodist Church, Shreveport.

A bazaar recently given by the Woman's Missionary Society of the Methodist church in Grenada, Miss., was very successful—the sum of $236.06 was realized and the same will be applied to the new church fund.

We regret to learn that Dr. and Mrs. Winfield, of Brookhaven, Miss., suffered recently from attacks of influenza while in Texas attending the meeting of the Southern Association of Colleges in Dallas.

Rev. L. W. Cain, presiding elder, in a letter to the editor, states that almost all the pastors and people in the Baton Rouge District are pleased with the appointments for that district and that the work is starting off well.

Mrs. H. P. Dakin, a member of our church at Gulfport, called at the Advocate office Wednesday to get information concerning a Sunday school book she desired to purchase. Mrs. Dakin has been a reader of the Advocate for many years.

The Southern Methodist Press Association, representing twenty-two periodicals of our church, will meet at the Peabody Hotel in Memphis on January 1 at 5 p.m. Dr. A. C. Millar is president of the association, and Dr. M. E. Lazenby is secretary.

Mrs. Mary B. Abney, Pioneer, La., provides a fine example unto others—not only sends a check to renew her own subscription but also includes the amount of another subscription which she asks us to give to some one we know who will appreciate it, but is unable to pay for it.

The Southern Baptists have been engaged in a campaign to raise $2,000,000 as a Christmas offering—the proceeds to be applied toward liquidation of the indebtedness of the Home and Foreign Mission Boards and other institutions. The results are of course not known at this time.

At the last session of the Louisiana Conference Rev. C. B. Powell was appointed to Campti. Brother Powell served this charge some years ago, and during that time he was assisted in a meeting by Rev. W. R. Harvell, who will be his presiding elder during his second pastorate at Campti.

Rev. and Mrs. George A. LaGrange were visitors at the Advocate office on Wednesday of last week. Brother LaGrange has been serving in the French Mission field; making his home at Lockport, La. At the recent session of the Louisiana Conference he was appointed to the Lottie charge.

The General Hospital Board and the Hospital Association of our church will meet in New Orleans, April 14-16, 1929. Dr. Jarrell, General Secretary of the Hospital Board, recently stopped off in New Orleans to inquire into hotel accommodations. The new hotel, The Jung, has been selected as headquarters during the hospital meeting.

Dr. A. S. Lutz, presiding elder of the Alexandria District, called at the Advocate office on Wednesday of last week. He was on his way to the "Coast" to attend a meeting of the joint commission appointed by the Alabama, the Louisiana, the Mississippi Conferences to make some disposition of the Seashore Camp Ground School property at Biloxi.

Rev. W. L. Doss, Jr., presiding elder of the New Orleans District, preached at Franklin, La., on Dec. 16. He reports that the church there, under the pastorate of Rev. J. A. McCormack, is in a thriving condition. The pastor's salary has been raised in the amount of $400 and the stewards have determined that the Conference assessments shall be paid in full.

Rev. W. R. Harvell, presiding elder of the Minden District, sends in his first round of Quarterly Conferences, but it reaches us too late to carry in full in this issue. We are, therefore, giving a partial list as follows: Minden Circuit, at Pine Grove, Dec. 30, 11 a.m.; Minden, Dec. 30, 7 p.m.; Winnfield Circuit, at Joyce, Jan. 6, 11 a.m., and Winnfield, Jan. 6, 7 p.m.

Rev. B. H. Andrews, of the Houma and French Mission charge, went to Lockport on last Saturday to see about the purchase of a parsonage there for the use of the junior preacher who will supply that part of the charge. The General Board of Missions, that is aiding so generously in the work of this section, will provide the funds for the purchase of the building.

Rev. S. L. Pope, writing from Aberdeen, Miss., says: "We have had a happy start with these gracious people; they have been more than kind and more than considerate to the new preacher and his wife." We are very appreciative of the fact that Brother Pope writes for the list of subscribers from Aberdeen, and states that he expects to work for the Advocate this year.

The thesis of Rev. Robert A. Cross, Jr., member of the Louisiana Conference under appointment as student at Emory, will soon be completed. The subject chosen, "The History of Methodism in New Orleans," has doubtless given Brother Cross a large and interesting field of research. The thesis will contain about 10,000 words and will be arranged in five chapters.

During the early part of the month a beautiful recital was given by the "Climbers' Club" in the Methodist church in Brookhaven, Miss. Mmes. E. S. Bowlus, Lena D. Moreton, A. E. Moreton, Sr., Christine Peterson, L. N. Whittington and George Gulley were the hostesses for the occasion. Dr. A. F. Watkins led the prayer, and Mrs. S. A. Walker, the president, presided. A very fine program was given.

The Southern Reporter, Sardis, Mississippi, of recent date, gives the following: "A charming group of young ladies from Grenada College, under escort of President J. R. Countiss, came up from Grenada, and at the high school auditorium afforded a most enjoyable evening to a fair-sized audience, when they presented the highly amusing comedy, "The Show Off." The play was given under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society.

On Tuesday night of last week Mr. C. Milton Chalmers, son of the publisher and a member of the Advocate force, was installed as master of George Washington Lodge No. 65, F. and A. M., one of the oldest and strongest lodges in New Orleans. Mr. Chalmers is a "certificate Mason," having two or three years ago received a certificate of his proficiency—being "letter perfect" in the Masonic work. He will make a good master.

Miss Clara Chalmers arrived in New Orleans on Saturday of last week to spend the holidays with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. O. Chalmers. Miss Chalmers, during furlough, has been in Scarritt College where she has just completed her work for an A.M. degree, which will, however, not be conferred until the commencement in June. Miss Chalmers will return the early part of January to Matanzas, Cuba, to resume her important duties as president of our Colegio Irene Toland.

Rev. E. D. Hutchinson and family moved to Porterville, Miss., on the night of Nov. 22. Shortly after their arrival the good people of the town began "pounding" them and have not ceased yet. The parsonage at Porterville has never been finished on the inside, but arrangements have been made to complete the work this year. Already material has been purchased and some of the work has been done. In addition to this work the ladies of the church will make some valuable additions to the furnishings of the parsonage.

Rev. S. A. Brown, our pastor at Shaw, Miss., has sent out a very good Christmas and New Year message. The objectives suggested for the year are worthy of note—"A most satisfying and joyful religious experience. A more religious atmosphere in our town. An irresistible appeal to the lost among us. All financial obligations met promptly. All services of the church attended regularly." Brother Brown wrote that he had received sample copies of the Advocate and leaflets, and expected to begin a campaign for Advocate subscribers on last Sunday.

Through the Hon. Haney B. Conner, Louisiana State Treasurer, who was in the city on Wednesday of last week, we learn that the great choir of First Methodist Church, Baton Rouge, with Mr. McEuen as director, gave a beautiful Christmas Cantata on Sunday evening, Dec. 16. They were expected to give the cantata on Wednesday evening of last week at Jackson, La., and were also to go to Hammond, La., at an early date. Mr. Conner, Past Grand Master of Louisiana, F. and A. M., is a member of this fine choir of thirty voices, and also a member of the First Methodist Church in Louisiana's capital city.

Rev. H. L. Daniels, pastor at Long Beach, Miss., reports that a Woman's Missionary Society was recently formed at Pass Christian with a charter membership of fourteen. Rev. J. L. Sells, presiding elder of the Seashore District, and the pastor were present, leading in the devotional service and assisting in the organization. Mrs. T. D. Ford, District Secretary of the Woman's Missionary Society, gave an interesting talk upon missionary work. The following were elected as officers: Mrs. Ann Barksdale, president; Mrs. Frank French, vice president; Mrs. C. F. Gunn, secretary; Mrs. W. Jones, treasurer; Mrs. J. O. Cresap, superintendent of study and publicity; Mrs. W. D. Robinson, superintendent of local work.

Miss Helen Black, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Black, of Jefferson Parish, has been ill several days with the prevailing influenza. Miss Black has been feeling very sad during her illness, but it was not the fact that she was sick that made her sad. She attends the Carrollton Avenue Sunday School, where she and her parents are members. Nearly ten years ago when Helen attended the McDonoghville Sunday school she made an agreement with four other girls that they would attend Sunday school regularly and see who could make the best record. Miss Helen's record is the longest, but it has at last been broken, since she could not go to Sunday school last Sunday. Her known record stands at ten years and fifty weeks—we say her known record because it dates from the agreement made with the other four girls, but there is no telling how long a record she would have for unbroken Sunday school attendance if she had counted all of the Sundays she attended before the pact was made. Can you beat it?

MEETING OF THE SARDIS DISTRICT MINISTERIAL ASSOCIATION.

The December meeting of the Sardis District Ministerial Association met at Fredonia church on the Tyro charge Dec. 11. Thirteen preachers were present, together with a number of the people of the local church. Rev. C. T. Floyd, the president, presided over the meeting.

The sermon of the day was preached by Rev. A. J. Henry, of Courtland. His theme was "Burden Bearing," and every one present was greatly helped by the message and fully agreed that a more appropriate message could not have been given. It was full of meat and bread for the soul, richly drawn from the Word of God and from human experience.

The program of the day called for a discussion of the work of the Holy Spirit. "The Holy Spirit as Related to the Parent, Preacher and Teacher" was discussed by Rev. T. M. Bradley. "The Holy Spirit and Agent of Salvation," by Revs. G. A. Baker and H. R. McKee, and "The Holy Spirit in Prayer," by Rev. R. G. Lord. These discussions were helpful and inspirational.

Rev. T. M. Bradley, the presiding elder, led in a round table discussion of the plans for the new Conference year.

The following officers for the next year were elected: R. G. Lord, president, and K. S. L. Cooke, secretary-treasurer.

Owing to the fact that the District Missionary Institute will be held at Como on the date of the next regular meeting of the Association, or very near to that date, it was decided to pretermit the January meeting. The place and program of the February meeting will be announced at the Missionary Institute.

The good people of Fredonia church and Tyro charge were very generous in their hospitality and copious in the serving of dinner, for which a vote of thanks was given. We hope to have the pleasure of meeting there again.

R. G. LORD, Acting Secretary.

NOTICE TO FORMER PASTORS OF SANDY HOOK CHURCH.

The new Saudy Hook church, which was built during Brother W. C. Bagget's administration, will have its formal opening the second Sunday in January, 1929. This church is a beauty and one of the best country churches that I have any knowledge of, and Brother Bagget and the congregation are to be congratulated. It is the desire of the congregation that all former pastors be present and participate in this service. Brother J. Loyd Decell, our presiding elder, will preach the sermon. Very truly,

B. W. LEWIS.

Foxworth, Miss., Dec. 18, 1928.

COLLEGE OF BISHOPS—FALL MEETING.

By Bishop John M. Moore, Secretary.

The College of Bishops met in Dallas, Texas, December 13-15, 1928. The opening session began on Thursday afternoon and the closing session was held on Saturday afternoon. All the Bishops were present. The Bishops preached on Sunday in various Methodist churches.

The social features of the meeting were more numerous than usual. The Bishops in a body attended the convocation exercises of Southern Methodist University Friday noon. They were all presented personally to the assembled students and Bishop Candler, Bishop Ainsworth and Bishop Mouzon made brief addresses. Following these exercises they were the guests at luncheon of the University and met there all the deans of the University and the members of the faculty of the School of Theology. On Friday evening they were the guests of the stewards of First Methodist Church at dinner. All the Bishops were called upon for short addresses. However, Bishop Denny was the chief spokesman for them. Mr. J. T. Owens, chairman, Board of Stewards, and Dr. Carl C. Gregory, the pastor, spoke for the church, Mr. Everett S. Owens for the Methodists of Dallas. During their stay in Dallas they were the guests of the First Methodist Church at the Adolphus Hotel.

On Saturday the Bishops and all the Dallas Methodist pastors were guests at luncheon of the Methodist Hospital of which Dr. J. H. Groseclose is the superintendent. All the guests were delighted with the Hospital and its equipment. On Saturday evening the Bishops were the guests at dinner of the Secretary and Mrs. Moore. All these were delightful occasions.

Three Bishops had decisions of law to present to the College. Bishop W. F. McMurry at the Southwest Missouri Conference was asked:

"An Annual Conference passed the character of a preacher on Friday. Was it lawful for that Conference to locate him for unacceptability, inefficiency or secularity on Sunday following without having reconsidered the passage of his character?"

His answer was: "It was."

He was asked, "Is it lawful for an Annual Conference to locate a preacher for unacceptability, inefficieucy or secularity, three years after he has served his last charge, his character having been passed three times by his Annual Conference?"

He answered, "It is."

The questions were approved and this statement made by the College: "It is lawful for an Annual Conference to locate a preacher for unacceptability, inefficiency, or secularity at any time, the Conference being the judge of the sultability of the preacher for the itinerant ministry."

Bishop Boaz at the East Oklahoma Conference was asked:

1. "If three-fourths of one half of the Trustees of Oklahoma City University are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, will this satisfy the requirements of our law that three-fourths of the trustees of our Schools, Colleges and Universities, shall at all times be members of our Church?"

2. "Can Oklahoma City University lawfully be given financial support and recognition when only eighteen out of forty-one trustees are, or can be, members of our church?"

3. "If fourteen out of forty-one trustees of Oklahoma City University under the stipulation proposed are members of our church, will this satisfy the requirements of our law that three-fourths, etc.?"

4. "Is it lawful under the law of our church for Oklahoma City University to receive $50,000.00 as proposed in the 'stipulation' or other financial support or recognition from our church so long as only 14 out of 41 trustees are members of our church?"

Bishop Boaz answered each question in the affirmative stating he did so in view of the action taken hy the General Board of Education in giving concurrence in the joint ownership and control of the Oklahoma City University and in further consideration of the decision of the Committee on Appeals which in its answer to the question, "Has the Board of Education authority under the law of our church to take this action?" replied, "Yes."

The College of Bishops made this statement: "The questions presented to the Bishop presiding in the East Oklahoma Conference did not properly come before him for decision in view of previous determination of the issues of this case by the Committee on Appeals as provided in paragraph 312 in the Discipline, and hence does not now come for review to this College.

Bishop Denny decided the question of law, which was presented by the Board of Lay Activities but which arose in the Baltimore Conference, because the case was concrete. The question is as follows:

"When the General Conference has placed an assessment upon the church for all the various general interests as set forth in paragraph 330, of the Discipline, and when this amount has been apportioned to the several Annual Conferences in accordance with the provisions of paragraph 331, of the Discipline, and when funds have been raised by the Conferences on account of these 'General Interests,' then is an Annual Conference, or its Treasurer, authorized under the law to withhold from the treasurers of the several interests included in the assessments any part of the amount so raised in the Annual Conference? If he is authorized to make any deductions before distributing to treasurers of these General Interests, what amounts may he deduct and for what purposes?"

The answer: "The special items submitted in the case for my decision are 'Printing Minutes,' 'Treasurer's Expenses,' 'Conference Secretary for space in Minutes,' 'Premium on Treasurer's Bond,' 'Printing, Postage and Stationery.' If the interests concerned derive benefit from these items and no special collection be taken in the Conferences to meet these expenses then the interests concerned must in equity bear their reasonable and proportionate part of the cost. It is but reasonable to suppose that the Commission on Budget includes these necessary expenses in the total amount assessed on the church, consequently it is legal for the Conference Treasurer, 'subject to approval of Conference,' (Par. 335) in dealing with the report of Conference Commission on Budget to pay these expenses, a practice which conforms to long established usage, and in the Baltimore Conference by the instruction in open Conference by Bishop Wilson."

Bishop William F. Anderson, the Chairman of Commission appointed by the last General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, on Revision of the Hymnal and the Psalter, advised the College of Bishops that his General Conference stipulated, "Provided, however, that said Commission shall not begin active work of revision unless and until the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, shall take proper measure to join in such revision." The College expressed its appreciation of the spirit of the Methodist Episcopal Church and instructed the Secretary to inform Bishop Anderson that this invitation to join in his Revision would be duly presented to our General Conference in 1930.

A committee composed of Bishops Moore, Beauchamp and DuBose was appointed to prepare a statement to the church on various matters and to be reviewed by the Bishops in an adjourned session in Memphis during the Missionary Conference.

On Saturday afternoon a Memorial Session was held in honor of Bishop Eugene R. Hendrix and Bishop James E. Dickey. Bishop McMurry read the memoir of Bishop Hendrix and Bishop Candler gave the memoir on Bishop Dickey. Tributes were paid to these men by various members of the College of Bishops.

The time for the next regular annual meeting was set for May 3, 1929, in Nashville, Tenn.

During this delightful meeting Bishop Edwin D. Mouzon of Charlotte, N. C., was the presiding Bishop. Under the rules of the College the presidency would go to John M. Moore, but because of his being the Secretary he waived the presidency. Bishop W. F. McMurry of St. Louis becomes the Presiding Bishop to hold office to the close of the next regular annual meeting in May MISSIONS IN THE CHURCH.

The Conference Missionary Secretaries of all the Annual Conferences assembled in Nashville on Dec. 11 and 12. In reviewing the missionary situation in the church the group adopted the following resolutions presented by the Findings Committee:

1. It is our profound conviction that our greatest need is spiritual. Nothing can take the place of genuine Christian experience as the motive power for all religious activity and liberality. Everything else is secondary. We, therefore, stress the supreme importance of a church-wide revival of religion, of the New Testament type, which will bring our people into conscious fellowship with the risen Christ through the new birth, in which old things shall pass away, and all things become new. A revival in which the living Christ shall be exalted in the experience of the whole church, resulting in holiness of life and a fellowship in Jesus that is indescribably precious, and which will make the church an irresistible magnet to the sad and sinful souls of men. Back of all methods that could be mentioned lies the essential condition of united, persistent, importunate prayer, with genuine humiliation and repentance. We are glad that our study book for this year, "The Methodist Evangel," brings to our people in most forceful and effective manner the fundamental place of evangelism in the life of Methodism. Hopeful indications of revival are already appearing. Let our ministry unceasingly continue to present this need to our people, and to wrestle in secret prayer with God until the clouds break in blessing upon our heads.

2. Larger payments to the Maintenance Fund are absolutely necessary if our missionary program is to go forward. Despite some slight falling off in payments this year as compared with the previous year, we are convinced of the soundness of the general plan formulated by the General Conference, and especially the policy of Missionary Cultivation, and register our belief that the only hope for a sound missionary conviction in the minds of our people, is through missionary education. Therefore, the cultivation policy should be earnestly pressed, and carried to every charge. To this end a well planned and successfully conducted Missionary Institute in each district with all of the pastors and leading laymen in attendance, is vitally important. The presiding elder is the key man in his district, and the Conference Missionary Secretary must secure his whole-hearted co-operation if possible. Failure to make the plan clear in every detail at the Institute, or failure to get the proper attendance, makes a measure of failure in that district inevitable, as experience has amply demonstrated. Fixing of adequate minimum goals for each charge, if possible on a voluntary basis, is necessary to the best results. The presiding elder, if given the goal for the district, can usually work out the best allotment. The Every-Member Canvass should be emphasized for every charge. Failure to give any member of the church an opportunity to contribute does that member a grave injustice.

3. Earnest effort must be made to secure full payment of the regular benevolent collections. We lose any effective gains by the Maintenance Fund if we decline in payment on the assessment. Each Conference Missionary Secretary can give aid toward securing payment in full of the regular assessments, by making it clear in the Institutes that there is no conflict between the assessment and the Maintenance Fund, but that the Maintenance Fund simply removes the necessity for a greatly increased assessment.

4. The Missionary Voice is a powerful and effective factor in our scheme of missionary cultivation. Its growing circulation is a matter for profound satisfaction. We congratulate the editors and management. The plan for still further increasing the subscription list of the Voice should be given sufficient place and emphasis in each Institute.

THE EQUATOR AND THE CONGO.

By O. E. Goddard, D.D.

For more than a month I have been on or near the equator and have more than a month yet during which time I shall not be far from the equator. I had had experiences crossing the equator and sojourning in the torrid zone. In Cuba I felt the depressing and enervating influence of a tropical sun. Hence, when our ship approached the equator about Sept. 7, and I knew that we would land at the mouth of the Congo only a few degrees south of the equator and that my journey up the Congo would be east, sometimes south and sometimes north and sometimes on the equator, I rather dreaded the thought of living for two months on or very near the equator.

But I have been pleasantly surprised. The temperature during the day has not exceeded 90, and at night drops to 70 or lower. The days and nights are of equal duration. It gets dark uniformly at 6 p. m. and light at 6 a. m. I'm told also that there is no perceptible difference in temperature between July and January.

The newcomer gets plenty of advice and warnings from the old-timers. Old-timers, be they missionaries, merchants or governmental officials, seem to be possessed of a mania to tell newcomers of the dangers in this tropical climate. I was warned, exhorted, and commended not to be found without my helmet on during the day. (The helmet is a big cork hat.) One very cloudy day when I first arrived I started to step out with only a cap on, when a chorus of voices sang out warning to me to retreat. They proceeded to tell me of a man about my age who came out at that same place without a helmet and fell dead before he had walked twenty steps. They rubbed this in on me so thoroughly that I got afraid to take off my helmet to go to bed. I tried to keep mine on in bed but could not.

All the old-timers I met had stories galore to tell me of encounters with lions, leopards, pithon, elephants, crocodiles, etc., etc. Then came stories of the tsetse fly, the horrible effects of the sleeping sickness caused by the bite of the tsetse fly. Before all, between all, over all, under all, and after all are the stories of mosquitoes and malaria. Day after day the question was—"Have you taken your quinine to-day?" I have taken from five to ten grains daily since I came into equatorial regions. I thought it better to have quinine buzzing in my ears than to have malaria bugs boiling in my blood. One is always amazed that any one lives long out here, yet I met missionaries who have spent more than forty years in this inhospitable climate. Seriously, the death rate among foreigners here is appalling. I have not been alarmed nor do I take seriously all the stories I hear, but they have been quite sufficient to make me cautious.

Up the Congo.

Navigating the Congo is an interesting experience. Many boats ply up and down the Congo. The Congo and its tributaries drain a vast country. Its northern branches rise seven or eight degrees north of the equator, its southern branches rise twelve degrees south of the equator. From the headwaters to the mouth is more than two thousand miles, the Congo draining a territory nearly two thousand miles square.

The journey from the mouth to our mission on the "Texas" is less than a thousand miles. But the "Texas" could not take all our party so Miss Case, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Ayres, Hubert Degosserie and I took the big government boat, "The Kigowa," which makes the northern route on the main river. We traveled about two thousand miles before we reached our station at Tunda. All these boats burn wood. There is no coal in this country.

The journey up the river was made more interesting by the frequent stops at "wood stations" to take on fuel. This gave us an opportunity to see many villages along the banks of the Congo. One must get some conception of the village to understand African life. Think of a country that looks like a great unbroken forest. Half hiding here and there are clusters of native huts, walls of mud with bamboo for framework and grass roofs. Sometimes one street with huts facing each other, others around a bigger house, the chief's house. The chief is the center of this primitive civilization. He holds everything for the community. He is rated rich or poor according to the number of wives he owns. If they number above twenty-five he is considered rather opulent, if only a few he is poor. The men build the huts, hunt and fish, while the women cultivate the gardens.

Life is extremely simple, clothing very scant, no shoes, no hats, only a cloth for the center of the body. Many small children and some adults go in their birthday attire all the year through. It does not cost them a penny to build a house, only a few days' work. The tools used for farming are a hoe and a knife. The men need an ax for cutting trees and an adz for hewing out canoes. So life to the native on the equator is simple, inexpensive, meager. They make bread from roots. They eat such vegetables as they raise. Bananas and other tropical fruits abound. Sometimes they get meat or fish. The foreigner who lives here should eat lightly, sleep plentifully, never get in a hurry, never get impatient and never, no never, get mad.

One of our foreigners asked a native how they could eat the decomposing fish that smell so horribly. He answered: "White man, we don't eat the smell, we eat the meat."

For the first few days on the lower Congo we had mountains on either side, some bleak and barren, then others partly covered by forests. Then we came to a level country for a thousand miles where the Congo is indefinitely wide. Thousands of islands covered with luxuriant tropical green are in evidence everywhere. It is often eight or more miles from mainland to mainland, but islands abound, and one rarely sees from bank to bank. The Congo is the second largest river in the world. It makes the "Father of Waters" look small. Some of the tributaries that empty into the main river are more than a mile wide. Travelers tell of seeing crocodiles, hippos and serpents in these waters, and leopards and lions and monkeys on the shore, but we saw nothing of the kind. In fact, the absence of animal life in the midst of such a superabundance of vegetable life seemed strange to me. The grasses never die from frost and the verdure of the trees never turns brown from approaching winter. What a paradise for livestock? No, the pestiferous tsetse fly makes life impossible for cattle. How much the good cow is needed to produce milk for children and adults, but alas, canned milk with a small amount of goat milk is all that is available for foreigners or native.

Our Mission.

No doubt the sainted Lambuth and Gilbert were led of God in planting our mission. Who can read the thrilling story and doubt the hand of God in it all? We have never been short on volunteers for Africa. Devoted men and women, well equipped in head and heart and hand, have been saying, "Here am I, send me." We have found the climate quite hard on many of our missionaries. A goodly number have had to abandon the field on account of ill health, and one, Dr. William Hamilton Moore, sleeps beneath the soil of the "Dark Continent." Miss Case and I are hunting a "resort" somewhere in Africa to which our missionaries may go for rest and recuperation between furloughs.

We must continue to enlarge our work. Providence has manifestly laid some of the responsibility for converting Africa upon the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. We must not be unfaithful to this trust. We have not been. We shall not be.

The Home Circle.

THIS, TOO, SHALL PASS AWAY.

A mighty monarch in the days of old
Made offer of high honor, wealth and gold,
To one who should produce in form concise
A motto for his guidance, terse, yet wise—
A precept, soothing in his hours forlorn,
Yet one that in his prosperous days would warn.
Many the maxims sent the king, men say.
The one he chose: "This, too, shall pass away."
Oh, jewel sentence from the mine of truth!
What riches it contains for age and youth!
No stately epic, measured and sublime,
So comforts, or so counsels, for all time
As these few words, Go write them on
The truest wisdom in a happy mind.
He who desponds, his Maker's judgment mocks;
The gloomy Christian is a paradox.
Only the sunny soul respects its God;
Since life is short, we need to make it broad;
Since life is brief, we need to make it bright.
Then keep the old king's motto well in sight,
And let its meaning permeate each day,
Whatever comes, "This, too, shall pass away."

FIRST AID TO A BUTTERFLY.

Early one morning not long ago, on the way to my place of business, I glanced out of the window of my automobile and saw a very beautiful butterfly in a little pool of water in the middle of the roadway, its wings so heavy with moisture and dirt that it could not fly, although it was making an effort to do so. I stopped my car, and, stepping out, very carefully picked up the brilliantly colored insect, and putting it on a piece of soft paper, placed it on the cushion of the rear seat of the car, where the warm rays of the sun could fall directly upon it.

When I reached the place where I was to be employed during the day I closed the windows of the car so that the heat from the sun might dry off the wet, muddy wings of the captive butterfly. Several times during the morning I went out to see if it showed any signs of activity, and about noontime I was made very happy on looking through the window, to see that it was flying around as lively as ever. I opened the door and windows of the car, and immediately the little beauty flew out into the fresh air and sunshine, once more to enjoy its life of freedom, among the sweet flowers and grasses of the nearby meadows.—Our Dumb Animals.

CHILDREN OF SUGAR LAND.

By Helen Johnson.

The children of Havana have good reason to be proud of their city. It is the capital of an island so beautiful that it is often called "the Pearl of the Antilles." This island of Cuba belongs to the group named the Greater Antilles, which, with the Lesser Antilles and the Bahama Islands, make up the West Indies. They lie south and southeast of Florida, and Cuba curves about north of the Caribbean Sea, the old Spanish Main of pirate tales.

In spite of its beauty, Havana was once one of the dirtiest cities of the New World. The United States forces, however, started to clean it when they occupied the island for a little while after the Spanish-American War, and the work has been kept up.

As the climate of Cuba is very warm, the children play a great deal in the fresh air. They are not outside their homes any more than American children; indeed, among the older families of the island little girls are not allowed to be out much alone. But the outdoor comes into the house to the children. Many of the windows have gratings of beautifully wrought iron or carved wood instead of glass, so that the air may blow through freely. The homes of all who can afford it are built about a little courtyard, called the patio, with a fountain splashing in the center and shrubs and flowers growing all about. Cubans are fond of birds, and often keep parrots and many caged canaries in the patio. Families gather there, says Ford Faniford in "Cuba," to play guitars and mandolins, for they are fond of music, too.

The rooms have high ceilings, and are paved with blocks of stone or marble if the owners can afford these materials. The furniture in the big houses of the old Cuban and Spanish families is large and heavy, but never overcrowded, so the rooms look cool and comfortable.

In the country outside Havana are great plantations of sugar, bananas and coffee. Cuba raises immense quantities of sugar cane, and ships most of the juice from the crushed stems to the United States and Great Britain to be refined into the fine, white crystals which we know.

The coffee plantations are like huge gardens. The trees on which the coffee berries grow are trimmed low to make picking easier. The fruit, inside of which the coffee berry nestles, looks like a cherry, and changes from green through scarlet to purple. The trees bear fruit and blossoms at the same time, so that the brilliant little globes shine out from clouds of fragrant, snowy flowers. As coffee trees need to be sheltered from the hottest sun, the fields are planted with taller trees to protect them—bananas, pomegranites, mangoes, or oranges.—Queen's Gardens.

THE CHANGE IN SETSUKO.

Pale little Setsuko sat very still in her new chair and timidly listened to what her teacher was saying, her eyes growing wider and wider every minute. She had never heard anything at all like it before.

"And so, because Christmas is Jesus' birthday, we celebrate it by trying to help other people," the pleasant voice went on. "Do any of you know Jesus?"

At that all around the circle black eyes twinkled and little hands were eagerly lifted. "I know him! I know him!" answered a chorus of voices.

Setsuko didn't join them, because she had never come to kindergarten before and knew nothing at all of the Man about whom the teacher spoke. She began to wonder who he could be.

"And now what shall we sing?" the teacher asked.

"'Jesus was a little child,' please," said a funny little boy in the seat next to Setsuko.

Everybody seemed glad at that. The helper sat down at a queer black box with white things on it, and made some music come out. The funny boy didn't seem to know the words very well—perhaps he was rather new, too—but he sang lustily, keeping a safe distance behind the others, so as to catch the words from them.

"Let's sing 'Jesus loves me' now," said the teacher. "You know the words of this, Taro Chan, so see if you can keep right with the rest of us. It sounds better that way."

But even then Setsuko could understand only a little of what the song was about; for her funny neighbor, anxious lest he be left behind, rushed a line ahead of everybody else. Still she caught some of the words, and they were very strange and very interesting.

Gradually the hours wore by. Setsuko watched everything that happened and did what the teacher told her, but she never said a word. She wondered how Taro Chan could dare to cry as he did. Of course it was very strange that the teacher wouldn't let him have his nurse right with him all the time if he wanted her, and queer, too, that he had to do what she said even when he didn't want to. But still Setsuko would not have dared to cry in such a place as kindergarten.

Later on, when Taro Chan had stopped wailing, he was allowed to come back into the circle beside her.

"I am not going to cry any more," he confided. "It isn't nice to cry; teacher says it doesn't please Jesus."

But shy, frightened little Setsuko said never a word and only wondered again who Jesus was.

At home, when bedtime came that night, she told her mother; but mother did not know about him either.

"Now that you have begun to go to kindergarten, and have grown to be such a big girl, you will not mind if I carry the light away, will you?" she said, after the story of the day's happenings was ended.

"O no, no! Don't do it!" screamed Setsuko. "Don't do that; I am so afraid of the dark!"

"There, there, never mind," said her mother quickly; "I'll leave the light."

"Poor child!" sighed her mother when, after a long, long time, the sobs had quieted down into deep-drawn breaths and Setsuko slept. "Do you suppose she ever will be strong and rosy-cheeked and unafraid, like other children?"

"Perhaps the kindergarten will help her," said the grandmother, but secretly she shook her head. "Setsuko was born on an evil day," she muttered. "Nothing can make her like other girls."

But the grandmother was mistaken. From the very beginning Setsuko told wonderful tales of what was done in the kindergarten—of the songs about birds and soldiers and sunshine and harvest and the Man named Jesus; of the Mother Goose rhymes and the dances and the games that were played. After a little while she brought home the folded boats and the colored pictures she had made, and showed them shyly. One day mother heard her humming the music of "London Bridge" under her breath, and a month or so later she joined a group of children next door and played "Oats, peas, beans, and barley grow" as if she had been playing games all her life. When spring came she begged to join the special party from the kindergarten which was going to the zoo in a special trolley car.

Grandmother looked surprised enough. "Why, she is not afraid of the animals any more, is she? And I do believe her cheeks are as rosy as even Taro Chan's when she gets excited," she said to mother after Setsuko had bowed low and gone out of the room on dancing feet which wouldn't quite walk soberly.

But the biggest proof that Setsuko was exactly like other children, after all, came in the fall, when she had been in kindergarten a whole year. By this time she was going to Sunday school, too, and even father and mother had begun to go to the kindergarten teacher's church.

Mother had seen her all comfortably rolled up in her quilt, on the floor, and was just starting out of the room when a sleepy little voice said: "I don't want the light any more, mother. Please take it away."

Mother could hardly believe her ears.

But Setsuko added simply: "You see, Jesus does not sleep, and he keeps watch all night long; so I don't need a light any longer."

"Well, well! Well, well!" said grandmother when she learned about it. "I would not know that she was the same child. I wish I had some more grandchildren to send to the Imadegawa Kindergarten."—Selected.

YOU MAY COUNT THAT DAY.

If you sit down at set of sun
And count the acts that you have done,
And, counting find
One self-denying deed, one word
That eased the heart of him who heard;
One glance most kind,
That fell like sunshine where it went—
Then you may count that day well spent.

But if, through all the livelong day,
You've cheered no heart, by yea or nay—
If, through it all
You've nothing done that you can trace
That brought the sunshine to one face—
No act most small
That helped some soul and nothing cost—
Then count that day as worse than lost.

ON TO MEMPHIS.

The International Missionary Conference to be held in the city of Memphis on Jan. 1-3, 1929, in the great municipal auditorium of the city, is limited in attendance to 5,000 persons—the official delegates selected because of their official position in the church, and the appointed delegates—those named by the Annual Conference and appointed by the district directors, students and teachers from colleges and universities, delegates at large and the 500 Home Guards of Memphis. Each one of these delegates should regard it as a priceless privilege to have the opportunity of attending this great Conference and should make every effort to be present.

It will be the purpose of the Conference to consider the problems of world evangelization. The purpose will be wholly spiritual. Promotional programs and financial plans will not be discussed. The general theme of all the addresses will be "The Missionary Message and Motive for This Generation." During the Conference the following will be heard: Bishops Candler, Darlington, Ainsworth, Cannon, Beauchamp, Hay and Boaz; President Y. C. Yang, of Soochow University, China; Director Wladislaw Dropiowski, of Poland; Rev. Joseph Dobes, of Czechoslovakia; Dr. Andres Osuna, of Mexico; Dr. E. Stanley Jones, of India; Dr. Ralph E. Diffendorfer, Secretary of the Board of Foreign Missions of the Methodist Episcopal Church, New York; Dr. James Endicott, of Canada, Moderator of the United Church of Canada and General Secretary of its Board of Missions, and Dr. William T. Schell, of New York, Secretary of the Board of Foreign Missions of the Presbyterian Church, U. S. A.

It is to be earnestly hoped that a large number from our patronizing territory will attend this great Conference and that the cause of Christ may be largely extended in our borders as a result. Those who will not be able to attend will find a full report of the Conference in the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

ASSESSMENTS FOR CONFERENCE AND GENERAL WORK.

Mr. T. W. Holloman, Conference Lay Leader of the Louisiana Conference, writes an article in our present issue which should have the serious consideration of all our pastors and leaders in Louisiana. And, while he naturally confines himself to the Louisiana Conference, the general purport of his article is applicable to the Mississippi and North Mississippi Conferences.

Mr. Holloman finds that there was a slight falling off in the average raised on the Conference and General assessments in Louisiana during 1928, as compared with 1927, the average for 1928 being 67 per cent, while the average was 69 per cent during the preceding year. The Lay Leader thinks that one cause of our failure is to be found in the manner of fixing the assessments upon the several charges. Differences in conditions and in financial ability make a hard and fast rule unsatisfactory. "Churches unable to pay their assessments should have their assessments reduced and these amounts should be put on those churches that have the ability to pay," Mr. Holloman writes. By Conference resolution the presiding elders and district stewards of the Louisiana Conference are authorized and urged to make such adjustments as they think best in the fixing of the assessments.

In Louisiana the sum of $29,000 has been added to the assessments in order to provide for the bond issue, and the total of the assessments will amount to $135,000. This seems a great sum, but it actually means only a little more than $2 per capita.

Let all our pastors and leaders in Louisiana and Mississippi realize the importance of raising in full the Conference and General assessments, and let plans be made to take up the matter early in the Conference year.

THE GAUGE OF LIFE.

They err who measure life by years;
With false or thoughtless tongue;
Some hearts grow old before their time;
Others are always young.
'Tis not the number of the lines,
On life's fast filling page—
'Tis not the pulse's added throbs
Which constitute their age.
Some souls are serfs among the free,
While others nobly thrive;
They stand just where their fathers stood;
Dead even while they live!
Others, all spirit, heart and sense;
Theirs the mysterious power
To live in thrills of joy or wo,
A twelve month in an hour!
Seize, then, the minutes as they pass;
The woof of life is thought!
Warm up the colors; let them glow
With fire and fancy fraught.
Live to some purpose; make thy life
A gift of use to thee;
A joy, a good, a golden hope,
A heavenly Argosy.

NEW YEAR.

The approach of New Year will bring a gathering of hilarious throngs on the streets and a pandemonium of noises will be let loose upon the night when the old year dies and the new year begins, but how many will give serious thought to their own ways?

Serious thoughts should come with New Year. One thought should be of the sweep of time. Time is one. Our divisions of it are somewhat artificial and arbitrary. In a few hours to-day will be yesterday, with its many thousand years, and to-morrow will be to-day, and men will still be talking of the morrow that never comes. At the stroke of twelve on the night of December 31 the pendulum will begin its swing in 1928 and end in 1929, and no man will be able to mark an exact spot in its arc when the pendulum is in neither the old year nor the new. We are always living in the Now. We distinguish between time and eternity, but time is only a part of eternity—the little part of it that we spend here on earth. And of the eternity which every man must live, and from which he could not escape if he would, let him know that the present moment is the only moment of which he will ever be immediately conscious throghout the milleniums. You say he "lives in the past," especially if the frosts of many a winter have lain on his head, but he is only conscious of a memory of the past, he is only looking upon the pictures that "hang on memory's wall." You say he may make lordly plans for the future. But he can only be conscious of an imagination of the future; none but the Ancient of Days knows what the morrow will bring. We are living in the eternal Now. Of all the moments in which deeds were done, that have fled away by multiplied millions into the past, you cannot recall even one; of all the uncounted millions before you, you cannot know one with certainty.

Vain regret cannot redeem the wasted opportunities of the past. Wonderful plans of the future cannot atone for the wasted time of the present. Strikingly and with the hand of genius does the gifted Mississippian, Judge Walter Malone, write of Opportunity:

"They do me wrong who say I come no more
When once I knock and fail to find you in;
For every day I stand outside your door,
And bid you wake, and rise to fight and win.

"Wail not for precious chances passed away,
Weep not for golden ages on the wane!
Each night I burn the records of the day—
At sunrise every soul is born again.

* * * * * * *

"Art thou a mourner? Rouse thee from thy spell;
Art thou a sinner? Sins may be forgiven;
Each morning gives thee wings to flee from hell,
Each night a star to guide thy feet to heaven."

So let us do and serve nobly now, knowing that we are in our Father's keeping and in our Father's house; that we shall be judged for every idle word because we are stewards of the time which belongs to God.

"Time, like an ever-rolling stream,
Bears all its sons away;
They fly, forgotten as a dream
Dies at the opening day.

"O God, our help in ages past,
Our hope for years to come,
Be thou our guide while life shall last,
And our eternal home."

THE SPECTATOR.

No aspiration of the soul can be higher than the desire to be like Christ.

* * *

It is useless and futile to seek spiritual life except in Christ. "Lord, to whom shall we go; thou hast the words of eternad life?" He is the Prince of Life.

* * *

Self-sufficiency is more rank when there is most self-deficiency.

* * *

It is never well to break silence by speech unless what is said is better than silence.

* * *

Some say man is too small and insignificant to deserve and receive the notice of God. This shallow view is an undervaluation of spirit and an over-valuation of matter. An elephant is bigger than a baby, but not half so important or so worthy of love.

OLD YEAR DAY

(December 31)

Old Year Day is to be found neither in the lists of legal holidays nor in the church calendars, but, as a matter of fact, in the home, in the church, and in society, Old Year Day, especially the night on which the year goes into the past, and the Sunday following, are receiving greater attention every year. Throughout Christendom, thousands of families sit up, and with story and music and conversation "watch the old year die." "Watch Night" services in the churches are held with growing frequency and deepening interest. And there is scarcely a pulpit in the world in which the thoughts inevitably suggested by the season are not expressed and emphasized on the last Sunday of the year, Old Year Sunday. Poets, essayists, and preachers are invariably stirred by the dying of the old year to the noblest use of their arts and the highest exercise of their talents.

The Holy Scriptures abound in passages appropriate to the thoughts of the day. The most prominent theme is Time. Its flight, value, improvement, loss, irrecoverableness, and end. (Ps. xxxix: 4-6; Ps. xc: 4, 6, 9, 10; Job vii: 6, 7, 9; Job ix: 25, 26; Ps. xc: 12; Eph. v: 15, 16; Col. iv: 5; Joel ii: 25; Rev. x: 5, 6.) This line of thought naturally suggests the contemplation of Life: its brevity, its frailty, uncertainty, opportunities neglected or improved, purpose, departing youth, advancing old age, and approaching end. (2 Cor. iv: 18; Ps. cIII: 14-17; Isa. xl: 6; 1 Peter i: 24-25; Job. xxix: 2-4; Deut. iv: 32; Job xvii: 11; Eccl. iii: 15; Jer. viii: 20; 1 John ii: 8; Heb. ix: 27.) The last day of the year, to the thoughtful mind, is also suggestive of the last day of life. (Heb. ix' 27.) The Old Year thoughts of time, and life and death led up to the consideration of the Day of Judgment, Heaven, Hell, Eternity, and that God to whom all his intelligent creatures must give an account. (John vi: 40; Acts xvii: 31; Rom. ii: 5; 1 Cor. iii: 13; Heb. x: 25; Judge vi: 2; Cor. v: 1; Rev. xv: 2, 3; Matt. xxv: 41; Isa. lvii: 15; 2 Cor. iv: 18; Luke xvi). Probably no other holy day, unless we except Easter Sunday, has suggested as profound thought, as eloquent expression, and as earnest and noble living as the last day of the year.

CHAUNCEY HARDEE STEVENS—AN APPRECIATION.

By Rev. M. M. Black.

On Oct. 4, 1928, Mr. C. H. Stevens, one of South Mississippi's foremost citizens, passed away at his home in Richton, Miss. Chauncey Hardee Stevens, son of Captain Benjamin and Laura Annette Stevens, was born in Old Augusta, Perry County, Miss. He was one of six sons, each of whom was named after a Confederate cavalry officer, his father having been a captain under General Forrest in the Civil War. He grew up in the community where he was born, and when a small boy was converted and joined the Methodist church, of which he ever remained a devoted member.

He attended the University of Mississippi for two years. At the age of eighteen he returned to Old Augusta, and took charge of his father's mercantile business. For thirty-eight years consecutively he was the head of the firm. Being a man of fine judgment, executive ability, and unquestioned integrity, he took an active part in many other important business enterprises, and became eminently successful. In 1903 he moved to Richton, and after his father's death became president of the Bank of Richton. He was elected to official position in our church at the age of thirty-two, and served as steward and trustee as long as he lived. For many years he was the efficient president of the board of stewards. He loved the church and the Master's kingdom, and was a liberal contributor to every good cause. He was an honored member of the Masonic fraternity. Because of his public spirit, sympathetic nature, and uprightness of character, he was highly esteemed and universally beloved, not only in his home town, but throughout the county and surrounding territory. The poor found in him a friend, the church an ardent and generous supporter, and the community where he lived a noble and patriotic citizen. He will be greatly missed.

Five years preceding his death Brother Stevens had a severe attack of heart trouble, after which he was confined to his room most of the time. He was uniformly patient and cheerful in his affliction, and manifested strong faith and courage. More than once he stated to this writer, who was his pastor for four years, that he knew that "all was well between him and God." The end came suddenly, but it did not find him unprepared.

In September, 1906, Brother Stevens married Miss Myrtle Bell Russell, of Decatur, Miss. His wife and two children survive him—a son, Chauncey, twenty-one years of age, and a daughter, Miss Carrie, in her teens. Three brothers and four sisters also survive him, namely: C. Z. Stevens and H. S. Stevens, of Hattiesburg, and Judge J. Morgan Stevens, of Jackson; Mrs. Bennie Myers and Mrs. Pearl B. Ruffin, of New Augusta; Mrs. Emma Garraway, of Richton, and Mrs. Annie Cook, of Hattiesburg. Two other brothers passed away before him—Judge Forrest Stevens, after whom Forrest County was named; and Dr. J. J. Stevens, of Hattiesburg.

The funeral services were held at the home in Richton, being conducted by the pastor, Rev. T. A. Ferguson, assisted by the writer, and Rev. J. L. Low, pastor of the Baptist church. The interment, with Masonic honors, including a Knight Templar escort, took place in the family cemetery at Old Augusta. May God graciously comfort the bereaved family and friends and enable them to live that some blessed day there shall be a happy reunion in the home above.

Your Gift Will Purchase An Income---

Annuity Bonds of the Board of Missions produce an attractive income. The income is at the highest rate consistent with safe investment and, as a rule, higher than the average commercial investment of equal security.

Annuity Bonds of the Board of Missions not only provide to the purchaser an income that will not shrink, but they bless others in that they make it possible for the missionary to interpret to humanity the love and mercies of God in healing the sick, in clothing the naked, in feeding the hungry, and in teaching and preaching the Gospel to all people and to all nations.

Annuity Bonds of the Board of Missions will be issued in exchange for cash, bonds, stocks, lands, and partial cash payments made monthly.

A CALL TO METHODISM

For an International Missionary Conference to Meet in Memphis, Tenn., Jan. 1, 2 and 3, 1929.

The Board of Missions has authorized a conference of persons interested in the promotion of the Kingdom of Christ in every land for the consideration of this supreme objective of the church. Important eras of progress have been ushered in by such conclaves; the great meeting at New Orleans virtually began the missionary activity of our laymen and the gathering of one hundred at Memphis launched the Centenary advance. The present is a time of critical moment for Christian Missions, and the counsel of the whole church should again be summoned to review and evaluate our progress and future duty.

Our message to the unsaved world, at home or abroad, is the same message we have ever preached. The power of the gospel to redeem men and nations is unchanging. The command of our Lord to give his gospel to every creature stands unrepealed and paramount. Our duty to carry Christ to the last individual on earth is today what it has always been.

Nevertheless, missionary activity is not the same activity that occupied our energies a generation ago. The spread of culture in non-Christian lands has provided a new environment in which our missionaries must work, and given rise to new problems which they must meet. New churches —virile, consecrated, eager—have risen, and with these have come enlarged opportunities and perplexing problems. As non-Christian religions have broken down, strange and destructive doctrines have pushed in, and the gospel of Christ, triumphant over the one, faces the challenge of the other.

The missionary task in our own beloved land is urgent and bewildering. Fifty millions of our fellow-citizens are not even nominally Christians. The principles of our religion have scarcely begun to permeate our social life. Even heathen peoples reproach us for our sins and draw contrasts between what Christians believe and how Christendom acts. America is still the greatest mission field of the world and must be saved.

Who is equal to such tasks? They can be attempted only by the whole church, united and determined. In the welter and confusion of the world your servants, on whom you have placed the burden of missionary administration, feel the need of your counsel and your prayers. It is time for the sincerest and ablest souls of Methodism to assemble and reconsider the Great Commission of our Lord.

Our need is not wisdom but power. Not organization but consecration. Not plans but a passion for souls. Not money but sacrifice. Not temporal things but the touch of the living Spirit of God.

Our assembly, therefore, will not deal with policies, plans, and programs, but with our relation to God and our responsibility for our unsaved brethren of every clime. We must revitalize the Great Commission of our Lord in our own hearts and republish it through the church. We must consider and decide whether we are true to God, whether our task is finished, what our future course will be.

Pursuant, therefore, to the action of the Board of Missions of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, I hereby call upon those in whose hearts burns the fire of missionary zeal, and who yearn for the world to crown our Redeemer as Lord of all, to assemble in the municipal auditorium at Memphis, Tenn., on the evening of Jan. 1, 1929, and until the evening of Jan. 3 unite with others of like purpose in considering the missionary message and motive for the church.

This gathering will draw Christians from the ends of the earth and multitudes of our own people will desire to be present. Our facilities will be taxed, and the attendance must be limited to five thousand. I urge all persons to secure registration through the channels already announced.

In conclusion, I pray divine blessings upon the church and ask your prayers that the objective sought in the Conference here announced may be achieved.

Fraternally yours,

W. G. CRAM,
General Secretary of the Board of Missions.

The above statement is called to the attention of all Methodists in Louisiana. It indicates that in spite of all the efforts made we retrogressed last year. The Lake Charles District held its own and the Monroe District shows a gain. This was partly due to systematic and sustained efforts on the part of the presiding elder and District Lay Leader of that district.

Some $29,000 has been added to the assessment for this Conferenee year. The total will probably be around $135,000, a little more than $2 per capita per annum for the members of our church in this Conference. This sum is not beyond our eapaeity. It covers a large part of what we give for Chrstian work other than the sums we spend on ourselves in our local congregations. It is the foundation of our system of financing the program of the church and sending the gospel beyond our own borders. If we could learn to pay up these assessments doubtless we could be relieved for a time of some of the drives and special efforts.

I have given mueh time and attention to the payment of assessments, and two things are evident to me:

1. There must be some adjustment of the assessments so that the strong will help the weak. Churches unable to pay their assessments should have their assessments reduced, and these amounts should be put on those churches that have the strength to pay. The presiding elders and district boards of stewards have authority under a resolution adopted at the last Conference to do this. It is sound Christian practice. When it is done, every charge should be made to understand that it is expected to pay out.

2. Unless this has the attention of every minister, local lay leader and president of official board now, we will fail again. It can be done but it requires the prayer and thought of those in authority in every congregation. And then it requires action. If full information is given every congregation and a systematic canvass made of its membership at the beginning of the Conferenee year, there should be results. The total should be subscribed and then collected monthly or quarterly. Let one-half be paid by the time of the distriet conference and let there be a eareful check-up at that time.

As Conference Lay Leader I urge every pastor, lay leader and board president to give this matter attention at once and apply to its aeeomplishment the same thought and energy that would be given to any personal matter. It is our obligation, our duty. Christian eauses need this fund whieh is a bagatelle compared to our ordinary spending. May we not make our Methodist assessment $1 worth $1 in Louisiana this year?

T. W. HOLLOMAN.

RESOLUTIONS

(Of the board of stewards, Methodist Episcopal Church, South, of Amory, Miss., on the death of BROTHER L. E. PUCKETT.)

Whereas, it has pleased our Heavenly Father to invade our ranks onee again, calling home to his eternal rest our brother, the ehairman if our board, L. E. Puckett; and

Whereas, Brother Puekett was a faithful laborer in the Christian vineyard, ever ready to gladly answer the call of the church and of the Master in his service, giving freely of his talents, his time and his means to the work of the church, and serving the Lord with humility, yet with zeal; and,

Whereas, during his lifetime he was honored with many positions of trust in the affairs of this world, but no position and no honor was appreciated and valued by him higher than those which came to him as an humble servant of the Lord; it is therefore but fitting that his passing should be noted with a word of appreciation by those with whom he labored so zealously as a leader and as a servant;

Therefore, be it resolved, That the board of stewards of the Methodist ehureh, of Amory, Miss., does hereby express its sincere appreciation of the man and commends his example to those who are left to labor in the love and fear of God; that we do hereby further express our heartfelt sympathy to those who have been bereaved by his passing out into the Realm of Things Eternal; commending them to the God of their husband and father and brother for consolation and comfort, to him who doeth all things well.

Be it further resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon our minutes, a copy furnished to local papers for publieation, and a eopy furnished the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication within the bounds of the Conferenee where Brother Puckett served.

Signed: J. O. Prude, Jr., H. A. Carroll, Dr. C. B. Baker, Committee.

THE WORLD A WORKSHOP.

This busy world may be looked at under a variety of aspeets and deseribed by different figures of speech, which suit it in one or another phase of its aetivities. Evidently enough, it is for one thing a workshop. Half of the world is making things to sell to the other half. From Gandhi's spinning-wheels in India to huge modern steel mills in Manchuria built by Japanese eapital—saying nothing of the vast industrial concerns of Europe and America—it is one big hum of manufaeture, with many sighs breathing themselves out against the oil-dripping, leaping bars of the maehinery, and baeks breaking here and there under the strain. Tubal Cain, the original Jewish blacksmith, has indeed beeome a great raee. Everywhere eapital is supporting huge industrial enterprises, and the more that machines are manufactured the greater is the demand for men to run them.

But not every kind of man ean qualify in the world's overgrown workshop. Two qualities every workman must have—brains and charaeter. The first of these desiderata is so often emphasized that little more may be said regarding it now. "Efficiency" is indeed the big word today. In order to effieieney, however, character is needed. One great argument against any indulgenee in strong drink consists in the fact that with twenty million automobiles in this country, any addiction to liquor would turn the highways into slaughter-houses. Character in legislators and eapitalists seeks to protect the lives of the toilers in the workshops, and the character of the working people themselves keeps them sober, self-controlled, alert, sympathetieally eo-operative. A working nation must of all others be sane, serious, and thoughtful. Immorality and industry are ineompatible.

One other thing may be added in this conneetion. Work as work only deadens, weakens, and atrophies the mental and emotional activities. "All work and no play makes Jaek a dull boy." Hood saw this when long ago he wrote "The Song of the Shirt." To-day new songs, figuratively if not literally, are needed for thousands toiling and moiling in the faetories, or daily shut up in the stores. Men need to step out to a rhythm that eomes not from humming maehines but from unseen orchestras—the harmonies of a higher life. To put that song into the workshops is partieularly the task of the Christian church, which is the great hope-bringer to mankind. Who, then, will be the next poet of the machine age, or Orpheus charming weary men, from grit and grime to heavenly chime? Save the age by song; drown the whang and whir of the machines in the music of the spheres!—Zion's Herald.

Christ has no hands but our hands
To do his work to-day;
He has no feet but our feet
To lead men in his way.
He has no tongue but our tongues
To tell men how he died;
He has no help but our help
To bring them to his side.

Dear readers: This is your page—won't you use it? Surely there is something of interest going on in your auxillaries! How about your Jubilee offering? Why not report your work for help and inspiration to others?

It is not the wish or the purpose of your editor to fill this page from week to week with clippings and quotations, but what is to be done when you send in no material?

Yours for the work,
JANIE DRAKE COOPER.

(Some are sending reports direct to the Advocate office, and this accounts for the fact that Mrs. Cooper is receiving so little material. Kindly send your reports to Mrs. Cooper, and not to the Advocate office. Thank you.—Editor.)

HARVEST PROGRAM OF METHODIST AUXILIARY.

Among the impressive services of the week was Harvest Program at the Methodist church Sunday evening, Dec. 2, rendered by the five Circles and two Young People's Societies of the Methodist Auxiliary.

After the opening song, Mrs. James Lipscomb led the responsive reading of the Scripture, followed by prayer by Mrs. Robert Magruder. The other numbers were as follows: Quartet, of college boys; talk, "Spiritual Enrichment," by Mrs. J. S. Moore; "A Woman's Dream on Giving," by Mrs. Helen Woodward; college orchestra; "Re-evaluation of the Missionary Task," Mrs. C. B. Buntin.

Reports from societies, Financial Goal, Summary of Year's Work, Mrs. Walter Page; solo, Mrs. Buchanan; Welcome to Jubilee Members, by Miss Loui Wier; song, "On Greenland's icy Mountain;" original poem on Harvest Day, by Mrs. R. K. Wier; prayer, Mrs. Buntin.

Our "Harvest Day" again is here,
With woods and cornfields brown and sere,
Again our hearts to thee we raise
In loving thanks and grateful praise.

We praise thee for Thy tender care
That has guided everywhere;
For morning's light and evening shade
For all life's beauties Thou hast made.

For gifts of mind, and gifts of brain,
For summer's sun and autumn's rain,
For flowers and birds and humming bees,
For running brooks and leafy trees,

For homes made sweet with love and cheer,
For ties of friendship warm and dear,
For feet to tread life's dusty road,
For hands made strong to lift the load
Of sorrow and of care, from burdened hearts
That meet us everywhere.

For tasks that call—that bid us go
Into the homes of want and woe,
For love and hope, to point the way
Lest erring feet should go astray,
For faith made strong to light the way
Of service for the crowning day,
For all these gifts thou hast bestowed
We bow our heads—and thank thee—Lord!

METHODIST AUXILIARY ELECTS OFFICERS FOR NEW YEAR.

The final meeting of the year of the Methodist Auxiliary was held Monday afternoon, Dec. 3, at the church, with Mrs. C. B. Buntin, the president, presiding.

The subject for the afternoon was "Catching Step With the Youth of To-Day."

The question, "How Shall Age Keep Step With Youth," was beautifully brought out under three themes, "By Rembering," Mrs. A. B. Butts; "By Forgettlug," Mrs. L. H. Roberts; and "The Cost,'" Mrs. J. M. Parker.

Plans for the bazaar to be held Friday and Saturday were discussed and new plans for the year. The chief business, however, was the election of officers, resulting as follows: President, Mrs. C. B. Buntin; vice president, Mrs. J. L. Wallace; recording secretary, Mrs. R. K. Wier; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Robert Magruder; treasurer, Mrs. A. B. Butts; local treasurer, Mrs. J. W. Eckford; superintendent of Bible and mission study, Mrs. J. W. Willis; superintendent of social service, Mrs. Geo. Turner; assistant, Mrs. Aliee Bonner; superintendent of supplies, Mrs. Wm. Sudduth; superintendent of young people, Mrs. Elizabeth Keating; superintendent of juniors, Miss Edwina Wallace; assistant, Miss Bedie Halbert; superintendent of publicity, Mrs. Alec Ames; superintendent of the Voice, Mrs. Raymond Bell.—Starkville News.

RULEVILLE MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

The ladies of the Ruleville Missionary Society had a most interesting and enjoyable meeting in the church parlor Monday afternoon, Dec. 10. The occasion was the Jubilee Harvest Day program when at the close of this Jubilee year we met to review the year's work and see what ingatherings had been made.

Mrs. H. P. Thomas, our efficient president, who has given her time and herself, unstintingly, to the work for two years, presided with her usual grace and ease. The session was opened with a song, "Sow in the Morn Thy Seed," our pianist, Mrs. H. E. Walton, accompanying.

In the devotion Mrs. Harris Banks brought a beautiful lesson from Mark 1:16-20, stressing the thought that we, like the disciples of old, should put first things first in our lives—a thought upon which each of us would do well to ponder at the close of this year when making new resolutions. We then had the responsive reading as planned for this special meeting. Mrs. Thomas led in prayer.

In her opening remarks, our president made us feel that we were enjoying a rare privilege in being participants in a harvest of a Jubilee year. The five Jubilee goals were then taken up and reviewed one by one.

In discussing the field of spiritual enlistment, Mrs. E. C. Stansel, the leader of the Prayer League, who with her committee from month to month has stressed this phase of our work, told what this Jubilee year had meant to her spiritually and had expressions from various members as to what blessings had come to them through this spiritual cultivation. From the responses we were made to feel that our society is on a higher level spiritualiy than it was at the beginning of the year. Just here we sang a stanza of "Praise the Saviour."

The next goal was in regard to the history of our organization. We say in reviewing the year's work that our society had reached this goal in that we have studied and are reading the Jubilee Book-shelf books, and the history of the local society has been written. At this time we all enjoyed hearing read the history of the Rueiville organization which our historian, Mrs. E. C. Stansel, had written. It is of interest to note that three members of the first Missionary Society organized in this community are now living—Grandma Wilson and Mrs. M. M. Barrett, two saints in Israel who still reside in Ruleville, and Mrs. John R. Countiss, of Grenada College, whose husband at that time was the local pastor.

We then sang the second stanza of "Praise the Savior."

Next came the third goal—the revaluation of our task. A committee had been appointed to study the questionnaire sent out by the Council Commission, and at this point the writer made a brief statement as to the results. One thing that impressed her was the spirit of the local society in carrying out the program of the church. The missionary spirit is alive in the members of the society. It was, however, with regret that we found that a large number of our women are not actively enlisted in this great work, and we shall redouble our efforts to interest every one. A most encouraging feature noted was that among our young people we find seven tithers, which goes to prove that they are being taught intelligent giving—a sign of a better day for our church.

The financial goal was next presented. Both treasurers, Mrs. H. G. Davisson and Mrs. T. M. Dulaney, gave splendid reports of the year's work, showing that all of our financial obligations have been met. Our Jubilee thank offering deserves special mention. We sang the third stanza of "Praise the Savior."

The last Jubilee goal was to enlist all unenlisted women of the church. While not being able to enroll every woman we were happy to have secured some new members. They were presented to the society and given a Jubilee welcome. This was most impressive.

We stood and sang, "Come, Ye Thankful People," and closed with the Lord's Prayer in concert.

Before we left the church our retiring president and vice president, Mrs. Jas. T. McCafferty, hostess for the afternoon, served delicious refreshments.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

The Conference Sunday School Board has sent to each of the local superintendents a "Worker's Guide for 1929." Superintendent Holloman, of Alexandria, says: "I think it is very good for Sunday school superintendents. Wishing you and the members of your family and of your official force a joyous Christmas."

Mr. D. B. Talley, superintendent of the Bogalusa Sunday school, sends us a copy of his report to the first quarterly conference, which has many interesting items.

We are in the midst of the Christmas season. It may be a good thing to check up on your Christmas records. I find these items in my record book: "Christmas, 1902, finds me at Parker Memorial for my last year. The last year had been one of work. I wish I could say it had been one of prayer and faith." "Christmas, 1906, finds me at Plaquemine for another year, Christmas Eve was spent in the home of my Sunday school superintendent. My plans have been to see how many people I could make happy this season." "Christmas, 1907, finds me at Parker Memorial Church for my second time. I start off with a week of prayer, Jan. 5-12."

Rev. J. G. Snelling honored us recently with a visit. He is busy with itinerary of meetings in the interest of missions. The Memphis Missionary Conference, no doubt, will prove an inspiration to the great cause of church-wide missions. We hope the Sunday school leaders will be well represented at Memphis, January 1-3.

Sunday, Dec. 16, we visited Winnfield and Pineville. We reached Winnfield in time for Sunday school, and noted the good work in this great school. The superintendent, Dr. F. C. Wren, called my attention to the fine work being done in the Junior Department; Mr. J. M. Hyde is superintendent. The Young People's class taught by Mrs. John Gwin is perhaps doing as fine a piece of work as any class in the State. Winnfield will no doubt be well represented at our State-wide Conference.

Sunday night, in company with my family, we worshiped at Pineville and heard the new pastor, Rev. L. N. Hoffpanir. He and his congregation start off the new year with co-operation and much interest.

Miss Lois Hammett, our new Elementary Superintendent, has returned from the Elementary and General Sunday School Council at Nashville with many plans for the Elementary work of our Conference. She will spend the Christmas holidays at the Ruston Orphanage, and is scheduled to take part in the Sunday school rally at Elizabeth on Sunday, Dec. 13.

C. D. ATKINSON,

Work Called for and Delivered

MRS. MARY LEONIDE WHITE—AN APPRECIATION.

By Rev. H. N. Brown.

Some women seem to be born to be leaders in public affairs, they are endowed with qualities that commend them as such, and are recognized and given opportunity to render such service. Others, equally as great, are born to give themselves in a service that is never known beyond a very narrow circle, but give themselves in such profusion there that all who know them learn to depend on them for a service that is indispensable. Of the latter kind was the subject of this article.

On May 3, 1928, at about 6 o'clock in the morning, there passed into the presence of her Lord as quietly as she had lived her noble life, a woman whose service as mother was equalled by few and surpassed by none in my acquaintance.

Mary Leonide Yose was born in East Baton Rouge Parish, La., on Feb. 24, 1856. Her family was Roman Catholic, and she was of that faith until after her marriage to Benjamin Franklin Cline, on April 17, 1873. She always felt kindly toward the church of her youth, and was never heard to say anything against that form of religion. On her marriage she came to live less than three miles from the home of her youth, but in a community of Methodist people, a community that had recently been swept by a great revival of the old-time Methodist type. This revival originated in a neighborhood prayer meeting. The pastor was assisted by Dr. R. S. Trippett, of the Louisiana Conference. In it almost every leading citizen of the community was converted and it was a fervent spiritual atmosphere into which the young Romanist bride of a young Methodist husband came to make her home and his. She early joined the church of her husband and her new home, the Blackwater church, now on the Baker circuit, and for a little more than fifty-five years she has been one of the most faithful and exemplary Methodists in one of the most delightful Christian communities of Louisiana. Her home was within a half mile of my childhood home, and she and my mother were fast friends until my mother's death. She entered heartily into all church activities, was rarely ever absent from church or the neighborhood prayer meetings. I remember that these prayer meetings were the scenes of frequent conversions, and shouts of praise from the saints. If she ever shouted or led in public prayer I never knew it. It was customary for women then to lead in prayer in that community. If she ever held an office of any kind in the church, that has escaped my memory; her service was withou display, but she was one of the best private soldiers who ever fought in the ranks of the Lord's army, and no leader in that communiy ever had a more loyal backer than she.

She was left a widow on Aug 11, 1889, with four small children. On Jan. 6, 1892, she married F. B. White, whose small son, C. F. White, she reared with her own children. To this family were added eight orphan children of relatives and neighbors. Her pre-eminence as mother and foster-mother was known and admired by all her neighbors, and is attested by the position and honor of these children who bave come to be leading citizens in the communities where they have gone to live. The late F. H. Holden, of Wilson, a nephew of her first husband, and a leader in church and civic life in his community, was the first orphan she reared. Four of her own children survive her. They are: B. F. Cline, who represents his ward on the police jury, and has been employed by that body for a number of years to supervise the parish highway construction and maintenance; R. C. Cline, of the Third Ward; Mrs. R. H. Hausey, and Mrs. C. C. Black, all of East Baton Rouge. Her foster children are: E. E. and Leslie White and W. H. Coleman, of Baton Rouge; C. D. White, of Long Beach, Calif.; Mrs. A. E. Evans of New Orleans; Mrs. T. O. Young of Baker, and J. H. Coleman, of Washington, Mo.; and one stepson, C. F. White, of Baker. All of these are honorable citizens in their communities, and as far as I know them are active workers in the churches. All do credit to the woman who spent her life in mothering them and giving them ideals that make for the best living.

Mrs. White died at seventy-two. She had made tbe message of her life helpfulness to others. She never became helpless, nor a burden to any one. She insisted on being helpful to the time of her last illness. She literally owed no one anything but love, and she discharged that debt in overflowing service that left a sweet memory of her deeds to all who knew her. She left no dying statement of which I have heard. Her death was literally a falling on sleep, for she passed while the family slept between periods of rising and ministering. She needed to leave no message. "Her works do testify of her that she wrought in God." "And when the dawn came, chill and sad, and damp with early showers, her gentle eyelids closed, she had another morn than ours." "She rests from her labors, and her works do follow her."

REPORT SUB-DEPOSITORY AMERICAN BIBLE SOCIETY, NEW ORLEANS.

My report from the sub-depository, the Southwestern agency of the American Bible Society, located at 900 St. Charles Street, New Orleans, La., for the month of November, 1928, is as follows: The total distribution has been 5,800 volumes, consisting of 261 Bibles, 51 Testaments, 5,487 portions of the Scriptures. The distribution has largely been done in New Orleans and near-by towns, but some have gone into other States and to foreegn lands. Four thousand, three hundred and ninety-three volumes have been sales, 1,407 volumes have been donations.

We will give to the poor children again this year 5,000 gospels for Christmas. A good brother of Philadelphia has sent us fifteen dollars to help pay for these. His letter to me in part is as follows:

"Dear Mr. Perkins: I have read the various reports of your activities—which you have sent me—with a great deal of interest. It is with a great deal of pleasure that I am sending you this small check. I only wish that I were personally in a position to contribute a good deal more. I think, regardless of my buiness reasons for calling on you, that the few occasions when I have been able to see you have been among the most pleasant and inspiring experiences I have ever had, and it is with every possible good wish for the continued success of your endeavors that I would like to wish you—even at this early date—a very Merry Christmas and a happy New Year.

"Yours very truly,

"F. A. L."

It is very encouraging to me to receive such a letter as the above. Pray for me, in his name,

G. A. PERKINS.

FROM THE FIELD SECRETARY OF LOUISIANA.

Dear Epworth Leaguers: Since this is my last letter to you for 1928, and it is a bit late going to press, I'm afraid it won't even get printed. It isn't so hard to answer a letter each week, but I find it difficult writing to you every week when you so seldom answer. I certainly appreciate the lovely letters from Leaguers over the State, and I'm proud of the enthusiasm you show in your League work. With a new year before us I am watching for great accomplishments among our young people. You have a great program before you and with half the League year gone and 1929 beginning we must be "on the job" if we expect to come out ahead.

A letter from Miss Ina C. Brown tells me that we are far behind with our Missionary Special and our State treasurer is really worried because we put off the paying of our pledges to Conference Promotion until the last minute. Let us wake up to our many tasks and not let the new year find us lagging in our duties.

I am delighted to tell about the fine new Hi League at First Church, Alexandria. I met with some of the officers and found that they had organized with thirty-six on roll and expected to reach fifty in the near future. Our Conference president, Charles White, is their counselor. A letter from Miss Mildred Townsend, president of the League at Bunkie, brings us good news also. Mildred reports that as president she could not ask more of her Leaguers. She says that her chapter is doing better than it has done in years. We are proud of such a fine report.

Another Union in Ruston District has received its name. The "Morgan Union," named for Rev. G. A. Morgan, formerly of Arcadia, is composed of Leagues from Bryceland, Gibsland, Bienville and Arcadia. Mr. Henry Galloway, of Arcadia, is president of the Union. Their secretary, Miss Page Wise, of Bienville, reported a crowd of fifty present at their last meeting.

Rev. H. W. Jordan, of Columbia, wrote me asking me to assist him in League work in Columbia. I will not be able to go until January, but I'm glad that he called on me, and I want all pastors to feel free to call for my services.

I met with the Jonesboro Leaguers in their December business meeting and am glad to report that splendid work is being done by these Leaguers.

Sunday I went to Ruston in interest of the Efficiency Institute to be held there Feb. 10-15. Dr. W. W. Drake, pastor, and Mr. Floyd James, League president, are very interested in the success of the institute. Ruston is the most accessible location in the district, and with favorable weather at least ten League chapters can attend each night. Mr. B. Frank Pim, from Nashville, will be one of the instructors.

While in Ruston I attended the religious pageant presented by the choir of the First Methodist Church. The pageant, which so beautifully told the story of the prophecy and birth of the Christ Child, was presented in a most impressive way. Mrs. S. L. White, choir director, deserves credit for its presentation.

Letters are being received by all chapters from Central Office reminding you that the Epworth Era campaign begins on Jan. 13. Our Conference is 327 subscriptions behind its quota. If every Era agent will do his or her part we can easily make up this deficit. I think that the Era should be in every Epworth League home.

Leaguers of Monroe District will be interested to know that Mr. W. L. (Bolie) Herron and Miss Mildred Morris, of West Monroe, are to be married on Dec. 22. Leaguers of Baton Rouge District are already learning of the approaching marriage of their former District Secretary, Miss Wilda Addison, to Mr. Lowery Varnado, both of Hammond, on Dec. 26.

I will leave Louisiana the day after Christmas for Oklahoma City to attend the Epworth League Leaders' Council convening in that city on Dec. 26-30. I'm sorry that some of our City Union presidents and district and State officers cannot attend this meeting with me, as it is primarily for League leaders of Southern Methodism.

Hoping that 1929 may bring you success and happiness in your League work as you live "All for Christ," I am,

Your Field Secretary,
ELIZABETH LANGFORD.

THE PROBLEM OF CHECKING INFLUENZA.

Our reports of cases of influenza from the State are notably incomplete, as unofficially we hear of mild cases not reported. However, the number 113 reported for the week ending Dec. 17 outside of New Orleans gives an idea of the relative prevalence of the disease.

The cause of influenza is as mysterious as it was in 1918. Even the way it is carried is not entirely clear. It is generally believed that the droplet or contact infection is the way the disease is transmitted from person to person. There is much uncertainty whether it enters by way of the nose, the mouth, the eye or in what way it is transmitted, hence, in checking an influenza epidemic we are met with exceptional difficulties.

Few or none are immune to the disease, and during epidemics every person must consider himself as a possible victim. One attack unfortunately does not confer immunity. Relapses are extremly common, and repeated attacks must be expected in one season.

The experience with the present epidemic is unlikely to be different from that of 1918-1919 with this exception, that the virulence is apparently not so great.

Some facts are known and can be utilized, partially at least, in preventing the disease:

1. Intimate contact during the early stages is most dangerous.

2. Gatherings of people in auditoriums, halls, rooms, buildings, crowded cars, busses, etc., are especially productive of the spread of influenza.

3. Warm weather and open air help to prevent the spread of the disease.

We can help to lessen the number of cases by isolation of the individual case and by preventing gatherings of large numbers of people.

To prevent a serious attack every person must consider his own case a serious case, even if the symptoms seem to be those of a simple cold. During an epidemic of influenza it is wise to consider that the "cold" may be serious, in fact it may be influenza. To go to bed and send for the doctor at once is the best possible thing for the person himself, the family and for the people of the community. The average person goes to bed too late and gets up before entirely well. Don't make this mistake.

Influenza seems to be one of the rare maladies in which an ounce or two of simple therapy is as good or better than a ton of prevention.

"CONSIDERING ONE ANOTHER."

How self-centered are we! For the most part it is ourselves, our own future, our own work, our own gains, our own health, our own pleasure, which absorb us.

But now and then love lays its hand upon us. If it be a great love, of the noblest and most wonderful sort, it compels us to think with absorbing interest about the welfare of another human being. Such a tremendous thing! It drags us, as with an irresistible force, up and out of our own petty concerns to think almost continuously about the personality and concerns of some one else.

Strange to say, this is one of the most life-giving experiences that we ever meet. When we forget ourselves we find our true self. The expression, the activity, the insight of the one who is blessed with love for another, are all uplifted. It is a stimulus beyond all compare, a vast bestowal of joy.

Usually, however, we are gifted with great love but for a few. Hardly any one passes through this world without any experience of this wondrous inspiration, but we are limited by our human selfishness.

Jesus, however, taught, and the wonderful epistles of St. John echo his teaching, that there need be no limit to this spiritual experience of the heart, that we should love even our enemies, that we should "dwell in love." Sometimes we hear these commands spoken of as difficult, something exacting, hard and trying.

On the contrary, it is the heart of the Christian faith that we may believe that God will bestow such a gift of love upon us. For love cometh not with striving. It is the great gift of God; it is life and joy itself. The words of Jesus mean that upon the Christian who gives himself wholly unto God, this perfection of loving will be bestowed. There will be no room for hate or bitterness because of this perfect understanding, because the Christian will perceive all men in something the same way that God perceives them. What more wonderful thing for this life could be received from any creed or faith than such a gift of love?

Sometimes we meet some radiant soul who appears to be thus blessed—some one whose own anxieties are of little moment compared with the loving interest he feels in every one who enters his life. These people walk through the world and find each day angelic faces. Each morning brings its thrilling anticipation of the discovery of Godliness in man.

They are great spirits who live thus, lifting up those who are near them, leading them by their love and interest to finer ways of thinking and doing. "Let us consider one another to provoke unto love and to good works," wrote the author of Hebrews.

No, it is not enough when we consider merely our own daily duty. That is but the letter of the law. It is its glory when we love, when we lead one another into ways of love as well, when all life's contacts provoke unto good works those who thus mingle.

"God is love: and he that dwelleth in love dwelleth in God, and God in him. . . . If a man say, I love God, and hateth his brother, he is a liar: for he that loveth not his brother whom he hath seen, how can he love God whom he hath not seen? And this commandment have we from him, That he who loveth God love his brother also." —Zion's Herald.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY SOCIETIES CAN MAKE MONEY SELLING THE NEW

SCRIPTURE TEXT CALENDAR

Churches and Church Representatives!
Let It Earn for You!

Everyone who sees the new Scripture Text Calendar wants it. This type of selling is an easy, dignified way of earning money and is endorsed by pastors of leading churches over the country. From $25 to $500 and up can be made in a very short time by following our successful selling plans outlined for Sunday School classes, Ladies' Aid, Young People's Societies and individuals. You have an added advantage in the fact that national advertising in leading magazines has familiarized everyone with Messenger Sacred Calendars. The way has been prepared! Selling these calendars is not only profitable but it is a truly Christian way of spreading God's word, placing a wholesome, spiritual influence in every home in your community.

The Most Complete Sacred Calendar

Thirteen costly religious paintings are reproduced in full colors; daily Scripture verses and lesson references for Sundays make this calendar a daily reference and joy in the home.

Special Prices to Churches and Church Representatives

Profits are easily earned with these greatly improved Scripture Text Calendars which practically sell on sight.

Quantity	Cost	Sell for	Profit
100	$17.00	$30.00	$13.00
200	32.00	60.00	28.00
250	40.00	75.00	35.00
300	45.00	90.00	45.00

Sample sent on receipt of 20c in stamps.

As Christmas Gifts

Appropriate, thoughtful, useful, Messenger Sacred Calendars make ideal gifts for Christmas, for their beauty and interest keeps fresh through twelve months of the year.
